OXFORD.

To the moſt Noble and Incomparable pair of Brethren,

William Earl of Pembroke, &c.

Lord Chamberlain to the Kings moſt Excellent Majeſty;

AND

Philip E. of Montgomery, &c.

Gentleman to his Majeſties Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, and our ſingular good LORDS,

Right Honourable,

WHILST we ſtudy to be thankful in our particular, for the many Favours we have received from your L. L. we are faln upon the ill fortune, to mingle two the moſt diverſe things that can be, ~~fear, and raſhneſs, in the enterpriſe, and fear of the ſucceſs:~~ For, when we value the places your H. H. ſuſtain, we cannot but know their dignity greater, than to deſcend to the reading of theſe trifles: and while we name them trifles, we have depriv'd our ſelves of the defence of our Dedication. But ſince your L L. have been pleas'd to think theſe trifles ſomething heretofore, and have proſecuted both them, and their Author living, with ſo much favour: we hope, (that they out living him, and he not having the fate, common with ſome, to be Executor to his own writings) you will uſe the ſame indulgence toward them, you have done unto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Book chuſe his Patrons, or find them: This hath done both. For, ſo much were your L. L. likings of the ſeveral parts, when they were Acted, as before they were publiſhed, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We have but collected ~~them, and done~~ an office to the dead, to procure his Orphans, Guardians; without ambition either of ſelf-profit, or fame: only to keep the memory of ſo worthy a Friend and Fellow alive, as was our Shakeſpear, by humble offer of his Plays, to your moſt Noble Patronage: Wherein as we have juſtly obſerved, no man to come near your L. L. but with a kind of religious addreſs; it hath been the height of our care, who are the Preſenters, to make the Preſent worthy of your H. H. by the Perfection: But there we muſt alſo crave our abilities to be conſidered, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our own powers: Countrey hands reach forth Milk,

Cream:

Cream, Fruits, or what they have: and many Nations (we have heard) that had not Gums and Incenſe, obtained their requeſts with a leavened Cake; it was no fault to approach their gods, by what means they could: And the moſt, though meaneſt of things, are made precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we moſt humbly conſecrate to your H. H. theſe Remains of your ſervant Shakeſpear; that what delight is in them, may be ever your L. L. the reputation his, and the faults ours, if any be committed by a pair ſo careful to ſhew their gratitude both to the living, and the dead, as is

Your Lordſhips moſt bounden,

TO THE

Great Variety

READERS,

FROM the most able, to him that can but spell. There you are numbred. We had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Books depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your Purses. Well, it is now publick, and you will stand for your priviledges, we know: to read, and censure. Do so, but buy it first; that doth best commend a Boook, the Stationer says. Then how odd soever your brains be, or your wisdoms, make your silence the same, and spare not. Judg your six-penny worth, your shillings-worth, your five shillings-worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the just rates, and welcome. But, whatever you do, Buy. Censure will not drive a trade, nor make the Jack go. And tho you be a Magistrate of Wit, and sit on the stage at Black-Fryers, or the Cock-pit, to arraign Plays daily; know, these Plays have had their tryal already, and stood out all Appeals; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, than any purchas'd Letters of Comendation.

It had been a thing, we confess, worthy to have been wished, that the Author himself had lived to have set forth, and overseen his own Writings; But since it hath been ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envy his Friends the office of their care and pain, to have collected and publisht them; and so to have publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with divers stolne and surreptitious Copies, maimed and deformed by the frauds and stealths of injurious Impostors, that expos'd them: even those, are now offered to your view cured, and perfect of their limbs; and all the rest, absolute in their numbers as he conceived them. Who, as he was a happy imitator of Nature, was a most gentle expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he uttered with that easiness, that we have scarce received from him a blot in his Papers. But it is not our Province, who only gather his Works, and give them you to praise him. It is yours that read him. And there we hope, to your divers capacities, you will find enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, than it could be lost. Read him therefore, again and again: And if then you do not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to understand him. And so we leave you to other of his Friends, who, if you need, can be your guides: if you need them not, you can lead your selves, and others. And such Readers we wish him.

To

To the Memory of the deceaſed Author Mr. WILLIAM SHAKESPEAR.

Shakeſpear, at length thy pious Fellows give
The World thy Works: thy Works, by which, out-live
Thy Tomb, thy Name muſt: when that ſtone is rent,
And Time diſſolves thy Stratford Monument,
Here we alive ſhall view thee ſtill. This Book,
When Braſs and Marble fade, ſhall make thee look
Freſh to all Ages: when Poſterity
Shall loathe what's new, think all is prodigy
That is not Shakeſpear's; ev'ry Line, each Verſe
Here ſhall revive, redeem thee from thy Herſe.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Naſo ſaid,
Of his, thy wit-fraught Book ſhall once invade.
Nor ſhall I ere believe, or think thee dead
(Tho miſt) until our bankrout Stage be ſped
(Impoſſible) with ſome new ſtrain t'out-do
Paſſions of Juliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I hear a Scene more nobly take,
Than when thy half ſword parlying Yeomans ſpake.
Till theſe, till any of thy Volumes reſt
Shall with more fire, more feeling be expreſt,
Be ſure, our Shakeſpear, thou canſt never die,
But crown'd with Lawrel, live eternally.

L. Digges.

Upon the Effigies of my worthy Friend the Author, Mr. W. Shakeſpear, and his Works.

SPectator, this Lifes Shadow, is to ſee
The truer Image and a livelier he
Turn Reader. But, obſerve his Comick vain,
Laugh, and proceed next to a Tragick ſtrain,
Then weep; So when thou find'ſt two contraries,
Two different paſſions from thy rapt ſoul riſe,
Say, (who alone effect ſuch wonders could)
Rare Shakeſpear to the life thou doſt behold.

To the Memory of Mr. W. Shakeſpear.

WE wonder (Shakeſpear) that thou went'ſt ſo ſoon,
From the Worlds-Stage, to the Graves-Tyring-room.
We thought thee dead, but this thy Printed worth
Tells thy Spectators, that thou went'ſt but forth
To enter with applauſe. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and live, to act a ſecond Part.
That's but an Exit of Mortality;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

J. M

To the Memory of my beloved, the Author, Mr. William Shakeſpear; And what he hath left us.

TO draw no envy (Shakeſpear) on thy Name,
Am I thus ample to thy Book and Fame:
While I confeſs thy writings to be ſuch,
As neither Man nor Muſe can praiſe too much.
'Tis true, and all mens ſuffrage. But theſe ways
Were not the paths I meant unto thy praiſe:
For ſeelieſt Ignorance on theſe may light,
Which, when it ſounds at beſt, but eccho's right;
Or blind Affection, which doth ne're advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance;
Or crafty malice, might pretend this praiſe,
And think to ruin where it ſeem'd to raiſe.
Theſe are, as ſome infamous Bawd, or Whore,
Should praiſe a Matron. What could hurt her more?
But thou art proof againſt them, and indeed
Above th' ill fortune of them, or the need.
I therefore will begin. Soul of the Age!
The applauſe! delight! the wonder of our Stage!
My Shakeſpear riſe; I will not lodg thee by
Chaucer, or Spenſer, or bid Beaumont lie
A little further, to make thee a room:
Thou art a Monument without a Tomb,
And art alive ſtill, while thy Book doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praiſe to give.
That I not mix thee ſo, my brain excuſes;
I mean with great, but diſproportion'd Muſes:
For if I thought my judgment were of years,
I ſhould commit thee ſurely with thy Peers,
And tell how far thou didſt our Lily out-ſhine,
Or ſporting Kid, or Marlow's mighty Line.
And tho thou hadſt ſmall Latine, and leſs Greek,
From thence to honour thee, I would not ſeek
For names; but call forth thund'ring Æſchylus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to us,
Pacuvius, Accius, him of Cordova dead,
To live again, to hear thy Buskin tread,
And ſhake a Stage: Or, when thy Socks were on,
Leave thee alone for the compariſon
Of all, that inſolent Greece, or haughty Rome
Sent forth, or ſince did from their aſhes come.
Triumph, my Britain, thou haſt one to ſhow,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Muſes, ſtill were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warm
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm!
Nature her ſelf was proud of his deſigns,
And joy'd to wear the dreſſing of his Lines!
Which were ſo richly ſpun, and wov'n ſo fit,
As, ſince, ſhe will vouchſafe no other wit.
The merry Greek, tart Ariſtophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not pleaſe;
But antiquated, and deſerted lie
As they were not of Natures family.

Yet

Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakespear must enjoy a part.
For tho the Poets matter Nature be,
His Art doth give the Fashion. And, that he,
Who casts to write a living line, must sweat,
(Such as thine are) and strike the second heat
Upon the Muses Anvile: turn the same,
(And himself with it) that he thinks to frame;
Or for the Lawrel, he may gain a scorn,
For a good Poet's made, as well as born.
And such wert thou. Look how the Fathers face
Lives in his Issue, even so the race
Of Shakespear's mind, and manners brightly shines
In his well turned, and true filed lines:
In each of which, he seems to shake a Lance,
As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were
To see thee in our water yet appear,
And make those flights upon the Banks of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our James!
But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
Advanc'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Star of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or chear the drooping Stage,
Which, since thy flight from hence, hath mourn'd like night,
And despairs day, but for thy Volumes light.

BEN. JOHNSON.

On worthy Mr. Shakespear, and his Poems.

A Mind reflecting ages past, whose clear
And equal surface can make things appear
Distant a Thousand years, and represent
Them in their lively colours just extent.
To out-run hasty Time, retrieve the Fates,
Rowl back the Heavens, blow ope the Iron Gates
Of Death and Lethe, where (confused) lie
Great heaps of ruinous Mortality.
In that deep dusky dungeon to discern
A Royal Ghost from Churls; By art to learn
The Physiognomy of shades, and give
Them sudden birth, wondring how oft they live.
What story coldly tells, what Poets fain
At second hand and Picture, without brain
Senseless and soulless shows. To give a Stage
(Ample and true with life) voice, action, age,
As Plato's year, and new Scene of the world,
Them unto us, or us to them had hurl'd.
To raise our ancient Soveraigns from their Herse,
Make Kings his Subjects, by exchanging verse;
Enlive their pale trunks, that the present age
Joys in their joy, and trembles at their rage:
Yet so to temper passion, that our ears
Take pleasure in their pain; and eyes in tears
Both weep and smile, fearful at plots so sad,
Then laughing at our fear; abus'd and glad
To be abus'd, affected with that truth
Which we perceive is false; pleas'd in that truth
At which we start; and by elaborate play
Tortur'd and tickled; by a crab-like way
Time past made pastime, and in ugly sort
Disgorging up his ravine for our sport——
——While the Plebeian Imp from lofty throne,
Creates and rules a world, and works upon
Mankind by secret engines; Now to move
A chilling pity, then a rigorous love:
To strike up, and stroak down, both Joy and Ire,
To steer th' affections; and by heavenly fire
Mould us anew. Stoln from our selves——
This and much more which cannot be exprest,
But by himself, his tongue, and his own breast,
Was Shakespear's freehold, which his cunning brain
Improv'd by favour of the ninefold train.
The Buskin'd Muse, the Comick Queen, the grand
And louder tone of Clio; nimble hand,
And nimbler foot of the melodious pair,
The Silver voiced Lady; the most fair
Calliope, whose speaking silence daunts,
And she whose praise the heavenly body chaunts.
These jointly woo'd him, envying one another
(Obey'd by all as Spouse, but lov'd as brother)
And wrought a curious robe of sable grave,
Fresh, green, and pleasant yellow, red most brave,
And constant blew, rich purple, guiltless white,
The lowly Russet, and the Scarlet bright;
Branch't and embroidered like the painted Spring
Each leaf match'd with a Flower, and each string
Of golden wire, each line of silk; there run
Italian works whose thred the Sisters spun;
And there did sing, or seem to sing, the choice
Birds of a forreign note, and various voice.
Here hangs a mossey Rock; there plays a fair
But chiding Fountain purled: Not the air,
Nor Clouds, nor Thunder, but were living drawn,
Not out of common Tiffany or Lawn.
But fine materials, which the Muses know,
And only know the Countries where they grow.
Now when they could no longer him enjoy
In mortal garments pent; death may destroy
They say his body, but his Verse shall live
And more than Nature takes, our hands shall give.
In a less Volume, but more strongly bound
Shakespear shall breathe and speak, with Lawrel crown'd
Which never fades. Fed with Ambrosian meat,
In a well-lined Vesture rich and neat
So with this Robe they cloathe him, bid him wear it,
For time shall never stain, nor envy tear it.

The friendly Admirer of his Endowments,

J. M. S.

AN

EPITAPH

On the admirable Dramatick Poet,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEAR.

WHat need my Shakespear for his honour'd bones,
The labour of an Age, in piled ſtones,
Or that his hallow'd Reliques ſhould be hid
Under a Starry-pointing Pyramid?
Dear Son of Memory, great Heir of Fame,
What needſt thou ſuch dull witneſs of thy Name?
Thou in our wonder and aſtoniſhment
Haſt built thy ſelf a laſting Monument:
For whilſt to th' ſhame of ſlow-endeavouring Art,
Thy eaſie numbers flow, and that each part,
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued Book,
Thoſe Delphick Lines with deep Impreſſion took.
Then thou our fancy of her ſelf bereaving,
Doſt make us Marble with too much conceiving,
And ſo Sepulcher'd in ſuch pomp doſt lie,
That Kings for ſuch a Tomb would wiſh to die.

Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenick Poet

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEAR.

THoſe hands, which you ſo clapt, go now and wring
You Britains brave; for done are Shakeſpear's days;
His days are done, that made the dainty Plays,
Which made the Globe of Heav'n and Earth to ring.
Dry'd is that Vein, dry'd is the Theſpian Spring,
Turn'd all to tears, and Phebus Clouds his Rays;
That Corps, that Coffin now beſtick thoſe Bays,
Which crown'd him Poet firſt, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue have,
All thoſe he made, would ſcarce make one to this;
VVhere Fame, now that he gone is to the Grave,
(Deaths publick Tyring-houſe) the Nuncius is.
For though his Line of Life went ſoon about,
The Life yet of his Lines ſhall never out.

THE TEMPEST.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. An Uninhabited Island

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard: Enter Ship-master and a Boteswain.

Master,

BOteswain.

Bote. Here Master: What cheer?

Mast. Good, Speak to th' Mariners: fall too't, yarely, or we run our selves a-ground; bestir, bestir. Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Bote. Hey my hearts, cheerly my hearts; yare, yare; Take in the top-sail; tend to th' Master's whistle; Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Boteswain have care: where's the Master? Play the men.

Bote. I pray now keep below.

Anth. Where is the Master, [redacted]? Boatswain?

Bote. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour; Keep your Cabins; you [redacted] assist the storm.

Gonz. Nay, good be patient.

Bote. When the Sea is hence. what care these Roarers for the Name of King? to Cabin; silence; trouble us not.

Gonz. Good; yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Bote. None that I more love than my self. You are a Counsellor; if you can command these Elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a Rope more; use your Authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have liv'd so long, and make your self ready in your Cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap. Cheerly good hearts: out of our way, I say. Exit.

Gonz. I have great comfort from this fellow; methinks he hath no drowning [redacted]k upon him; his complexion is perfect Gallows. stand fast, good Fate, to his hanging; make the Rope of his destiny our Cable, for our own doth little advantage: if he be not born to be hang'd, our case is miserable. Exit.

Enter Boteswain.

Bote. Down with the top-Mast: yare, lower, lower; bring her to try with Main-course. A plague——

A cry within. Enter Sebastian, Anthonio and Gonzalo, upon this howling—they are louder than the weather, or our office. Yet again? What do you here? Shall we give o're and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seba. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, uncharitable Dog.

Bote. Work you then.

Anth. Hang Cur, hang, you whoreson insolent Noise-maker; we are less afraid to be drown'd than thou art.

Gonz. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no stronger than a Nut-shell, and as leaky as an unstanch'd wench.

Bote. Lay her a hold, a hold; set her two courses off to Sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers, all lost!

Bote. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gonz. The King and Prince at prayers, let's assist them, for our case is as theirs.

Seba. I'm out of patience.

An. We're meerly cheated of our lives by Drunkards. This wide-chopt rascal, would thou might'st lie drowning the washing of ten Tides!

Gonz. He'll be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water sware against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut him. A confused noise within.
Mercy on us!
We split, we split! Farewell my wife and children,
Farewell brother: we split, we split, we split!

Anth. Let's all sink with King.

Seb. Let's take leave of him. Exit.

Gonz. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of Sea for an Acre of barren ground: Ling heath, broom [redacted] any thing; the wills above be done, but I would fain die a dry death. Exit.

Scena Secunda. The Inchanted Island.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my dearest father) you have Put the wild waters in this Roar, allay them:
The sky it seems would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheek,
Dashes the fire out. Oh! I have suffer'd
With those that I saw suffer: A brave Vessel
(Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her)
Dash'd all to pieces. Oh! the cry did knock
Against my very heart: poor souls, they perish'd.
Had I been any God of pow'r, I would
Have sunk the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It should the good Ship so have swallow'd, and
The fraighted Souls within her.

Pros. Be collected;
No more amazement; Tell your piteous heart,
There's no harm done.

Mira. O wo. the day!

Pros. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee
(Of thee my dear one, thee my Daughter) who
Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, Master of a full poor Cell,
And thy no greater Father.

Mira. More [redacted]ow
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pros. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my Magick garment from me: So,
Lye there my Art. Wipe thou thine eyes, have comfort.
The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such [redacted] in mine Art
So safely ordered, that there's no soul lost;
No not so much perdition as an hair
Betid to any creature in the Vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down [redacted], for thou must now know farther.

Mira. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopt,
And left me to the bootless inquisition;
Concluding, sta[redacted]

Pros. The hour's now come,

The very minute bids thee ope thine ear,
Obey, and be attentive. Canſt thou remember
A time before we came unto this Cell?
I do not think thou canſt, for then thou was't not
Out three years old.
Mira. Certainly, Sir, I can.
Proſ. By what? by any other houſe, or perſon?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance?
Mira. 'Tis far off;
And rather like a dream, than an aſſurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not
Four or five women once that tended me?
Proſ. Thou hadſt, and more, Miranda: But how is it
That this lives in thy mind? What ſeeſt thou elſe
In the dark backward and Abyſme of Time?
If thou remember'ſt ought ere thou cam'ſt here,
How thou cam'ſt here thou may'ſt.
Mira. But that I do not.
Proſ. Twelve years ſince (Miranda) twelve years ſince
Thy Father was the Duke of Millan, and
A Prince of Power.
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Proſ. Thy Mother was a piece of Virtue, and
She ſaid thou waſt my Daughter; and thy Father
Was Duke of Millan, and his only heir:
A Princeſs, no worſe iſſued.
Mira. O the Heavens!
What foul play had we that we came from thence?
Or bleſſed was't we did?
Proſ. Both, both, my Girl:
By foul play (as thou ſayeſt) were we heav'd thence,
But bleſſedly help'd hither.
Mira. My heart bleeds
To think o' th' teene that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance. pleaſe you, farther.
Proſ. My Brother and thy Uncle, call'd Anthonio—
I pray thee mark me, (that a brother ſhould
Be ſo perfidious!) he, whom next thy ſelf
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The manage of my ſtate; as at that time.
Through all the ſignories it was the firſt
And Proſpero the prime Duke, being ſo reputed
In dignity; and for the Liberal Arts,
Without a parallel; thoſe being all my ſtudy;
The Government I caſt upon my brother,
And to my ſtate grew ſtranger, being tranſported
And rapt in ſecret ſtudies. thy falſe Uncle—
(Doſt thou attend me?)
Mira. Sir, moſt heedfully.
Proſ. Being once perfected how to grant ſuits,
How to deny them; whom t' advance, and whom
To trash for over-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine; I ſay, or chang'd 'em,
Or elſe new form'd 'em; having both the key
Of Officer and Office, ſet all hearts
To what tune pleas'd his Ear; that now he was
The Ivy which had hid my princely Trunk,
And ſuck't my verdure out on't. Thou attend'ſt not.
Mira. O good Sir, I do.
Proſ. I pray thee mark me then.
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To cloſeneſs, and the bettering of my mind
With that which, but by being ſo retired,
O're-priz'd all popular rate, in my falſe brother
Awak'd an evil Nature; and my truſt,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falſhood in its contrary as great
As my truſt was; which had indeed no limit,
A confidence ſans bound. He being thus Lorded,
Not only with what my Revenue yielded,
But what my power might elſe exact, Like one
*
Makes ſuch a ſinner of his Memory
To credit his own lie; he did believe
He was indeed the Duke, from that Subſtitution
And executing th' outward face of Royalty
With all prerogative: hence his Ambition growing—
Doſt thou hear: Child?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure deafneſs.
Proſ. To have no Screen between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needs will be
Abſolute Millan; Me, poor man—my Library
Was Dukedom large enough; Of temporal Royalties
He thinks me now incapable: Confederates
(So dry he was for ſway) with King of Naples
To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
Subject his Coronet to his Crown, and bend
The Dukedom yet unbow'd (alas poor Millain!)
To much ignoble ſtooping.
Mira. Oh the heavens?
Proſ. Mark his condition, and th' event, then tell me
If this might be a brother?
Mira. I ſhould ſin,
To think but Nobly of my Grand-mother.
Good wombs have born bad ſons. Now the condition

This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's ſuit,
Which was, That he in lieu o' th' premiſes,
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,
Should preſently extirpate me and mine
Out of the Dukedom, and confer fair Millain
With all the honours, on my brother. Whereon
A treacherous Army levy'd, one mid-night
Fated to th' purpoſe, did Anthonio open
The gates of Millan, and i' th' dead of darkneſs
The Miniſters for th' purpoſe hurry'd thence
Me, and thy crying ſelf.
Mir. Alack for pity!
I not remembring how I cry'd out then,
Will cry it o're again; it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes to't.
Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the preſent buſineſs
Which now's upon's, without the which this ſtory
Were moſt impertinent.
Mir. Wherefore did they not:
That hour deſtroy us?
Pro. Well demanded, wench;
My tale provokes that queſtion. Dear, they durſt not;
So dear the love my people bore me, ſet
A mark ſo bloody on the buſineſs; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a Bark,
Bore us ſome Leagues to Sea, where they prepar'd
A rotten carcaſs of a Boat, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, nor ſail, nor maſt; the very Rats
Inſtinctively had quit it: There they hoiſt us
To cry to th' Sea that roar'd to us; to ſigh
To the Winds, whoſe pity ſighing back again
Did us but loving wrong.
Mir. Alack! what trouble
Was I then to you?
Pro. O! a Cherubim
Thou was't that did preſerve me: Thou didſt ſmile.
Infuſed with a fortitude from heav'n;
When I have deck'd the Sea with drops full ſalt,
Under my burthen groan'd, which rais'd in me
An undergoing ſtomach, to bear up
Againſt what ſhould enſue.
Mir. How came we aſhore?
Pro. By providence divine,
Some food we had, and ſome freſh water, that
A noble Neapolitan Gonzalo,
Out of his Charity (being then appointed Maſter of this deſign) did give us, with Rich garments, linnens, ſtuffs, and neceſſaries

Which

* Who loving an Untruth, and telling't oft,

Which since have steeded much, so of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd my Books, he furnish'd me
From mine own Library, with volumes, that
I prize above my Dukedom.
Mir. Would I might
But ever see that man!
Pro. Now I arise;
Sit still, and hear the last of our Sea-sorrow.
Here in this Island we arriv'd, and here
Have I, thy School-master, made thee more profit
Than other Princes can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and Tutors, not so careful.
Mir. Heavens thank you for't! And now I pray you, Sir,
(For still 'tis beating in my mind) your reason
For raising this Sea-storm?
Pro. Know thus far forth;
By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune
(Now my dear Lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: And by my prescience.
I find my Zenith doth depend upon
A most auspitious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions,
Thou art inclin'd to sleep: 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way; I know thou canst not chuse.
Come away, Servant, come; I am ready now;
Approach my Ariel. Come.

SCENE III.

Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great Master! grave Sir, hail! I come
To answer thy best pleasure. be't to fly;
To swim; to dive into the fire; to ride
On the curl'd clouds: to thy strong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his Qualities.
Pro. Hast thou, Spirit,
Perform'd to point, the Tempest that I bad thee?
Ar. To every Article.
I boarded the Kings ship: now on the Beak,
Now in the Waste, the deck, in every Cabin,
I flam'd amazement, sometimes I'ld divide,
And burn in many places; on the top-mast,
The Yards and Bolt-sprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and joyn. Jove's Lightnings, the precursers
O' the dreadful Thunder claps, more momentary
And sight out-running were not; the fire and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seem'd to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yea, his dead Trident shake.
Pro. My brave Spirit
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coyl
Would not infect his reason?
Ar. Not a soul
But felt a Feaver of the mind, and plaid
Some tricks of desperation: all but Mariners
Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a fire with me: the Kings son Ferdinand
With hair up staring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the first man that leap'd; cri'd hell is empty,
And all the Devils are here.
Pro. Why that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?
Ar. Close by, my Master.
Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?
Ar. Not a hair perish'd:
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before. and as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle:
The Kings son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the Air with sighs
In an odd Angle of the Isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.
Pro. Of the Kings ship,
The Mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o'th' Fleet?
Ar. Safely in harbour.
Is the Kings ship; in the deep Nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight, to fetch dew
From the still-vext Bermoothes, there she's hid:
The Mariners all under hatches stow'd,
Who with a Charm joyn'd to their suffered labour
I have left asleep; and for the rest o'th' Fleet
(Which I dispers'd) they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean Flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the Kings ship wrack'd,
And his great person perish.
Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work:
What is the time o'th' day?
Ar. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.
Ar. Is there more toyl? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.
Pro. How now? moody?
What is't thou canst demand?
Ar. My Liberty.
Pro. Before the time be out? no more.
Ar. I prythee
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge or grumblings; thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.
Pro. Do'st thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No.
Pro. Thou do'st; and thinkest it much to tread the ooze
Of the salt deep;
To run upon the sharp wind of the North;
To do me business in the veins o' th' earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.
Ar. I do not, Sir.
Pro. Thou liest, malignant Thing: hast thou forgot
The foul Witch Sycorax, who with Age and envy
Was grown into a Hoop? hast thou forgot her?
Ar. No, Sir.
Pro. Thou hast: where was she born? speake; tell me: Sayest
Ar. Sir, in Argier.
Pro. Oh, was she so? I must
Once in a month recount what thou hast been
Which thou forgetst. This damn'd Witch Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd: for one thing she did
They would not take her life. is not this true? Ar. Ay, Sir.
Pro. This blue-ey'd hag, was hither brought with child,
And here was left by th' Sailors; thou my slave,
As thou report'st thy self, was then her servant,
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthly and abhorred commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven Pine; within which rift
Imprison'd, thou did'st painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she di'd,
And left thee there: where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as Mill wheels strike. then was this Island
(Save for the Sun that she did litter here,
A frek l'd whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with
A human shape.
Ar. Yes; Caliban her son.
Pro. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service, thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry Bears; it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo: it was mine art,

a: This is the Spanish pronunciation of Bermudas: The Account of which Island in Purchas's Pilgrimage is, That it was called the Island of Devils & the Inchanted Island. These names being given it from the monstrous Tempests which there have been often sustained. And again speaking of the whole Cluster of Islands with which the great Ocean is surrounded, He saith, The Islands seem rent with tempests of Thunder, lightning

VVhen I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pine, and let thee out.
Ar. I thank thee Master.
Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oak
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou'st howl'd away twelve winters.
Ar. Pardon, Master,
I will be correspondent to command
And do my spriting gently.
Pro. Do so: and after two dayes I'll discharge thee.
Ar. That's my noble Master:
VVhat shall I do? say what? what shall I do?
Pro. Go make thy self like to a Nymph o'th' Sea.
Be subject to no sight but mine, invisible
To every eye-ball else. go take this shape,
And hither come in't: hence with diligence.
[Exit Ariel.
Awake, dear heart awake, thou hast slept well,
Awake.
Mir. The strangeness of your story, put
Heaviness in me.
Pro. Shake it off: Come on,
VVe'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never
Yields us kind answer.
Mir. 'Tis a villain, Sir, I do not love to look on.
Pro. But as 'tis
VVe cannot miss him: he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in Offices
That profit us. what hoa! slave! Caliban!
Thou Earth thou! speak.
Cal. (within.) There's wood enough within.
Pro. Come forth, I say, there's other business for thee.
Come forth, thou tortoise! when? [Enter Ariel like a Water-Nymph.
Fine apparition! my quaint Ariel,
Heark in thine ear.
Ar. My Lord, it shall be done. [Exit.
Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the Devil himself
Upon thy wicked Dam; come forth. [Enter Caliban.

Scene V.

Cal. As wicked dew as ere my Mother brush'd
VVith Raven's feather from unwholsome Fen,
Drop on you both! A South-west blow on ye,
And blister you all o're!
Pro. For this, be sure, to night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; Urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honey-combs, each pinch more stinging
Than Bees that made 'em.
Cal. I must eat my dinner.
This Island's mine by Sycorax my Mother,
VVhich thou tak'st from me. when thou camest first
Thou stroak'st me, & made much of me; would'st give me
VVater with berries in't; and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee,
And shew'd thee all the qualities o' the Isle,
The fresh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertile.
Curs'd be I that I did so! All the Charms
Of Sycorax, Toads, Beetles, Bats light on you!
For I am all the Subjects that you have,
VVho first was mine own King: and here you sty me
In this hard Rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest of the Island.
Pro. Thou most lying slave,
VVhom stripes may move, not kindness; I have us'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with human care, and lod g'd thee
In mine own Cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my Child.
Cal. Oh ho, oh ho! would it had been done:
Thou didst prevent me, I had peopled else
This Isle with Calibans.
Mir. Abhorred Slave,
VVho any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not, Savage,
Shew thine own meaning, but didst gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
VVith words that made them known. But thy vile race
(Tho thou didst learn) had that in't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wa'st thou
Deservedly confin'd into this Rock,
[illegible].
Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your language!
Pro. Hag-seed, hence!
Fetch us in Fewel, and be quick thou wert best,
To answer other business. shrug'st thou Malice?
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'le rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee rore,
The beasts shall tremble at thy din.
Cal. No, pray thee.
I must obey, his Art is of such pow'r,
It would control my Dam's god Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.
Pro. So, slave, hence!

Scene V

Enter Ferdinand and Ariel invisible, playing & singing,
Ariel's Song. Come unto these yellow sands,
and then take hands:
Curt'sied when you have, and kiss't;
the wild waves whist;
Foot it featly here and there, and sweet sprights bear.
the burthen. Burthen dispersedly.
Hark, hark, bough-wawgh: the watch-Dogs bark,
bough wawgh.
Ar. Hark, hark, I hear, the strain of strutting Chanticlere,
cry cock adoodle-doo.
Fer. Where should this Musick be? in air, or earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waits upon
Some god 'oth' Island, sitting on a bank,
VVeeping again the King my Fathers wreck,
This Musick crept by me upon the waters
Allaying both their fury, and my passion,
With it's sweet air: thence I have follow'd it
Or it hath drawn me rather. but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.
Ariel's Song. Full fathom five thy Father lies
Of his bones are Coral made:
Those are pearls that were his eyes,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a Sea-change,
Into something rich, and strange.
Sea-Nymphs hourly ring his knell.
Burthen: ding dong.
Hark, now I hear them, ding-dong bell.
Fer. The Ditty do's remember my drown'd father;
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owns: I hear it now above me.

Scene VI

Pro. The fringed Curtains of thine eye advance,
And say what thou see'st yond.
Mira. What is't, a spirit?
Lord, how it look's about! Believe me sir,
It carries a brave form. But 'tis a spirit.
Pro. No, wench, it eats, and sleeps, and hath such senses
As we have, such. This Gallant which thou seest
Was in the wreck: and but he's something stain'd
With grief (that's beauty's canker) thou might'st call him
A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows,
And strayes about to find 'em.
Mir. I might call him
A thing divine, for nothing natural
I ever saw so Noble.
Pro. It goes on [Aside.
As my soul prompts it: Spirit, fine spirit, I'le free thee
VVithin two days for this.
Fer. Most sure the goddess

On

On whom these ayres attend! Vouchsafe my pray'r
May know, if you remain upon this Island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here: my prime request
(Which I do last pronounce) is O you wonder!
If you be mad, or no?
Mir. No wonder sir,
But certainly a Maid.
Fer. My Language! Heavens:
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
Pro. How? the best?
What wer't thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear Thee speak of Naples. He does hear me,
And that he does, I weep: my self am Naples,
Who, with mine eyes (never since at ebb) beheld
The King my Father wreck'd.
Mir. Alack, for mercy!
Fer. Yes faith, and all his Lords; the Duke of Millan
And his brave son, being twain.
Pro. The Duke of Millan
And his more braver daughter could controll thee,
If now 'twere fit to do't. At the first sight
they have chang'd eyes: (Delicate Ariel, I'll set thee free for this.) A word, good Sir,
I fear you have done your self some wrong: A word.
Mir. Why speaks my Father so ungently? This
Is the third man that e'er I saw: the first
That e'er I sigh'd for. Pity move my Father
To be inclin'd my way!
Fer. O, if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.
Pro. Soft Sir, one word more. ——
They are both in either's pow'r: But this swift business
I must uneasie make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do'st here usurp
The Name thou ow'st not, and hast put thy self
Upon this Island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the Lord on't.
Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mir. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a Temple.
If the ill-spirit have so fair an house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.
Pro. Follow me.
Pros. Speak not you for him: he's a Traitor: come,
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together;
Sea-water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be
The fresh-brook Muscles, wither'd roots and husks
Wherein the Acorn cradled. Follow.
Fer. No,
I will resist such entertainment, till
Mine Enemy has more power.
He draws, and is charmed from moving.
Mira. O dear Father,
Make not too rash a trial of him; for
He's gentle, tho not fearful.
Pros. What, I say,
My foot my Tutor? Put thy Sword up, Traitor,
Who mak'st a shew, but dar'st not strike; thy conscience
Is possest with guilt: Come from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.
Mir. Beseech you Father.
Pro. Hence: hang not on my garment.
Mir. Sir, have pity,
I'll be his surety.
Pro. Silence: One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What,
An advocate for an Impostor? Hush!
Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as he,
(Having seen but him and Caliban) Foolish wench,
To th' most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.
Mir. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.
Pro. Come on, obey:
Thy Nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.
Fer. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up:
My Father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, and this man's threats,
To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this Maid: all corners else o'th' Earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I, in such a Prison.
Pro. It works: Come on.
Thou hast done well, fine Ariell: follow me.
Hark what thou else shalt do me.
Mir. Be of comfort,
My Father's of a better Nature, Sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted
Which now came from him.
Pro. Thou shalt be as free [To Ariel
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.
Ar. To th' syllable.
Pro. Come follow: speak not for him. [Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Another Part of The Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gonz. Beseech you Sir, be merry: you have cause,
(So have we all) of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss; our hint of woe
Is common; every day, some Sailors Wife,
The Masters of some Merchant, and the Merchant
Have just our Theam of woe: But for the miracle,
(I mean our preservation) few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good Sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.
Alons. Prythee peace.
Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
Ant. The Adui[illegible] will not give o're so.
Seb. Look, he's winding up the Watch of his Wit,
By and by it will strike.
Gon. Sir.
Seb. One: tell.
Gon. When every grief is entertain'd,
That's offer'd, comes to the entertainer. ——
Seb. A Dollor.
Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed, you have spoken
truer than you purpos'd. † † P.P.H prop
Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.
Gon. Therefore, my Lord.
Ant. Fie, what a spend-thrift is he of his tongue?
Alon. I prythee spare.
Gon. Well, I have done: But yet ——
Seb. He will be talking.
Ant. Which of he, or Adrian, for a good Wager,
First begins to crow?
Seb. The old Cock.
Ant. The Cockrell.
Seb. Done: the wager?
Ant. A laughter.
Seb. A match.
Adr. Though this Island seem to be desart. ——

Seb. Ha, ha, ha.
Ant. So: you're paid.
Adr. Uninhabitable, and almoſt inacceſſible. ——
Seb. Yet. ——
Adr. Yet. ——
Ant. He could not miſs't.
Adr. It muſt needs be of ſubtle, tender, and delicate temperance.
Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.
Seb. Ay, and a ſubtle, as he moſt learnedly deliver'd.
Adr. The air breathes upon us here moſt ſweetly.
Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.
Ant. Or, as 'twere perfumed by a Fen.
Gon. Here is every thing advantageous to life.
Ant. True, ſave means to live.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gon. How luſh and luſty the graſs looks? How green?
Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.
Seb. With an eye of green in't.
Ant. He miſſes not much.
Seb. No: he doth but miſtake the truth totally.
Gon. But the rarity of it is, which is indeed almoſt beyond credit. ——
Seb. As many vouch't rarities are.
Gon. That our Garments being (as they were) drencht in the Sea, hold notwithſtanding their freſhneſs and gloſſes, being rather new dy'd than ſtain'd with ſalt water.
Ant. If but one of his Pockets could ſpeak, would it not ſay he lies?
Seb. Ay, or very falſely pocket up his report.
Gon. Methinks our garments are now as freſh as when we put them on firſt in Africk, at the marriage of the King's fair Daughter Claribel, to the King of Tunis.
Seb. 'Twas a ſweet marriage, and we proſper well in our return.
Adri. Tunis was never grac'd before with ſuch a Paragon to their Queen.
Gon. Not ſince Widow Dido's time.
Ant. Widow? a pox o' that: how came that Widow in? Widow Dido!
Seb. What if he had ſaid Widower Æneas too? Good Lord, how you take it!
Adri. Widow Dido ſaid you? You make me ſtudy of that: ſhe was of Carthage, not of Tunis.
Gon. This Tunis, ſir, was Carthage.
Adri. Carthage? Gon. I aſſure you Carthage.
Ant. His word is more than the miraculous Harp.
Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houſes too.
Ant. What impoſſible matter will he make eaſie next?
Seb. I think he will carry this Iſland home in his pocket, and give it his ſon for an Apple.
Ant. And ſowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Iſlands.
Gon. Ay. Ant. Why in good time.
Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments ſeem now as freſh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your Daughter, who is now Queen.
Ant. And the rareſt that e're came there.
Seb. Bate I beſeech you, Widow Dido.
Ant. O Widow Dido? Ay, Widow Dido!
Gon. Is not my Doublet, Sir, as freſh as the firſt day I wore it? I mean in a ſort.
Ant. That ſort was well fiſh'd for.
Gon. When I wore it at your Daughters Marriage.
Alon. You cram theſe words into mine ears, againſt The ſtomach of my ſenſe: Would I had never Married my daughter there! For coming thence My ſon is loſt, and in my rate, ſhe too, Who is ſo far from Italy remov'd, I ne're again ſhall ſee her: O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Millan, what ſtrange fiſh Hath made his meal on thee?
Fran. Sir, he may live.
I ſaw him beat the the ſurges under him,
And ride upon their backs; he trod the water
Whoſe Enmity he flung aſide; and breſted
The ſurge moſt ſwoln that met him: his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
Himſelf with his good arms in luſty ſtrokes
To th' ſhore; that o're his wave-worn baſis bow'd
As ſtooping to relieve him: I not doubt
He came alive to Land.
Alon. No, no, he's gone.
Seb. Sir, you may thank your ſelf for this great loſs,
That would not bleſs our Europe with your Daughter,
But rather loſe her to an African;
Where ſhe, at leaſt, is baniſh'd from your Eye,
Who hath cauſe to wet the grief on't.
Alon. Prithee peace.
Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwiſe
By all of us: and the fair ſoul her ſelf
Weigh'd between loathneſs and obedience, at
Which end the beam ſhould bow. we have loſt your ſon
I fear for ever: Millain and Naples have
Mo Widows in them of this buſineſs making,
Than we bring men to comfort them:
The fault's your own.
Alon. So is the deareſt of the loſs.
Gonz. My Lord Sebaſtian,
The truth you ſpeak doth lack ſome gentleneſs
And time to ſpeak it in: you rub the ſore
When you ſhould bring the Plaiſter.
Seb. Very well. Ant. And moſt Chirurgeonly.
Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good Sir,
When you are cloudy.
Seb. Foul weather? Ant. Very foul.
Gon. Had I plantation of this Iſle, my Lord. ——
Ant. He'd ſow't with Nettle-ſeed.
Seb. Or Docks, or Mallows.
Gon. And were the King on't, what would I do?
Seb. Scape being drunk, for want of Wine.
Gon. I'th' Commonwealth I would (by contraries)
Execute all things; for no kind of Traffick
Would I admit; no name of Magiſtrate;
Letters ſhould not be known; Riches, poverty,
And uſe of ſervice, none; Contract, Succeſſion,
Bourne, bound of Land, Tilth, Vineyard none;
No uſe of Metal, Corn, or Wine, or Oyl;
No occupation, all men idle, all;
And women too; but innocent and pure:
No Soveraignty.
Seb. Yet he would be King on't.
Ant. The latter end of his Commonwealth forgets the beginning.
Gon. All things in common Nature ſhould produce
Without ſweat or endeavour: Treaſon, Felony,
Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or need of any Engine
Would I not have; but Nature ſhould bring forth,
Of its own kind, all foyzon, all abundance
To feed my innocent people.
Seb. No marrying 'mong his Subjects?
Ant. None man; all idle; Whores and Knaves.
Gon. I would with ſuch perfection govern, Sir:
T'excell the Golden Age.
Seb Save his Majeſty. Ant. Long live Gonzalo!
Gon. And do you mark me, Sir?
Alon. Prithee no more: thou doſt talk nothing to me.
Gon. I do well believe your Highneſs, and did it to miniſter occaſion to theſe Gentlemen, who are of ſuch ſenſible and nimble Lungs, that they always uſe to laugh at nothing.
Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.
Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: ſo you may continue, and laugh at nothing ſtill.
Ant. What a blow was there given?
Seb. And it had not fal'n flat-long.
Gon. You are Gentlemen of brave metal: you would lift lift the Moon out of her ſphere, if ſhe would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariell playing ſolemn Muſick.

Seb. VVe would ſo, and then go a Bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my Lord be not angry.

Gon. No I warrant you, I will not adventure my diſcretion ſo weakly: VVill you laugh me aſleep, for I am very heavy?

Ant. Go ſleep, and hear us.

Alon. VVhat, all ſo ſoon aſleep? I wiſh mine Eyes would with themſelves ſhut up my thoughts; I find they are inclin'd to do ſo.

Seb. Pleaſe you Sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it:
It ſeldom viſits ſorrow; when it doth, it is a Comforter.

Ant. VVe two, my Lord, will guard your perſon,
VVhile you take your reſt, and watch your ſafety.

Alon. Thank you: wondrous heavy. [All ſleep but

Seb. What a ſtrange drowſineſs poſſeſſes them?

Ant. It is the quality o' th' Climate. [Seb & Ant

Seb. Why
Doth it not then our Eye-lids ſink? I find not
My ſelf diſpos'd to ſleep

Ant. Nor I, my ſpirits are nimble:
They fell together all as by conſent
They dropt, as by a Thunder-ſtroke. what might,
Worthy Sebaſtian? O, what might? no more.
And yet, methinks I ſee it in thy face,
What thou ſhould'ſt be: the occaſion ſpeaks thee, and
My ſtrong imagination ſees a Crown
Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What, art thou waking?

Ant. Do you not hear me ſpeak?

Seb. I do; and ſurely
It is a ſleepy Language, and thou ſpeak'ſt
Out of thy ſleep: What is it thou didſt ſay?
This is a ſtrange repoſe, to be aſleep
With Eyes wide open: ſtanding, ſpeaking, moving;
And yet ſo faſt aſleep.

Ant. Noble Sebaſtian,
Thou let'ſt thy fortune ſleep, die rather: wink'ſt
Whiles thou art waking.

Seb. Thou doſt ſnore diſtinctly;
There's meaning in thy ſnores.

Ant. I am more ſerious than my cuſtom: you
Muſt be ſo, if need me: which to do,
Troubles thee not

Seb. Well: I am ſtanding water.

Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do ſo: to ebb,
Hereditary ſloth inſtructs me.

Ant. O!
If you but knew how you the purpoſe cheriſh,
Whil'ſt thus you mock it; how in ſtripping it
You more inveſt it! ebbing men, indeed,
Moſt often do ſo near the bottom run,
By their own fear or ſloth.

Seb. Prithee ſay on,
The ſetting of thine Eye and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus ſir:
Although this Lord of weak remembrance; this
Who ſhall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almoſt perſwaded
(For he's a Spirit of perſwaſion, only Profeſſes to perſwade) the King his ſon's alive;
'Tis as impoſſible that he's undrown'd,
As he that ſleeps here, ſwims.

Seb. I have no hope,
That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope have you? No hope that way, is Another way ſo high an hope, that even
Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubt diſcovery there. Will you grant, with me,
That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. Then tell me who's the next heir of Naples?

Seb. Claribel

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis; ſhe that dwells
Ten Leagues beyond man's Life; ſhe that from Naples
Can have no note, unleſs the Sun were poſt,
(The Man i' th' Moon's too ſlow) till new-born chins
Be rough, and Razor-able; She from whom
We were ſea-ſwallow'd, though ſome caſt again,
And by that deſtiny to perform an act,
Whereof, what's paſt is prologue, what to come
In yours and my diſcharge.

Seb. What ſtuff is this? How ſay you?
'Tis true, my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis,
So is ſhe heir of Naples, 'twixt which Regions
There is ſome ſpace.

Ant. A ſpace whoſe ev'ry cubit
Seems to cry out, how ſhall that Claribel
Meaſure us back to Naples? keep in Tunis,
And let Sebaſtian wake. Say, this were death
That now hath ſeiz'd them, why they were no worſe
Than now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that ſleeps; Lords that can prate
As amply, and unneceſſarily
As this Gonzalo; I my ſelf could make
A Cough of as deep chat. O, that you bore
The mind that I do; what a ſleep were this
For your advancement! Do you underſtand me?

Seb. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember
You did ſupplant your brother Proſpero

Ant. True:
And look how well my Garments ſit upon me,
Much feater than before: My brother's ſervants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Seb. But for your Conſcience.

Ant. Ay, Sir; where lies that? If 'twere a kybe
'Twould put me to my ſlipper: But I feel not
This Deity in my boſome: Twenty Conſciences
That ſtood 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they,
And melt ere they moleſted. Here lies your brother,
No better than the Earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he's like, (that's dead;
Whom I with this obedient ſteel, (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for ay might put
This ancient morſel, this Sir Prudence, who
Should not upbraid our courſe for all the reſt
They'l take ſuggeſtion, as a Cat laps milk;
They'l tell the clock, to any buſineſs that
We ſay befits the hour.

Seb. Thy caſe, dear Friend,
Shall be my preſident; As thou got'ſt Milan,
I'le come by Naples. Draw thy Sword, one ſtroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay'ſt,
And I the King ſhall love thee.

Ant. Draw together:
And when I rear my hand, do you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. but one word.

Enter Ariell with Muſick and Song.

Ariell, My Maſter through his Art foreſees the danger
That you (his friend) are in, and ſends me forth
(For elſe his project dies) to keep them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's Ear.

While you here do ſnoaring lie,
Open-ey'd Conſpiracy
His time doth take:

If

If of Life you keep a care,
Shake off ſlumber and beware.
Awake! awake!

Ant. Then let us both be ſudden.

Gon. Now, good Angels preſerve the King. [They Wake.

Alo. Why how now ho? awake! why are you drawn? Wherefore this ghaſtly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. While we ſtood here ſecuring your repoſe, Even now we heard a hollow burſt of bellowing Like Bulls, or rather Lyons; did't not wake you? It ſtrook mine Ear moſt terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monſter's Ear; To make an Earthquake: ſure it was the roar Of a whole herd of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, ſir, I heard a humming, (And that a ſtrange one too) which did awake me! I ſhak'd you, ſir, and cri'd; as mine eyes open'd, I ſaw their weapons drawn: there was a noiſe, That's verity: 'tis beſt we ſtand upon our guard; Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground, and let's make further ſearch For my poor ſon.

Gon. Heavens keep him from theſe Beaſts: For he is ſure i'th' iſland.

Alo. Lead away.

Ar. Proſpero, my Lord, ſhall know what I have done. So (King) go ſafely on to ſeek thy ſon. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Changes to another part of ye Island

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of wood (a noiſe of Thunder heard).

Cal. All the infections that the Sun ſucks up From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Proſper fall, and make him By inch-meal a diſeaſe! his Spirits hear me, And yet I needs muſt curſe. But they'll not pinch, Fright me with Urchin ſhews, pitch me i'th' mire, Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark Out of my way, unleſs he bid 'em; but For every trifle are they ſet upon me, Sometime like Apes, that moe and chatter at me, And after bite me; then like Hedg-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my bare-foot-way, and mount Their pricks at my foot-fall; ſometime am I All wound with Adders, who with cloven tongues Do hiſs me into madneſs. Lo! now, Lo! [Enter. Here comes a Spirit of his, to torment me, Trinculo, For bringing wood in ſlowly. I'll fall flat, Perchance he will not mind me.

Tri. Here's neither buſh, nor ſhrub to bear off any weather at all; and another ſtorm brewing; I hear it ſing i'th' wind: yond ſame black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would ſhed his liquor: if it ſhould thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond ſame cloud cannot chuſe but fall by pailfulls.—What have we here, a man or a fiſh? dead or alive? A fiſh; he ſmells like a fiſh: a very ancient and fiſh-like ſmell: a kind of, not of the neweſt Poor John: a ſtrange fiſh! were I in England now (as once I was), and had but this fiſh painted, not an holy-day-fool there but would give a piece of ſilver: there would this monſter make a man; any ſtrange beaſt there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame Beggar, they will lay out ten to ſee a dead Indian: Leg'd like a man! and his Fins like Arms! warm o' my troth! I do now let looſe my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fiſh, but an Iſlander, that hath lately ſuffered by a Thunderbolt. Alas! the ſtorm is come again: my beſt way is to creep under his Gaberdine: there is no other ſhelter hereabout: Miſery acquaints a man with ſtrange bedfellows: I will here ſhrowd till the dregs of the ſtorm be paſt.

Scene III

Enter Stephano ſinging.

Ste. I ſhall no more to ſea, to ſea, here ſhall I die aſhore.
This is a very ſcurvy tune to ſing at a man's Funeral: well, here's my comfort. Drinks.

Sings, The Maſter, the Swabber, the Boat-ſwain and I
The Gunner, and his Mate,
Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marrian and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate;
For ſhe had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailor, go hang:
She lov'd not the ſavour of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Taylor might ſcratch her where ere ſhe did itch.
Then to ſea boys, and let her go hang.
This is a ſcurvy tune too:
But here's my comfort. Drinks.

Cal. Do not torment me: oh!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we Devils here? Do you put tricks upon's with Salvages, and men of Inde? ha? I have not ſcap'd drowning to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been ſaid, as proper a man as ever went on four legs, cannot make him give ground; and it ſhall be ſaid ſo again, while Stephano breathes at noſtrils.

Cal. The Spirit torments me: oh!

Ste. This is ſome monſter of the Iſle, with four legs; who had got (as I take it) an Ague: where the Devil ſhould he learn our language? I will give him ſome relief, if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a Preſent for any Emperor that ever trod on Neats-Leather.

Cal. Do not torment me prithee; I'll bring my wood home faſter.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wiſeſt: he ſhall taſte of my Bottle: if he have never drunk Wine afore, it will go near to remove his Fit: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he ſhall pay for him that hath him, and that ſoundly.

Cal. Thou doſt me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by my trembling: Now Proſper works upon me.

Ste. Come on your ways; open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you Cat; open your mouth; this will ſhake your ſhaking, I can tell you, and that ſoundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Tri. I ſhould know that voice:
It ſhould be,——
But he is drown'd; and theſe are Devils; O! defend me.

Ste. Four legs, and two voices; a moſt delicate Monſter! his forward voice now is to ſpeak of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul ſpeeches, and to detract: if all the Wine in my Bottle will recover him, I will help his Ague: Come! Amen! I will pour ſome in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a Devil, and no Monſter: I will leave him; I have no long ſpoon.

Tri. Stephano! if thou beeſt Stephano, touch me, and ſpeak to me; for I am Trinculo; be not afraid, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beeſt Trinculo, come forth; I'le pull thee by the leſſer legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, theſe are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeed: how cam'ſt thou to be the ſiege of this Moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculo's?

Tri.

Tri. I took him to be kill'd with a thunder-ſtroke; but art thou not drown'd Stephano: I hope now thou art not drown'd: is the ſtorm over-blown? I hid me under the dead Moon-Calfs Gabardine, for fear of the Storm: And art thou living Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans ſcap'd?

Ste. 'Prithee do not turn me about, my ſtomack is not conſtant.

Cal. Theſe be fine things, an if they be not ſprights: that's a brave god, and bears Celeſtial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How did'ſt thou ſcape?
How cam'ſt thou hither?
Swear by this Bottle how thou cam'ſt hither: I eſcap'd upon a But of Sack, which the Saylors heaved o'reboard, by this Bottle, which I made of the Bark of a Tree, with mine own hands, ſince I was caſt aſhore.

Cal. I'le ſwear upon that Bottle, to be thy true ſubject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here: ſwear then how thou eſcap'dſt.

Tri. Swom aſhore (man) like a Duck; I can ſwim like a Duck i'le be ſworn.

Ste. Here, kiſs the Book.
Tho thou canſt ſwim like a Duck, thou art made like a Gooſe.

Tri. O Stephano, has't any more of this?

Ste. The whole But (man) my Cellar is in a rock by th' Sea ſide where my wine is hid:
How now, Moon-Calf, how do's thine Ague?

Cal. Has't thou not dropt from heaven?

Ste. Out o'th Moon I do aſſure thee. I was the Man ith' Moon when time was.

Cal. I have ſeen thee in her; and I do adore thee: My Miſtreſſe ſhew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Buſh.

Ste. Come ſwear to that: kiſs the Book; I will furniſh it anon with new contents: Swear.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very ſhallow Monſter: I afraid of him? a very ſhallow Monſter:
The Man ith' Moon?
A moſt poor credulous Monſter:
Well drawn, Monſter, in good ſooth.

Cal. I'le ſhew thee every fertile inch o'th' Iſle, and I will kiſs thy foot: I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a moſt perfidious and drunken Monſter, when's god's aſleep, he'll rob his Bottle.

Cal. I'le kiſs thy foot. I'le ſwear my ſelf thy Subject.

Ste. Come on then; down and ſwear.

Tri. I ſhall laugh my ſelf to death at this puppy-headed Monſter: a moſt ſcurvie Monſter! I could find in my heart to beat him.

Ste. Come, kiſs.

Tri. But that the poor Monſter's in drink:
An abominable Monſter!

Cal. I'le ſhew thee the beſt Springs; I'le pluck thee Berries; I'le fiſh for thee, and get thee wood enough. A plague upon the Tyrant that I ſerve!
I'le bear him no more Sticks, but follow thee, thou wondrous man.

Tri. A moſt ridiculous Monſter, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

Cal. I prethee let me bring thee where Crabs grow, and I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts; ſhew thee a Jay's neſt, and inſtruct thee how to ſnare the nimble Marmazet; I'le bring thee to cluſtring Filberds, and ſometimes I'le get thee young Seamells from the Rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I prethee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King, and all our company elſe being drownd, we will inherit here. Here, bear my Bottle; Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again:

Caliban ſings drunkenly.

Farewell, Maſter; farewel, farewel.

Tri. A howling Monſter; a drunken Monſter!

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fiſh,
Nor fetch in firing, at re quiring,
Nor ſcrape trenchers, nor waſh diſh,
Ban, ban, Cacalyban
Has a new Maſter, get a new Man.
Freedome, hey day, hey-day, freedome, freedome, hey day freedome.

Ste. O brave Monſter, lead the way. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius Scena Prima. Proſpero's Cell.

Enter Ferdinand, (bearing a Log.)

Fer. There be ſome ſports are painful, but their labour
Delight in them ſet off: Some kinds of baſeneſs
Are nobly undergone, and moſt poor matters
Point to rich ends. This my mean Task
VVould be as heavy to me, as odious, but
The Miſtreſs which I ſerve, quickens what's dead,
And makes my labours pleaſures: O ſhe is
Ten times more gentle, than her Father's crabbed;
And he's compos'd of harſhneſs. I muſt remove
Some thouſands of theſe Logs, and pile them up,
Upon a ſore injunction. My ſweet Miſtreſs
VVeeps when ſhe ſees me work, and ſays, ſuch baſeneſs
Had never like Executor. I forget;
But theſe ſweet thoughts do even refreſh my labours,
Moſt buſie leaſt, when I do it.

Enter Miranda and Proſpero.

Mir. Alas, now pray you,
Work not ſo hard; I would the lightning had
Burnt up thoſe Logs that you are enjoyn'd to pile;
Pray, ſet it down, and reſt you; when this burns,
'Twill weep for having wearied you: my Father
Is hard at ſtudy, pray now reſt your ſelf,
He's ſafe for theſe three hours.

Fer. O moſt dear Miſtreſs,
The Sun will ſet before I ſhall diſcharge
What I muſt ſtrive to do.

Mir. If you'll ſit down
I'le bear your Logs the while. Pray give me that,
I'le carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious Creature,
I had rather crack my ſinews, break my back,
Than you ſhould ſuch diſhonor undergo,
While I ſit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me.
As well as it does you; And I ſhould do it
With much more eaſe; for my good-will is to it,
And yours it is againſt.

Pro. Poor worm, thou art infected, and
This viſitation ſhews it.

Mir. You look wearily.

Fer. No, noble Miſtreſs, 'tis freſh morning with me,
When you are by at night. I do beſeech you,
(Chiefly, that I might ſet it in my prayers,)
What is your name?

Mir. Miranda. O my Father,
I have broke your heſt, to ſay ſo.

Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeed the top of Admiration, worth
What's deareſt to the world; full many a Lady
I have ey'd with beſt regard, and many a time
Th' harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear; for ſeveral virtues
Have I lik'd ſeveral women, never any
With ſo full ſoul, but ſome defect in her
Did quarrel with the nobleſt grace ſhe ow'd,
And put it to the foil. But you, O you,
So perfect, and ſo peerleſs, are created
Of every Creatures beſt.

Mir. I do not know
One of my ſex; no womans Face remember,
Save from my glaſs, mine own; Nor have I ſeen
More that I may call men, than you, good friend,
And my dear Father; how features are abroad
I am ſkilleſs of; but my Modeſty
(The jewel in my dower) I would not wiſh
Any companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a ſhape,
Beſides your ſelf, to like of. but I prattle Something

Something too wildly, and my Fathers precepts
I [illegible] do forget.
Fer. I am, in my condition,
A Prince, Miranda; I do think a King;
(I would not ſo) and would no more endure
This woodden ſlavery, than ſuffer
The fleſh-fly blow my mouth, hear my ſoul ſpeak;
The very inſtant that I ſaw you, did
My heart fly to your ſervice, there reſides
To make me ſlave to it, and for your ſake
Am I this patient Log-man.
Mir. Do you love me?
Fer. O heaven, O earth, bear witneſs to this ſound,
And crown what I profeſs with kind event,
If I ſpeak true; if hollowly, invert
VVhat beſt is boaded me, to miſchief: I,
Beyond all limit of [illegible] elſe i'th' world,
Do love, prize, honour you.
Mir. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.
Pro. Fair encounter
Of two moſt rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between 'em.
Fer. Wherefore weep you?
Mir. At mine unworthineſs, that dare not offer
What I deſire to give, and much leſs take
What I ſhall die to want: But this is trifling;
And all the more it ſeekt to hide it ſelf,
The bigger bulk it ſhews. Hence baſhful cunning!
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence.
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'le die your maid: to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'le be your ſervant
Whether you will or no.
Fer. My Miſtreſs, deareſt,
And I thus humble ever.
Mir. My Husband then?
Fer. Ay, with a heart ſo willing
As bondage ere of freedom; here's my hand.
Mir. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewel
Till half an hour hence.
Fer. A thouſand, thouſand. Exeunt.
Pro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be,
Who are ſurpriz'd with all; but my rejoycing
At nothing can be more. I'le to my book;
For yet ere ſupper-time muſt I perform
Much buſineſs appertaining. Exit.

Scena Secunda.
Another part of the Iſland.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me; when the But is out, we will drink water, not a drop before; therefore bear up, and board 'em. Servant Monſter, drink to me.

Trin. Servant Monſter! the folly of this Iſland! they ſay there's but five upon this Iſle; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like us, the State totters.

Ste. Drink ſervant Monſter, when I bid thee; thy eyes are almoſt ſet in thy head.

Trin. Where ſhould they be ſet elſe? he were a brave Monſter indeed if they were ſet in his tail.

Ste. My man-Monſter hath drown'd his tongue in Sack; for my part the Sea cannot drown me, I ſwam ere I could recover the ſhore, five and thirty Leagues, off and on; by this light thou ſhalt be my Lieutenant Monſter, or my Standard.

Trin. Your Lieutenant, if you liſt; he's no ſtandard.

Ste. We'l not run, Monſieur Monſter.

Trin Nor go neither; but you'll lye like dogs, and yet ſay nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, ſpeak once in thy life, if thou beeſt a good Moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy ſhoe: I'le not ſerve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou lieſt, moſt ignorant Monſter, I am in caſe to juſtle a Conſtable; why, thou deboſh'd Fiſh, thou, was there ever man a Coward, that hath drunk ſo much Sack as I to day? wilt thou tell me a monſtrous lye, being but half a Fiſh and half a Monſter?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me; wilt thou let him, my Lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he! that a Monſter ſhould be ſuch a Natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again; bite him to death, I prythee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head; if you prove a mutineer, the next Tree—the poor Monſter's my ſubject, and he ſhall not ſuffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble Lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd once again to hearken to the ſuit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I; kneel and repeat it;
I will ſtand, and ſo ſhall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell inviſible.

As I told thee before, I am ſubject to a Tyrant,
A Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me
of the Iſland.
Ariel. Thou lieſt.
Cal. Thou lieſt, thou jeſting Monkey, thou;
I would my valiant maſter would deſtroy thee;
I doe not lie.
Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale,
By this hand, I will ſupplaint ſome of your teeth.
Trin. Why, I ſaid nothing.
Ste. Mum then, and no more; proceed.
Cal. I ſay by Sorcery he got this Iſle,
From Me, he got it. If thy Greatneſs will Revenge it on him, (For I know thou dar'ſt,
But this thing dare Not;
Ste. That's moſt certain.
Cal. Thou ſhalt be Lord of it, and I'le ſerve thee.
Ste. How ſhall this be compaſt?
Canſt thou bring me to the party?
Cal. Yea, yea, my Lord, I'le yield him thee aſleep,
Where thou maiſt knock a nail into his head.
Ariel. Thou lieſt, thou canſt not.
Cal. What a py'd Ninny's this? Thou ſcurvy patch!
I do beſeech thy Greatneſs give him blows,
And take his Bottle from him; When that's gone,
He ſhall drink nought but brine, for I'le not ſhew him
Where the quick Freſhes are.
Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger:
Interrupt the Monſter one word further, and by this hand, I'le turn my mercy out o' doors, and make a Stock-
fiſh of thee.
Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing;
I'le go further off.
Ste. Didſt thou not ſay he lyed:
Ariel. Thou lieſt.
Ste. Do I ſo? Take you that, I Beats him.
As you like this, give me the lye another time.
Trin. I did not give thee the lye; Out o' your wits and hearing too?
A pox o' your Bottle! this can Sack and drinking do:
A murrain on your Monſter, and the Divell take your fingers!
Cal. Ha, ha, ha.
Ste. Now forward with your Tale; prythee ſtand further off.
Cal. Beat him enough; after a little time
I'le beat him too.
Ste. Stand further: Come proceed.
Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a cuſtom with him

Ith'

P'th' afternoon to sleep; there thou may't brain him,
Having first seiz'd his Books: Or with a Log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a Stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy Knife. Remember
First to possess his books; for without them
He's but a Sot, as I am; and hath not
One Spirit to command: they all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Burn but his books;
He has brave Utensils (for so he calls them)
Which when he has an house, he'l deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beauty of his Daughter; he himself
Calls her a non pareil: I never saw a woman
But only Sycorax my Dam, and her;
But she as far surpasses Sycorax
As greatest does least.
Ste. Is it so brave a Lass?
Cal. Ay, Lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth brave brood.
Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his Daughter and I will be King and Queen, save our Graces; and Trinculo and thy self shall be Vice-Roys.
Dost thou like the Plot, Trinculo?
Trin. Excellent.
Ste. Give me thy hand; I am sorry I beat thee:
But while thou liv'st keep a good tongue in thy head.
Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep;
Wilt thou destroy him then?
Ste. Ay, on mine honour.
Ariel. This will I tell my Master.
Cal. Thou mak'st me merry; I am full of pleasure;
Let us be jocund. Will you troul the Catch
You taught me but while-ere?
Ste. At thy Request, Monster, I will do Reason,
Any Reason: Come on Trinculo, let us sing.

Sings.

Flout 'em and scout 'em; and scout 'em, and flout 'em;
Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.
Ariel plays the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.
Ste. What is this same?
Trin. This is the tune of our Catch plaid by the picture of No-body.
Ste. If thou beest a man, shew thy self in thy likeness:
If thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.
Trin. O forgive me my sins!
Ste. He that dies pays all debts: I defie thee:
Mercy upon us!
Cal. Art thou afeard?
Ste. No Monster, not I.
Cal. Be not afeard; the Isle is full of noises,
Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine Ears; and sometimes voices,
That if I then had wak'd after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again; and then in dreaming
The Clouds me thought would open, and shew Riches
Ready to drop upon me; that when I wak'd
I cry'd to dream again.
Ste. This will prove a brave Kingdom to me,
Where I shall have my musick for nothing.
Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.
Ste. That shall be by and by:
I remember the story.
Trin. The sound is going away;
Let's follow it, and after do our work.
Ste. Lead, Monster;
We'l follow. I would I could see this Taborer.
He lays it on.
Trin. Wilt come?
I'l follow, Stephano. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Changes Again.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, &c.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, Sir,
My old bones ake: here's a maze trod indeed
Through forth-rights and Meanders: by your patience,
I needs must rest me.
Alo. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am my self attach'd with weariness
To th' dulling of my spirits: sit down and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd,
Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on Land. well, let him go.
Ant. I am right glad that he's so out of hope: [Aside to Seb.
Do not, for one Repulse, forgo the purpose
That you resolv'd t' effect.
Seb. The next advantage will we take throughly.
Ant. Let it be to night;
For now they are oppress'd with travel, they
Will not, nor cannot use such vigilance
As when they are fresh. Seb: I say to night: no more
Solemn and strange Musick; and Prospero on the top (invisible). Enter several strange shapes, bringing in a Banquet; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, and inviting the King, &c. to eat, they depart.
[redacted]
Al. What harmony is this? my good friends, hark!
Gon. Marvellous sweet Musick!
Alo. Give us kind keepers, heaven!: what are these?
Seb. A living Drollery. now I will believe
That there are Unicorns; that in Arabia
There is one Tree, the Phœnix throne, one Phœnix
At this hour reigning there.
Ant. I'l believe both:
And what does else want credit, come to me,
And I'l be sworn 'tis true: Travellers ne're lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.
Gon. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me?
If I should say I saw such Islanders:
(For certes these are people of the Island)
Who tho' they are of monstrous shape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find
Many; nay, almost any.
Pro. Honest Lord,
Thou hast said well; for some of you there present,
Are worse than Devils.
Alo. I cannot too much muse,
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing
(Although they want the use of tongue) a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.
Pro. Praise in departing.
Fra. They vanish'd strangely.
Seb. No matter, since
They have left their Viands behind; for we have stomachs.
Will't please you taste of what is here?
Alo. Not I.
Gonz. Faith Sir, you need not fear. when we were boys,
Who would believe that there were Mountaineers,
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em
Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men
Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find
Each putter out on five for one, will bring us
Good warrant of.
Alo. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last; no matter, since I feel

The

a. It was a custom heretofore for people upon their going forth to travel to put out sums of money upon contracts to receive the same back with its increase upon their return which increase bore a proportion to the length & danger of the Voyages they undertook & upon those which were very long & very hazardous it sometimes rose to 500 per Cent.
See Ben Johnson, Every man out of his humour Act 2 Sc. 2

The best is past, brother, my Lord, the Duke,
Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariel (like a Harpy) claps his wings upon the Table, and with a queint device the Banquet vanishes.

Ar. You are three men of sin, whom destiny
That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't) the never surfeited Sea,
Hath caused to belch up; and on this Island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live: I have made you mad;
And even with such like valour men hang and drown
Their proper selves: You fools, I and my fellows
Are Ministers of Fate; the Elements [They draw their
Of which your swords are temper'd, may as well swords.
Wound the loud winds, or with bemockt-at-Stabs
Kill the still closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plume: My fellow-ministers
Are like-invulnerable: if you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massie for your strength,
And will not be up-lifted: but remember
(For that's my business to you) that you three
From Millan did supplant good Prospero;
Expos'd unto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him and his innocent child: for which foul deed
The Powers delaying (not forgetting), have
Incens'd the Seas and Shores; yea, all the Creatures,
Against your peace: Thee of thy Son, Alonso,
They have bereft; and do pronounce by me,
Lingring perdition (worse than any death
Can be at once), shall step by step attend
You and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from,
Which here, in this most desolate Isle, else fall
Upon your heads, is nothing but hearts-sorrow,
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in Thunder: then (to soft Musick). Enter the shapes again, and dance (with mocks and mowes) and carrying out the Table.

Pro. Bravely the figure of this Harpy hast thou
Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had devouring:
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hadst to say: so with good life
And observation strange, my meaner Ministers
Their several kinds have done; my high charms work,
And these, mine Enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions: they now are in my power;
And in these fits I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand, who they suppose is drown'd,
And his, and my lov'd darling.

Gon. I' th' name of something, holy Sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?

Alo. O, it is monstrous! monstrous!
Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it;
The winds did sing it to me, and the Thunder,
That deep and dreadful Organ-pipe, pronounc'd
The name of Prosper: it did base my trespass;
Therefore my Son i' th' Ooze is bedded; and
I'll seek him deeper than ere plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudded. [Exit.

Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their Legions o're.

Ant. I'll be thy second. [Exeunt.

Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt,
(Like poyson given to work a great time after)
Now 'gins to bite the spirits. I do beseech you
That are of suppler joynts, follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this Extasie
May now provoke them to.

Ad. Follow, I pray you. [Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.
Prospero's Cave.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends; for I
Have given you here a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live; who once again
I tender to thy hand: All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here afore heav'n
I ratifie this my rich gift: Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast her off;
For thou shalt find she will out-strip all praise,
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it
Against an Oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my Daughter: But
If thou dost break her Virgin-knot before
All sanctimonious Ceremonies may
With full and holy right be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this Contract grow; but barren hate,
Sowr-ey'd disdain, and discord shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly,
That you shall hate it both: Therefore take heed,
As Hymens Lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love, as 'tis now; the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion,
Our worser Genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that days celebration,
When I shall think, or Phœbus steeds are founderd,
Or night kept chain'd below.

Pro. Fairly spoke;
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own;
What, Ariel; my industrious servant, Ariel! [Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am.

Pro. Thou, and thy meaner fellows, your last service
Did worthily perform; and I must use you
In such another trick; go bring the rabble,
(O're whom I give thee power) here, to this place;
Incite them to quick motion, for I must
Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine Art; it is my promise,
And they expect it for me.

Ari. Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say, come, and go,
And breathe twice; and cry, so, so;
Each one tripping on his Toe,
Will be here with mop, and mow.
Do you love me Master? no?

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel; do not approach
Till thou do'st hear me call.

Aril. Well, I conceive. [Exit.

Pro. Look thou be true; do not give dalliance
Too much the rein; the strongest oaths, are straw
To th' fire ith' blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.

Fer. I warrant you, Sir,
The white cold virgin Snow, upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my Liver.

Pro. VVell.
Now come my Ariel, bring a Corolary,
Rather than want a spirit, appear, and pertly. Soft Musick.
No tongue: all eyes: be silent. A Masque. Enter Iris.

Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, thy rich Leas

Of

Of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Fetches, Oats, and Peaſe;
Thy Turphy Mountains, where live nibling Sheep,
And flat Meddes thatch'd with Stover, them to keep;
Thy banks with pioned, and twilled brims, Tulip'd
VVhich ſpungy April, at thy beſt betrims;
To make cold Nymphs chaſt crowns; and thy broom VVhoſe ſhadow the diſmiſſed Batchelor loves, (groves
Being laſs-lorn; thy pole-clipt vineyard:
And thy Sea-marge ſteril, and rocky hard;
VVhere thou thy ſelf do'ſt air, the Queen o'th Sky,
VVhoſe watry Arch, and meſſenger, am I,
Bids thee leave theſe, and with her ſovereign grace, Juno
Here on this graſs plot, in this very place (deſcends.
To come, and ſport; her Peacocks fly amain:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain. Enter Ceres,

Cer. Hail many coloured Meſſenger, that ne're
Do'ſt diſobey the wife of Jupiter:
VVho, with thy ſaffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffuſeſt hony drops, refreſhing ſhowers,
And with each end of thy blue bow do'ſt crown
My bosky acres, and my unſhrub'd down,
Rich ſcarf, to my proud earth; why hath thy Queen
Summon'd me hither, to this ſhort graſs'd Green?

Ir. A contract of true Love, to celebrate,
And ſome donation freely to eſtate
On the bleſs'd Lovers.

Cer. Tell me heav'nly Bow,
If Venus or her Son, as thou do'ſt know,
Do now attend the Queen? ſince they did plot
The means, that dusky Dis, my daughter got;
Her, and her blind Boys ſcandal'd company,
I have forſworn.

Ir. Of her ſociety
Be not affraid: I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos: and her Son
Dove-drawn with her; here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm, upon this man and maid,
VVhoſe vows are, that no bed-right ſhall be paid
Till Hymens Torch be lighted; but in vain:
Mars's hot Minion is return'd again;
Her waſpiſh headed ſon has broke his Arrows,
Swears he will ſhoot no more, but play with Sparrows,
And be a boy right-out.

Cer. High Queen of State,
Great Juno comes, I know her by her gate.

Ju. How do's my bounteous ſiſter? go with me
To bleſs this twain, that they may proſp'rous be,
And honour'd in their Iſſue. They ſing.

Ju. Honour, riches, marriage bleſſing,
Long continuance and encreaſing,
Hourly joy ſhe ſtill upon you,
Juno ſings her bleſſings on you:
Earths increaſe, and foyzon plenty,
Barns and Garners never empty,
Vines, with cluſtring bunches growing,
Plants, with goodly burthen bowing:
Spring come to you at the fartheſt,
In the very end of Harveſt:
Scarcity and want ſhall ſhun you,
Ceres bleſſing ſo is on you.

Fer. This is a moſt majeſtick viſion, and Harmonious charming lay, may I be bold
To think theſe ſpirits?

Pro. Spirits which by mine Art
I have from all their confines call'd to enact
My preſent fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever;
So rare a wondred Father, and a wife,
Makes this place Paradiſe.

Pro. Sweet now, ſilence:
[redacted],
There's ſomething elſe to do; huſh, and be mute,
Or elſe our ſpell is marr'd.

Juno and Ceres whiſper, and ſend Iris on Imployment.

Ir. You Nymphs call'd Nayads of the winding brooks,
With your ſedg'd crowns, and ever-harmleſs looks,
Leave your criſp channels, and on this green-land
Anſwer your ſummons, Juno do's command:
Come temperate Nymphs, and help to celebrate
A Contract of true Love: be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You Sun-burn'd Sicklemen, of Auguſt weary,
Come hither from the Furrow, and be merry;
Make holy-day: your Rye-ſtraw hats put on;
And theſe freſh Nymphs encounter every one
In Country footing. Scene IV

Enter certain Reapers (properly habited): they joyn with the Nymphs in a graceful Dance; towards the end whereof Proſpero ſtarts ſuddenly, and ſpeaks; after which to a ſtrange hollow and confuſed noiſe, they heavily vaniſh.

Pro. I had forgot that foul Conſpiracy
Of the beaſt Caliban, and his Confederates,
Againſt my life; the minute of their plot
Is almoſt come. Well done, avoid; no more.

Fer. This is ſtrange: your Father's in ſome paſſion
That works him ſtrongly.

Mir. Never till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, ſo diſtemper'd.

Pro. You do look (my Son) in a mov'd ſort;
As if you were diſmaid: be chearful Sir;
Our Revels now are ended: Theſe our Actors
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air,
And like the baſeleſs Fabrick of their Viſion,
The Cloud capt Towers, the gorgeous Palaces,
The ſolemn Temples, the great Globe it ſelf;
Yea, all which it inherit, ſhall diſſolve,
And like this inſubſtantial Pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. we are ſuch ſtuff
As dreams are made on: and our little life
Is rounded with a ſleep. Sir, I am vext;
Bear with my weakneſs, my old brain is troubled:
Be not diſturb'd with my infirmity;
If you be pleas'd, retire into my Cell,
And there repoſe; a turn or two I'll walk
To ſtill my beating mind.

Fer. Mir. We wiſh you peace. [Exeunt

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee, Ariel: come.

Enter Ariel.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to; what's thy pleaſure?

Pro. Spirit, we muſt prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my Commander; when I preſented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd,
Leſt I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where did'ſt thou leave theſe Varlets?

Ar. I told you, Sir, they were red hot with drinking,
So full of Valour, that they ſmote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kiſſing of their feet; yet always bending
Towards their project: then I beat my Tabor,
At which, like unback't Colts, they prickt their Ears,
Advanc'd their Eye-lids, lifted up their Noſes,
As they ſmelt muſick; ſo I charm'd their Ears,
That Calf-like, they my lowing follow'd through
Tooth'd briars, ſharp furzes, pricking goſs and thorns,
Which entred their frail ſhins: At laſt I left them
I'th' filthy mantled pool beyond your Cell,
There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul Lake
O're-ſtunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird:
Thy ſhape inviſible retain thou ſtill;
The trumpery in my houſe, go bring it hither
For ſtale to catch theſe thieves.

Ariel, I go, I go. [Exit.

Pro. A Devil, a born-devil, on whoſe Nature
Nurture can never ſtick; on whom my pains
Humanely taken, all, all loſt, quite loſt;
And, as with age, his body uglier grows,

So his mind cankers; I will plague them all,
Even to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.
Enter Ariell loaden with gliſtering Apparel, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.
Cal. Pray you tread ſoftly, that the blind Mole may not hear a foot fall: we now are near his Cell. (Fairy,
Ste. Monſter, your Fairy, which you ſay is a harmleſs Has done little better than plaid the Jack with us.
Trin. Monſter, I do ſmell all Horſe-piſs, at which My noſe is in great indignation.
Ste. So is mine: Do you hear, Monſter? If I ſhould Take a diſpleaſure againſt you; Look you.
Trin. Thou wert but a loſt Monſter.
Cal. Good my Lord, give me thy favour ſtill:
Be patient; for the prize I'le bring thee to
Shall hood-wink this miſchance: therefore ſpeak ſoftly;
All's huſht as midnight yet.
Trin. Ay, but to loſe our Bottles in the Pool.
Ste. There is not only diſgrace, and diſhonour in that (Monſter), but an infinite loſs.
Trin. That's more to me than my wetting:
Yet this is your harmleſs Fairy, Monſter.
Ste. I will fetch off my Bottle,
Tho I be o're Ears for my labour.
Cal. Prythee (my King) be quiet: Seeſt thou here
This is the mouth o' th' Cell: no noiſe, and enter;
Do that good miſchief which may make this Iſland
Thine own for ever; and I thy Caliban
For ay thy foot-licker.
Ste. Give me thy hand;
I do begin to have bloody thoughts.
Trin. O King Stephano! O Peer! O worthy Stephano!
Look what a Wardrobe here is for thee!
Cal. Let it alone, thou fool, it is but traſh.
Tri. Oh, ho, Monſter: we know what belongs to a Fripery, O King Stephano.
Ste. Put off that gown, (Trinculo), by this hand I'le have that gown.
Tri. Thy grace ſhall have it.
Cal. The Dropſie drown this fool: what do you mean,
To doat thus on ſuch luggage? Let's alone,
And do the Murder firſt: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'l fill our ſkins with pinches;
Make us ſtrange ſtuff.
Ste. Be you quiet (Monſter) Miſtris Line, is not this my Jerkin? Now is the Jerkin under the Line: Now Jerkin you are like to loſe your hair, and prove a bald Jerkin.
Trin. Do, do; we ſteal by line and level, and't like your Grace.
Ste. I thank thee for that Jeſt; here's a garment for't: We ſhall not go unrewarded while I am King of this Country: Steal by line and level, is an excellent paſs of pate: there's another garment for't.
Tri. Monſter, come put ſome Lime upon your fingers, and away with the reſt.
Cal. I will have none on't; we ſhall loſe our time,
And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes,
With foreheads villanous low.
Ste Monſter, lay to your fingers; help to bear this away, where my hogſhead of Wine is, or I'le turn you out of my Kingdom: go to, carry this.
Tri. And this.
Ste. Ay, and this.
A noiſe of Hunters heard. Enter divers ſpirits in ſhape of Dogs, and Hounds hunting them about; Proſper and Ariel, ſetting them on.
Pro. Hey Mountain, hey.
Ari. Silver: there it goes, Silver.
Pro. Fury, Fury; there Tyrant, there: hark, hark:
Go, charge my Goblins that they grind their joynts
With dry Convulſions, ſhorten up their ſinews
With aged Cramps, and more pinch-ſpotted make them,
Than Pard, or Cat o' Mountain.
Ari. Hark, they roar.
Pro. Let them be hunted ſoundly. At this hour
Lies at my mercy all mine Enemies:
Shortly ſhall all my labours end, and thou
Shalt have the air at freedom; for a little
Follow, and do me ſervice. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Proſpero (in his Magick Robes) and Ariel.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head;
My Charms crack not; My Spirits obey, and time
Goes upright with his carriage: how's the day?
Ar. On the ſixth hour, at which time, my Lord,
You ſaid our work ſhould ceaſe.
Pro. I did ſay ſo
When firſt I rais'd the Tempeſt: ſay, my Spirit,
How fares the King and's followers?
Ar. Confin'd [redacted]
In the ſame faſhion as you gave in charge,
Juſt as you left them, all priſoners ſir,
In the Lime-grove which weather-fends your Cell.
They cannot budg till you releaſe. The King,
His Brother, and yours, abide all three diſtracted;
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brim-full of ſorrow and diſmay: but chiefly
Him that you term'd, Sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo.
His tears run down his beard like Winter drops
From Eaves of Reeds: your charm ſo ſtrongly works 'em
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.
Pro. Do'ſt thou think ſo, ſpirit?
Ar. Mine would, ſir, were I human.
Pro. And mine ſhall.
Haſt thou (which art but air) a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and ſhall not my ſelf,
One of their kind, that reliſh all as ſharply
Paſſion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?
Tho with their high wrongs I am ſtruck to th' quick,
Yet, with my nobler Reaſon, 'gainſt my Fury,
Do I take part; the rarer action is
In Vertue than in Vengeance; they being penitent,
The ſole drift of my purpoſe doth extend
Not a frown further: Go releaſe them Ariel;
My charms I'le break, their ſenſes I'le reſtore,
And they ſhall be themſelves.
Ar. I'le fetch them, Sir. [Exit.
Pro. Ye Elves of Hills, Brooks, ſtanding-Lakes & Groves,
And ye that on the Sands with printleſs foot
Do chaſe the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
When he comes back; you demy-Puppets that
By Moon-ſhine do the green ſour Ringlets make,
Whereof the Ewe not bites; and you whoſe paſtime
Is to make midnight Muſhrom's, that rejoice
To hear the ſolemn Curfew; by whoſe aid
(Weak [redacted] tho' ye be) I have be-dimn'd
The noon-tide Sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green Sea and the azur'd Vault,
Set roaring War; To the dread ratling Thunder
Have I giv'n fire, and rifted Jove's ſtout Oak
With his own bolt: The ſtrong baſs'd promontory
Have I made ſhake, and by the ſpurs pluckt up
The Pine and Cedar: Graves at my command
Have wak'd their ſleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth
By my ſo potent Art: But this rough Magick
I here abjure; and when I have requir'd
Some heavenly Muſick ([redacted] now I do)
To work mine end upon their ſenſes, that
This airy charm is for, I'le break my ſtaff,
Bury it certain fadoms in the Earth,

And

And deeper than did ever Plummet ſound
I'le drown my Book. Scene III [Solemn Muſick.
Here enters Ariel before: then Alonſo with a frantick geſture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebaſtian and Anthonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Franciſco. They all enter the circle which Proſpero had made, and there ſtand charm'd: which Proſpero obſerving, ſpeaks:
A ſolemn Air, and the beſt comforter,
To an unſetled fancy, cure thy brains
(Now uſeleſs) boil'd within thy skull! there ſtand,
For you are ſpell-ſtopt. ——
Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even ſociable to the ſhew of thine,
Fall fellow, drops. —The charm diſſolves apace,
And as the morning ſteals upon the night,
(Melting the darkneſs) ſo their riſing ſenſes
Begin to chaſe the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer Reaſon. O good Gonzalo,
My true preſerver, and a loyal Sir
To him thou follow'ſt; I will pay thy graces
Home both in word and deed. —Moſt cruelly
Didſt thou, Alonſo, uſe me, and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act;
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebaſtian. —Fleſh and blood,
You, brother mine, that entertain'd Ambition,
Expell'd Remorſe and Nature, who with Sebaſtian
(Whoſe inward pinches therefore are moſt ſtrong)
Would here have kill'd your King: I do forgive thee,
Unnatural though thou art: their underſtanding
Begins to ſwell, and the approaching tide
Will ſhortly fill the reaſonable ſhore,
That now lies foul and muddy. not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me. Ariel,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell;
I will diſcaſe me, and my ſelf preſent,
As I was ſometime Millain: quickly ſpirit;
Thou ſhalt ere long be free.

Ariel. ſings, and helps to attire him.
Where the Bee ſucks, there [redacted] I;
In a Cowſlips bell I lie:
There I crouch when Owls do cry;
On the Bat's back I do fly
after [redacted] merrily.
Merrily, merrily ſhall I live now
Under the Bloſſom that hangs on the Bough.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariel: I ſhall miſs thee;
But yet thou ſhalt have freedom: ſo, ſo, ſo.
To the King's Ship, inviſible as thou art;
There ſhalt thou find the Mariners aſleep
Under the Hatches; the Maſter and the Boatſwain,
Being awake, enforce them to this place,
And preſently I prythee.
Ari. I drink the air before me, and return
Or ere your pulſe twice beat. [Exit.
Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder and amazement
Inhabits here; ſome heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful Country!
Pro. [redacted] Sir King,
The wronged Duke of Millain, Proſpero:
For more aſſurance that a living Prince
Does now ſpeak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy Company. I bid
A hearty welcome.
Alo. [redacted] thou be'ſt he or no,
Or ſome inchanted trifle, to abuſe me
(As late I have been) I not know; thy Pulſe
Beats as of fleſh and blood, and ſince I ſaw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which
I fear a madneſs held me; this muſt crave
(And if this be at all) a moſt ſtrange ſtory:
Thy Dukedom I reſign, and do intreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: But how ſhould Proſpero
Be living, and be here?
Pro. Firſt, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whoſe honour cannot
Be meaſur'd, or confin'd.
Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'le not ſwear.
Pro. You do yet taſte
Some ſubtilties o' th' Iſle, that will not let you
Believe things certain: Welcome, my friends all.
But you, my brace of Lords, were I ſo minded,
I here could pluck his Highneſs frown upon you,
And juſtifie you Traitors; at this time
I will tell no tales.
Seb. The Devil ſpeaks in him.
Pro. [redacted]:
For you (moſt wicked Sir) whom to call brother [To Anthonio
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankeſt faults; all of them; and require
My Dukedom of thee, which perforce I know
Thou muſt reſtore.
Alo. If thou beeſt Proſpero,
Give us particulars of thy preſervation,
How thou haſt met us here, who three hours ſince
Were wrecked upon this ſhore? where I have loſt
(How ſharp the point of this remembrance is)
My dear Son Ferdinand.
Pro. I am wo for't, Sir.
Alo. Irreparable is the loſs, and Patience
Says, it is paſt her cure.
Pro. I rather think
You have not ſought her help, of whoſe ſoft grace
For the like loſs, I have her ſovereign aid,
And reſt my ſelf content.
Alo. You the like loſs?
Pro. As great to me, as late, and inſupportable
To make the dear loſs, have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you; for I
Have loſt my daughter.
Alo. [redacted] daughter?
Oh heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
The King and Queen there; that they were, I wiſh
My ſelf were mudded in that Oo-zy bed
Where my Son lyes, when did you loſe your daughter?
Pro. In this laſt Tempeſt. I perceive theſe Lords
At this encounter do ſo much admire,
That they devour their Reaſon, and ſcarce think
Their Eyes do Offices of truth; their words
Are natural breath: but howſoe'er you have
Been juſtled from your ſenſes, know for certain
That I am Proſpero, and that very Duke
Which was thruſt forth of Millain, who moſt ſtrangely
Upon this ſhore (where you were wrecked) was landed
To be the Lord on't. no more yet of this;
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a Relation for a breakfaſt, nor
Befitting this firſt meeting. Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court; here have I few attendants,
And Subjects none abroad; pray you look in;
My Dukedom ſince you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At leaſt, bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much as me my Dukedom. Scene IV.
Here Proſpero diſcovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at Cheſs.
Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me falſe.
Fer. No, my deareſt Love,
I would not for the world. (gle,
Mir. Yes, for a ſcore of Kingdoms you ſhould wran-
And I would call it fair play.
Alo. If this prove
A viſion of the Iſland, one dear Son
Shall I twice loſe.
Seb. A moſt high Miracle!
Fer. Though the Seas threaten, they are merciful:
I have curſ'd them without cauſe.

Alo. Now all the bleſſings
Of a glad father compaſs thee about!
Ariſe, and ſay how thou cam'ſt here.
Mir. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here?
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world
That has ſuch people in't.
Pro. 'Tis new to thee.
Alo. What is this Maid with whom thou was't at play?
Your eld'ſt acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is ſhe the goddeſs that hath ſever'd us,
And brought us thus together?
Fer. Sir, ſhe's mortal;
But by immortal providence ſhe's mine;
I choſe her when I could not ask my Father
For his advice; nor thought I had one: She
Is Daughter to this famous Duke of Millain,
Of whom ſo often I have heard renown,
But never ſaw before; of whom I have
Receiv'd a ſecond Life; and ſecond Father
This Lady makes him to me.
Alo. I am hers;
But O, how odly will it ſound, that I
Muſt ask my child forgiveneſs?
Pro. There, Sir, ſtop;
Let us not burthen our remembrance with
An heavineſs that's gone.
Gon. I have inly wept,
Or ſhould have ſpoke ere this: look down you gods,
And on this Couple drop a bleſſed Crown!
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.
Alo. I ſay Amen, Gonzalo.
Gon. Was Millain thruſt from Millain that his Iſſue
Should become Kings of Naples? O rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and ſet it down
In gold on laſting Pillars: In one Voyage
Did Claribel her Husband find at Tunis;
And Ferdinand, her Brother, found a Wife,
Where he himſelf was loſt; Proſpero his Dukedom
In a poor Iſle; and all of us, our ſelves,
When no man was his own.
Alo. Give me your hands: [To Ferd. & Mir. and a.
Let grief and ſorrow ſtill embrace his heart,
That doth not wiſh you Joy!
Gon. Be it ſo, Amen.

Scene V.

Enter Ariel, with the Maſter and Boatſwain amazedly following.

O look Sir, look Sir, here is more of us!
I propheſi'd, if a Gallows were on Land
This fellow could not drown: Now blaſphemy,
That ſwear'ſt grace ore-board, not an Oath on ſhore;
Haſt thou no mouth by Land?
What is the news?
Boat. The beſt news is, that we have ſafe found
Our King and Company; the next, our Ship,
Which but three glaſſes ſince we gave out ſplit,
Is tight and yare, and bravely rigg'd, as when
We firſt put out to Sea.
Ar. Sir, all this ſervice
Have I done ſince I went.
Pro. My tricky ſpirit.
Alo. Theſe are not natural Events; they ſtrengthen
From ſtrange to ſtranger: ſay, how came you hither?
Boat. If I did think, Sir, I were well awake,
I'd ſtrive to tell you: we were dead of ſleep,
And (how we know not) all clapt under hatches,
Where, but even now, with ſtrange and ſeveral noiſes
Of roaring, ſhreeking, howling, gingling chains,
And moe diverſity of ſounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd; ſtraight way at liberty;
Where we, in all our trim, freſhly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant Ship; our Maſter
Capring to eye her: on a trice, ſo pleaſe you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.
Ar. Was't well done?
Pro. Bravely (my diligence); thou ſhalt be free.
Alo. This is as ſtrange a Maze as e're men trod,
And there is in this buſineſs more than Nature
Was ever conduct of; ſome Oracle
Muſt rectifie our knowledge.
Pro. Sir, my Liege,
Do not infect your mind with beating on
The ſtrangeneſs of this buſineſs; at pickt leizure
(Which ſhall be ſhortly ſingle) I'll reſolve you
(Which to you ſhall ſeem probable) of every
Theſe happen'd accidents; till when, be chearful,
And think of each thing well. Come hither, ſpirit,
Set Caliban and his companions free:
Untie the Spell: How fares my gracious Sir?
There are yet miſſing of your Company
Some few odd Lads, that you remember not.

Scene VI

Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their ſtol'n Apparel.

Ste. Every man ſhift for all the reſt, and let
No man take care for himſelf; for all is
But fortune: Coragio Bully-Monſter, Coragio.
Tri. If theſe be true ſpies which I wear in my head,
Here's a goodly ſight.
Cal. O Setebos, theſe be brave Spirits indeed!
How fine my Maſter is? I am afraid
He will chaſtiſe me.
Seb. Ha, ha;
What things are theſe, my Lord Anthonio?
Will money buy 'em?
Ant. Very like; one of them
Is a plain Fiſh, and no doubt marketable.
Pro. Mark but the badges of theſe men, my Lords,
Then ſay if they be true: This miſhapen knave,
His Mother was a VVitch, and one ſo ſtrong
That could controul the Moon, make flows and ebbs,
And deal in her command without her power:
Theſe three have robb'd me, and this demy-devil,
(For he's a baſtard one) had plotted with them
To take my life; two of theſe Fellows you
Muſt known and own, this Thing of darkneſs I
Acknowledge mine.
Cal. I ſhall be pincht to death.
Alo. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?
Seb. He is drunk now. But how?
VVhere had he VVine?
Alon. And Trinculo is reeling-ripe; where ſhould they Find this grand Liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'ſt thou in this pickle?
Tri. I have been in ſuch a pickle ſince I ſaw you laſt,
That I fear me will never out of my bones:
I ſhall not fear fly-blowing.
Seb. VVhy, how now Stephano?
Ste. O touch me not; I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.
Pro. You'd be King o' th' Iſle, Sirrah?
Ste. I ſhould have been a ſore one then.
Alo. This is a ſtrange thing as ever I look'd on.
Pro. He is as diſproportion'd in his manners
As in his ſhape: Go Sirrah, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handſomly.
Cal. Ay that I will; and I'le be wiſe hereafter,
And ſeek for grace. what a thrice double Aſs
VVas I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worſhip this dull fool?
Pro. Go to, away. (it.
Alo. Hence, and beſtow your luggage where you found
Seb. Or ſtole it rather.
Pro. Sir, I invite your Highneſs and your train,
To my poor Cell; where you ſhall take your reſt
For this one night, which (part of it) I'll waſte
VVith ſuch diſcourſe as I not doubt ſhall make it

Go

Go quick away: The ſtory of my life,
And the particular accidents gone by
Since I came to this iſle; And in the morn
I'le bring you to your Ship; and ſo to Naples
Where I have hope to ſee the Nuptials
Of theſe our dear-beloved, ſolemnized;
And thence retire me to my Millain, where
Every third thought ſhall be my grave.
Alo. I long
To hear the ſtory of your life, which muſt
Take the Ear ſtrangely.
Pro. I'le deliver all,
And promiſe you calm ſeas, auſpicious gales,
And ſail ſo expeditious, that ſhall catch
Your Royal fleet far off: My Ariel. (Chick)
That is thy charge: then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well! pleaſe you, draw near.
Exeunt omnes.

EPILOGUE
ſpoken by Proſpero.

NOw my Charms are all ore-thrown,
And what ſtrength I hav's mine own,
Which is moſt faint: Now 'tis true
I muſt be here confin'd by you,
Or ſent to Naples. Let me not
Since I have my Dukedom got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Iſland by your ſpell;
But releaſe me from my bands
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours, my Sails
Muſt fill, or elſe my project fails,
Which was to pleaſe: Now I want
Spirits to enforce: Art to enchant:
And my ending is deſpair,
Unleſs I be reliev'd by prayer;
Which pierces ſo, that it aſſaults
Mercy it ſelf, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence ſet me free. Exit.

THE
Two Gentlemen of Verona. a.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. Verona.

Enter Valentine, Protheus, [redacted]

Valentine.

Eaſe to perſwade, my loving Protheus;
Home-keeping youth have ever (homely wits;
Wer't not affection chains thy ten- (der days,
To the ſweet glances of thy ho- (nour'd Love,
I rather would intreat thy company,
To ſee the wonders of the world a- (broad,
Than (living dully ſluggardiz'd at home)
Wear out thy youth with ſhapeleſs idleneſs.
But ſince thou lov'ſt, love ſtill, and thrive therein,
Even as I would when I to love begin.
Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine adieu;
Think on thy Protheus when thou (haply) ſeeſt
Some rare Note-worthy Object in thy travel:
Wiſh me partaker in thy happineſs
When thou doſt meet good hap; and in thy danger
(If ever danger do environ thee)
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers;
For I will be thy Bead's-man, Valentine.
Val. And on a Love-book pray for my ſucceſs.
Pro. Upon ſome book I love I'le pray for thee.
Val. That's on ſome ſhallow ſtory of deep love,
How young Leander croſt the Helleſpont.
Pro. That's a deep ſtory of a deeper love;
For he was more than over-ſhooes in love.
Val. 'Tis true; for you are over-boots in love,
And yet you never ſwom the Helleſpont.
Pro. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.
Val. No, I will not; for it boots thee not.
Pro. What?
Val. To be in love where ſcorn is bought with groans:
Coy looks, with heart-ſore ſighs; one fading moments
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights; (mirth,
If haply won, perhaps an hapleſs gain;
If loſt, why then a grievous labour won;
However, but a folly bought with wit,
Or elſe a wit by folly vanquiſhed,
Pro. So, by your circumſtance, you call me fool.
Val. So, by your circumſtance, I fear you'l prove.
Pro. 'Tis Love you cavil at; I am not Love.
Val. Love is your Maſter; for he Maſters you:
And he that is ſo yoked by a fool,
Methinks ſhould not be Chronicled for wiſe.
Pro. Yet Writers ſay; as in the ſweeteſt bud
The eating Canker dwells; ſo eating Love
Inhabits in the fineſt wits of all.
Val. And Writers ſay; as the moſt forward bud
Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow;
Even ſo by Love the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blaſting in the bud,
Loſing his verdure even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waſte I time to counſel thee,
That are a Votary to fond deſire?
Once more adieu: my Father at the Road
Expects my coming, there to ſee me ſhipp'd.
Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.
Val. Sweet Protheus, no: Now let us take our leave.
At Millain let me hear from thee by Letters
Of thy ſucceſs in love; and what News elſe
Betideth here in abſence of thy Friend:
And I likewiſe will viſit thee with mine.
Pro. All happineſs bechance to thee in Millain!
Val. As much to you at home; and ſo farewel. [Exit.
Pro. He after Honour hunts, I after Love;
He leaves his friends to dignifie them more;
I leave my ſelf, my friends, and all for love.
Thou, Julia, thou haſt metamorphos'd me;
Made me neglect my ſtudies, loſe my time,
War with good counſel, ſet the world at nought;
Made wit with Muſing, weak; heart ſick with thought.

Sp. Sir Protheus: ſave you; ſaw you my Maſter? Scene II
Pro. But now he parted hence to embark for Millain. Enter
Sp. Twenty to one then he is ſhip'd already, Speed
And I have plaid the ſheep in loſing him.
Pro. Indeed a ſheep doth very often ſtray,
An' if the ſhepherd be a while away.
Sp. You conclude that my Maſter is a ſhepherd then, and I a ſheep?
Pro. I do.
Sp. Why then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or ſleep.
Pro. A ſilly anſwer, and fitting well a ſheep.
Sp. This proves me ſtill a ſheep.
Pro. True; and thy Maſter a ſhepherd.
Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumſtance.
Pro. It ſhall go hard but I'le prove it by another.
Sp. The ſhepherd ſeeks the ſheep, and not the ſheep the ſhepherd; but I ſeek my Maſter, and my Maſter ſeeks not me; therefore I am no ſheep.
Pro. The ſheep for Fodder follows the ſhepherd, the Shepherd for food follows not the ſheep; thou for wages followeſt thy Maſter, thy Maſter for wages follows not thee; therefore thou art a ſheep.
Sp. Such another proof will make me cry Baâ.
Pro. But doſt thou hear? gaveſt thou my Letter to Julia?
Sp. Sir: I, (a loſt-Mutton) gave your Letter to her (a lac'd-Mutton), and ſhe (a lac'd-Mutton) gave me (a loſt-Mutton), nothing for my labour.
Pro. Here's too ſmall a Paſture for ſuch ſtore of Muttons.
Sp. If the ground be over-charg'd, you were beſt ſtick her.
Pro. Nay, in that you are aſtray: 'twere beſt pound you.
Sp. Nay, Sir, leſs than a pound ſhall ſerve me for carrying your Letter.

Pro.

a: It may very well be doubted whether Shakespear had any other hand in this Play than the entwining it with some Speeches & lines thrown in here & there which are easily distinguished, as being of a different stamp from the rest.

a: Lac'd mutton is a Phraſe anciently used for a Lady of Pleasure.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the Pound, a Pin-fold.
Sp. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a Letter to your Lover.
Pro. But what said she?
Sp. She Nodded & said, I
Pro. Nod-I: why, that's Noddy. The
Sp. You mistook, Sir, I said she did nod:
And you ask me if she did nod; and I said, Ay.
Pro. And that set together, is noddy.
Sp. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.
Pro. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the Letter.
Sp. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.
Pro. Why, Sir, how do you bear with me?
Sp. Marry, sir, the Letter very orderly,
Having nothing but the word noddy for my pains.
Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.
Sp. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.
Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief; what said she?
Sp. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both deliver'd.
Pro. Well Sir, here is for your pains; what said she?
Sp. Truly Sir, I think you'll hardly win her.
Pro. Why? could'st thou perceive so much from her?
Sp. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her;
No, not so much as a Ducket for delivering your Letter,
And being so hard to me that brought your mind,
I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling her mind.
Give her no token but stones; for she's as hard as steel.
Pro. What, said she, nothing?
Sp. No, not so much as take this for thy pains: (me:
To testifie your bounty, I thank you, you have Testern'd
In requital whereof, henceforth carry your Letter your self: And so, Sir, I'll commend you to my Master.
Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your Ship from wreck,
Which cannot perish, having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore:
I must go send some better Messenger:
I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from such a worthless post. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. TERTIA.

Changes to Julia's Chamber.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say Lucetta, (now are we alone,
Would'st thou then counsel me to fall in love?
Luc. Ay, Madam, so you stumble not unheedfully.
Jul. Of all the fair Resort of Gentlemen,
That every day with par'le encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest love?
Luc. Please you repeat their names, I'll shew my mind,
According to my shallow simple skill.
Ju. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?
Luc. As of a Knight well-spoken, neat and fine;
But were I you, he never should be mine.
Ju. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?
Lu. Well of his wealth; but of himself so, so.
Ju. What think'st thou of the gentle Protheus?
Lu. Lord, Lord! to see what folly reigns in us!
Ju. How now? what means this passion at his Name?
Lu. Pardon, dear Madam, 'tis a passing shame,
That I, (unworthy body as I am),
Should censure (thus) on lovely Gentlemen.
Ju. Why not on Protheus, as of all the rest?
Lu. Then thus; of many good, I think him best.
Ju. Your Reason?
Lu. I have no other but a womans Reason:
I think him so, because I think him so.
Ju. And would'st thou have me cast my love on him?
Lu. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.
Ju. Why, he, of all the rest, hath never mov'd me.
Lu. Yet he, of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.
Ju. His little speaking shews his love but small.
Lu. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.
Ju. They do not love that do not shew their love.
Lu. Oh, they love least that let men know their love.
Ju. I would I knew his mind.
Lu. Peruse this Paper, Madam.
Ju. To Julia; say, from whom?
Lu. That the Contents will shew.
Ju. Say, say; who gave it thee?
Lu. Sir Valentine's Page; and sent, I think, from Protheus,
He would have given it you, but I being [redacted], by
Did in your name receive it; Pardon me, [redacted].
Ju. Now, (by my modesty,) a goodly Broker!
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper and conspire against my Youth?
Now trust me, 'tis an Office of great worth,
And you an Officer fit for the place.
There, take the Paper; see it be return'd,
Or else return no more into my sight.
Lu. To plead for Love deserves more Fee than hate.
Ju. Will ye be gone?
Lu. That you may ruminate. [Aside] [Exit.
Ju. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter.
It were a shame to call her back again,
And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her.
What fool is she that knows I am a Maid,
And would not force the Letter to my view?
Since Maids in Modesty, say No to that
Which they would have the profferer construe, Ay.
Fie, fie; how way-ward is this foolish Love,
That, (like a testy babe,) will scratch the Nurse,
And presently, all humbled, kiss the Rod!
How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly I would have had her here!
How angerly I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!
My penance is, to call Lucetta back,
And ask remission for my folly past.
What ho!: Lucetta! [Re-enter Lucetta.]
Lu. What would your Ladyship?
Ju. Is't near dinner-time?
Lu. I would it were,
That you might kill your stomach on your meat,
And not upon your Maid.
Ju. What is't that you
Took up so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Ju. Why didst thou stoop then?
Lu. To take a paper up that I let fall.
Ju. And is that [redacted] nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
Ju. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.
Lu. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Unless it have a false Interpreter.
Ju. Some Love of yours hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu. That I might sing it, (Madam,) to a tune;
Give me a Note; your Ladyship can set.
Ju. As little by such toys as may be possible;
Best sing it to the tune of Light O Love.
Lu. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
Ju. Heavy? belike it hath some burthen then.
Lu. Ay; and melodious were it, would you sing it.
Ju. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach so high.
Ju. Lets see your Song: — why
How now Minion? [Gives her a Box on the Ear.
Lu. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out;
And yet methinks I do not like this tune.
Ju. You do not?
Lu. No (Madam), 'tis too sharp.
Ju. You ([redacted]) are too sawcy. Lu. Nay,

Lu. Nay, now you are too flat,
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a Mean to fill your Song.
Ju. The Mean is drown'd with your unruly Base.
Lu. Indeed I bid thee base for Protheus.
Ju. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me.
Here is a coil with protestation: [Tears it.
Go, get you gone; and let the Papers lie:
You would be fingring them to anger me.
Lu. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so anger'd with another Letter. [Exit.
Ju. Nay, would I were so angred with the same!
Oh hateful hands, to tear such loving words!
Injurious Wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the Bees that yield it with your stings!
I'll kiss each several Paper for amends:
Look, here is writ, kind Julia; unkind Julia!
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
Look here is writ, Love-wounded Protheus.
Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice or thrice was Protheus written down:
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the Letter,
Except mine own Name: That some whirl-wind bear
Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging Rock,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea!
Lo, here in one line is his Name twice writ:
Poor forlorn Protheus, passionate Protheus:
To the sweet Julia: that I'll tear away;
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining Names:
Thus will I fold them one upon another;
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will. Enter
Lu. Madam, dinner is ready, and your father stays. Lucetta.
Ju. Well, let us go.
Lu. What shall these Papers lie, like tell-tales here?
Ju. If you respect them, best to take them up.
Lu. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down:
Yet here they shall not lie for catching cold.
Ju. I see you have a months mind to them. Minion!
Lu. Ay, (Madam), you may say what sights you see:
I see things too, although you judge I wink.
Ju. Come, come, will please you go? [Exeunt.

Scena [illegible] Quarta.

Enter Antonio, Panthion, [illegible].

Ant. Tell me, Panthion, what sad talk was that
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloister?
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Protheus, your Son.
Ant. VVhy, what of him?
Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
VVould suffer him to spend his Youth at home,
VVhile other men of slender Reputation
Put forth their Sons to seek Preferment out:
Some to the VVars, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover Islands far away;
Some to the studious Universities.
For any, or for all these Exercises,
He said, that Protheus, your Son was meet;
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
VVhich would be great impeachment to his Age,
In having known no travel in his Youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that
VVhereon this month I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well his loss of time;
And now he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being try'd, nor tutor'd in the world:
Experience is by industry atchieved,
and perfected by the swift course of time;
Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?
Pan. I think your Lordship is not ignorant
How his Companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the Emperor in his Royal Court.
Ant. I know it well. (thither;
Pan. 'Twere good, I think, your Lordship sent him
There shall he practise Tilts and Turnaments;
Hear sweet Discourse, converse with Noblemen,
And be in eye of every Exercise
VVorthy his Youth and Nobleness of Birth.
Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd;
And that thou mayst perceive how well I like it,
The Execution of it shall make known;
Even with the speediest expedition
I will dispatch him to the Emperor's Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
VVith other Gentlemen of good Esteem,
Are journeying to salute the Emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.
Ant. Good Company: with them shall Protheus go.
And in good time, now will we break with him? Enter Pro.
Pro. Sweet love, sweet lines, sweet life!
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her Oath for love, her honours pawn.
O that our Fathers would applaud our Loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents!
Oh heavenly Julia!
Ant. How now? VVhat Letter are you reading there?
Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of Commendation sent from Valentine;
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.
Ant. Lend me the Letter; Let me see what News.
Pro. There is no News, my Lord, but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well-belov'd,
And daily graced by the Emperor;
VVishing me with him, partner of his Fortune.
Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your Lordship's will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.
Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will; and there's an end.
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
VVith Valentino in the Emperor's Court:
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me:
To morrow be in readiness to go:
Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.
Pro. My Lord, I cannot be so soon provided;
Please you deliberate a day or two.
Ant. Look what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay; to morrow thou must go.
Come on, Panthion; you shall be imploy'd
To hasten on his expedition. [Exe: Ant. & Pant.]
Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the Sea, where I am drown'd;
I fear'd to shew my father Julia's Letter,
Least he should take exceptions to my Love;
And with the vantage of mine own Excuse
Hath he excepted most against my Love.
Oh, how this spring of love resembleth well
The uncertain glory of an April-day,
Which now shews all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.
Pan. Sir Protheus, your father calls for you; Enter Panthion
He is in haste, therefore I pray you go.
Pro. Why this it is! my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answers no. [Exeunt. Finis Actus

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.
Scene changes to Milan

Enter Valentine, Speed, [illegible].

Speed, Sir, your Glove.
Valen. Not mine; my Gloves are on.
Sp. VVhy then this may be yours; for this is but one.
Val. Ha? Let me see: Ay, give it me, it's mine:
Sweet Ornament that decks a thing Divine!
Ah Silvia, Silvia!
Speed, Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!
Val. How now, Sirrah?
Sp. She is not within hearing, Sir.
Val. VVhy Sir, who bad you call her?
Sp. Your VVorſhip Sir, or elſe I miſtook.
Val. VVell; you'll ſtill be too forward.
Sp. And yet I was laſt chidden for being too ſlow.
Val. Go to, Sir, tell me; do you know Madam Silvia?
Sp. She that your VVorſhip loves?
Val. VVhy, how know you that I am in love?
Sp. Marry, by theſe ſpecial marks: firſt, you have learn'd (like Sir Protheus) to wreath your arms like a Male-content; to reliſh a Love-Song like a Robin-red-breaſt; to walk alone like one that had the Peſtilence; to ſigh like a School-boy that had loſt his A. B. C. to weep like a young VVench that had loſt her Grandam; to faſt like one that takes diet; to watch like one that fears robbing; to ſpeak puling like a Beggar at Hallowmaſs. You were wont when you laughed, to crow like a Cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the Lions; when you faſted, it was preſently after dinner; when you look'd ſadly, it was for want of money: and now you are metamorphos'd with a Miſtreſs, that when I look on you, I can hardly think you my Maſter.
Val. Are all theſe things perceiv'd in me?
Sp. They are all perceiv'd without ye.
Val. Without me? they cannot.
Sp. Without you? nay, that's certain; for without you were ſo ſimple, none elſe would: but you are ſo without theſe follies, that theſe follies are within you, and ſhine through you like the water in an Urinal; that not an Eye that ſees you, but is a Phyſician to Comment on your Malady.
Val. But tell me, doſt thou know my Lady Silvia?
Sp. She that you gaze on ſo as ſhe ſits at ſupper?
Val. Haſt thou obſerv'd that? even ſhe I mean.
Sp. Why ſir, I know her not.
Val. Doſt thou know her by gazing on her, and yet know'ſt her not?
Sp. Is ſhe not hard-favour'd ſir?
Val. Not ſo fair (boy) as well favour'd.
Sp. Sir, I know that well enough.
Val. What doſt thou know?
Sp. That ſhe is not ſo fair, as (of you) well favour'd.
Val. I mean that her beauty is exquiſite,
But her favour infinite.
Sp. That's becauſe the one is painted, and the other out of all count.
Val. How painted? and how out of count?
Sp. Marry, ſir, ſo painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.
Val. How eſteem'ſt thou me? I account of her beauty.
Sp. You never ſaw her ſince ſhe was deform'd.
Val. How long hath ſhe been deform'd?
Sp. Ever ſince you lov'd her.
Val. I have lov'd her ever ſince I ſaw her,
And ſtill I ſee her beautiful.
Sp. If you love her, you cannot ſee her.
Val. VVhy?
Sp. Becauſe Love is blind. O that you had mine Eyes, or your own Eyes had the Lights they were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Protheus for going ungarter'd!
Val. VVhat ſhould I ſee then?
Sp. Your own preſent folly, and her paſſing deformity: for he, being in Love, could not ſee to garter his Hoſe; and you, being in Love, cannot ſee to put on your Hoſe.
Val. Belike (boy) then you are in Love; for laſt morning You could not ſee to wipe my ſhoes.
Sp. True ſir, I was in love with my bed, I thank you, you ſwing'd me for my Love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.
Val. In concluſion I ſtand affected to her.
Sp. I would you were ſet, ſo your Affection would ceaſe.
Val. Laſt night ſhe enjoyn'd me
To write ſome lines to one ſhe loves.
Sp. And have you?
Val. I have.
Sp. Are they not lamely writ?
Val. No (boy), but as well as I can do them:
Peace, here ſhe comes. Enter Silvia.
Sp. Oh excellent Motion! Oh exceeding Puppet!
Now will he interpret to her.
Val. Madam and Miſtreſs, a thouſand good morrows.
Sp. Oh! 'give ye-good-ev'n: here's a million of manners.
Sil. Sir Valentine, and ſervant, to you two thouſand.
Sp. He ſhould give her intereſt; and ſhe gives it him.
Val. As you injoyn'd me, I have writ your Letter
Unto the ſecret, nameleſs friend of yours;
Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,
But for my duty to your Ladyſhip.
Sil. I thank you (gentle ſervant); 'tis very Clerkly done.
Val. Now truſt me (Madam), it came hardly off:
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random, very doubtfully.
Sil. Perchance you think too much of ſo much pains?
Val. No (Madam), ſo it ſteed you, I will write,
(Pleaſe you command) a thouſand times as much,
And yet——
Sil. A pretty period; well, I gueſs the ſequel;
And yet I will not name it; [illegible] yet I care not:
And yet take this again; and yet I thank you;
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more. [Aside.
Sp. And yet you will; and yet, another yet.
Val. What means your Ladyſhip?
Do you not like it?
Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ;
But (ſince unwillingly) take them again;
Nay, take them.
Val. Madam, they are for you.
Sil. Ay, Ay; you writ them, Sir, at my requeſt;
But I will none of them; they are for you:
I would have had them writ more movingly.
Val. Pleaſe you, I'll write your Ladyſhip another.
Sil. And when it's writ, for my ſake read it over;
And if it pleaſe you, ſo; if not, why ſo.
Val. If it pleaſe me (Madam)? what then?
Sil. Why if it pleaſe you, take it for your labour;
And ſo good morrow ſervant. [Exit.
Sp. Oh Jeſt unſeen, inſcrutable, inviſible,
As a Noſe on a man's Face, or a Weathercock on a Steeple!
My Maſter ſues to her, and ſhe hath taught her Suitor,
He being her Pupil, to become her Tutor:
Oh excellent device! was there ever heard a better?
That my Maſter being Scribe,
To himſelf ſhould write the Letter?
Val. How now ſir?
What are you reaſoning with your ſelf?
Sp. Nay, I was rhiming; 'tis you that have the Reaſon.
Val. To do what?
Sp. To be a ſpokes-man from Madam Silvia.
Val. To whom?

Sp. To

Sp. To your self; why, she woes you by a figure,
Val. What figure?
Sp. By a Letter, I should say.
Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?
Sp. What need she,
When she hath made you write to your self?
Why, do you not perceive the Jest?
Val. No, believe me.
Sp. No believing you indeed Sir:
But did you perceive her Earnest?
Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.
Sp. Why, she hath given you a Letter.
Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.
Sp. And that Letter hath she deliver'd, and there's an end.
Val. I would it were no worse.
Sp. I'le warrant you 'tis as well:
For often have you writ to her, and she in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;
Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover,
Her self hath taught her Love himself to write unto her
All this I speak in Print; for in Print I found it. (Lover.
Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner-time.
Val. I have din'd.
Sp. Ay but hearken, sir; though the Cameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals; and would fain have meat: Oh be not like your Mistress; be moved, be moved. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Changes to Verona

Enter Protheus, Julia, [redacted].

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.
Jul. I must, where is no Remedy.
Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.
Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner:
Keep this Remembrance for thy Julia's sake. [Giving a Ring
Pro. Why then we'll make exchange;
Here, take you this.
Jul. And seal this bargain with a holy kiss.
Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy:
And when that hour ore-slips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not (Julia) for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour some foul mischance
Torment me, for my Loves forgetfulness!
My father stays my coming; answer not:
The Tide is now; nay, not thy tide of tears;
That tide will stay me longer than I should;
Julia farewel: what, gone without a word? [Exit Julia.
Ay, so true love should do; it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.
Pan. Sir Protheus, you are staid for. Enter Panthion
Pro. Go; I come, [redacted]:
Alas! this parting strikes poor Lovers dumb. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

with his Dog Crab.

Enter Launce, [redacted]

Launce, Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault: I have receiv'd my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Protheus to the Imperial's Court. I think Crab my Dog be the sowrest Natured Dog that lives: My Mother weeping, my Father wailing, my Sister crying, our Maid howling, our Cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity; yet did not this cruel-hearted Cur shed one tear! He is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a Dog: A Jew would have wept to have seen our parting; Why, my Grandam, having no Eyes, look you, wept her self blind at my parting: Nay, I'le show you the manner of it: This shoe is my Father; no, this left shoe is my Father; no, no, this left shoe is my Mother; nay, that cannot be so neither; yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole: this shoe with the hole in it is my Mother; and this my Father; a veng'ance on't, there 'tis: Now sir, this staff is my Sister; for look you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand; this hat is Nan, our Maid; I am the Dog; no, the Dog is himself, and I am [redacted], the Dog is [redacted], and I am my self; Ay, so, so: Now come I to my Father; Father, your blessing! Now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; Now should I kiss my Father; well, he weeps on: Now come I to my Mother; Oh that she could speak now like a wood-woman! well, I kiss her; why there 'tis; here's my Mothers breath up and down: Now come I to my Sister; mark what moan she makes: Now the Dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears. Enter Panthion

Panth. Launce, away, away, aboard; thy Master is ship'd, and thou art to post after with Oars: what's the matter? why weep'st thou, man? away ass, you'll lose the Tide if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the Tide were lost, for it is the unkindest Tide that ever any man tyde.
Panth. What's the unkindest Tide?
Laun Why, he that's tyde here, Crab, my Dog.
Pan. Tut man, I mean, thou'lt lose the flood; and in losing the flood, lose thy Voyage, and in losing thy Voyage, lose thy Master, and in losing thy Master, lose thy Service; and in losing thy Service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?
Laun. For fear thou should'st lose thy tongue.
Panth. Where should I lose my tongue?
Laun. In thy Tale.
Panth. In thy Tail. flood
Laun. Lose the [redacted] and the Voyage, and the Master, and the Service, and the Tide; why man, if the River were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the Wind were down, I could drive the Boat with my sighs.
Panth. Come, come away man; I was sent to call thee.
Lau. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.
Pan. Wilt thou go?
Lau. Well, I will go. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Changes to Milan.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, [redacted]

Sil. Servant.
Val. Mistris.
Sp. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.
Val. Ay boy, it's for love.
Sp. Not of you.
Val. Of my Mistriss then.
Sp. 'Twere good you knockt him.
Sil. Servant, you are sad.
Val. Indeed, Madam, I seem so.
Thu. Seem you that you are not?
Val. Hap'ly I do.
Thu. So do Counterfeits.
Val. So do you.

Thu.

Thu. What seem I that I am not?
Val. Wise.
Thu. What instance of the contrary?
Val. Your folly.
Thu. And how quote you my folly?
Val. I quote it in your Jerkin.
Thu. My Jerkin is a doublet.
Val. Well then, I'll double your folly.
Thu. How?
Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio? do you change colour?
Val. Give him leave, Madam; he is a kind of Camelion.
Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.
Val. You have said sir.
Thu. Ay sir, and done too, for this time.
Val. I know it well, sir; you always end ere you begin.
Sil. A fine Volly of words, Gentlemen, and quickly shot off.
Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam; we thank the giver.
Sil. Who is that Servant?
Val. Your self, (sweet Lady); for you gave the fire: Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladyships looks, And spends what he borrows, kindly in your company.
Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.
Val. I know it well, sir, you have an Exchequer of words, And I think, no other treasure to give your followers: For it appears by their bare Liveries, That they live by your bare words.
Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more: Here comes my father. [Enter the Duke. Scene V

Duke, Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset. Sir Valentine, your father is in good health: What say you to a Letter from your friends Of much good News?
Val. My Lord, I will be thankful To any messenger from thence.
Duke, Know you Don Antonio, your Countryman?
Val. Ay, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman To be of worth, and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed.
Duke, Hath he not a Son?
Val. Ay, my good Lord, a Son that well deserves The honour and regard of such a Father.
Duke. You know him well?
Val. I know him as my self; for from our Infancy We have conversst, and spent our hours together: And tho' my self have been an idle Truant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time, To clothe mine Age with Angel-like perfection; Yet hath Sir Protheus, (for that's his Name) Made use and fair advantage of his days; His Years but young, but his Experience old; His head unmellowed, but his judgment ripe; And in a word (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow), He is compleat in feature and in mind, With all good grace to grace a Gentleman.
Duk. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this good, He is as worthy for an Empress Love, As meet to be an Emperor's Counsellor: Well sir; this gentleman is come to me, With Commendation from great Potentates; And here he means to spend his time a while; I think 'tis no unwelcome News to you.
Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.
Duk. Welcome him then according to his worth; Silvia, I speak to you; and you Sir Thurio; For Valentine, I need not cite him to it: I will send him hither to you presently. [Exit Duke.
Val. This is the gentleman I told your Ladyship Had come along with me, but that his Mistress Did hold his Eyes lockt in her Christal looks.
Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd them Upon some other pawn for fealty.
Val. Nay sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.
Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and being blind, How could he see his way to seek out you?
Val. Why, Lady, Love hath twenty pair of Eyes.
Thu. They say that Love hath not an Eye at all.
Val. To see such Lovers, Thurio, as your self; Upon a homely Object Love can wink. [Scene VI. Enter Protheus.
Sil. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman.
Val. Welcome, dear Protheus: Mistress, I beseech you, Confirm this welcome with some special favour.
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither, If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.
Val. Mistress, it is: sweet Lady, entertain him To be my fellow-servant to your Ladyship.
Sil. Too low a Mistress for so high a servant.
Pro. Not so, sweet Lady; but too mean a servant To have a Look of such a worthy Mistress.
Val. Leave off discourse of disability: Sweet Lady, entertain him for your servant.
Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.
Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed: Servant, you are welcome to a worthless Mistress.
Pro. I'll die on him that says so but your self.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. That you are worthless. [Enter a Servant.
Ser. Madam, my Lord, your father, would speak with you.
Sil. I wait upon his pleasure; Come Sir Thurio, Go with me. Once more, new servant, welcome: I'll leave you to confer of home affairs; When you have done, we look to hear from you.
Pro. We'll both attend upon your Ladyship. [Exeunt Sil. & Thu. Scene VII
Val. Now tell me how do all from whence you came?
Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much commended.
Val. And how do yours?
Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your Lady? and how thrives your Love?
Pro. My tales of Love were wont to weary you; I know you joy not in a Love-discourse.
Val. Ay Protheus, but that Life is alter'd now; I have done penance for contemning Love, Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me With bitter fasts, with penitential groans, With nightly tears and daily heart-sore sighs. For in revenge of my contempt of Love, Love hath chac'd sleep from my enthralled Eyes, And made them watchers of mine own hearts sorrow: O gentle Protheus, Love's a mighty Lord, And hath so humbled me, as I confess There is no wo to his correction; Nor to his service, any joy on earth. Now no discourse, except it be of Love; Now can I break my fast, dine, sup and sleep Upon the very naked Name of Love.
Pro. Enough: I read your fortune in your Eye. Was this the Idol that you worship so?
Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?
Pro. No: but she is an earthly Paragon.
Val. Call her divine.
Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O flatter me; for Love delights in praise,
Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills, And I must minister the like to you.
Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine, Yet let her be a principality, Sovereign to all the Creatures on the Earth.
Pro. Except my Mistriss.
Val. Sweet, Except not any, Except thou wilt except against my Love.
Pro. Have I not Reason to prefer mine own?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too: She shall be dignified with this high honour, To bear my Ladies Train, lest the base Earth Should from her Vesture chance to steal a kiss;

And

And of ſo great a favour growing proud,
Diſdain to root the Summer-ſwelling flower,
And make rough Winter everlaſtingly.
Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadiſm is this?
Val. Pardon me (Protheus); all I can is nothing,
To her, whoſe worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.
Pro. Then let her alone.
Val. Not for the World: why man, ſhe is mine own,
And I as rich in having ſuch a Jewel,
As twenty Seas, if all their ſand were pearl,
The water Nectar, and the Rockspure gold.
Forgive me that I do not dream on thee,
Becauſe thou ſeeſt me doat upon my Love:
My fooliſh Rival, that her Father likes
(Only for his poſſeſſions are ſo huge),
Is gone with her along, and I muſt after;
For Love, (thou know'ſt), is full of jealouſie.
Pro. But ſhe loves you?
Val. Ay, and we are betrothed: nay, more, our marriage-
VVith all the cunning manner of our flight,
Determin'd off: how I muſt climb her VVindow,
The Ladder made of Cords, and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happineſs.
Good Protheus, go with me to my Chamber,
In theſe affairs to aid me with thy counſel.
Pro. Go on before; I ſhall enquire you forth:
I muſt unto the Road, to diſembarque
Some Neceſſaries that I needs muſt uſe;
And then I'le preſently attend you.
Val. VVill you make haſte?
Pro. I will. [Exit Val.
Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by ſtrength drives out another;
So the remembrance of my former Love
Is by a new Object quite forgotten.
Is it mine eye or Valentine's praiſe?
Her true perfection, or my falſe tranſgreſſion,
That makes me reaſonleſs, to reaſon thus?
She's fair; and ſo is Julia that I love;
(That I did love, for now my Love is thaw'd;
VVhich like a waxen Image 'gainſt a fire,
Bears no impreſſion of the thing it was).
Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont.
O! but I love his Lady too, too much;
And that's the Reaſon I love him ſo little.
How ſhall I doat on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazel'd ſo my Reaſon's Light:
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no Reaſon but I ſhall be blind.
If I can check my erring Love, I will;
If not, to compaſs her I'le uſe my skill.
Exit.

Scena Octava.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed, Launce, by mine honeſty welcome to Milan.
Laun. Forſwear not thy ſelf, ſweet Youth; for I am not welcome: I reckon this always, that a man is never undone till he be hang'd, nor never welcome to a place, till ſome certain ſhot be paid, and the Hoſteſs ſay welcome.
Speed, Come on you mad-cap; I'le to the Ale-houſe with you preſently; where, for one ſhot of five pence, thou ſhalt have five thouſand welcomes. But ſirrah, how did thy Maſter part with Madam Julia?
Lau. Marry, after they clos'd in earneſt, they parted very fairly, in jeſt.
Sp. But ſhall ſhe marry him?
Lau. No.
Sp. How then? ſhall he marry her?
Lau. No, neither.
Sp. VVhat, are they broken?
Lau. No; they are both as whole as a fiſh.
Sp. Why then, how ſtands the matter with them?
Lau. Marry, thus; when it ſtands well with him, it ſtands well with her.
Sp. VVhat an Aſs art thou? I underſtand thee not.
Lau. What a block art thou, that thou canſt not? My ſtaff underſtands me.
Sp. What thou ſay'ſt?
Lau. I, and what I do too: Look thee, I'le but lean, and my ſtaff underſtands me.
Sp. It ſtands under thee indeed.
Lau. Why, ſtand-under, and underſtand is all one.
Sp. But tell me true; will't be a match?
Lau. Ask my Dog: if he ſay Ay, it will; if he ſay no, it will: if he ſhake his tail, and ſay nothing, it will.
Sp. The concluſion is then, that it will.
Lau. Thou ſhalt never get ſuch a ſecret from me, but by a parable.
Sp. 'Tis well that I get it ſo: But Launce, how ſay'ſt thou, that my Maſter is become a notable Lover?
Lau. I never knew him otherwiſe.
Sp. Than how?
Lau. A notable Lubber, as thou reporteſt him to be.
Sp. Why, thou whoreſon Aſs, thou miſtak'ſt me.
Lau. Why Fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy Maſter.
Sp. I tell thee, my Maſter is become a hot Lover.
Lau. VVhy, I tell thee, I care not tho' he burn himſelf in Love: If thou wilt go with me to the Alehouſe, ſo; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the Name of a Chriſtian.
Sp. VVhy?
Lau. Becauſe thou haſt not ſo much charity in thee as to go to the Ale with a Chriſtian: VVilt thou go?
Sp. At thy ſervice.
[Exeunt.

Scena IX.

Enter Protheus ſolus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, ſhall I be forſworn?
To love fair Silvia, ſhall I be forſworn?
To wrong my friend, I ſhall be much forſworn;
And ev'n that Power which gave me firſt my Oath,
Provokes me to this threefold Perjury;
Love bad me ſwear, and Love bids me forſwear:
O ſweet ſuggeſting Love, if thou haſt ſinn'd,
Teach me, (thy tempted ſubject) to excuſe it.
At firſt I did adore a twinkling Star,
But now I worſhip a celeſtial Sun.
Unheedful Vows may heedfully be broken;
And he wants wit that wants reſolved will,
To learn his wit t' exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue, to call her bad,
VVhoſe ſovereignty ſo oft thou haſt preſer'd,
VVith twenty thouſand ſoul-confirmed Oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do:
But there I leave to love where I ſhould love:
Julia I loſe, and Valentine I loſe:
If I keep them, I needs muſt loſe my ſelf:

If

If I loſe them, thus find I by their loſs,
For Valentine, my ſelf; for Julia, Silvia:
I to my ſelf am dearer than a friend;
For Love is ſtill moſt precious in it ſelf;
And Silvia (witneſs heaven that made her fair)
Shews Julia but a ſwarthy Ethiope.
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembring that my love to her is dead:
And Valentine I'll hold an Enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a ſweeter Friend:
I cannot now prove conſtant to my ſelf,
VVithout ſome treachery us'd to Valentine:
This night he meaneth with a corded-ladder,
To climb celeſtial Silvia's chamber window,
My ſelf in council his competitor:
Now preſently I'll give her Father notice
Of their diſguiſing and pretended flight;
VVho (all enrag'd) will baniſh Valentine:
For Thurio he intends ſhall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gone, I'll quickly croſs,
By ſome ſly trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding:
Love, lend me wings, to make my purpoſe ſwift,
As thou haſt lent me wit to plot his drift!

VERONA.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Ju. Counſel, Lucetta; gentle girl, aſſiſt me;
And even in kind Love I do conjure thee,
VVho art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are viſibly Character'd and Engrav'd,
To leſſon me, and tell me ſome good mean,
How with my honour I may undertake
A journey to my loving Protheus.
Luc. Alas, the way is wearifome and long.
Ju. A true devoted Pilgrim is not weary
To meaſure Kingdoms with his feeble ſteps,
Much leſs ſhall ſhe, that hath Love's wings to fly;
And when the flight is made to one ſo dear,
Of ſuch divine perfection as Sir Protheus.
Lu. Better forbear till Protheus make return.
Ju. Oh, know'ſt thou not, his looks are my ſoul's food?
Pity the Dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food ſo long a time.
Did'ſt thou but know the inly touch of Love,
Thou would'ſt as ſoon go kindle fire with ſnow,
As ſeek to quench the fire of Love with words.
Lu. I do not ſeek to quench your Love's hot fire,
But qualifie the fire's extream rage,
Leſt it ſhould burn above the bounds of Reaſon.
Ju. The more thou dam'ſt it up, the more it burns;
The Current that with gentle murmur glides,
(Thou know'ſt), being ſtop'd, impatiently doth rage;
But when his fair courſe is not hindered,
He makes ſweet muſick with th' enamel'd ſtones,
Giving a gentle kiſs to every ſedge
He overtaketh in his Pilgrimage:
And ſo by many winding nooks he ſtrays,
VVith willing ſport to the wild Ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my courſe;
I'll be as patient as a gentle ſtream,
And make a paſtime of each weary ſtep,
Till the laſt ſtep have brought me to my Love;
And there I'll reſt, as after much turmoil
A bleſſed ſoul doth in Elizium.
Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Ju. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The looſe encounters of laſcivious men;
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with ſuch weeds
As may beſeem ſome well-reputed Page.
Lu. Why then your Ladiſhip muſt cut your hair.
Ju. No, girl; I'll knit it up in ſilken ſtrings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantaſtick, may become a Youth
Of greater time than I ſhall ſhew to be.
Lu. What faſhion, (Madam) ſhall I make your breeches?
Ju. That fits as well, as tell me, (good my Lord),
What compaſs will you wear your Farthingale?
Why, even what faſhion thou beſt likes, (Lucetta).
Lu. You muſt needs have them with a cod-piece, (Madam).
Ju. Out, out (Lucetta), that will be ill-favour'd.
Lu. A round hoſe (Madam), now's not worth a pin,
Unleſs you have a cod-piece to ſtick pins on.
Ju. Lucetta, as thou lov'ſt me, let me have
What thou think'ſt meet, and is moſt mannerly:
But tell me, (Wench), how will the World repute me
For undertaking ſo unſtaid a journey?
I fear me it will make me ſcandaliz'd.
Lu. If you think ſo, then ſtay at home, and go not.
Ju. Nay, that I will not.
Lu. Then never dream on Infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's diſpleas'd when you are gone:
I fear me he will ſcarce be pleas'd with all.
Ju. That is the leaſt (Lucetta) of my fear:
A thouſand Oaths, an Ocean of his tears,
And Inſtances as infinite of Love,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.
Lu. All theſe are ſervants to deceitful men.
Ju. Baſe men that uſe them to ſo baſe effect!
But truer ſtars did govern Protheus birth;
His Words are Bonds, his Oaths are Oracles,
His love ſincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure Meſſengers ſent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud as Heaven from Earth.
Lu. Pray Heaven he prove ſo when you come to him!
Ju. Now as thou lov'ſt me, do him not that wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth;
Only deſerve my love by loving him,
And preſently go with me to my chamber,
To take a Note of what I ſtand in need of,
To furniſh me upon my longing journey:
All that is mine I leave at thy diſpoſe,
My Goods, my Lands, my Reputation,
Only in lieu thereof diſpatch me hence.
Come, anſwer not; but to it preſently:
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Changes to Milan.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, [redacted].

Du. Sir Thurio, give us leave, (I pray) a while;
We have ſome ſecrets to conſer about. [Exit Thur.]
Now tell me, Protheus, what's your will with me?
Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I would diſcover
The Law of Friendſhip bids me to conceal;
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, (undeſerving as I am),
My duty pricks me on to utter that,
Which elſe no worldly good ſhould draw from me.
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to ſteal away your daughter:
My ſelf am one made privy to the Plot.
I know you have determin'd to beſtow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates:

And ſhould ſhe thus be ſtol'n away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age,
Thus (for my duties ſake) I rather choſe
To croſs my friend in his intended drift,
Than (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of ſorrows, which would preſs you down
(Being unprepared) to your timeleſs grave.
Du. Protheus, I thank thee for thine honeſt care;
Which to requite, command me while I live:
This love of theirs my ſelf have often ſeen,
Haply when they have judg'd me faſt aſleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her Company, and my Court:
But fearing leſt my jealous aim might err,
And ſo (unworthily) diſgrace the man,
A raſhneſs that I ever yet have ſhunn'd)
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thy ſelf hath now diſclos'd to me:
And that thou mayſt perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is ſoon ſuggeſted,
I nightly lodge her in an upper Tower,
The key whereof my ſelf have ever kept;
And thence ſhe cannot be convey'd away.
Pro. Know (noble Lord), they have devis'd a mean
How he her Chamber-Window will aſcend,
And with a Corded Ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful Lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it preſently;
Where (if it pleaſe you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord), do it ſo cunningly,
That my diſcovery be not aimed at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publiſher of this pretence.
Du. Upon mine honour, he ſhall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.
Exit. Pro.
Bro Adieu, my Lord; Sir Valentine is coming. Enter.
Du. Sir Valentine, whether away ſo faſt? Valent.
Va. Pleaſe it your Grace, there is a Meſſenger.
That ſtays to bear my Letters to my Friends,
And I am going to deliver them.
Du. Be they of much import?
Va. The tenure of them doth but ſignifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.
Du. Nay, then no matter; ſtay with me a while;
I am to break with thee of ſome affairs
That touch me near; wherein thou muſt be ſecret.
'Tis not unknown to thee, that I have ſought
To match my friend, Sir Thurio, to my daughter.
Va. I know it well (my Lord); and ſure the Match
VVere rich and honourable; Beſides, the gentleman
Is full of Virtue, Bounty, VVorth, and Qualities,
Beſeeming ſuch a VVife as your fair daughter.
Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?
Du No, truſt me, ſhe is peeviſh, ſullen, froward,
Proud, diſobedient, ſtubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that ſhe is my child,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her father:
And may I ſay to thee, this pride of hers
(Upon advice), hath drawn my love from her;
And where I thought the remnant of mine Age
Should have been cheriſh'd by her Child-like duty,
I now am full reſolv'd to take a VVife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her Beauty be her VVedding-Dowry;
For me and my poſſeſſions ſhe eſteems not.
Va. VVhat would your Grace have me to do in this?
Du. There is a Lady [redacted] here in Milan
VVhom I affect; But ſhe is nice and coy,
And nought eſteems my aged Eloquence:
Now therefore would I have thee to my Tutor;
(For long agone I have forgot to court;
Beſides, the faſhion of the time is chang'd),
How, and which way I may beſtow my ſelf,
To be regarded in her Sun-bright Eye.

Va. VVin her with gifts, if ſhe reſpects not words;
Dumb Jewels often in their ſilent kind
More than quick words, do move a womans mind.
Du. But ſhe did ſcorn a preſent that I ſent her.
Va. A woman ſometimes ſcorns what beſt contents her;
Send her another; never give her o're;
For ſcorn at firſt makes after-love the more.
If ſhe do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you:
If ſhe do chide, 'tis not to have you gone;
For why, the fools are mad if left alone:
Take no repulſe, whatever ſhe doth ſay;
For, get you gone, ſhe doth not mean away:
Flatter, and praiſe, commend, extoll their graces:
Tho' ne're ſo black, ſay they have Angels faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I ſay, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Du. But ſhe I mean, is promis'd by her Friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth,
And kept ſeverely from reſort of men,
That no man hath acceſs by day to her.
Va. VVhy then I would reſort to her by night.
Du. Ay, but the doors be lockt, and keys kept ſafe,
That no man hath recourſe to her by night.
Va. VVhat lets but one may enter at her VVindow?
Du. Her Chamber is aloft far from the ground,
And built ſo ſhelving, that one cannot climb it
VVithout apparent hazzard of his life.
Val. VVhy then a [redacted] quaintly made of Cords,
To caſt up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
VVould ſerve to ſcale another Hero's Tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.
Du. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Adviſe me where I may have ſuch a Ladder.
Va. VVhen would you uſe it? pray ſir, tell me that.
Du. This very night; for Love is like a Child,
That longs for every thing that he can come by.
Va. By ſeven a Clock I'll get you ſuch a Ladder.
Du. But hark thee: I will go to her alone;
How ſhall I beſt convey the Ladder thither?
Va. It will be light (my Lord), that you may bear it
Under a Cloak that is of any length.
Du. A Cloak as long as thine will ſerve the turn?
Va. Ay my good Lord.
Du. Then let me ſee thy Cloak;
I'll get me one of ſuch another length.
Va. VVhy, any Cloak will ſerve the turn (my Lord).
Du. How ſhall I faſhion me to wear a Cloak?
I pray thee let me feel thy Cloak upon me: [Pulls off his Cloak
VVhat Letter is this ſame? what's here? to Silvia?
And here an Engine fit for my proceeding?
I'll be ſo bold to break the Seal for once.

My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly,
And ſlaves they are to me that ſend them flying:
Oh, could their Maſter come, and go as lightly,
Himſelf would lodge where (ſenſeleſs) they are lying:
My Herald Thoughts in thy pure boſome reſt them,
While I (their King) that thither them importune,
Do curſe the grace that with ſuch grace hath bleſt them,
Becauſe my ſelf do want my ſervants fortune:
I curſe my ſelf, for they are ſent by me,
That they ſhould harbour where their Lord would be.

VVhat's here? Silvia? this night will I enfranchiſe thee.
'Tis ſo; and here's the Ladder for the purpoſe:
VVhy Phaëton (for thou art Merop's ſon),
VVilt thou aſpire to guide the heavenly Car?,
And with thy daring folly burn the VVorld?
VVilt thou reach ſtars, becauſe they ſhine on thee?
Go baſe Intruder, over-weening Slave,
Beſtow thy fawning ſmiles on equal mates,
And think my patience (more than thy deſert),
Is priviledge for thy departure hence:

Thank

Thank me for this, more than for all the favours
Which, (all-too much), I have bestowed on thee:
But if thou linger in my Territories,
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our Royal Court,
By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my Daughter, or thy self;
Be gone, I will not hear thy vain Excuse,
But as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. Exit.

Val. And why not death rather than living torment?
To die, is to be banish'd from my self,
And Silvia is my self; banish'd from her
Is self from self: A deadly banishment!
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no musick in the Nightingale:
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon:
She is my Essence, and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive:
I fly not Death to fly his deadly doom;
Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But fly I hence, I fly away from Life. Enter Pro. and Launce.

Pro. Run (boy), run, run, and seek him out.
Lau. So-ho: so-ho.
Pro. What seest thou?
Lau. Him we go to find:
There's not an hair on's head but 'tis a Valentine.
Pro. Valentine?
Va. No.
Pro. Who then? his Spirit?
Va. Neither.
Pro. What then?
Va. Nothing.
Lau. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?
Pro. Whom would'st thou strike?
Lau. Nothing.
Pro. Villain, forbear.
Lau. Why, Sir, I'll strike nothing; I pray you.
Pro. [illegible] I say, forbear: Friend Valentine, a word.
Va. My Ears are stopt, and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possest them.
Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine;
For they are harsh, untuneable, and bad.
Va. Is Silvia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Va. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Silvia:
Hath she forsworn me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Va. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me,
What is your news?
Lau. Sir, there is a Proclamation that you are banished.
Pro. That thou art banish'd; oh, that's the news,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.
Va. Oh, I have fed upon this woe already:
And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?
Pro. Ay, ay, and she hath offered to the doom
(Which unrevers't stands in effectual force),
A Sea of melting Pearl, which some call tears:
Those at her Father's churlish feet she tendred,
With them, upon her knees, her humble self,
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for wo.
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'ne, must die:
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close Prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
Va. No more, unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine Ear,
As ending Anthem of my endless dolour.
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st:
Time is the Nurse and Breeder of all good:
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy Love;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a Lover's staff, walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts:
Thy Letters may be here, tho thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosome of thy love:
The time now serves not to expostulate;
Come, I'll convey thee through the City-gate,
And e're I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy Love-affairs:
As thou lov'st Silvia (tho not for thy self),
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Va. I pray thee Launce, and if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the North-gate.
Pro. Go sirrah, find him out: Come Valentine.
Va. Oh my dear Silvia, hapless Valentine! Exeunt.

Launce, I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my Master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave: He lives not now that knows me to be in love, yet I am in love; but a Team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love, and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell my self; and yet 'tis a Milkmaid; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had Gossips; yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Master's maid, and serves for wages: She hath more qualities than a VVater-Spaniel, which is much in a bare Christian: Here is the Cat-log of her Conditions: Imprimis, she can fetch and carry; why, a horse can do no more; nay a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore is she better than a Jade. Item, she can milk, look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands. Enter Speed.

Speed, How now Signior Launce? what news with your Mastership?
La. VVith my Mastership? why, it is at Sea.
Sp. VVell, your old vice still; mistake the word: what news then in your paper?
La. The blackest news that ever thou heard'st.
Sp. VVhy man, how black?
La. VVhy, as black as Ink.
Sp. Let me read them.
La. Fie on thee Jolthead, thou canst not read.
Sp. Thou lies't: I can.
La. I will try thee; tell me this; who begot thee?
Sp. Marry, the son of my Grand-father.
Sp. Oh illiterate loyterer, it was the son of thy Grand-mother; this proves that thou canst not read.
Sp. Come fool, come, try me in thy paper.
La. There; and S. Nicholas be thy speed.
Sp. Imprimis, she can milk.
La. Ay that she can.
Sp. Item, she brews good Ale.
La. And thereof comes the Proverb (Blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale).
Sp. Item, she can sowe.
La. That's as much as to say (Can she so)?
Sp. Item, she can knit.
La. VVhat need a man care for a stock with a wench, VVhen she can knit him a stock?
Sp. Item, She can wash and scour.
La. A special vertue: for then she need not to be wash'd and scour'd.
Sp. Item, she can spin.
La. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath many nameleſs Vertues.

La. That's as much as to ſay, Baſtard-Vertues, that indeed know not their Fathers, and therefore have no Names.

Sp. Here follow her Vices.

La. Cloſe at the heels of her Vertues.

Sp. Item, ſhe is not to be faſting in reſpect of her breath.

La. Well: that fault may be mended with a breakfaſt: Read on.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath a ſweet mouth.

La. That makes amends for her ſour breath.

Sp. Item, ſhe doth talk in her ſleep.

La. It's no matter for that, ſo ſhe ſleep not in her talk.

Sp. Item, ſhe is ſlow in words.

La. Oh villain! that ſet down among her Vices! To be ſlow in words is a woman's only Vertue: I pray thee out with't, and place it for her chief Vertue.

Sp. Item, ſhe is proud

La. Out with that too: It was Eves Legacy, and cannot be ta'ne from her.

Sp Item, ſhe hath no teeth.

La. I care not for that neither, becauſe I love cruſts.

Sp. Item, ſhe is curſt.

La. Well; the beſt is, ſhe hath no teeth to bite.

Sp. Item, ſhe will often praiſe her liquor.

La. If her liquor be good, ſhe ſhall; if ſhe will not, I will; for good things ſhould be praiſed.

Sp. Item, ſhe is too liberal.

La. Of her tongue ſhe cannot, for that's writ down, ſhe is ſlow of; of her purſe ſhe ſhall not, for that I'll keep ſhut: Now of another thing ſhe may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath more hairs than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.

La. Stop there; I'll have her; ſhe was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that Article. Rehearſe that once more.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath more hair than wit.

La. More hair than wit; it may be I'll prove it: The cover of the ſalt, hides the ſalt; and therefore it is more than the ſalt; the hair that covers the wit, is more than the wit; for the greater hides the leſs. What's next?

Sp. And more faults than hairs.

La. That's monſtrous: Oh that that were out!

Sp. And more wealth than faults.

La. Why, that word makes the faults gracious: Well: I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impoſſible.——

Sp. What then?

La. Why then will I tell thee, that thy Maſter ſtaies for thee at the North-gate.

Sp. For me?

La. For thee? Ay who art thou? he hath ſtaid for a better man than thee.

Sp. And muſt I go to him?

La. Thou muſt run to him; for thou haſt ſtaid ſo long, that going will ſcarce ſerve the turn.

Sp. Why did'ſt not tell me ſooner? 'pox on your Love-Letters!

La. Now will he be ſwing'd for reading my Letter: An unmannerly ſlave, that will thruſt himſelf into ſecrets. I'll after to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] V.

Enter Duke, Thurio, [redacted]

Du. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that ſhe will love you, Now Valentine is baniſh'd from her ſight.

Th. Since his Exile ſhe hath deſpis'd me moſt, Forſworn my company, and rail'd at me, That I am deſperate of obtaining her.

Du. This weak impreſs of Love, is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hours heat Diſſolves to water, and doth loſe his form: A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthleſs Valentine ſhall be forgot. [Enter Pro Aheus How now, Sir Protheus, is your Countrey-man (According to our Proclamation) gone?

Pro. Gone, my good Lord.

Du. My Daughter takes his going heavily.

Pro. A little time, (my Lord) will kill that grief.

Du. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not ſo. Protheus, The good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou haſt ſhown ſome ſign of good deſert), Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your Grace, Let me not live to look upon your Grace.

Du. Thou know'ſt how willingly I would effect The match between ſir Thurio and my Daughter?

Pro. I do my Lord.

Du. And alſo I do think thou art not ignorant How ſhe oppoſes her againſt my will?

Pr. She did, my Lord, when Valentine was here.

Du. Ay, and perverſly ſhe perſeveres ſo: What might we do to make the girl forget The love of Valentine, and love ſir Thurio?

Pro. The beſt way is to ſlander Valentine With falſhood, cowardiſe, and poor deſcent: Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Du. Ay, but ſhe'l think that it is ſpoken in hate.

Pro. Ay if his enemy deliver it: Therefore it muſt with circumſtance be ſpoken By one whom ſhe eſteems as his friend.

Du. Then you muſt undertake to ſlander him.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I ſhall be loath to do; 'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman, Eſpecially againſt his very friend.

Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him, Your ſlander never can endamage him; Therefore the office is indifferent, Being intreated to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd (my Lord): if I can do it, By ought that I can ſpeak in his diſpraiſe, She ſhall not long continue love to him. But ſay, this weeding her love from Valentine, It follows not that ſhe will love ſir Thurio.

Th. Therefore as you unwind her love from him, Leſt it ſhould ravel, and be good to none, You muſt provide to bottom it on me: Which muſt be done, by praiſing me as much As you in worth diſpraiſe ſir Valentine.

Du. And, Protheus, we dare truſt you in this kind, Becauſe we know (on Valentine's Report), You are already Love's firm votary, And cannot ſoon revolt and change your mind. Upon this Warrant ſhall you have acceſs, Where you with Silvia may confer at large: For ſhe is lumpiſh, heavy, melancholly, And (for your friend's ſake), will be glad of you; Where you may temper her, by your perſwaſion, To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect. But you, ſir Thurio, are not ſharp enough; You muſt lay Lime, to tangle her deſires By wailful Sonnets, whoſe compoſed Rimes Should be full fraught with ſerviceable Vows.

Du. [redacted] much is the force of Heaven-bred Poeſie.

Pro. [redacted]y, that upon the Altar of her Beauty You ſacrifice your tears, your ſighs, your heart: Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears Moiſt it again, and frame ſome feeling line That may diſcover ſuch integrity:

For

For Orpheus Lute was ſtrung with Poets ſinews,
Whoſe golden touch could ſoften ſteel and ſtones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leviathans
Forſake unſounded deeps, and dance on ſands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Viſit by night your Ladies Chamber-window
With ſome ſweet conſort: To their Inſtruments
Tune a deploring dump; the nights dead ſilence
Will well become ſuch ſweet complaining grievance.
This, or elſe nothing, will inherit her.

Du. This Diſcipline ſhews thou haſt been in Love.

Th. And thy advice this night I'le put in practiſe:
Therefore ſweet Protheus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the City preſently
To ſort ſome Gentlemen well skill'd in Muſick;
I have a Sonnet that will ſerve the turn
To give the onſet to thy good advice.

Du. About it Gentlemen.

Pro. We'll wait upon your Grace till after ſupper,
And afterwards determine our proceedings.

Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you. [Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

A Forest.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certain Out-laws.

1. Out-l. Fellows, ſtand faſt: I ſee a paſſenger.

2. Out. If there be ten, ſhrink not, but down with 'em.

3. Out. Stand ſir, and throw us that you have about ye:
If not, we'll make you ſir, and rifle you.

Sp. Sir, we are undone; theſe are the Villains
That all the Travellers do fear ſo much.

Val. My Friends, ——

1. Out. That's not ſo, ſir: we are your Enemies.

2. Out. Peace; we'll hear him.

3. Out. Ay by my beard will we; for he is a proper man.

Val. Then know that I have little to loſe:
A man I am, croſs'd with adverſity;
My Riches are theſe poor habiliments,
Of which, if you ſhould here diſfurniſh me,
You take the ſum and ſubſtance that I have.

2. Out. VVhither travel you?

Val. To Verona.

1. Out. VVhence came you?

Val. From Milan.

3. Out. Have you long ſojourn'd there?

Val. Some ſixteen months, and longer might have ſtaid,
If crooked Fortune had not thwarted me.

1 Out. VVhat, were you baniſh'd thence?

Val. I was.

2. Out. For what Offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearſe:
I kill'd a man, whoſe death I much repent;
But yet I ſlew him manfully in fight,
VVithout falſe vantage, or baſe treachery.

1. Out. VVhy ne're repent it, if it were done ſo:
But were you baniſh'd for ſo ſmall a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of ſuch a doom.

2 Out. Have you the tongues?

Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy,
Or elſe often had been miſerable.

3. Out. By the bare ſcalp of Robin hood's fat Friar,
This fellow were a King for our wild faction.

1. Out. VVe'll have him. Sirs, a word.

Sp. Maſter, be one of them:
It's an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, Villain.

2. Out. Tell us this: have you any things to take to?

Val. Nothing but my fortune.

3. Out. Know then, that ſome of us are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of ungovern'd Youth
Thruſt from the company of awful men:
My ſelf was from Verona baniſhed,
For practiſing to ſteal away a Lady,
An Heir, and Neerally'd unto the Duke.

2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,
Who, in my mood, I ſtabb'd unto the heart.

1. Out. And I for ſuch like petty crimes as theſe.
But to the purpoſe; for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawleſs lives;
And partly ſeeing you are beautify'd
With goodly ſhape, and by your own report,
A Linguiſt, and a man of ſuch perfection
As we do in our quality much want.

2. Out. Indeed becauſe you are a baniſh'd man,
Therefore above the reſt, we parley to you;
Are you content to be our General?
To make a Vertue of Neceſſity,
And live as we do in the Wilderneſs?

3. Out. What ſay'ſt thou? wilt thou be of our conſort?
Say Ay, and be the Captain of us all:
We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our Commander and our King.

1. Out. But if thou ſcorn our courteſie, thou dy'ſt.

2. Out. Thou ſhalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Val. I take your offer, and will live with you,
Provided that you do no out-rages
On ſilly Women, or poor paſſengers.

3. Out. No, we deteſt ſuch vile baſe practiſes:
Come, go with us, we'l bring thee to our Crews,
And ſhew thee all the treaſure we have got;
Which with our ſelves all reſt at thy diſpoſe. [Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Changes to Milan.

Enter Protheus, [redacted]

Pro. Already have I been falſe to Valentine,
And now I muſt be as unjuſt to Thurio,
Under the colour of commending him,
I have acceſs my own love to prefer:
But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthleſs gifts.
When I proteſt true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falſhood to my friend:
When to her beauty I commend my Vows,
She bids me think how I have been forſworn
In breaking Faith with Julia, whom I lov'd:
And notwithſtanding all her ſudden quips,
The leaſt whereof would quell a Lover's hope,
Yet (Spaniel-like, the more ſhe ſpurns my love,
The more it grows and fawneth on her ſtill:
But here comes Thurio: now muſt we to her Window,
And give ſome Evening Muſick to her Ear. [Enter Thurio &c.

Thu. How now, Sir Protheus, are you crept before us?

Pro. Ay gentle Thurio; for you know that Love
VVill creep in ſervice where it cannot go.

Thu. Ay but I hope, Sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or elſe I would be hence.

Thu. VVhom, Silvia?

Pro. Ay Silvia, for your ſake.

Thu. I thank you for your own: Now Gentlemen
Let's tune, and to it luſtily a while.

Ho. Now my young gueſt; methinks you're [redacted]
I pray what is it?

Ju. Marry, (mine Hoſt) becauſe I cannot be merry.

Ho. Come, we'll have you merry: I'le bring you where you ſhall hear Muſick, and ſee the Gentleman that you ask'd for.

+ Enter Host & Julia in Boy's cloaths.

Ju. But shall hear him speak.
Ho. Ay, that you shall.
Ju. That will be Musick.
Ho. Hark, hark.
Ju. Is he among these?
Ho. Ay, but peace, let's hear 'em.

Song. Who is Silvia? what is she
That all our Swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she,
The Heaven such Grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.
Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her Eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness:
And being help'd inhabits there.
Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull Earth dwelling:
To her let us Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the Musick likes you not.
Ju. You mistake; the Musician likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty Youth?
Ju. He plays false, (father).
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings?
Ju. Not so; but yet So false, that he grieves my very heart-strings.
Ho. You have a quick Ear.
Ju. I would I were deaf: it makes me have a slow heart.
Ho. I perceive you delight not in Musick.
Ju. Not a whit, when it jars so.
Ho. Hark what fine change is in the Musick.
Ju. Ay, that change is the spight.
Ho. You would have them play always but one thing.
Ju. I would always have one play but one thing. But Host, doth this Sir Protheus, that we talk on, Often resort unto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce, his man told me, He lov'd her out of all nick.
Ju. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to seek his Dog, which to morrow, by his Master's command, he must carry for a Present to his Lady.
Ju. Peace: stand aside, the Company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not; I will so plead, That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.
Thu. Where meet we?
Pro. At Saint Gregory's-Well. [Exe. Thur. & Musick.]
Thu. Farewel.

Scene IV. Enter Silvia Above

Pro. Madam: Good Even to your Ladyship.
Sil. I thank you for your Musick (Gentlemen): Who is that that spake?
Pro. One (Lady), if you knew his pure hearts truth, You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus? as I take it.
Pro. Sir Protheus, (gentle Lady) and your servant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compass yours.
Sil. You have your wish; my will is ever this, That presently you hie you home to bed.
Thou subtile, perjur'd, false, disloyal man,
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless, To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast deceiv'd so many with thy Vows?
Return, return, and make thy Love amends.
For me, (by this pale Queen of Night I swear), I am so far from granting thy Request, That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;
And by and by intend to chide my self, Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant (sweet Love), that I did love a Lady, But she is dead.
Ju. 'Twere false if I should speak it; [Aside]
For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend, Survives; to whom, (thy self art witness), I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd To wrong him with thy importunacy?
Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave, Assure thy self, my Love is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rake it from the Earth.
Sil. Go to thy Ladies grave, and call her thence, Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.
Ju. He heard not that. (Aside)
Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate, Oh! Vouchsafe me yet your Picture, [redacted], The Picture that is hanging in your Chamber: To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep: For since the substance of your perfect self Is else devoted, I am but a shadow; And to your shadow will I make true Love.
Jul. If 'twere a substance you would sure deceive it, And make it but a shadow, as I am. (Aside)
Sil. I am very loath to be your Idol, Sir; But since your falsehood shall become you well To worship shadows, and adore false shapes, Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it: And so good rest.
Pro. As wretches have o're night That wait for Execution in the morn. Exeunt. [Pro: & Sil.]
Jul. Host, will you go?
Ho. By my Hallidom, I was fast asleep.
Jul. Pray you where lies Sir Protheus?
Ho. Marry, at my house: Trust me, I think 'tis almost day.
Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night That e're I watch'd, and the most heavy. One. Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] V.

Enter Eglamour [redacted]

Eg. This is the hour that Madam Silvia Entreated me to call, and know her mind: That's some great matter she'd employ me in: Madam, [redacted]. Enter Silvia. Above.
Sil. Who calls?
Eg. Your servant and your friend; One that attends your Ladyships command.
Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.
Eg. As many, (worthy Lady) to your self: According to your Ladyships impose, I am thus early come, to know what service It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. Oh Eglamour, thou art a Gentleman, (Think not I flatter, (for I swear I do not)), Valiant, wise, remorse-full, well accomplish'd: Thou art not ignorant what dear good will I bare unto the banish'd Valentine; Nor how my father would enforce me marry Vain Thurio (whom my very soul abhorr's): Thy self hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say, No grief did come so near thy heart, As when thy Lady, and thy true love dy'de; Upon whose Grave thou vow'dst pure chastity. Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine To Mantua, where I hear he makes abode: And, for the ways are dangerous to pass, I do desire thy worthy company;

Upon

Upon whose Faith and Honour I repose,
Urge not my Father's anger, (Eglamour)
But think upon my grief, (a Ladies grief),
And on the Justice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a most unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still reward with plagues:
I do desire thee even from a heart
As full of sorrows as as the Sea of sands,
To bear me company, and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Eg. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,
I give consent to go along with you,
Recking as little what betideth me,
As much I wish all good befortune you.
When will you go?
Sil. This Evening coming.
Eg. Where shall I meet you?
Sil. At Friar Patrick's Cell;
Where I intend holy Confession.
Eg. I will not fail [illegible]:
Good morrow, (gentle Lady).
Sil. Good morrow kind Sir Eglamour. [Exeunt.

Scena [illegible]. VI. with his Dog.

Enter Launce, [illegible]

Lau. When a man's servant shall play the Cur with him (look you), it goes hard: one that I brought up of a Puppy: one that I sav'd from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it! I have taught him (even as one would say, precisely) thus I would teach a Dog. I was sent to deliver him as a Present to Mistress Silvia, from my Master; and I came no sooner into the Dining-Chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and steals her Capon's-leg: O, 'tis a foul thing, when a Cur cannot keep himself in all Companies! I would have (as one should say) one that takes upon him to be a Dog indeed, to be, as it were, a Dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hang'd for't; sure as I live he had suffer'd for't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like-dogs, under the Dukes table; he had not been there (bless the mark) a pissing while, but all the Chamber smelt him. out with the Dog, (says one): what Cur is that, (says another)? whip him out, (says the third): hang him up, (says the Duke): I having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab, and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs; Friend (quoth I), you mean to whip the Dog? Ay marry, do I (quoth he). You do him the more wrong, (quoth I); 'twas I did the thing you wot of. He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the Chamber. How many Masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I'll be sworn I have sat in the Stocks for Puddings he hath stol'n; otherwise he had been executed; I have stood on the Pillory for Geese he hath kill'd; otherwise he had suffer'd for't: Thou think'st not of this now. Nay, I remember the trick you serv'd me when I took my leave of Madam Silvia; did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? when did'st thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a Gentlewomans Farthingale? Did'st thou ever see me do such a trick?

[Enter Protheus & Julia

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well,
And will imploy thee in some service presently.
Ju. In what you please; I'll do, Sir, what I can.
Pro. I hope thou wilt.

How now you whore-son pezant,
Where have you been these two days loytering?
La. Marry Sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the Dog you bad me.
Pro. And what says she to my little Jewel?
La. Marry, she says, your Dog was a Cur, and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.
Pro. But she receiv'd my Dog?
La. No indeed she did not:
Here have I brought him back again.
Pro. What, did'st thou offer her this from me?
La. Ay Sir, the other Squirrel was stol'n from me
By the Hangman's boy in the Market-place;
And then I offer'd her mine own, who is a Dog
As big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.
Pro. Go get thee hence, and find my Dog again,
Or ne're return again into my sight:
Away, I say: stay'st thou to vex me here?
A slave, that still an end turns me to shame. [Exit. Laun.
Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly that I have need of such a Youth,
That can with some discretion do my busines;
For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish Lowt;
But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour,
Which, (if my Augury deceive me not),
Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee.
Go presently, and take this Ring with thee,
Deliver it to Madam Silvia;
She lov'd me well, deliver'd it to me.
Ju. It seems you lov'd not her, to leave her Token:
She's dead belike.
Pro. Not so: I think she lives.
Ju. Alas!
Pro. Why do'st thou cry alas?
Ju. I cannot choose but pity her.
Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her?
Ju. Because methinks that she lov'd you as well
As you do love your Lady Silvia;
She dreams on him that has forgot her Love;
You doat on her that cares not for your Love:
'Tis pity Love should be so contrary:
And thinking on it makes me cry alas!
Pro. VVell, give her that Ring, and therewithal
This Letter; that's her Chamber: Tell my Lady,
I claim the promise for her heavenly Picture:
Your message done, hye home unto my Chamber,
VVhere thou shalt find me sad and solitary. [Exit.
Ju. How many women would do such a message?
Alas, poor Protheus, thou hast entertain'd
A Fox to be the Shepherd of thy Lambs:
Alas, poor fool, why do I pity him
That with his very heart despiseth me?
Because he loves her, he despiseth me;
Because I love him, I must pity him:
This Ring I gave him when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will:
And now I am, (unhappy Messenger),
To plead for that which I would not obtain;
To carry that which I would have refus'd;
To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd.
I am my Master's true confirmed Love;
But cannot be true Servant to my Master,
Unless I prove false traitor to my self.
Yet will I woo for him, but yet so coldly,
As (heaven it knows) I would not have him speed. [Enter Silvia.
Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my mean
To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.
Sil. VVhat would you with her, if that I be she?
Ju. If you be she, I do entreat your patience
To hear me speak the Message I am sent on.
Sil. From whom?
Ju. From my Master, Sir Protheus, Madam.
Sil. Oh: he sends you for a Picture?

Ju. I,

Ju. Ay, Madam.
Sil. Ursula, bring my Picture there.
Go, give your Master this; tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,
Would better fit his Chamber than this shadow.
Ju. Madam, please you peruse this Letter: may't
Pardon me (Madam), I have unadvis'd
Deliver'd you a paper that I should not;
This is the Letter to your Ladyship.
Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.
Ju. It may not be; good Madam, pardon me.
Sil. There, hold;
I will not look upon your Master's lines;
I know they're stuft with Protestations,
And full of new-found Oaths, which he will break
As easie as I do tear his paper.
Ju. Madam, he sends your Ladyship this Ring.
Sil. The more shame for him that he sends it me;
For I have heard him say a thousand times,
His Julia gave it him at his departure:
Tho' his false finger hath prophan'd the Ring,
Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.
Ju. She thanks you.
Sil. What say'st thou?
Ju. I thank you Madam, that you tender her;
Poor Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much.
Sil. Do'st thou know her?
Ju. Almost as well as I do know my self.
To think upon her woes, I do protest,
That I have wept an hundred several times.
Sil. Belike she thinks that Protheus hath forsook her.
Ju. I think she doth; and that's her cause of sorrow.
Sil. Is she not passing fair?
Ju. She hath been fairer, (Madam) than she is,
When she did think my Master lov'd her well;
She, in my judgment, was as fair as you:
But since she did neglect her Looking-glass,
And threw her Sun-expelling Mask away,
The air hath starv'd the Roses in her cheeks,
And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as black as I.
Sil. How tall was she?
Ju. About my stature: for at Pentecost,
When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,
Our Youth got me to play the Woman's part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Julia's gown,
Which served me as fit, by all mens judgments,
As if the garment had been made for me;
Therefore I know she is about my height.
And at that time I made her weep a good;
For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam), 'twas Ariadne passioning
For Theseus perjury, and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears,
That my poor Mistris moved therewithal,
Wept bitterly; and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee, (gentle Youth).
Alas, (poor Lady)! desolate and left!
I weep my self to think upon thy words.
Here Youth, there is a Purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet Mistris sake, because thou lov'st her;
[redacted]. Exit.
Ju. And she shall thank you for't, if e're you know her.
A vertuous gentlewoman, mild and beautiful.
I hope my Master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects his Mistris love so much:
Alas! how Love can trifle with it self!
Here is her Picture; let me see; I think
If I had such a Tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers.
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with my self too much.
Her hair is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow.
If that be all the difference in his Love,
I'll get me such a colour'd Periwig.
Her Eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine;
Ay, but her Fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in my self,
If this fond Love were not a blinded god?
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow up;
For 'tis thy Rival. O thou senseless form,
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd and ador'd;
And were there sense in his Idolatry,
My substance should be [redacted] in thy stead: Painted.
I'll use thee kindly for thy Mistris sake,
That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing Eyes,
To make my Master out of Love with thee. Exit.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Scene continues in Milan.

Enter Eglamour, Silvia.

Eg. The Sun begins to gild the Western sky,
And now it is about the very hour
[redacted] Silvia, at Friar Patrick's Cell should meet me:
She will not fail; for [redacted] break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time:
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes: [redacted], a happy Evening!
Sil. Amen, Amen! go on (good Eglamour)
Out at the Postern by the Abby-wall;
I fear I am attended by some Spies.
Eg. Fear not; the Forest is not three Leagues off;
If we recover that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda,

Enter Thurio, Protheus, Julia, [redacted]

Thu. Sir Protheus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. Oh, sir, I find her milder than she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What, that my Leg is too long?
Pro. No: that it is too little.
Thu. I'll wear a Boot to make it somewhat rounder.
Pro. But Love will not be spurr'd to what it loaths.
Thu. What says she to my face?
Pro. She says it is a fair one.
Thu. Nay, then the wanton lies; my face is black.
Pro. But Pearls are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are Pearls in beauteous Ladies Eyes.
Jul. 'Tis true, such Pearls as put out Ladies Eyes:
For I had rather wink than look on them. Aside.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when you talk of War,
But well when I discourse of Love and Peace.
Jul. But better indeed when you hold your peace.
Thu. What says she to my Valour?
Pro. Oh sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. She needs not, when she knows it Cowardise.
Thu. What says she to my Birth?
Pro. That you are well deriv'd.
Jul. True; from a Gentleman to a Fool.
Thu. Considers she my possessions?
Pro. Oh, Ay, and pities them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Jul. That such an Ass should owe them.

Pro.

Pro. That they are out by Leaſe.
Ju. Here comes the Duke. [Enter Duke.
Du. How now, Sir Protheus? how now Thurio?
Which of you ſaw Sir Eglamour of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Nor I.
Du. Saw you my Daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. VVhy then
She's fled unto the peaſant Valentine;
And Eglamour is in her company.
'Tis true; for Frier Laurence met them both,
As he, in penance, wandred through the Foreſt:
Him he knew well; and gueſt that it was ſhe;
But being mask'd, he was not ſure of it.
Beſides, ſhe did intend Confeſſion
At Patrick's Cell this Even, and there ſhe was not:
Theſe likelihoods confirm her flight from hence.
Therefore I pray you ſtand not to diſcourſe,
But mount you preſently, and meet with me
Upon the riſing of the Mountain foot
That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled.
Diſpatch, (ſweet Gentlemen), and follow me. [Exit Duke.
Thu. VVhy this it is to be a peeviſh Girl,
That flies her Fortune where it follows her:
I'll after, more to be reveng'd on Eglamour
Than for the love of reck-leſs Silvia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love,
Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her.
Ju. And I will follow, more to croſs that love,
Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.
The FOREST.

Enter Silvia, Out-laws.

1. Out. Come, come be patient;
VVe muſt bring you to our Captain.
Sil. A thouſand more miſchances than this one
Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.
2. Out. Come, bring her away.
1. Out. VVhere is the Gentleman that was with her?
3. Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run us;
But Moyſes and Valerius follow him.
Go thou [redacted] to the Weſt end of the VVood, with her.
There is our Captain: [redacted] follow him that's fled,
The Thicket is beſet, he cannot ſcape.
1. Out. Come, I muſt bring you to our Captain's Cave.
Fear not; he bears an honourable mind,
And will not uſe a woman lawleſly.
Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, [redacted]

Val. How uſe doth breed a habit in a man!
This ſhadowy Deſart, unfrequented VVoods,
I better brook than flouriſhing peopled Towns.
Here can I ſit alone, unſeen of any,
And to the Nightingale's complaining Notes,
Tune my diſtreſſes, and record my woes.
O thou that doſt inhabit in my breaſt,
Leave not the Manſion ſo long Tenantleſs,
Leſt, growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was;
Repair me with thy preſence, Silvia;
Thou gentle Nymph, cheriſh thy forlorn Swain.
VVhat hollowing, and what ſtir is this to day?
Theſe are my mates, that make their VVills their Law,
Have ſome unhappy paſſenger in chaſe.
They love me well, yet I have much to do
To keep them from uncivil outrages.
VVithdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here? [Enter Protheus
Pro. Madam, this ſervice have I done for you, Silvia & Julia.
(Tho you reſpect not ought your ſervant doth),
To hazard life, and reſcue you from him
That would have forc'd your honour and your love.
Vouchſafe me for my meed but one fair look:
(A ſmaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And leſs than this I am ſure you cannot give).
Val. How like a dream is this? I ſee and hear!
Love, lend me patience to forbear a while.
Sil. O miſerable unhappy that I am!
Pro. Unhappy were you, (Madam), e're I came;
But by my coming I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'ſt me moſt unhappy. [Aside.
Ju. And me when he approacheth to your preſence.
Sil. Had I been ſeized by a hungry Lion,
I would have been a breakfaſt to the Beaſt,
Rather than have falſe Protheus reſcue me.
Oh heaven be judge how I love Valentine,
Whoſe life's as tender to me as my ſoul;
And full as much, (for more there cannot be),
I do deteſt falſe perjur'd Protheus:
Therefore be gone, ſolicite me no more.
Pro. What dangerous action, ſtood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one calm loook?
Oh, 'tis the curſe in Love, [redacted] prov'd, for ever
When women cannot love where they're belov'd.
Sil. When Protheus cannot love where he's belov'd.
Read over Julia's heart, (thy firſt beſt Love),
For whoſe dear ſake thou did'ſt then rend thy faith
Into a thouſand Oaths; and all thoſe Oaths
Deſcended into Perjury to deceive me.
Thou haſt no faith left now, unleſs thou'dſt two,
And that's far worſe than none: better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one:
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!
Pro. In Love,
Who reſpects friend?
Sil. All men but Protheus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle ſpirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form;
I'll move you like a Soldier, at arms end,
And love you 'gainſt the Nature of Love; force ye.
Sil. Oh heaven!
Pro. I'll force thee yeild to my deſire.
Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch,
Thou friend of an ill faſhion!
Pro. Valentine:
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love;
For ſuch is a friend now: Tho treacherous man,
Thou haſt beguil'd my hopes, nought but mine Eye
Could have perſwaded me. now I dare not ſay
I have one friend alive; thou would'ſt diſprove me.
Who ſhould be truſted now, when [redacted] right hand
Is perjured to the boſome? Protheus,
I am ſorry I muſt never truſt thee more,
But count the world a ſtranger for the ſake.
The private wound is deepeſt. Oh time, moſt accurſt!
'Mongſt all foes, that a friend ſhould be the worſt!
Pro. My ſhame and guilt confounds me:
Forgive me, Valentine; if hearty ſorrow
Be a ſufficient Ranſome for Offence,
I tender't here: I do as truly ſuffer,
As e're I did commit.
Val. Then am I paid:

And

And once again I do receive thee honeſt.
VVho by Repentance is not ſatisfied,
Is nor of Heaven nor Earth; for theſe are pleas'd:
By Penitence th' Eternal's wrath's appeas'd. [Exit Milan
And that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia, I give thee.
Ju. Oh me unhappy! [Swoons.
Pro. Look to the boy.
Val. VVhy, boy?
[illegible], how now? what's the matter? look up: ſpeak.
Ju. O good Sir, my Maſter charg'd me to deliver a Ring to Madam Silvia, which, (out of my neglect) was never (done.
Pro. VVhere is that Ring, boy?
Ju. Here 'tis: this is it.
Pro. How? let me ſee:
VVhy this is the Ring I gave to Julia.
Ju. Oh, cry you mercy, ſir, I have miſtook;
This is the Ring you ſent to Silvia.
Pr. [illegible] how cam'ſt thou by this Ring? at my depart
I gave this unto Julia.
Ju. And Julia her ſelf did give it me.
And Julia her ſelf hath brought it hither.
Pro. How, Julia?
Ju. Behold her that gave aim to all thy Oaths,
And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart:
How oft haſt thou with Perjury cleft the Root?
Oh Protheus, let this Habit make thee bluſh:
Be thou aſham'd that I have took upon me
Such an immodeſt Rayment, if ſhame live
In a diſguiſe of love;
It is the leſſer blot modeſty finds,
Women to change their ſhapes, than men their minds.
Pro. Than men their minds? 'tis true, oh heaven, were
Man but conſtant, he were perfect; that one error
Fills him with faults, makes him run through all th' ſins:
Inconſtancy falls off e're it begins.
What is in Silvia's face, but I may ſpy
More freſh in Julia's with a conſtant eye?
Val. Come, come: a hand from either:
Let me be bleſt to make this happy cloſe;
'Twere pity two ſuch friends ſhould be long foes.
Pro. Bear witneſs (heaven), I have my wiſh for ever.
Jul. And I mine. [Enter Duke, Thurio & Out-l. A prize, a prize, a prize! Out-laws.
Val. Forbear, forbear, I ſay: it is my Lord the Duke.
Your Grace is welcome to a man diſgrac'd,
Baniſhed Valentine.
Duke, Sir Valentine?
Thu. Yonder is Silvia: and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back; or elſe embrace thy death:
Come not within the meaſure of my wrath;
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
[illegible] ſhall not hold thee: here ſhe ſtands,
Take but poſſeſſion of her with a touch;
I dare thee but to breathe upon my Love.
Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a Girl that loves him not:
I claim her not; and therefore ſhe is thine.
Duke, The more degenerate and baſe art thou,
To make ſuch means for her as thou haſt done,
And leave her on ſuch ſlight conditions.
Now, by the honour of my Anceſtry,
I do applaud thy Spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an Empreſs love:
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
Plead a new ſtate in thy rival'd merit,
To which I thus ſubſcribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a Gentleman, and well deriv'd,
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou haſt deſerv'd her.
Val. I thank your grace, the gift hath made me happy.
I now beſeech you (for your Daughter's ſake),
To grant one Boon that I ſhall ask of you.
Duke, I grant it for thine own, what e're it be.
Val. Theſe baniſh'd men that I have kept withal,
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their Exile:
They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great imployment, (worthy Lord).
Duke, thou haſt prevail'd, I pardon them and thee;
Diſpoſe of them as thou know'ſt their deſerts.
Come, let us go, we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and all ſolemnity.
Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our diſcourſe to make your grace to ſmile:
What think you of this Page, (my Lord)?
Duke, I think the boy hath grace in him, he bluſhes.
Val. I warrant you, (my Lord) more grace than boy.
Duke, What mean you by that ſaying?
Val. Pleaſe you, I'll tell you as we paſs along,
That you will wonder what hath fortuned.
Come, Protheus, 'tis your penance but to hear
The ſtory of your Loves diſcovered:
That done, our day of Marriage ſhall be yours,
One feaſt, one houſe, one mutual happineſs.

Exeunt.

This * paſſage either hath been much ſophiſticated or is one great proof that the main parts of this play did not proceed from Shakeſpear for it is impoſſible He could make Valentine act & ſpeak ſo much out of Character; or give to Silvia ſo unnatural a behaviour as to take no Notice of this ſtrange declaration if it had been made.

THE
Merry Wives of Windſor.*

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.
The Scene before Page's House in Windsor.

Enter Juſtice Shallow, Slender, Sir Hugh Evans, [redacted]

Shallow.

SIR Hugh, perſwade me not; I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it: if he were twenty Sir John Falſtaff's, he ſhall not abuſe Robert Shallow Eſquire;

Slen. In the County of Glocester, Juſtice of Peace, and Coram.

Shal. Ay (Couſin Slender), and Cuſtalorum.

Slen. Ay, and Rato-lorum too; and a Gentleman born, (Maſter Parſon); who writes himſelf Armigero, in any Bill, VVarrant, Quittance, or Obligation; Armigero.

Shal. Ay, that I do, and have done any time theſe three hundred years.

Slen. All his Succeſſors, (gone before him), have don't; and all his Anceſtors (that come after him), may; they may give the dozen white Luces in their Coat.

Shal. It is an old Coat.

Evans, The dozen white Lowſes do become an old Coat well; it agrees well paſſant; it is a familiar beaſt to man, and ſignifies Love.

Shal. The Luce is the freſh-fiſh, the ſalt-fiſh is an old Coat.

Slen. I may quarter, (Coz).

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans, It is marrying indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans, Yes, per-lady; if he has a quarter of your Coat, there is but three ſkirts for your ſelf, in my ſimple Conjectures; but that is all one: if Sir John Falſtaff have committed Diſparagements unto you, I am of the Church, and will be glad to do my Benevolence, to make Atonements and Compromiſes between you.

Shal. The Council ſhall hear it; it is a Riot.

Evans, It is not meet the Council hear of a Riot; there is no fear of Got in a Riot: The Council, (look you), ſhall deſire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a Riot; take you viza-ments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the ſword ſhould end it.

Evans, It is petter that friends is the ſword, and end it; and there is alſo another device in my prain, which peradventure prings good diſcretions with it: There is Ann Page, which is daughter to Maſter George Page, which is pretty Virginity.

Slen. Miſtris Ann Page? ſhe has brown hair, and ſpeaks like a woman.

Evans, It is that ferry perſon for all the orld, as juſt as you will deſire; and ſeven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, and ſilver, is her Grand-fire upon his deaths-bed (Got deliver to a joyful Reſurrections) give, when ſhe is able to overtake ſeventeen years old: It were a good motion, if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and deſire a marriage between Maſter Abraham, and Miſtris Ann Page.

Slen. Did her Grand-fire leave her ſeven hundred pound?

Evans, Ay, and her Father is make her a petter penny.

Slen. I know the young Gentlewoman; ſhe has good gifts.

Evans, Seven hundred pounds, and poſſibility, is goot gifts.

Shal. Well: let us ſee honeſt Mr. Page: is Falſtaff there?

Evan. Shall I tell you a lie? I do deſpiſe a liar as I do deſpiſe one that is falſe; or as I deſpiſe one that is not true. the Knight, Sir John is there; and I beſeech you be ruled by your well-willers: I will peat the door for Maſter Page. What hoa? Got bleſs your houſe here.

Mr. Page, Who's there?

Evans, Here is got's bleſſing, and your friend, and Juſtice Shallow; and here's young Maſter Slender; that peradventures ſhall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page, I am glad to ſee your Worſhips well. I thank you for my Veniſon, Maſter Shallow.

Shal. Maſter Page, I am glad to ſee you; much good do it your good heart: I wiſh'd your Veniſon better; it was ill kill'd. how doth good Miſtris Page? and I thank you always with my heart, la: with my heart.

Mr. Page, Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you: by yea and no I do.

M. Page, I am glad to ſee you, good Maſter Slender.

Slen. How do's your fallow Greyhound, Sir? I heard ſay, he was out-run on Cotſale.

M. Pa. It could not be judg'd, ſir.

Slen. You'll not confeſs, you'll not confeſs.

Shal. That he will not; 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault; 'tis a good Dog.

M. Page, A Cur, ſir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good Dog, and a fair Dog; can there be more ſaid? He is good and fair. Is Sir John Falſtaff here?

M. Page, Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Evan. It is ſpoke as a Chriſtians ought to ſpeak.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me, (Maſter Page).

M. Page, Sir, he doth in ſome ſort confeſs it.

Shal. If it be confeſſed, it is not redreſſed; is not that ſo (Maſter Page)? he hath wrong'd me; indeed he hath; at a word he ſaith; believe me, Robert Shallow, Eſquire, ſaith, he is wrong'd.

Mr. Pa. Here comes Sir John.

Fal. Now, Maſter Shallow, you'll complain of me to the King?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my Deer, and

* This Play was written in the Authors best & ripest Years, after Henry the fourth, by the command of Queen Elizabeth. There is a tradition that it was compos'd at a fortnights warning. But that must be meant only of the first Imperfect sketch of this Comedy, which is yet extant in an Old Quarto Edition printed in 1619. This which we here have, was alter'd & improv'd and broke open my Lodg.

Fal. But not kis'd your Keeper's daughter.

Shal. Tut, a pin; this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it straight: I have done all this. That is now answer'd.

Shal. The Council shall know this. [Enter Simple not

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in councel; you'l be laugh'd at.

Evan. Pauca verba (Sir John) good worts.

Fal. Good worts? good Cabbage, Slender, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry Sir, I have matter in my head against you, and against your Cony-catching Rascals, Bardolph, Nym and Pistoll.

Bar. You Banbury Cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephostophilus?

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say, pauca, pauca: Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man? can you tell, Cousin?

Evan. Peace I pray you: Now let us understand; there is three Umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is, Master Page (fidelicet, Master Page), and there is my self (fidelicet, my self); and the third party is (lastly, and finally) mine Host of the Garter.

M. Pa. We three to hear it, and end it between them.

Evan. Ferry goot; I will make a prief of it in my Note-book, and we will afterwards ork upon the Cause with as great discretions as we can.

Fal. Pistoll

Pist. He hears with ears.

Evan. The Tevil and his Tam! what phrase is this, he hears with ear? why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol: did you pick M. Slender's purse?

Slen. Ay, by these gloves did he; or I would I might never come in mine own great Chamber again else, of seven groats in Mill-sixpences, and two Edward Shovelboards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a peice, of Yead Miller; by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Evan. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou Mountain Forreigner! Sir John, and Master mine, I Combate challenge of this Latten Bilboe: word of denial in thy labras here; word of denial; froth and scum, thou liest.

Slen. By these gloves, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be advis'd, sir, and pass good humours: I will say marry trap with you, if you run the nut-hooks humour on me; that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then he in the red face had it; for tho I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an Ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bar. Why, sir (for my part) I say, the Gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Evan. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

Bar. And being fap, sir, was (as they say) cashier'd: and so conclusions past the Car-eires.

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter; I'll ne're be drunk whil'st I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company for this trick: If I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Evan. So got udg me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters denid, Gentlemen; you hear it. Enter Mistress Anne Page with Wine

M. Page. Nay, daughter, carry the Wine in; we'll drink within. [Exit Anne Page]

M. Page. How now Mistris Ford?

Fal. Mistris Ford, by my troth you are very well met: by your leave, good Mistris. [Kissing Her.

M. Page, Wife, bid these Gentlemen welcome: come, we have a hot Venison Pasty to dinner; Come gentlemen I hope we shall drink down all unkindness. Exe: Fal Page &c Scene IV

Slen. I had rather than Forty shillings I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here. How now Simple, where have you been? I must wait on my self, must I? You have not the book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake upon Allhollowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come Coz, come Coz; we stay for you: a word with you Coz: marry this, Coz; there is, as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, made a far off by Sir Hugh here: Do you understand me?

Slen. Ay Sir, you shall find me reasonable: if it be so, I shall do that is Reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I do, Sir.

Evan. Give ear to his motions (M. Slender): I will description the matter to you, if you be [illegible] it.

Slen. [illegible] I pray you pardon me; he's a Justice of Peace in his Countrey; simple tho I stand here.

Evan. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point Sir.

Evan. Marry is it; the very point of it, to Mrs Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'oman? let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers Philosophers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mind: therefore precisely, can you marry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slen. I hope sir; I will do as it shall become one that would do Reason.

Evan. Nay, got's Lords and his Ladies, you must speak possitable, if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must:
Will you (upon good dowry) marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that upon your request, (Cousin), in any Reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, (sweet Coz), what I do is to pleasure you, (Coz): can you love the Maid?

Slen. I will marry her, (sir) at your request: but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are marry'd, and have more occasion to know one another; I hope upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, marry her, I will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

Evan. It is a ferry discretion answer; save the fall is in th'ord dissolutely: the ort is, (according to our meaning) resolutely; his meaning is good.

Sh. Ay, I think my Cousin meant well.

Sl. Ay; or else I would I might be hang'd, (la).

Sh. Here comes fair Mistris Ann: Would I were Young for your sake, Mistris Anne, Scene V [Enter Mrs Anne Page]

An. The Dinner is on the Table; my Father desires your Worship's company.

Sl. I will wait on him, (fair Mistris Anne).

Evan. Od's plessed will: I will not be absence at the Grace. [Exe: Shallow & Evans

An. Will't please your Worship to come in, Sir?

Sl. No, I thank you forsooth heartily; I am very well.

An. The Dinner attends you, sir.

Sl. I am not a-hungry, I thank you forsooth. Go sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my Cousin Shallow: a Justice of Peace sometime may be beholden to his friend for a man: I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my

* Nuthook was a word of reproach in the Vulgar way & in the Cant I mean. In the second Part of Hen. 4. Dol. Tearsheet says to the Beadle, Nuthook, Nuthook! you lie. Probably it was a Name given to a Bayliff or Catchpole, very odious to the common people.

my Mother be dead; but what though, yet I live a poor Gentleman born.

An. I may not go in without your Worship; they will not sit till you come.

Sl. I'faith, I'll eat nothing: I thank you as much as though I did.

An. I pray you sir, walk in.

Sl. I had rather walk here, (I thank you) I bruis'd my shin th'other day, with playing at Sword and Dagger with a Master of Fence (three veneys for a dish of stew'd Prunes), and by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there Bears i'th' Town?

An. I think there are, Sir; I heard them talk'd of.

Sl. I love the sport well, but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England: you are afraid if you see the Bear loose, are you not?

An. Ay indeed Sir.

Sl. That's meat and drink to me now; I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the Chain; but (I warrant you) the women have so cried and shrieked at it, that it past*. But women indeed cannot abide 'em, they are very ill-favoured rough things. Enter Page.

M. Pa. Come gentle M. Slender, come; we stay for you.

Sl. I'll eat nothing, I thank you Sir.

M. Pa. By Cock and Pye you shall not chuse, Sir; come, come.

Sl. Nay, pray you lead the way.

M. Pa. Come on, Sir.

Sl. Mistress Anne, your self shall go first.

An. Not I Sir, pray you keep on.

Sl. Truly I will not go first; truly-la: I will not do you that wrong.

An. I pray you Sir.

Sl. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome; you do your self wrong indeed-la. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] VI.

Re Enter Evans and Simple.

Evan. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius house which is the way; and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his Nurse, or his dry-Nurse, or his Cook, or his Laundry, his Washer, and his Ringer.

Sim. Well Sir.

Evan. Nay, it is petter yet; give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogethers acquaintance with Mistress Page; and the Letter is to desire, and require her to solicite, your Masters desires to Mistress Anne Page: I pray you be gone; I will make an end of my dinner; there's Pippins and Cheese to come. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] VII.

Changes to the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistoll, Robin.

Fal. Mine Host of the Garter.

Ho. What says my Bully Rock? speak Scholarly, and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine Host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Ho. Discard, (Bully Hercules) cashier; let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Ho. Thou'rt an Emperor (Cæsar, Keisar and Pheazar) I will entertain Bardolph, he will draw, he will tap, said I well, (Bully Hector?)

Fa. Do so (good mine Host.)

Ho. I have spoke, let him follow; let me see thee froth, and live: I am at a word; follow [Exit Host.]

Fal, Bardolph follow him; a Tapster is a good trade; an old Cloak makes a new Jerkin; a wither'd Serving-man, a fresh Tapster, go, adieu.

Ba. It is a life that I have desired: I will thrive. [Exit Bar.]

Pist. O base Hungarian wight: wilt thou the Spigot weild.

Ny. He was gotten in drink: is not the humor conceited.

Fal. I am glad I am so quit of this Tinderbox; his Thefts were too open; his filching was like an unskilful Singer, he kept not time.

Ny. The good humor is to steal at a minntes rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal? foh: a fico for the phrase!

Fa. Well sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why then let Kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy: I must conicatch, I must shift.

Pist. Young Ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this Town?

Pist. I ken the wight, he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest Lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol: (Indeed I am in the Waste two yards about: but I am now about no waste, I am about thrift.) briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's Wife: I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leere of invitation; I can construe the action of her familiar stile, and the hardest voice of her behaviour, (to be english'd right) is, I am Sir John Falstaff's.

Pist. He hath studied her well; and translated her [redacted]: out of honesty into English.

Ny. The Anchor is deep; will that humor pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her Husbands Purse: he hath a legeon of Angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain; and to her, Boy, say I.

Ny. The humor rises, it is good; humor me the Angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a Letter to her; and here another to Page's wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious oeilliades; sometimes the beam of her view, gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the Sun on Dung-hill shine.

Ny. I thank thee for that humor.

Fal. O she did so course o're my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass. Here's another Letter to her; She bears the purse too; She is a Region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be Escheator to them both, and they shall be Exchequers to me; they shall be my East and West-Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this Letter to Mistress Page; and thou this to Mistress Ford: we will thrive, (Lads), we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my side wear Steel? then Lucifer take all.

Ny. I will run no base humor: here take the humour-Letter, I will keep the haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold Sirrah, bear you these Letters rightly, [To Robin.]
Sail like my Pinnace to these golden shores.
Rogues, hence, avaunt, vanish like hail-stones, go,
Trudge, plod away oth' hoof, seek shelter, pack!
Falstaff will learn the humour of the age,
French thrift, you Rogues, my self and skirted Page. [Exeunt.]

Pist. Let Vultures gripe thy guts; for gourd, and Fullam holds, and high and low beguile the rich and poor,
Tester I'll have in Pouch when thou shalt lack,
Base Phrygian Turk.

Ny. I have operations, which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

* It past and This passes was a way of speaking custo many heretofore to signify the excess or extraordinary degree of any thing. The Sentence compleated would be, It past or This passes all expression or perhaps (according to the Vulgar phrase still in use) It past or This passes all things is beyond all things. The Participle

Nu By Welkin and her Star.

Pist. With wit, or steel?

Nu With both the humors, I:
I will discover the humor of this Love to Ford.

Pist. And I to Page shall eke unfold
How Falstaffs (Varlet vile)
His Dove will prove, his gold will hold,
And his soft Couch defile.

Nu My humor shall not cool; I will incense Ford to deal with poison; I will possess him with jealousie, for the revolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humor.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of Male-contents: I second thee; troop on. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. IX.

Changes to Dr. Caius's House.

Enter Mistress Quickly, Simple, John Rugby, [redacted].

Qu. What, John Rugby! I pray thee go to the casement, and see if you can see my Master, Master Doctor Caius, coming; if he do (I'faith,) and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of Gods patience, and the Kings English.

Ru. I'll go watch. [Exit Rugby.

Qu. Go, and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, (in faith) at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate; his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way; but no body, but has his fault; but let that pass. Peter Simple you say your name is.

Si. Ay, for fault of a better.

Qu. And Master Slender's your Master?

Si. Ay forsooth.

Qu. Do's he not wear a great round Beard, like a Glovers paring-knife?

Si. No forsooth, he hath but a little wee-face, with a little yellow Beard, a Cain-coloured Beard.

Qu. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Si. Ay forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head; he hath fought with a Warrener.

Qu. How say you? oh, I should remember him; doe's he not hold up his head (as it were?) and strut in his gate?

Si. Yes indeed doe's he.

Qu. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell Master Parson Evans, I will do what I can for your Master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish——

Ru. Out alas! here comes my Master. [Enter Rugby.

Qu. We shall all be shent: Run in here, good young man: go into this Closet; he will not stay long. what John Rugby! John! what John, I say; go, John, go enquire for my Master; I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home: (and down, down, adown'a, &c.) Singing.

Ca. Vat is you sing? I do not like des toys. Pray you, go and vetch in my Closet, unboitier verd; a Box, a green a Box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a Box.

Qu. Ay forsooth i'll fetch it you. I am glad he went not in himself; if he had found the young man, he would have been horn mad. [Aside.

Ca. Fe, fe, fe, fe, ma foi, il fait fort chaud, Ie man va a la Cour la grande affaire.

Qu. Is it this, Sir?

Ca. Ouy, mette le au mon pocket, de-pech quickly: Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Qu. What, John Rugby! John?

Ru. Here, Sir.

Ca. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby; Come, take-a your Rapier, and come after my heel to the the Court.

Ru. 'Tis ready sir, here in the Porch.

Ca. By my trot I tarry too long: od's-me: que ay je oublie: dere is some Simples in my Closet, dat I will not for the varld I shall leave behind.

Qu. Ay-me, he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Ca. O Diable, Diable! vat is in my Closet? Villanie, La-roon! Rugby, my Rapier.

Qu. Good Master, be content.

Ca. Wherefore should I be content-a?

Qu. The young man is an honest man.

Ca. What shall de honest man do in my Closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my Closet.

Qu. I beseech you, be not so flegmatick; hear the truth of it. He came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh.

Ca. Vell.

Si. Ay forsooth, to desire her to——

Qu. Peace, I pray you.

Ca. Peace-a-your-tongue, speak-a your Tale.

Si. To desire this honest Gentlewoman, (your Maid) to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page for my Master in the way of marriage.

Qu. This is all indeed-la: but i'll ne're put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Ca. Sir Hugh send-a-you? Rugby, baille me some Paper: tarry you a littell-a-while.

Qui. I am glad he is so quiet; if he had been throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholly: but notwithstanding man, I'll do for your master what good I can; and the very yea, and the no is, the French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, ring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all my self.)

Sim. 'Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.

Qui: Are you a-vis'd o'that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early, and down late; but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear, I would have no words of it,) my Master himself is in love with Mistress Anne Page; but notwithstanding that, I know Annes mind, that's neither here nor there.

Cai. You, Jack'Nape: give'a this Letter to Sir Hugh, by gar it is a shallenge: I will cut his troat in de Parke, and I will teach a scurvy Jack-a-nape Priest to meddle or make: — you may be gone, it is not good you tarry here; by gar I will cut all his two stones, by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog: [Exit Simple.

Qui. Alas, he speaks but for his friend.

Cai. It is no matter'a for dat: do not you tell-a-me dat I shall have Anne Page for my self? by gar, I vill kill de Jack-Priest: and I have appointed mine Host of de Jarteer to measure our weapon; by gar I will my self have Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: We must give folks leave to prate; what the go ajeres!

Cai. Rugby, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door: follow my heels, Rugby. [Exe: Cains & Rugby.

Qui. You shall have Anne fools head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: that never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do, nor can do more than I do with her, I thank Heaven.

Fenton. Who's within there, hoa? (within)

Qui: Who's there, I trow? Come near the house I pray you.

Scene XI. Enter Mr Fenton.

Fen. How now (good woman) how dost thou?

Qui. The better that it pleases your good Worship to ask.

Fen. What news? how does pretty Mistress Anne?

Qui. In

Qui. In truth Sir, and ſhe is pretty, and honeſt, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praiſe heaven for it.

Fen. Shall I do any good think'ſt thou? ſhall I not loſe my ſuit?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands above; but notwithſtanding (Maſter Fenton), I'll be ſworn on a book ſhe loves you: Have not your Worſhip a Wart above your Eye?

Fen. Yes marry have I; what of that?

Qui. Well, thereby hangs a tale; good faith, it is ſuch another Nan; but (I deteſt) an honeſt maid as ever broke bread: we had an hours talk of that Wart: I ſhall never laugh but in that maids company: but (indeed) ſhe is given too much to Allicholly and muſing, but for you—— Well——go to——

Fen. Well, I ſhall ſee her to day: hold, there's money for thee: Let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou ſeeſt her before me, commend me——

Qui. Will I? I faith that will: And I will tell your Worſhip more of the VVart, the next time we have confidence, and of other VVooers.

Fen. VVell: farewell: I am in great haſte now. [Exit.

Qui. Farewell to your VVorſhip: truly an honeſt Gentleman: but Ann loves him not: for I know Ann's mind as well as another does: out upon't: what have I forgot? [Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Before Page's House.

Enter Miſtris Page, [redacted] with a Letter.

Miſ. Page. VVhat, have I ſcap'd Love-Letters in the holyday-time of my beauty, and am I now a ſubject for them? let me ſee:

[redacted]

Ask me no Reaſon why I love you; for tho' Love uſe Reaſon for his Preciſian, he admits him not for his Counſellor: you are not young, no more am I; go to then, there's ſympathy: you are merry, ſo am I; ha, ha, then there's more ſympathy: you love Sack, & ſo do I: would you deſire better ſympathy? Let it ſuffice thee (Miſtris Page) at the laſt if the Love of a Souldier can ſuffice, that I love thee. I will not ſay pity me, 'tis not a Souldier-like phraſe; but I ſay, love me:

By me, thine own true Knight, by day or night:
Or any kind of light, with all his might,
For thee to fight. John Falſtaff.

What a Herod of Jury is this! O wicked, wicked world! One that is well nigh worn to pieces with age, To ſhow himſelf a young Gallant? what unweighed Behaviour hath this Flemiſh drunkard pickt, (I'th' devils name), out of my converſation, that dares in this manner aſſay me? VVhy, he hath not been thrice in my Company: what ſhould I ſay to him? I was then frugal of my mirth (heaven forgive me), VVhy, I'll exhibit a Bill in the Parliament for the putting down of men, how ſhall I be reveng'd on him? for reveng'd I will be, as ſure as his guts are made of puddings. [Scene II. Enter Mrs. Ford.

Miſ. Ford. Miſtris Page, truſt me, I was going to your houſe.

Miſ. Page. And truſt me, I was coming to you; you look very ill.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, I'll ne're believe that; I have to ſhew to the contrary.

Miſ. Page. 'Faith you do, in my mind.

Miſ. Ford. VVell, I do then; yet I ſay, I could ſhew you to the contrary: O Miſtris Page, give me ſome counſel.

Miſ. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Miſ. Ford. O woman! if it were not for one trifling reſpect, I could come to ſuch honour.

Miſ. Page. Hang the trifle (woman), take the honour: what is it? diſpenſe with trifles; what is it?

Miſ. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment, or ſo; I could be knighted.

Miſ. Page. What, thou lieſt! Sir Alice Ford! theſe Knights will hack, and ſo thou ſhould'ſt not alter the article of thy Gentry.

Miſ. Ford. We burn day-light; here, read, read; perceive how I might be Knighted: I ſhall think the worſe of fat men as long as I have an Eye to make difference of mens liking; and yet he would not ſwear; praiſe Womens modeſty; and gave ſuch orderly and well-behaved Reproof to all uncomelineſs, that I would have ſworn his Diſpoſition would have gone to the truth of his Words; but they do no more adhere, and keep place together, than the Hundred Pſalms to the Tune of Greenſleeves. What tempeſt (I troe) threw this Whale (with ſo many Tuns of Oyl in his belly) a' ſhore at Windſor? How ſhall I be revenged on him? I think the beſt way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of Luſt have melted him in his own greaſe: Did you ever hear the like?

Miſ. Page. Letter for Letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs: to thy great comfort in this myſtery of ill Opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy Letter; but let thine inherit firſt, for I proteſt mine never ſhall. I warrant he hath a thouſand of theſe Letters, writ with blank-ſpace for different names; (ſack more); and theſe are of the Second Edition: he will print them out of doubt, for he cares not what he puts into the Preſs, when he would put us two. I had rather be a Gianteſs, and lie under Mount-Pelion: Well: I will find you twenty laſcivious Turtles e're one chaſte man.

Miſ. Ford. Why, this is the very ſame, the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Miſ. Page. Nay, I know not; it makes me almoſt ready to wrangle with mine own Honeſty. I'll entertain my ſelf like one that I am not acquainted withal; for ſure unleſs he knew ſome Strain in me, that I know not my ſelf, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Miſ. Ford. Boarding, call it you? I'll be ſure to keep him above deck.

Miſ. Page. So will I; if he come under my hatches, I'll never to Sea again. Let's be reveng'd on him; let's appoint him a meeting, give him a ſhow of comfort in his ſuit, and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horſes to mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, I will conſent to act any Villany againſt him that may not ſully the charineſs of our honeſty: Oh that my husband ſaw this Letter! it would give eternal food to his jealouſie.

Miſ. Page. VVhy, look where he comes, and my good man too; he's as far from jealouſie as I am from giving him cauſe; and that (I hope), is an unmeaſurable diſtance.

Miſ. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Miſ. Page. Let's conſult together againſt this greaſie Knight: Come hither. [Scene III. Enter Ford. with Piſtol, Page with N

Ford. VVell: I hope it be not ſo.

Piſt. Hope is a curtal-dog in ſome affairs. Sir John affects thy Wife.

Ford. VVhy ſir, thy Wife is not young.

Piſt. He wooes both high and low, both rich and poor, both young and old, and one with another, (Ford), he loves thy Gally-mawfry, (Ford), perpend.

Ford. Love my Wife?

Piſt. VVith liver burning hot: prevent,
Or go thou like Sir Acteon, with
Ring-wood at thy heels—O, odious is the name.

Ford. VVhat name, Sir?

× A fattening liquor much in use amongst the Flemings, as She had call'd him a Flemish Drunkard a few lines before: & it is to be obſerv'd that about the time when this Play was written there were on foot ſeveral bills in Parliament for reſtraining the Uſe of ſtrong Liquors, ſuppreſſing the Multitude of Maltſters, & the great Drearing of ſtrong Beer, Diſtilling, Tiplings & Tavern & Alehouſes.

Piſt. The horn, I ſay: Farewell:
Take heed, have open Eye; for thieves do foot by night.
Take heed e're ſummer comes, or Cuckoo-birds do ſing.
Away ſir Corporal Nym.
Believe it (Page), he ſpeaks ſence. [Exit Piſtol.

Ford. I will be patient; I will find out this.

Nym. And this is true: I like not the humor of lying; he hath wrong'd me in ſome humours: I ſhould have born the humour'd Letter to her; but I have a ſword, and it ſhall bite upon my neceſſity: he loves your Wife; There's the ſhort and the long. My name is Corporal Nym; I ſpeak it, and I avouch; 'tis true: my name is Nym, and Falſtaffe loves your Wife; adieu; I love not the humour of bread and cheeſe: adieu. [Exit Nym.

Page. The humour of it (quoth 'a)? here's a fellow frights Engliſh out of his Wits.

Ford. I will ſeek out Falſtaffe.

Page. I never heard ſuch a drawling affecting Rogue.

Ford. If I do find it: Well.

Page. I will not believe ſuch a Cataian, tho' the Prieſt o' th' Town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good ſenſible fellow: Well. [Scene IV.

Miſ. Page. VVhither go you (George)? hark you.

Miſ. Ford. How now (ſweet Frank), why art thou melancholly?

Ford. I melancholly! I am not melancholly.
Get you home, go.

Miſ. Ford. Faith, thou haſt ſome crotchets in thy head. Now: will you go, Miſtris Page?

Miſ. Page. Have with you. you'll come to dinner, George? Look who comes yonder; ſhe ſhall be our Meſſenger to this paltry Knight. [Enter Mrs Quickly.

Miſ. Ford. Truſt me, I thought on her: ſhe'll fit it.

Miſ. Page. You are come to ſee my daughter Anne?

Qui. I forſooth; and I pray how do's good Miſtris Anne?

Miſ. Page. Go in with us and ſee; we have an hours talk with you. [Exe: Mrs. Page Mrs Ford, & Mrs Quickly.

Page. How now, Maſter Ford? [Scene V.

Ford. You heard what this Knave told me, did you not?

Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hang 'em ſlaves; I do not think the Knight would offer it; but theſe that accuſe him in his intent towards our Wives, are a Yoke of his diſcarded men: very Rogues now they be out of ſervice.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that.
Do's he lieat the Garter?

Page. Ay marry do's he. if he ſhould intend his Voyage toward my Wife, I would turn her looſe to him; and what he gets more of her than ſharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not miſdoubt my Wife, but I would be loath to turn them together; a man may be too confident; I would have nothing lie on my head; I cannot be thus ſatisfied. [Scene VI. Enter Host & Shallow.

Page. Look where my ranting-Hoſt of the Garter comes; there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purſe, when he looks ſo merrily. How now mine Hoſt?

Hoſt. How now Bully-Rook: thou'rt a Gentleman. Cavalerio-Juſtice, I ſay.

Shal. I follow (mine Hoſt), I follow: Good even, and twenty, (good Maſter Page). Maſter Page, will you go with us? We have ſport in hand.

Hoſt. Tell him, Cavalerio-Juſtice: tell him Bully-Rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought between Sir Hugh, the Welch-Prieſt, and Caius, the French-Doctor.

Ford. Good mine Hoſt o' th' Garter, a word with you.

Hoſt. What ſai'ſt thou, my Bully-Rook?

Shal. Will you go with us to behold it? My merry Hoſt hath had the meaſuring of their Weapons, and (I think) hath appointed them contrary places; for (believe me) I hear the Parſon is no Jeſter. Hark, I will tell you what our ſport ſhall be.

Hoſt. Haſt thou no ſuit againſt my Knight, my gueſt-Cavaleir?

Shal None, I proteſt; but I'le give you a pottle of burn'd Sack to give me recourſe to him, and tell him my name is Broome; only for a Jeſt.

Hoſt. My hand (Bully); thou ſhalt have egreſs and regreſs (ſaid I well)? and thy name ſhall be Broome. It is a merry Knight, will you go [illegible]? myn-heers?

Shal. Have with you, mine Hoſt.

Page. I have heard the French-man hath good skill in his Rapier.

Shal. Tut, ſir: I could have told you more; In theſe times you ſtand on diſtance, your Paſſes, Stoccado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Maſter Page); 'tis here, 'tis here. I have ſeen the time, with my long-ſword, I would have made you four tall fellows skip like Rats.

Hoſt. Here boys, here: ſhall we wag?

Page. Have with you; I had rather hear them ſcold than fight. [Exe Host, Shallow, & Page.

Ford. Tho Page be a ſecure fool, and ſtand ſo firmly on his Wives [illegible]alty; yet I cannot put off my opinion ſo eaſily. ſhe was in his company at Page's houſe, and what they made there, I know not. Well: I will look further into't; and I have a diſguiſe to ſound Falſtaffe: if I find her honeſt, I loſe not my labour; if ſhe be otherwiſe, 'tis labour well beſtowed.

[Exeunt.

[illegible]

Scena [illegible] VII.
The Garter Inn.

Enter Falſtaffe, Piſtol, [illegible]

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Piſt. Why then the World's mine Oyſter, which I, with ſword will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I have been content (Sir) you ſhould lay my countenance to pawn; I have grated upon my good friends for three Reprieves for you, and your Couch-fellow, Nym; or elſe you had look'd through the grate, like a Gemeny of Baboons: I am damn'd in hell for ſwearing to Gentlemen, my friends, you were good Soldiers, and tall fellows. And when Miſtris Briget loſt the handle of her Fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadſt it not.

Piſt. Did'ſt thou not ſhare? had'ſt thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reaſon, you Rogue, Reaſon: think'ſt thou I'le endanger my ſoul, gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no Gibbet for you: go, a ſhort knife, and a throng, to your Mannor of Pickt-hatch? go, you'll not bear a Letter for me, you Rogue; you ſtand upon your honour? Why (thou unconfinable baſeneſs), it is as much as I can do to keep the term of my honour preciſe. I, [illegible] my ſelf ſometimes, leaving the fear of heav[illegible] on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my neceſſity, am fain to ſhuffle, to hedge and to lurch; and yet, you Rogue, will enſconſe your Rags, your Cat-a-Mountain-looks, your Red Lattice Phraſes, and your bull-baiting-Oaths, under the ſhelter of your honour! you will not do it, you.

Piſt. I do relent; What would thou more of man? [Enter Robin.

Rob. Sir, here's a Woman would ſpeak with you.

Fal. Let her approach. [Scene VIII. Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Qui. Give your Worſhip good morrow.

Fal.

Breaking Page.

---

† A noted harbour for Theives & pick-pockets

Fal. Good morrow, good wife.

Qui. Not ſo, an't pleaſe your Worſhip.

Fal Good maid, then.

Qui. I'll be ſworn,
As my mother was the firſt hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the ſwearer: what with me?

Qui. Shall I vouchſafe your VVorſhip a word or two?

Fal. Two thouſand, (fair woman), and I'll vouchſafe thee the hearing.

Qui. There is one Miſtris Ford, (Sir): I pray come a little nearer this ways: I my ſelf dwell with M.r Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Miſtris Ford, you ſay.

Qui. Your Worſhip ſays very true: I pray your Worſhip come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee no body hears: mine own people, mine own people.

Qui. Are they ſo? Heaven bleſs them, and make them his ſervants!

Fal. Well: Miſtris Ford; what of her?

Qui. Why, Sir, ſhe's a good creature. lord, lord, your Worſhip's a wanton; well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray——

Fal. Miſtris Ford, come, Miſtris Ford.——

Qui. Marry, this is the ſhort and the long of it; you have brought her into ſuch a Canaries, as 'tis wonderful: the beſt Courtier of them all, (when the Court lay at Windſor), could never have brought her to ſuch a Canary. yet there has been Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you, Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, ſmelling ſo ſweetly; all muſk; and ſo ruſſling, I warrant you, in ſilk and gold, and in ſuch alligant terms, and in ſuch wine and ſugar of the beſt, and the faireſt, that would have won any womans heart; and I warrant you, they could never get an Eye-wink of her. I had my ſelf twenty Angels given me this morning; but I defie all Angels, (in any ſuch ſort as they ſay), but in the way of honeſty; and I warrant you, they could never get her ſo much as ſip on a Cup, with the proudeſt of them all; and yet there has been Earls, nay (which is more), Penſioners, but I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what ſays ſhe to me? be brief my good ſhe-Mercury.

Qui. Marry, ſhe hath receiv'd your Letter, for the which ſhe thanks you a thouſand times; and ſhe gives you to notifie, that her husband will be abſence from his houſe between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven.

Qui. Ay, forſooth: and then you may come and ſee the picture, (ſhe ſays) that you wot of: Maſter Ford, her huſband, will be from home. Alas! the ſweet woman leads an ill life with him. he's a very jealouſie-man; ſhe leads a very frampold life with him, (good heart).

Fal. Ten and eleven:
Woman, commend me to her, I will not fail her.

Qui. Why, you ſay well: But I have another meſſenger to your Worſhip: Miſtris Page has her hearty commendations to you too: and let me tell you in your ear, ſhe's as fartuous a civil modeſt Wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miſs you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windſor, who e're be the other; and ſhe bad me tell your Worſhip, that her husband is ſeldom from home; but ſhe hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman ſo doat upon a man; ſurely I think you have Charms, la; yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I aſſure thee; ſetting the attraction of my good parts aſide, I have no other Charms.

Qui. Bleſſing on your heart for't!

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this; has Ford's Wife, and Page's Wife acquainted each other how they love me?

Qui. That were a jeſt indeed; they have not ſo little grace I hope; that were a trick indeed! But Miſtris Page would deſire you to ſend her your little Page, of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little Page; and truly Maſter Page is an honeſt man: never a Wife in Windſor leads a better life than ſhe do's; do what ſhe will, ſay what ſhe will, take all, pay all, go to bed when ſhe liſt, riſe when ſhe liſt; all is as ſhe will; and truly ſhe deſerves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windſor, ſhe is one: you muſt ſend her your Page; no Remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qui. Nay, but do ſo then; and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and in any caſe, have a nay-word, that you may know one anothers mind; and the boy never need to underſtand any thing; for 'tis not good that children ſhould know any wickedneſs: old folks, you know, have diſcretion, as they ſay, and know the World.

Fal. Fare thee well; commend me to them both: there's my purſe, I am yet thy debtor. Boy, go along with this woman; this news diſtracts me. [Exe. Quickly & Boy.

Piſt. This Punk is one of Cupid's Carriers:
Clap on more ſails; purſue; up with your Fights.
Give fire; ſhe is my prize; or Ocean whelm them all. [Exit Piſt.

Fal. Sayſt thou ſo (old Jack)? Go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done; will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expence of ſo much money, be now a gainer? good body, I thank thee; let them ſay, 'tis groſly done, ſo it be fairly done, no matter.

Scene IX. Enter Bardolph.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Maſter Brook below would fain ſpeak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath ſent your Worſhip a mornings draught of Sack.

Fal. Brook is his name?

Bard. Ay, Sir.

Fal. Call him in: ſuch Brooks are welcome to me, that o'reflows ſuch liquor. ah, ah! Miſtris Ford and Miſtris Page, have I encompaſſed you? go to, via. [Enter Ford. Diſguis'd.

Ford. Bleſs you, ſir!

Fal. And you, ſir; would you ſpeak with me?

Ford. I make bold to preſs with ſo little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome; what's your will? Give us leave, Drawer. [Exit Bard:

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that have ſpent much; my name is Brook.

Fal. Good Maſter Brook, I deſire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I ſue for yours, not to charge you; for I muſt let you underſtand, I think my ſelf in better plight for a Lender, than you are; the which hath ſomething emboldned me to this unſeaſon'd intruſion; for they ſay, if money go before, all ways do lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Soldier, (ſir), and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me; if you will help to bear it (Sir John), take all, or half, for eaſing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deſerve to be your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you, Sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak (good Maſter Brook), I ſhall be glad to be your ſervant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a Scholar, (I will be briefe with you), and you have been a man long known to me, tho' I had never ſo good means as deſire, to make my ſelf acquainted with you. I ſhall diſcover a thing to you, wherein I muſt very much lay open mine own imperfections; but (good Sir John), as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the Regiſter of your own, that I may paſs with a Reproof the eaſier, ſith you your ſelf know how eaſie it is to be ſuch an Offender.

Fal. Very well; ſir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Town, her huſband's name is Ford.

† Edit. of 1619. In all the ſucceeding editions this name of Brook is alter'd to Broom: whereas it is manifeſt from this conceit upon the Name that it ſhould be Brook.

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long lov'd her, and I protest to you, bestow'd much on her, followed her with a doating observance, ingross'd opportunities to meet her, fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given: Briefly, I have pursu'd her as Love hath pursued me, which hath been on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, meed I am sure I have received none, unless experience be a Jewel; that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this;

" Love like a shadow flies, when substance Love pursues;
" Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal Have you receiv'd no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose?

For. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house built on another man's ground; so that I have lost my Edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that tho she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd Construction made of her. Now (Sir John), here is the heart of my purpose: You are a Gentleman of excellent Breeding, admirable Discourse, of great admittance, Authentick in your Place and Person, generally allow'd for your many War-like, Court-like, and Learned Preparations.

Fal O Sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it; there is money; spend it; spend it; spend more, spend all I have, only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's Wife; use your Art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemence of your Affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to your self very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift; she dwells so securely on the Excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present it self; as she is too bright to be look'd against. Now could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her Purity, her Reputation, her Marriage-Vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me: what say you to't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a Gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's Wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. I say, you shall.

Ford. Want no money, (Sir John), you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistris Ford (Master Brook), you shall want none: I shall be with her, (I may tell you), by her own appointment: even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me; I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous-rascally-knave, her husband, will be forth; come you to me at night, you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance: Do you know Ford, Sir?

Fal. Hang him (poor Cuckoldly knave), I know him not: yet I wrong him, to call him poor; they say, the jealous-wittolly-knave hath masses of money, for the which his Wife seems to me well-favour'd. I will use her as the key of the Cuckold-Rogues Coffer; and there's my Harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical-salt-butter Rogue; I will stare him out of his Wits; I will awe him with my Cudgel; it shall hang like a Meteor o're the Cuckold's horns: Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the Peasant, and thou shalt lie with his Wife: Come to me soon at night; Ford's a Knave, and I will aggravate his stile: thou (Master Brook) shalt know him for Knave and Cuckold; Come to me soon at night. [Fal: Exit.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurean-Rascal is this! my heart is ready to crack with impatience. Who says this is improvident jealousie? my Wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixt, the match is made; would any man have thought this? see the hell of having a false woman; my Bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ransack'd, my Reputation gnawn at, and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! Names! Amaimon sounds well: Lucifer well: Barbason well; yet they are Devils additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittol, Cuckold! the Devil himself hath not such a Name. Page is an Ass, a secure Ass, he will trust his Wife; he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Fleming with my Butter, Parson Hugh, the Welchman, with my Cheese, an Irish-man with my Aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my Wife with her self: Then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be prais'd for my jealousie! Eleven o' clock the hour; I will prevent this, detect my Wife, be reveng'd on Falstaff, and laugh at Page: I will about it; better three hours too soon, than a minute too late: fie, fie, fie; Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold! [Exit.

Enter Caius, Rugby, [redacted]

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir.

Cai. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, (Sir) that Sir Hugh promis'd to meet.

Cai. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Pible well, dat he is no come: by gar, (Jack Rugby), he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew your Worship would kill him, if he came.

Cai. By gar, de herring is no dead so as me will make him, [redacted]: take your Rapier, (Jack), I vill tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence.

Cai. Villany, take your Rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here's company. [Enter Host, Shallow, Slender & Page.]

Host. 'Bless thee, bully-Doctor.

Shal. 'Save you, Mr. Doctor Caius.

Page. Now, good Mr. Doctor.

Slen. 'Give you good morrow, sir.

Cai. Vat be all you, one, two, trees, four, come for?

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foigne, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there, to see thee pass thy Puncto, thy Stock, thy Reverse, thy Distance, thy Montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? is he dead, my

Fran-

Francisco? ha, Bully? What says my Esculapius? my Galen? my heart of Elder? ha? Is he dead, bully-Stale? Is he dead?

Cai. By gar, he is de Coward-Jack-Priest of de vorld: he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castalion-king-Urinal; Hector of Greece, (my boy).

Cai. I pray you bear witness, that me have stay six or seven, two tree hours for him, and he is no-come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, (Mr. Doctor); he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions: is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have your self been a great fighter, tho now a man of peace.

Shal. Body-kins, Mr. Page, tho I now be old, and of peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one; tho we are Justices, and Doctors, and Church-men, (Mr. Page), we have some salt of our Youth in us; we are the Sons of Women, (Mr. Page).

Page. 'Tis true, Mr. Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, (Mr. Page). Mr. Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home; I am sworn of the Peace; you have shew'd your self a wise Physician, and sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient Church-man: you must go with me, Mr. Doctor.

Host. Pardon, Guest-Justice; a Mounsieur Mock-water.

Cai. Mock-water? vat is dat?

Host. Mock-water, in our English Tongue, is Valour (Bully).

Cai. By gar, then I have as much Mock-water as de English-man: scurvy-Jack-dog-Priest; by gar, me vill cut his Ears.

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, (Bully).

Cai. Clapper-de-claw? vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Cai. By gar, me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me; for by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.

Cai. Me tank you for dat.

Host. And moreover (Bully); but first, Mr. Guest, and Mr. Page, and eek Cavaliero Slender, go you through the Town to Frogmore.

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there; see what humour he is in; and I will bring the Doctor about the Fields: Will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

All. Adieu, good Mr. Doctor. [Exit Page, Shall. & Slen.

Cai. By gar, me vill kill de Priest; for he speak for a Jack-an Ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die; sheath thy impatience; throw cold Water on thy Choller; go about the Fields with me through Frogmore; I will bring thee where Mistris Anne Page is, at a Farm-house a feasting; and thou shalt woo her; said I well? Cock o' the Game;

Cai. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure 'a you de good Guest; de Earl, de Knight, de Lords, de Gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which, I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page: said I well?

Cai. By gar, 'tis good; vell said.

Host. Let us wag then.

Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. [Exeunt.

Frogmore near Windsor.

Enter Evans, Simple, [illegible]

Evan. I pray you now, good Master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name; which way have you look'd for Master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physick?

Sim. Marry sir, the Pitty-ward, the Park-ward; [illegible]: old Windsor way, and every way but the Town way.

Evan. I most fehemently desire you, you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir.

Evan. 'Pless my soul: how full of Chollars I am, and trempling of mind! I shall be glad if he have deceived me; how melancholies I am! I will knog his Urinals about his Knaves Costard, when I have good opportunities for the orke: 'Pless my soul: By shallow Rivers, to whose falls, melodious Birds sings Madrigalls; there will we make our Peds of Roses, and a thousand fragrant posies. By shallow. Mercy on me, I have a great disposition to cry. Melodious birds sing Madrigalls — When as I sat in Pabilon, and a thousand vagrant Posies. — By shallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Ev. He's welcome. By shallow Rivers, to whose falls. Heaven prosper the right! What Weapons is he?

Sim. No Weapons, sir: there comes my Master, Mr. Shallow, and another Gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Ev. Pray you give me my Gown, or else keep it in your arms.

Scene II. Enter All.

Shal. How now, Master Parson? Good morrow good Sir Hugh. keep a Gamester from the dice, and a good Student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slen. Ah sweet Anne Page!

Page. 'Save you, good Sir Hugh.

Ev. 'Pless you from his mercy-sake, all of you.

Shal. What? the Sword and the Word? Do you study them both, Mr. Parson?

Page. And youthful still, in your doublet and hose, this raw-rumatick day?

Ev. There is Reasons and Causes for it.

Page. [illegible] me to [illegible], to do a good Office, Mr. Parson.

Ev. Fery well: What is it?

Page. Yonder is a most Reverend Gentleman, who (belike) having received Wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own Gravity and Patience, that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years, and upward; I never heard a man of his Place, Gravity and Learning, so wide of his own Respect.

Ev. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; Mr. Doctor Caius, the renowned French Physician.

Ev. Got's Will, and his Passion of my heart: I had as lief you should tell me of a mess of Porredge.

Page. Why?

Ev. He has no more knowledg in Hibocrates and Galen, and he is a Knave besides; a cowardly Knave as you would desire to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page!

Scene III. Enter Caius.

Shal. It appears so by his Weapons: keep them asunder; here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay, good Mr. Parson, keep in your Weapon.

Shal. So do you, good Mr. Doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question; let them keep their Limbs whole, and hack our English.

Cai. I pray you let-a-me speak a word with your Ear; Verefore vill you not meet-a me?

Ev. Pray you use your Patience in good time.

Cai. By gar, you are de Coward, de Jack Dog, John Ape.

Ev. Pray you let us not be laughing-stocks to other mens humours; I desire you in friendship, and will one way or other make you amends; I will knog your Urinal about your knaves Cogs-comb. for missing your meetings & appointments.

× He means to say Coeur de lion.

Cai. Diable Jack Rugby, mine Hoſt de Jarteer, have I not ſtay for him, to kill him? have I not at de place I did appoint?

Ev. As I am a Chriſtians-ſoul, now look you, this is the p'ace appointed; I'll be judgment by mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Hoſt. Peace, I ſay, Gallia and Gaul, French and Welch, Soul Curer and Body-Curer.

Cai. Ay dat is very good, excellant.

Hoſt. Peace, I ſay; hear mine Hoſt of the Garter. Am I politick? am I ſubtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I loſe my Doctor? No; he gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loſe my Parſon? my Prieſt? my Sir Hugh? No, he gives me the Proverbs and the No-verbs. Give me thy hand (Celeſtial) ſo: Boys of Art, I have deceived you both: I have directed you to wrong places; your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burn'd Sack be the iſſue: come, lay their ſwords to pawn: Follow me, Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Truſt me, a mad Hoſt: follow, Gentlemen, follow.

Cai. Ha! do I perceive dat? Have you make a-de-ſot of us, ha, ha?

Evan. This is well, he has made us his vlouting-ſtog. I deſire you that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this ſame ſcall ſcurvy-cogging-companion, the Hoſt of the Garter.

Cai. By gar, with all my heart; he promiſe to bring me where is Anne Page; by gar, he deceive me too.

Evan. Well, I will ſmite his noddles; pray you follow. [Exeunt.

Miſt. Page, Robin, [redacted]

Miſt. Page, Nay, keep your way, (little Gallant); you were wont to be a Follower, but now you are a Leader: whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your Maſter's heels?

Rob. I had rather (forſooth) go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mi. Pa. O you are a flattering boy; now I ſee you'll be a Courtier. Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, Miſtreſs Page; whether go you?

M. Pa. Truly Sir, to ſee your Wife; is ſhe at home?

Ford. Ay, and as idle as ſhe may hang together for want of company; I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

M. Pa. Be ſure of that, two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty Weather-cock?

M. Pa. I cannot tell what (the dickens) his name is my husband had him of: What do you call your Knight's name, ſirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falſtaff. Ford. Sr. John Falstaff.

M. Pa. He he; I can never hit on his name; there is ſuch a league between my good man and he: Is your Wife at home indeed?

Ford. Indeed ſhe is.

M. Pa. By your leave, ſir; I am ſick till I ſee her. Exe. M. Page & Rob.

Ford. Has Page any brains? Hath he any eyes? Hath he any thinking? Sure they ſleep; he hath no uſe of them: why, this boy will carry a Letter twenty mile, as eaſie as a Cannon will ſhoot point-blank twelve ſcore; he pieces out his Wives inclination, he gives her folly motion and advantage, and now ſhe's going to my Wife, and Falſtaff's boy with her: A man may hear this ſhower ſing in the wind; and Falſtaff's boy with her! good plots; they are laid, and our revolted Wives ſhare damnation together. Well: I will take him, then torture my Wife, pluck the borrowed Veil of modeſty from the ſo ſeeming Miſt. Page, divulge Page himſelf for a ſecure and wilful Acteon, and to theſe violent proceedings all my neighbours ſhall cry aim. The Clock gives me my [redacted] aſſurance bids me ſearch; there I ſhall find Falſtaff: I ſhall be rather praiſed for this than mocked; for it is as poſitive as the Earth is firm, that Falſtaff is there: I will go. [Scene VI.

Shal. Page, &c. Well met, Mr. Ford. [To Him Enter Page &c.

Ford. Truſt me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I muſt excuſe my ſelf, Mr. Ford.

Slen. And ſo muſt I, Sir;
We have appointed to dine with Miſtris Anne,
And I would not break with her for more money
Than I'll ſpeak of.

Shal. We have linger'd about a match between Anne Page and [redacted] Couſin Slender, and this day we ſhall have our anſwer.

Slen. I hope I have your good Will, father Page.

Page. You have, Mr. Slender, I ſtand wholly for you; but my Wife, (Maſter Doctor) is for you altogether.

Cai. Ay, by gar, and de Maid is love-a-me: my nurſh-a-Quickly tell me ſo muſh.

Hoſt. What ſay you to young M. Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has Eyes of Youth, he writes Verſes, he ſpeaks Holyday, he ſmells April and May, he will carry't, he will carry't; 'tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my conſent I promiſe you: The Gentleman is of no having, he kept company with the wild Prince, and Poinz: he is of too high a Region, he knows too much; no, he ſhall not knit a knot in his Fortunes, with the finger of my ſubſtance: if he take her, let him take her ſimply; the Wealth I have waits on my conſent, and my conſent goes not that way.

Ford I beſeech you heartily, ſome of you go home with me to dinner; beſides your cheer you ſhall have ſport; I will ſhew you a Monſter. Mr. Doctor, you ſhall go; ſo ſhall you Mr. Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:
We ſhall have the freer wooing at Mr. Page's.

Cai. Go home, John Rugby, I come anon.

Hoſt. Farewell my hearts; I will to my honeſt Knight, Falſtaff, and drink Canary with him.

Ford. I think I ſhall drink in Pipe-Wine firſt with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, Gentles?

All. Have with you to ſee this Monſter. [Exeunt.

with a Basket.

Miſ. Ford. What John? what Robert!

Miſ. Page, Quickly, quickly! Is the Buck-basket——

Miſ. Ford. I warrant. What, Robin, I ſay.

Miſ. Page. Come, come, come.

Miſ. Ford. Here, ſet it down.

Miſ. Page. Give your men the charge; we muſt be brief.

M. Ford. Marry, as I told you before (John and Robert), be ready here hard-by in the Brew-houſe, and when I ſuddenly call you, come forth, and (without any pauſe or ſtaggering) take this basket on your ſhoulders; that done, trudg with it in all haſte, and carry it among the Whitſters [redacted] it in the muddy ditch, cloſe by the Thames ſide [redacted]

Mis. Page. Here comes little Robin. [Enter Robin

Mis. Ford. How now, my Eyas-Musket, what news with you?

Rob. My M. Sir John, is come in at your back door, (Mis. Ford), and requests your company.

Mis. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'le be sworn; my Master knows not of your being here, and hath threatned to put me into everlasting Liberty, if I tell you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mis. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall be a Tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. I'le go hide me.

Mis. Ford. Do so; go tell thy Master I am alone; Mistris Page, remember you your Cue. [Exit Robin.

Mis. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not act it, hiss me. Exit Mrs. Page

Mis. Ford. Go to then; we'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watry Pumpion; we'll teach him to know Turtles from Jays. [Scene VIII. Enter Fal.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly Jewel? Why, now let me die; for I have liv'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition; O this blessed hour.

Mis. Ford. O sweet Sir John!

Fal. Mistris Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate, (Mistris Ford): now shall I sin in my wish; I would thy Husband were dead, I'le speak it before the best Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

Mis. Ford. I your Lady, Sir John? Alas, I should be a pitiful Lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France shew me such another; I see how thine Eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou hast the right arched-bent of the brow, that becomes the Ship-Tire, the Tire-Valiant, or any Tire of Venetian addition[x]

Mis. Ford. A plain Kerchief, Sir John:
My brows become nothing else, nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to say so; thou would'st make an absolute Courtier, and the firm fixure of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gate, in a semicircled Farthingale. I see what thou wert; if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend: Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mis. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? Let that persuade thee There's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog, and say, thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping Haw-thorn buds, that come like women in mens apparel, and smell like Bucklers-berry in simpling-time; I cannot; but I love thee, none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mis. Ford. Do not betray me, Sir; I fear you love Mrs. Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-Gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a Lime-kiln.

Mis. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you, and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'le deserve it.

Mis. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind. Within.

Rob. Mistris Ford, Mistris Ford, here's Mistris Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me; I will ensconce me behind the Arras.

M. Ford. Pray you do so; she's a very tatling woman. What's the matter? how now? [Scene IX. Enter Mis. Page.

Mis. Page. O Mistris Ford, what have you done?
You're sham'd, y'are overthrown, y'are undone for ever.

Mis. Ford. What's the matter, good Mistris Page?

Mis. Page. O well-a-day, Mistris Ford, having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspition!

Mis. Ford. What cause of suspition!

Mis. Page. What cause of suspition? Out upon you: How am I mistook in you!

Mis. Ford. Why, (alas)! what's the matter?

Mis. Page. Your husband's coming hither, (woman), with all the Officers in Windsor, to search for a Gentleman that he says is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence, you are undone.

Mis. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

Mis. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here; but 'tis most certain your husband's coming with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your self clear, why, I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your senses to you, defend your Reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mis. Ford. What shall I do? There is a Gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not my own shame so much as his peril. I had rather than a thousand pound he were out of the house.

Mis. Page. For shame, never stand (you had rather, and you had rather); your husband's here at hand, bethink you of some conveyance; in the house you cannot hide him. Oh, how have you deceiv'd me! Look, here is a basket, if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here, and throw foul linnen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, send him by your two men to Datchet-Mead.

Mis. Ford. He's too big to go in there: What shall I do? Re-Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't, O let me see't; I'le in, I'le in; Follow your friends counsel; I'le in.

Mis. Page. What, Sir John Falstaff, are these your Letters, Knight?

Fal. I love thee, help me away; let me creep in here: I'le never—— He goes into the Basket, they cover him

Mis. Page. Help to cover your Master (boy): Call your men (Mistris Ford). You dissembling Knight.

Mis. Ford. VVhat, John, Robert, John, go take up these cloathes here, quickly. VVhere's the Cowl-staff? Look how you drumble: Carry them to the Landress in Datchet-Mead; quickly, come [Scene X. Enter Ford, Page, Caius, Evans.

Ford. Pray you come near; if I suspect without cause, VVhy then make sport at me, then let me be your jest, I deserve it. How now? VVhether bear you this?

Ser. To the Landress, forsooth.

Mis. Ford. VVhy, what have you to do whether they bear it? You were best meddle with Buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash my self of the Buck: Buck, Buck, Buck, Ay, Buck: I warrant you Buck, and of the season too, it shall appear. Exe. Serv. with the Basket

Gentlemen, I have dream'd to night, I'le tell you my dream: here, here, here be my Keys; ascend my Chambers, search, seek, find out. I'le warrant we'll unkennel the Fox. Let me stop this way first; So, now uncouple.

Page. Good Master Ford, be contented:
You wrong your self too much.

Ford. True (Master Page). Up Gentlemen, you shall see sport anon; follow me, Gentlemen.

Evans. This is ferry fantastical humours and jealousies.

Cai. By gar, 'tis no the fashion of France; it is not jealous in France. Exeunt.

Page. Nay, follow him (Gentlemen), see the issue of his search. [Manent Mis. Page & Mrs. Ford. Scene XI.

Mis. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mis. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my Husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mis.

x 'Tis probable this should be tire volant or voltant, and that both this & the Shyp-tire were names given to women's headdresses by the Venetians from whom the fine Ladies heretofore took their fashions, as the lace then most in esteem was the Point de Venise.

Miſ. Page. VVhat a taking was he in when your husband ask't who was in the basket?

Miſ. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of waſhing; ſo throwing him into the Water will do him a benefit.

Miſ. Page. Hang him, diſhoneſt Raſcal; I would all of the ſame ſtrain were in the ſame diſtreſs.

Miſ. Ford I think my husband hath ſome ſpecial ſuſpition of Falſtaff's being here! I never ſaw him ſo groſs in his jealouſie till now.

Miſ. Page. I will lay a plot to try that, and we will yet have more tricks with Falſtaff: his diſſolute Diſeaſe will ſcarce obey this Medicine.

Miſ. Ford. Shall we ſend that fooliſh Carrion, Miſ. Quickly to him, and excuſe his throwing into the Water, and give him another hope, to betray him to another puniſhment?

Miſ. Page. We'll do it; let him be ſent for to morrow by Eight a clock, to have amends. Enter All.

Ford. I cannot find him; may be the Knave bragg'd of that he could not compaſs.

Miſ. Page. Heard you that?

Miſ. Ford. You uſe me well, Maſt. Ford; do you?

Ford. Ay, Ay, I do ſo.

Miſ. Page. Heaven make you better than your thoughts.

Ford. Amen.

Miſ. Page. You do your ſelf mighty wrong (Mr. Ford).

Ford. Ay, Ay, I muſt bear it.

Ev. If there be any pody in the houſe, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the preſſes: heaven forgive my ſins!

Cai. By gar, nor I too: dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, M.r Ford, are you not aſham'd? What Spirit, what Devil ſuggeſts this imagination? I would not ha your Diſtemper in this kind, for the Wealth of VVindſor-Caſtle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, (M. Page): I ſuffer for it.

Ev. You ſuffer for a pad conſcience; your Wife is as honeſt a o'mans, as I will deſires among five thouſand, and five hundred too.

Cai. By gar, I ſee 'tis an honeſt Woman.

Ford. VVell, I promis'd you a Dinner; come, come, walk in the Park. I pray you pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this. Come Wife; come Mi. Page; I pray you pardon me: Pray heartily pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, Gentlemen; but (truſt me) we'll mock him: I do invite you to morrow morning to my houſe to Breakfaſt; after, we'll a birding together; I have a fine Hawk for the buſh. Shall it be ſo?

Ford. Any thing.

Evan. If there is one, I ſhall make two in the Company.

Cai. If there be one or two, I ſhall make-a the turd.

Ford. Pray you go, M.r Page.

Evan. I pray you now remembrance to morrow on the lowſie Knave, mine Hoſt.

Cai. Dat is good by gar, with all my heart.

Evan. A lowſie Knave, to have his gibes, and his mockeries. Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] XII.
Changes to Page's House.

Enter Fenton, Ann Page, [redacted]

Fen. I ſee I cannot get thy Father's love;
Therefore no more turn me to him, (ſweet Nan).

An. Alas! how then?

Fen. VVhy, thou muſt be thy ſelf.
He doth object I am too great of birth,
And that my ſtate being gall'd with my expence,
I ſeek to heal it only by his Wealth.
Beſides theſe, other bars he lays before me,
My Riots paſt, my wild Societies;
And tells me, 'tis a thing impoſſible
I ſhould love thee, but as a property.

An. May be he tells you true.

Fen. No, heaven ſo ſpeed me in my time to come!
Albeit I will confeſs, thy Father's Wealth
VVas the firſt motive that I woo'd thee (Anne):
Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than ſtamps in Gold, or ſums in ſealed Bags;
And 'tis the very Riches of thy ſelf
That now I aim at.

An. Gentle M.r Fenton,
Yet ſeek my Father's love, ſtill ſeek it, ſir:
If importunity and humbleſt ſuit
Cannot attain it, why then-hark you hither. [They go apart.]

Shal. Break their talk, Miſtreſs Quickly; my Kinſman ſhall ſpeak for himſelf. Scene XIII. Shal. Slen. Quick.

Slen. I'll make a ſhaft or a bolt on't: 'd'ſlid 'tis but venturing.

Shal. Be not diſmaid.

Slen. No, ſhe ſhall not diſmay me:
I care not for that, but I am afeard.

Qui. Hark ye; M.r Slender would ſpeak a word with you.

An. I come to him. This is my Father's choice.
O, what a World of vile ill-favour'd faults
Look handſome in three hundred pounds a year!

Qui. And how do's good Maſter Fenton?
Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her Coz.
O boy, thou had'ſt a Father!

Slen. I had a Father, (M.r Anne); my Uncle can tell you good jeſts of him. Pray you, Uncle, tell M.r Anne the jeſt, how my Father ſtole two Geeſe out of a Pen, good Uncle.

Shal. Miſtris Ann, my Couſin loves you.

Slen. Ay, that I do, as well as I love any Woman in Glocesterſhire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a Gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will; come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a Squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds Jointure.

Ann. Good Maſter Shallow, let him woo for himſelf.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort; ſhe calls you (Coz): I'll leave you.

An. Now, Maſter Slender.

Slen. Now, good Miſtris Anne,

An. VVhat is your Will?

Slen. My Will? Od's-heart-lings, that's a pretty jeſt indeed; I ne're made my Will yet (I thank heaven); I am not ſuch a ſickly creature, I give heaven praiſe.

Ann. I mean (M.r Slender), what would you with me?

Slen. Truly for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you; your Father and my Uncle have made motions; if it be my luck, ſo; if not, happy man be his dole! they can tell you how things go better than I can; you may ask your Father; here he comes. Scene XIV. Enter Page & Ford.

Page. Now, Maſter Slender: Love him, daughter Anne.
VVhy how now? VVhat do's Maſter Fenton here?
You wrong me, Sir, thus ſtill to haunt my houſe:
I told you, Sir, my daughter is diſpos'd of.

Fen. Nay, Maſter Page, be not impatient.

Miſ. Page. Good Maſter Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fen. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good Maſter Fenton.

Come

Come Master Shallow; Come Son Slender, in,
Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master Fenton. [Exit.
Qui. Speak to Mistress Page. Page, Shalt. Slender.
Fen. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter
In such a righteous fashion as I do,
Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners,
I must advance the colours of my love,
And not retire. Let me have your good will.
Anne. Good Mother, do not marry me to yon fool.
Mis. Page. I mean it not, I seek you a better husband.
Qui. That's my Master, Master Doctor.
Anne. Alas I had rather be set quick i'th earth,
And bowl'd to death with Turnips.
Mis. Page. Come, trouble not your self good Master Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy:
My daughter will I question how she loves you,
And as I find her, so am I affected.
Till then, farewell Sir; she must needs go in,
Her Father will be angry. [Exit Mis. Page & Anne.
Fen. Farewell gentle Mistress; farewell Nan.
Qui. This is my doing now. Nay, said I, will you cast away your child on a Fool, and a Physician?
Look on Master Fenton: this is my doing.
Fen. I thank thee; and I pray thee once to night,
Give my sweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy pains. Exit.
Qui. Now heaven send thee good fortune! a kind heart he hath; a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet, I would my master had Mistress Anne, or I would Master Slender had her: or (in sooth) I would Master Fenton had her; I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promis'd, and I'll be as good as my word, but speciously for Master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff, from my two Mistresses; what a beast am I to slack it! [Exit.

Scena [redacted] XV.
The Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Bardolph [redacted]

Fal. Bardolph, I say.
Bar. Here, Sir.
Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sack, put a toast in't. Have I liv'd to be carried in a Basket, like a barrow of butchers Offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well. if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'ne out and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a New-years gift. The rogues colted me into the river with as little remorse, as they would have drown'd a blind bitches Puppies, fifteen i'th litter; and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking: if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. I had been drown'd, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow; a death that I abhor: for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been when I had been swell'd? I should have been a Mountain of Mummy. [Enter Bar:—Now is the Sack brew'd.
Bar. Here's Mistress Quickly, Sir, to speak with you.
Fal. Come, let me pour in some Sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snowballs for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.
Bar. Come in woman. Scene XVI. Enter Quickly.
Qui. By your leave: I cry your mercy?
Give your worship good morrow.
Fal. Take away these Chalices:
Go, brew me a pottle of Sack finely.
Bard. With Eggs, Sir?
Fal. Simple of it self? I'll no Pullet-Sperm in my brewage. How now?
Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worship from Mr. Ford.
Fal. Mistress Ford? I have had Ford enough; I was thrown into the Ford; I have my belly full of Ford.
Qui. Alas the day! (good-heart), that was not her fault: she do's so take on with her men; they mistook their erection. (promise.
Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish Womans
Qui. Well, she laments, sir for it, that it would yern your heart to see it. her husband goes this morning a birding; she desires you once more to come to her, between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly; she'll make you amends, I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will visit her; tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: Let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.
Qui. I will tell her.
Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, saist thou?
Qui. Eight and nine Sir.
Fal. Well, be gone; I will not miss her.
Qui. Peace be with you Sir. Exit.
Fal. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook; he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well.
Oh, here he comes. Scene XVII. Enter Ford.
Ford. Bless you sir.
Fal. Now Master Brook, you come to know what hath past between me and Ford's wife.
Ford. That indeed (Sir John) is my business.
Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you;
I was at her house the hour she appointed me.
Ford. And sped you Sir?
Fal. very ill-favour'dly, Master Brook.
Ford. How Sir, did she change her determination?
Fal. No (Master Brook) but the peaking Cornuto her husband (Master Brook) dwelling in a continual larum of jealousie, comes in the instant of our encounter, after we had embrac'd, kiss'd protested, & (as it were) spoke the prologue of our Comedy; and at his heels, a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and (forsooth) to search his house for his wives love.
Ford. What) While you were there?
Fal. While I was there.
Ford. And did he search for you, & could not find you?
Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page, gives intelligence of Fords approach; and by her invention, and Fords wives direction, they conveyed me into a Buck-basket.
Ford. A Buck basket?
Fal. Yea, a Buck-basket; ram'd me in with foul Shirts and Smocks, Socks, foul Stockings, greasie Napkins, that (Master Brook) there was the rankest compound of villanous smell, that ever offended nostril.
Ford. And how long lay you there?
Fal Nay, you shall hear (Master Brook) what I have suffered, to bring this woman to evil, for your good. Being thus cram'd in the basket, a couple of Fords Knaves, his hinds, were call'd forth by their Mistress, to carry me in the name of foul Cloaths to Datchet-lane; they took me on their shoulders, met the jealous Knave their Master in the door, who ask'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket; I quak'd for fear, lest the Lunatick Knave would have search'd it; but Fate (ordaining he should be a Cuckold), held his hand. well, on went he for a search, and away went I for foul Cloaths; But mark the sequel (Master Brook) I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten Bell-weather; next to be compass'd like a good Bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head; And then to be stopt in, like a strong distillation, with stinking Cloaths, that fretted in their own grease: think of that, a man of my Kidney; think of that, that am as subject to heat as Butter; a man of continual dissolution, and thaw; it was a miracle to scape suffocation. And in the height of this Bath, (when I was more than half stew'd in grease, like a Dutch-dish) to be thrown into the the Thames, and cool'd glowing hot, in that ſurge like a Horſ-ſhoe; think of that, hiſſing hot; think of that, (Maſter Brook.)

Ford. In good ſadneſs Sir, I am ſorry, that for my ſake you ſuffer'd all this. My ſuit then is deſperate: You'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Maſter Brook: I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. her husband is this morning gone a birding; I have received from her another embaſſie of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, (Maſter Brook.)

Ford. 'Tis paſt eight already, Sir.

Fal Is it? I will then addreſs me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leiſure, and you ſhall know how I ſpeed; and the concluſion ſhall be crown'd with your enjoying her; adieu, you ſhall have her (Maſter Brook.) Maſter Brook, you ſhall cuckold, Ford. Exit.

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a viſion? is this a dream? do I ſleep? Maſter Ford awake; awake Maſter Ford; there's a hole made in your beſt coat, (Maſter Ford;) this 'tis to be married! this 'tis to have Linnen, and Buck-baskets! Well, I will proclaim my ſelf what I am; I will now take the Leacher; he is at at my houſe; he cannot ſcape me; 'tis impoſſible he ſhould; he cannot creep into a half penny purſe, nor into a Pepper-box. But leſt the Devil that guides him, ſhould aid him, I will ſearch impoſſible places; tho' what I am, I cannot avoid; yet to be what I would not, ſhall not make me tame: If I have horns, to make one mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn-mad. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Page's House.

Enter Miſtreſs Page, Quickly, William, [redacted]

Miſ. Page. Is he at M. Ford's, already think'ſt thou?

Qui. Sure he is by this, or will be preſently; but truly he is very couragious mad, about his throwing into the water; Miſtreſs Ford deſires you to come ſuddenly.

Miſ. Page. I'll be with her by and by; I'll but bring my young man here to School. look where his Maſter comes; 'tis a playing-day I ſee. how now Sir Hugh, no School to day? Enter Evans.

Eva. No; Maſter Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Qui. 'Bleſſing of his heart!

Miſ. Page. Sir Hugh, my Husband ſays my Son profits nothing in the world at his Book; I pray you, ask him ſome queſtions in his Accidence.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Miſ. Page. Come ſirrah; hold up your head; anſwer your Maſter, be not afraid.

Evan. William, how many Numbers is in Nouns?

Will. Two.

Qui. Truly, I thought there had been one Number more, becauſe they ſay, od's Nowns.

Evan. Peace, your tatlings. What is (Fair,) William?

Will Pulcher.

Qui. Poulcats? there are fairer things than Poulcats, ſure.

Evan. You are a very ſimplicity o'man; I pray you peace. What is (Lapis,) William?

Will. A ſtone.

Evan. And what is a Stone, (William?)

Will. A Pebble.

Evan. No; it is Lapis; I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Evan. That is a good William: what is he, (William) that does lend Articles?

Will. Articles are borrow'd of the Pronoun, and be thus declined, Singulariter nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Evan. Nominativo hig, hag, hog; pray you mark: Genitivo hujus: Well, what is your Accuſative caſe.

Will. Accuſative hinc.

Evan. I pray you have your remembrance (child) Accuſativo, hing, hang, hog.

Qui. Hang hog is Latine for Bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave you prabbles, (o'man) What is the Focative caſe (William?).

Will. O, Vocativo, O.

Evan. Remember William, Focative, is caret.

Qui. And that's a good root.

Evan. O'man, forbear.

Miſ. Page. Peace.

Evan. What is your Genitive caſe plural, (William?)

Will. Genitive caſe?

Evan. Ay.

Will. Genitive horum, harum, horum.

Qui. 'Vengeance of Ginyes caſe; fie on her! never name her (child), if ſhe be a whore.

Eva. For ſhame, o'man.

Qui. You do ill to teach the child ſuch words: he teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do faſt enough of themſelves, and to call horum; fie upon you!

Evan. O'man, art thou Lunaties? haſt thou no underſtandings for thy Caſes, and the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as fooliſh Chriſtian creatures as I would deſire.

Miſ. Page. Prythee hold thy peace.

Evan. Shew me now, (William) ſome declenſions of your Pronouns.

Will. Forſooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is Qui, quæ, quod; if you forget your Quies, your Ques, and your Quods, you muſt be preeches: Go your ways, and play, go.

M. Pa. He is a better Scholar then I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good ſprag memory. Farewell, M. Pa.

Miſ. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh.

Get you home boy. [redacted] Come we ſtay too long. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Ford's House.

Enter Falſtaffe, Miſ. Ford, [redacted]

Fal. Miſtreſs Ford, your ſorrow hath eaten up my ſufferance; I ſee you are obſequious in your love, and I profeſs requital to a hairs breadth, not only Miſtreſs Ford, in the ſimple office of love, but in all the accouſtrement, complement, and ceremony of it. but are you ſure of your husband now?

Miſ. Ford. He's a birding (ſweet ſir John.)

Miſ. Page. What hoa, goſſip Ford! what hoa! Within

Miſ. Ford. Step into th'chamber, Sir John. Enter.

Miſ. Page. How now (ſweet heart,) who's at home beſides your ſelf? Mrs Page

Miſ. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Miſ. Page. Indeed?

Miſ. Ford. No certainly; ſpeak louder.

Miſ. Page. Truly, I am ſo glad you have no body here.

Miſ. Ford. Why?

Miſ. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his old lines again; he ſo takes on yonder with my husband, ſo rails againſt all married mankind, ſo curſes all Eves daughters, of what complexion ſoever; and ſo buffets himſelf on the fore-head, crying peer-out, peer-out, that any madneſs I ever yet beheld, ſeem'd but tameneſs, civility, and patience to this his diſtemper he is in now; I am glad the fat Knight is not here.

Miſ. Ford.

Mis. Ford. Why does he talk of him?

Mis. Page. Of none but him, and swears he was carried out the last time he search'd for him, in a Basket; Protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion; But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mis. Ford. How near is he, Mistris Page?

Mis. Page. Hard by, at streets end, he will be here anon.

Mis. Ford. I am undone, the Knight is here.

Mis. Page. Why then you are utterly sham'd, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you? away with him, away with him; Better shame than murther.

Mis. Ford. Which way should he go? How should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Fal. No, I'le come no more i'th Basket; May I not go out ere he come? Scene III. Enter Fal.

Mis. Page. Alas, three of Master Fords brothers watch the door with Pistols, that none shall issue out, otherwise you might slip away ere he came: But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do? I'le creep up into the chimney.

Mis. Ford. There they always use to discharge their Birding-pieces; creep into the Kill-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mis. Ford. He will seek there, on my word: Neither Press, Coffer, Chest, Trunk, Well, Vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his Note; There is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I'le go out then.

Mis. Ford. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John, unless you go out disguis'd. How might we disguise him?

Mis. Page. Alass-the-day, I know not; there is no woman's Gown big enough for him; otherwise he might put on a Hat, a Muffler, a Kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts devise something: any extremity, rather than mischief.

Mis. Ford. My Maids Aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a Gown above.

Mis. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is; and there's her thrumb Hat, and her Muffler too: run up Sir John.

Mis. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John; Mistris Page and I will look some linnen for your head.

Mis. Page. Quick, quick, we'll come dress you straight: put on the Gown the while. Fal. Exit.

Mis. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape; he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford; he swears she's a Witch, forbad her my house, and hath threatned to beat her.

Mis. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husbands cudgell; and the Devil guide his cudgell afterwards!

Mis. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mis. Page. Ah, in good sadness is he, and talks of the Basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mis. Ford. We'll try that; for I'le appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mis. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently; let's go dress him like the Witch of Brainford.

Mis. Ford. I'le first direct my men, what they shall do with the Basket; Go up, I'le bring linnen for him straight.

Mis. Page. Hang him, dishoneſt Varlet,
We cannot misuse him enough.
We'll leave a proof by that which we will do,
Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:
We do not act, that often jest and laugh,
'Tis old, but true, still Swine eats all the draugh.

Mis. Ford. Go sirs, take the Basket again on your shoulders; your Master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, dispatch. Exe. Enter Ser. with Ba

1 Ser. Come, come, take it up.

2 Ser. Pray heaven it be not full of the Knight again.

1 Ser. I hope not, I had as lief bear so much Lead. Scene I

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, (Master Page), have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the Basket villain, somebody call my wife: Youth in a Basket! Oh you Panderly Rascals, there's a knot: a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me; Now shall the Devil be sham'd. What, Wife I say; Come, come, forth; behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching. Enter Ford. Sh Page, & Evan Page. Why, this passes Mr. Ford: you are not to go loose any longer, you must be pinnion'd.

Evans. Why, this is Lunaticks; this is mad as a mad dog.

Shal. Indeed Mr. Ford, this is not well, indeed.

Ford. So say I too, sir. Come hither Mistris Ford, Mistris Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the vertuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband: I suspect without cause, (Mistris), do I? Enter Mrs Ford

Mis. Ford. Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said brazen-face, hold it out: Come forth, sirrah. Pulls the Cloaths out of the Basket

Page. This passes.

Mis. Ford. Are you not asham'd, let the cloathes alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Evans. 'Tis unreasonable; will you take up your wifes cloathes? Come, away.

Ford. Empty the Basket I say.

Mis. Ford. Why man, why?

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one convey'd out of my house yesterday in this Basket; why may not he be there again? in my house I am sure he is; my intelligence is true, my jealousie is reasonable; pluck me out all the linnen.

Mis. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a Fleas death.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well Mr. Ford; This wrongs you.

Evan. Mr. Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart; this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, not no where else but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time; if I find not what I seek, shew no colour for my extremity; Let me for ever be your Table-sport; Let them say of me as jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow Wall-nut for his Wives Leman. Satisfie me once more, once more search with me.

Mis. Ford. What hoa (Mistris Page) come you and the old woman down; my Husband will come into the Chamber.

Ford. Old woman! what old woman's that?

Mis. Ford. VVhy, it is my Maids Aunt of Brainford.

Ford. A VVitch, a Quean, an old cozening Quean; Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, do's she? VVe are simple men, we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of Fortune telling. She works by Charms, by Spells, by th'Figure, and such dawbry as this is, beyond our Element; we know nothing. Come down you VVitch, you Hag you, come down, I say.

Mis. Ford. Nay, good sweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman. Exeunt Fal. in wom Cloath

Mis. Page. Come Mother Prat, Come give me your hand.

Ford. I'le Prat her: Out of my door you VVitch, you Hag, you Baggage, you Poulcat, you Runnion, out, out: I'le conjure you, I'le Fortune-tell you. Beats him. Exit Fal. Scen V.

Mis. Page. Are you not asham'd?
I think you have kill'd the poor woman.

* See the Note Pag: 97.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, he will do it; 'tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, Witch.

Evans. By yea, and no, I think the o'man is a Witch indeed: I like not when a o'man has a great peard; I ſpie a great peard under his Muffler.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I beſeech you follow; ſee but the iſſue of my jealouſie; If I cry out thus upon no trayl, never truſt me when I open again.

Miſ. Page. Truſt me, he beat him moſt pitifully.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, by th'Maſs that he did not; he beat him moſt unpitifully, me thought.

Miſ. Page. I'le have the cudgel hallow'd, and hung o're the Altar; it hath done meritorious ſervice.

Miſ. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of Woman-hood, and the witneſs of a good conſcience, purſue him with any further revenge?

Miſ. Page. The ſpirit of wantonneſs is ſure ſcar'd out of him; if the Devil have him not in fee-ſimple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waſte, attempt us again.

Miſ. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have ſerved him?

Miſ. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to ſcrape the figures out of your husbands brains, if they can find in their hearts, the poor unvertuous fat Knight ſhall be any further afflicted, we two will ſtill be the miniſters.

Miſ Ford. I'le warrant they'l have him publickly ſham'd, and me thinks there would be no period to the jeſt, ſhould he not be publickly ſham'd.

Miſ. Page. Come, to the Forge with it, then ſhape it: I would not have things cool. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] VI.

Changes to the Garter Inn.

Enter Hoſt and Bardolph.

Bar. Sir, the German deſires to have three of your horſes; the Duke himſelf will be to morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Hoſt. What Duke ſhould that be comes ſo ſecretly? I hear not of him in the Court: let me ſpeak with the Gentlemen; they ſpeak Engliſh?

Bar. Sir? I'le call them to you.

Hoſt. They ſhall have my horſes, but I'le make them pay, I'le ſawce them, they have had my houſe a week at command; I have turn'd away my other gueſts, they muſt come off, I'le ſawce them, come. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. VII.

Changes to Fords Houſe.

Enter Page, Ford, Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, and Evans.

Evans: 'Tis one of the beſt diſcretions of a o'man as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he ſend you both theſe Letters at an inſtant?

Miſ. Page Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me (wife), henceforth do what thou wilt; I rather will ſuſpect the Sun with cold,
Then thee with wantonneſs; [redacted] thy honor ſtand,
(In him that was of late an Heretick)
As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more.
Be not extream in ſubmiſſion, as in offence,
But let our plot go forward: Let our Wives
Yet once again (to make us publick ſport) [Omitted.
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,
Where we may take him, and diſgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they ſpoke of.

Page. How? to ſend him word they'l meet him in the Park at midnight? Fie, fie, he'l never come.

Evan. You ſay he hath been thrown into the River; and has been grievouſly peaten, as an old o'man; me thinks there ſhould be terrours in him, that he ſhould not come; Me thinks his fleſh is puniſh'd, he ſhall have no deſires.

Page. So think I too.

M. Ford. Deviſe but how you'll uſe him when he comes; And let us two deviſe to bring him thither.

M. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (ſometime a Keeper in Windſor Forreſt)
Doth all the Winter time at ſtill of midnight
Walk round about an Oak, with great ragged horns,
And there he blaſts the tree, and takes the Cattel,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and ſhakes a chain
In a moſt hideous and dreadful manner.
You have heard of ſuch a ſpirit, and well you know
The ſuperſtitious idle-headed-Eld
Receiv'd, and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many that do fear
In deep of night to walk by this Herne's Oak;
But what of this?

Miſ. Ford. Marry, this is our device,
That Falſtaffe at that Oak ſhall meet with us. *

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'l come,
And in this ſhape when you have brought him thither,
What ſhall be done with him? What is your plot?

M Page. That likewiſe have we thought upon, and thus:
Nan Page (my daughter) and my little Son,
And three or four more of their growth, we'l dreſs
Like Urchins, Ouphes and Fairies, green and white,
With rounds of waxen Tapers on their heads,
And Rattles in their hands; upon a ſudden,
As Falſtaffe, ſhe, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a Saw-pitruſh at once
With ſome diffuſed ſong: † Upon their ſight
We two, in great amazedneſs will flie:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy-like to pinch the unclean Knight;
And ask him why that hour of Fairy Revel,
In their ſo ſacred paths, he dares to tread
In ſhape prophane?

Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the ſuppoſed Fairies pinch him ſound,
And burn him with their Tapers.

M. Page. The truth being known,
We'll all preſent our ſelves; diſhorn the ſpirit,
And mock him home to Windſor.

Ford. The Children muſt
Be practis'd well to this, or they'l ne'r do't.

Evan. I will teach the children their behaviours; and I will be like a Jack-a-napes alſo, to burn the Knight with my Taber.

Ford. That will be excellent,
I'le go buy them vizards.

Miſ. Page. My Nan ſhall be the Queen of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That ſilk will I go buy, and in that time
Shall M. Slender ſteal my Nan away, [Aside
And marry her at Eaton. go, ſend to Falſtaffe ſtraight.

Ford. Nay, I'le to him again in name of Brook;
He'll tell me all his purpoſe. ſure he'l come.

Miſ. Page. Fear not you that: Go get us properties
And tricking for your Fairies.

Evans. Let us about it,

It

* We'll ſend him word to meet us in the feild. Diſguiſ'd like Herne, with huge Horns on his head † Diffuſed here means Wild, Irregular, Extravagant.

It is admirable pleaſures, and ferry honeſt knaveries.
Miſ. Page. Go Miſ. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir John, to know his mind;
I'll to the Doctor; he hath my good will,
And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.
That Slender, (though well landed) is an Ideot;
And he, my Husband beſt of all affects:
The Doctor is well monied, and his friends
Potent at Court; he, none but he ſhall have her,
Though twenty thouſand worthier come to crave her.
Exit.

Scena [illegible]. VIII

Enter Hoſt, Simple, [illegible]

Hoſt. What would'ſt thou have? (Boor) what? (thick-skin) ſpeak, breathe, diſcuſs; brief, ſhort, quick, ſnap.
Sim. Marry, ſir, I come to ſpeak with Sir John Falſtaffe from M. Slender.
Hoſt. There's his Chamber, his Houſe, his Caſtle, his Standing-bed and Truckle-bed; 'tis painted about with the ſtory of the Prodigal, freſh and new; go, knock and call; he'll ſpeak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: Knock I ſay.
Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman gone up into his Chamber; I [illegible]ld as ſtay, ſir, till ſhe come down; I come to ſpeak with her indeed.
Hoſt. Ha! a fat woman? The Knight may be robb'd: I'll call, Bully-Knight! Bully-Sir John! ſpeak from thy Lungs Military: Art thou there? It is thine Hoſt, thine Epheſian calls.
Fal. How now, mine Hoſt?
Hoſt. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the coming down of thy fat woman: Let her deſcend, (Bully) let her deſcend; my Chambers are honourable: Fie, privacy? Fie.
Fal. There was, (mine Hoſt), an old fat woman even now with me, but ſhe's gone.
Sim. Pray you ſir, was't not the wiſe woman of Brainford?
Fal. Ay, marry was it, (Muſſel-ſhell), what would you with her?
Sim. My Maſter, (Sir), my Maſter Slender ſent to her, ſeeing her go through the ſtreets, to know (Sir) whether one Nym, (Sir), that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.
Fal. I ſpake with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what ſays ſhe, I pray Sir?
Fal. Marry, ſhe ſays that the very ſame man that beguil'd Maſter Slender of his Chain, cozen'd him of it.
Sim. I would I could have ſpoken with the woman her ſelf, I had other things to have ſpoken with her too, from him.
Fal. What are they? let us know.
Hoſt. Ay come: quick.
Fal. I may not conceal them (ſir)?
Hoſt. Conceal them, or thou dy'ſt.
Sim. Why ſir, they were nothing but about Miſtris Anne Page, to know if it were my Maſters fortune to have her or no.
Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.
Sim. What Sir.
Fal. To have her, or no: go; ſay the woman told me ſo.
Sim. May I be bold to ſay ſo, ſir?
Fal. Ay ſir: like who more bold.
Sim. I thank your worſhip: I ſhall make my maſter glad with theſe tidings.
Hoſt. Thou art clarkly; thou art clarkly, (Sir John) was there a wiſe woman with thee?
Fal. Ay, that there was, (mine Hoſt) one that hath taught me more wit, than ever I learn'd before in my life; and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Scene IX.

Enter Bardolph.

Bar. Out alas, (ſir), cozenage, meer cozenage!
Hoſt. Where be my horſes? ſpeak well of them, varletto.
Bar. Run away with the cozeners; for ſo ſoon as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off from behind one of them in a ſlough of mire; and ſet ſpurs, and away; like three German-Devils, three Doctor Fauſtuſes.
Hoſt. They are gone but to meet the Duke, (villain) do not ſay they be fled; Germans are honeſt men.

Enter Evans.

Evan. Where is mine Hoſt?
Hoſt. What is the matter ſir?
Evan. Have a care of your entertainments; there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three Cozen-Jermans that has cozen'd all the Hoſts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Cole-Brook, of horſes and money: I tell you for good will, (look you), you are wiſe, and full of gibes, and vlouting-ſtocks, and 'tis not convenient you ſhould be cozened; Fare you well.
Exit.

Enter Cajus.

Cai. Ver'is mine Hoſt de Jarteer?
Hoſt. Here (Maſter Doctor) in perplexity and doubtful delemma.
Cai. I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a-me, dat you make a grand preparation for a Dude de Jamany, by my trot: der is no Duke dat the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: adieu.
Exit.
Hoſt. Hue and cry (villaine), go; aſſiſt me Knight; I am undone: fly, run: hue and cry (villaine) I am undone.
Exit.
Fal. I would all the world might be cozen'd, for I have been cozened and beaten too, if it ſhould come to the ear of the Court, how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been waſh'd and cudgel'd, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor Fiſhermens boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as creſt-faln as a dry'd Pear: I never proſper'd, ſince I forſwore my ſelf at Primero: well, if my wind were but long enough, I would repent: Now? whence come you?

Enter Quickly.

Scene X.

Qu. From the two parties, forſooth.
Fal. The Devil take one party, and his Dam the other, and ſo they ſhall be both beſtow'd, I have ſuffer'd more for their ſakes, more than the villanous inconſtancy of mans diſpoſition is able to bear.
Qui. And have not they ſuffer'd? Yes, I warrant, ſpeciouſly one of them; Miſtris Ford, (good heart), is beaten black and blue, that you cannot ſee a white ſpot about her.
Fal. What tell'ſt thou me of black and blue? I was beaten my ſelf into all the colours of the Rain-bow; and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Brainford; but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old Woman, deliver'd me, the Knave Conſtable had ſet me ith' Stocks, ith' common Stocks for a Witch.
Qui. Sir, let me ſpeak with you in your Chamber, you ſhall hear how things go, and I warrant, to your content: here is a letter will ſay ſomewhat: (good hearts), what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you do's not ſerve heaven well, that you are ſo croſs'd.
Fal. Come up into my Chamber.
Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] XI

Enter Fenton, Hoſt.

Hoſt. Maſter Fenton, talk not to me, my mind is heavy; I will give over all.

Fen. Yet hear me ſpeak; aſſiſt me in my purpoſe,
And (as I am a Gentleman) I'le give thee
A hundred pound in gold, more than your loſs.

Hoſt. I will hear you, (Maſter Fenton) and I will (at the leaſt), keep your counſel.

Fen. From time to time, I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page,
Who, mutually, hath anſwer'd my affection,
(So far forth, as her ſelf might be her chuſer)
Even to my wiſh; I have a letter from her
Of ſuch contents, as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof, ſo larded with my matter,
That neither ſingly can be manifeſted
Without the ſhew of both: fat Sir John Falſtaffe
Hath a great Scene; the image of the jeſt
I'le ſhew you here at large. (hark, good mine Hoſt;)
To night at Hernes Oak, juſt 'twixt twelve and one,
Muſt my ſweet Nan preſent the Fairie Queen;
The purpoſe why, is here? in which diſguiſe
While other jeſts are ſomething rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to ſlip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eaton —
Immediately to marry; She hath conſented. Now Sir,
Her mother, (even ſtrong againſt that match,
And firm for Doctor Caius), hath appointed
That he ſhall likewiſe ſhuffle her away,
While other ſports are tasking of their minds,
And at the Deanry, where a Prieſt attends,
Straight marry her; to this her mothers plot
She, (ſeemingly obedient), likewiſe hath
Made promiſe to the Doctor. Now thus, it reſts;
Her father means ſhe ſhall be all in white,
And in that [redacted], when Slender ſees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She ſhall go with him. her Mother hath intended,
(The better to devote her to the Doctor,
For they muſt all be maſk'd and vizarded)
That quaint in green, ſhe ſhall be looſe enrob'd,
With Ribands-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Doctor ſpies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given conſent to go with him.

Hoſt. Which means ſhe to deceive? Father, or Mother?

Fen. Both, (my good Hoſt), to go along with me;
And here it reſts, that you'll procure the Vicar
To ſtay for me at Church, 'twixt twelve and one,
And in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Hoſt. Well, husband your device; I'le to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you ſhall not lack a Prieſt.

Fen. So ſhall I evermore be bound to thee;
Beſide, I'le make a preſent recompence. [Exeunt.

Scene XII

[redacted]

Enter Falſtaffe, Quickly, and Ford.

Fal. Prithee, no more pratling; go, I'le hold, this is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers; Away, go, they ſay there is Divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death; away.

Qui. I'le provide you a chain, and I'le do what I can to get you a pair of horns. Exit Mrs Quickly.

Fal. Away, I ſay, time wears; hold up your head and mince. How now M. Brook? Maſter Brook, the matter will be known to night, or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Hernes-Oak, and you ſhall ſee wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yeſterday, (Sir), as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, (Maſter Brook), as you ſee, like a poor-old-man; But I came from her, (Maſter Brook), like a poor-old-woman, that [redacted] Knave, (Ford her husband), hath the fineſt mad [redacted] jealouſie in him, (Maſter Brook), that ever govern'd Frenzie. I will tell you, he beat me grievouſly, in the ſhape of a woman; (for in the ſhape of a man, (Maſter Brook), I fear not Goliah with a Weavers beam; (becauſe I know alſo, life is a Shuttle); I am in haſte; go along with me, I'le tell you all, (Maſter Brook). ſince I pluckt Geeſe, played truant, and whipt top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow me I'le tell you ſtrange things of this Knave Ford, on whom to night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow; ſtrange things in hand, (Maſter Brook), follow. [Exeunt.

Act V
Scena [redacted] I
Windſor Park.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch i'th Caſtle-ditch; till we ſee the light of our Fairies, Remember ſon Slender, my daughter.

Slen. Ay forſooth, I have ſpoke with her, and we have a nay-word how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; ſhe cryes Budget, and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your Mum, or her-Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath ſtruck ten a'clock.

Page. The night is dark, Light and Spirits will become it well. Heaven proſper our ſport. No man means evil but the Devil, and we ſhall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. II.

Enter Miſt. Page, Miſt. Ford, Caius.

Miſ. Page. Mr. Doctor, my daughter is in green; when you ſee your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanry, and diſpatch it quickly; go before into the Park; we two muſt go together.

Cai. I know vat I have to do; adieu. [Exit.

Miſ. Page. Fare you well, (ſir); my husband will not rejoyce ſo much at the abuſe of Falſtaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, than a great deal of heart-break.

Miſ. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch Devil Herne?

Miſ. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oak, with obſcur'd Lights; which at the very inſtant of Falſtaffs, and our meeting, they will at once diſplay to the night.

Miſ.

Mis. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mis. Page. If he be not amaz'd, he will be mock'd; If he be amaz'd, he will be mock'd.

Mis. Ford. We'll betray him, finely.

Mis. Page. Against such Lewdsters, and their Lechery, Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mis. Ford. The hour draws on; to the Oak, to the Oak. [Exeunt.

[redacted]

Enter Evans and Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, Fairies; Come, and remember your parts: be pold, (I pray you), follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-'ords: do as I bid you: come, come; trib, trib. [Exeunt.

[redacted] III.

with a Buck's head on.

Enter Falstaff [redacted]

Fal. The Windsor Bell hath struck twelve, the Minute draws on; Now the hot-bloodied-god assist me! Remember, Jove, thou wast a Bull for thy Europa; Love set on thy horns. O powerful Love! that in some respects makes a Beast a Man; in some other a Man, a Beast. You were also, (Jupiter), a Swan, for the love of Leda: O omnipotent Love! how near the God drew to the complexion of a Goose! a fault done first, in the form of a Beast, (O Jove, a beastly fault;) and then another fault, in the semblance of a Fowl; think on't (Jove), a foul fault. When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor Stag, and the fattest (I think), i'th the Forrest. Send me a cool rut-time (Jove), or who can blame me to piss my Tallow? Who comes here? my Doe? Enter Mrs Ford & Mrs Page.

M. Ford. Sir John? Art thou there (my Deer?) My male-Deer?

Fal. My Doe with the black Scut? Let the skie rain Potatoes, let it thunder, to the tune of Green sleeves, hail-kissing Comfits, and snow Eringoes; Let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here.

M. Ford. Mistris Page is come with me, (sweet heart.),

Fal. Divide me like a Brib'd Buck, each a Haunch; I will keep my sides to my self, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of Conscience, he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome. Noise within

M. Page. Alas! what noise?

M. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

M. Ford. M. Page. Away, away. The Women run Out.

Fal. I think the Devil will not have me damn'd, Least the Oyl that's in me should set hell on fire; He would never else cross me thus. Scene IV.

Sr Hugh drest like a Satyr. Enter Fairies. with Tapers

Qui. Fairies, black, gray, green, and white, You Moon-shine Revellers, and shades of night, You Orphan heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office, and your quality. Crier Hob-goblin, make the Fairy O yes.

Ev. [redacted]. Elves, list your names; Silence you airy toys. To be spoken with a Welch accent.

Cricket, to Windsor Chimneys shalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and Hearths unswept, There pinch the Maids as blue as Bilbery, Our radiant Queen hates Sluts and Sluttery.

Fal. They are Fairies, he that speaks to them shall die. I'll wink and couch; No man their works must eye. Lays down on his face

Ev. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a Maid That ere she sleep has thrice her prayers said, Rein up the Organs of her fantasie, Sleep she as sound as careless infancy, But those that sleep and think not on their sins, Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides and shins.

Qui. About, about; Search Windsor Castle, (Elves), within, and out. Strew good luck, (Ouphes), on every sacred room, That it may stand till the perpetual doom, In state as wholesom, as in state 'tis fit, Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it. The several Chairs of Order, look you scour, With juice of Balm; and every precious flowr, Each fair Instalment, Coat and sev'ral Crest, With loyal Blazon evermore be blest! And nightly-meadow-Fairies, look you sing, Like to the Garter-Compass, in a Ring; Th'expressure that it bears; Green let it be, More fertile-fresh then all the field to see; And, Hony Soit Qui Mal-y-Pense, write, In Emrold-tufts, Flowers, purple, blue, and white, Like Saphire-pearl, and rich Embroiderie, Buckled below fair Knight-hoods bending knee; Fairies use Flowers for their Characterie. Away, disperse; But till 'tis one a clock, Our dance of custom round about the Oak Of Herne the Hunter, let us not forget.

Ev. Pray you lock hand in hand, your selves in order set: And twenty Glow-worms shall our Lant-horns be To guide our Measure round about the tree. But stay, I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welch Fairie, Lest he transform me to a piece of Cheese!

Ev. [redacted] Vile worm, thou wast ore-look'd even in thy birth.

Qui. With tryal-fire touch me his finger end; If he be chaste, the flame will back descend And turn him to no pain; but if he start, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Ev. [redacted] A tryal, come. They burn & pinch him.

Evans. Come, will this wood take fire?

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Qui. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire; About him (Fairies) sing a scornful Rime, And as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

The Song.

Fie on sinful phantasie: Fie on Lust and Luxury:
Lust is but a bloody fire, kindled with unchast desire,
Fed in heart, whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him (Fairies) mutually; pinch him for his Villany.
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till Candles, and Star-light, and Moon-shine be out.

Scene V. He offers to run out.

Page. Nay do not fly, I think I have watcht you now; Will none but Herne the Hunter serve your turn?

M. Page. I pray you, come, hold up the jest no higher. Now, (good Sir John), how like you Windsor Wives? See you these, husbands? Do not these fair Oaks-Portraying Become the Forrest better then the Town? to the Horns.

Ford. Now Sir, who's a Cuckold now?

Ma. Brook, Falstaff's a Knave, a Cuckoldly Knave, Here are his horns Master Brook; And Master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's, but his buck-basket, his Cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Mr. Brook, his horses are arrested for it, Mr. Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my Love again, but I will always count you my Deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an Ass.

Ford. Ay and an Ox too: both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not Fairies:
I was three or four times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the suddain surprize of my powers, drove the grossness of the foppery into a receiv'd belief, in despight of the teeth of all rime and reason, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill imployment.

Evan. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got, and leave your desires, and Fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said, Fairy Hugh.

Evan. And leave you your jealouzies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the Sun and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goat too? Shall I have a Coxcomb of Frize? 'Tis time I were choak'd with a piece of toasted Cheese.

Evans. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and Putter? Have I liv'd to stand at the taunt of one that makes Fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of Lust and late-walking through the Realm.

Mis. Page. Why Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust vertue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given our selves without scruple to hell, that ever the Devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a Hodge-pudding? A bag of Flax?

Mis. Page. A puft man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job.

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Evan. And given to Fornications, and to Taverns, and Sack, and Wine, and Metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings, and staring, Pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you have the start of me, I am dejected: I am not able to answer the Welch Flannel; Ignorance it self is a Plummet ore me; use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, wee'll bring you to Windsor to one Mr. Brooke, that you have cozen'd of money, to whom you should have been a Pander: over and above that you have suffer'd, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful Knight, thou shalt eat a Posset to night at my house, where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her Mr. Slender hath married her daughter.

Mis. Page. Doctors doubt that;
If Anne Page be my daughter, she is, (by this) Doctor Caius's wife.

Scene VI.

Enter Slender.

Slen. Whoa hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Page. Son? How now? How now son,
Have you dispatch'd?

Slen. Dispatch'd? I'll make the best in Glostershire know on't; would I were hang'd la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Mistris Anne Page, and shee's a great lubberly Boy. If it had not been ith' Church, I would have swing'd him, or he should have swing'd me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a Post-masters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a B[redacted] married to him, (for all he was in womans apparel), I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly,
Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter
By her garments? White

Slen. I went to her in [redacted], and cry'd Mum, and she cry'd Budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Post-masters Boy.

Mist. Page. Good George be not angry: I knew of your purpose, turn'd my daughter into [redacted], and indeed she is now with the Doctor at the Deanry, and there married.

Enter Caius. Scene VII

Caj. Ver is Mistris [redacted]m cozened, I ha married one Garsoon, a Boy, one pesant, by gar. A Boy; it is not Anne Page by gar I am cozened.

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me, here comes M. Fenton.
How now M. Fenton? Enter Fenton & Anne Page.

An. Pardon good father; good my mother pardon.

Page. Now Mistris,
How chance you went not with M. Slender?

Mis. Page. Why went you not with Mr. Doctor, Maid?

Fen. You do amaze her, hear the truth of it,
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love:
The truth is, she and I, (long since contracted),
Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us.
Th' offence is holy that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft,
Of disobedience, or unduteous title;
Since therein she doth evitate and shun
A thousand irreligious cursed hours
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedy:
In Love, the heavens themselves do guide the state;
Money buys Lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a special stand to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc'd.

A PALACE.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Scalus.

Esca. My Lord.

Duke. Of government, the properties to unfold
Would seem in me t'affect speech and discourse;
Since I am not to know, that your own Science
Exceeds (in that) the lists of all advice
My strength can give you: Then no more remains,
But that, to your sufficiency, (as your worth is able,
And let them work. The nature of our people,
Our Cities institutions, and the Terms
For Common Justice, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and practise hath enriched any
That we remember. There is our Commission,
From which, we would not have you warp; call hither,
I say, bid come before us Angelo: To the Attendants.
What figure of us think you, he will bear?
For you must know, we have with special soul
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, drest him with our love;
And given his Deputation all the Organs
Of our own power: what think you of it?

Esc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergo such ample grace and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Scene II

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your Graces pleasure.

Duke Angelo:
There is a kind of Character in thy life,
That to th'observer, doth thy history
Fully unfold: Thy self and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thy self upon thy vertues, them on thee:
Heaven doth with us, as we with Torches do,
Not light them for themselves: For if our vertues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not: Spirits are not finely touch'd,
But to fine issues; nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thrifty goddess, she determines
Her self the glory of a creditor,
Both thanks and use, but I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise;
Hold therefore Angelo: Giving him his Commission.
In our remove, be thou at full, our self;
Mortality and Mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart: Old Escalus,
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord,
Let there be some more test made of my metle,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stampt upon it.

Duke. No more evasion;
We have with a leaven'd and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours;
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers it self, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of needful value. We shall write to you,
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with us, and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well.
To th'hopeful execution do I leave you,
Of your Commission.

Ang. Yet give leave, (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duk. My haste may not admit it;
Nor need you, (on mine honour), have to do
With any scruple; your scope is as mine own,
So to inforce, or qualifie the Laws,
As to your soul seems good: Give me your hand;
I'll privily away. I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and aves vehement:
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes.

Esc. Lead forth and bring you back in happiness.

Duke. I thank you, fare you well. Exit.

Esc. I shall desire you, Sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me: Let us with-draw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have
Touching that point.

Esc. I'll wait upon your honour. Exeunt.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my Love again, but I will always count you my Deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an Aſs.

Ford. Ay and an Ox too: both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And theſe are not Fairies: I was three or four times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltineſs of my mind, the ſuddain ſurprize of my powers, drove the groſsneſs of the foppery into a receiv'd belief, in deſpight of the teeth of all rime and reaſon, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill imployment.

Evan. Sir John Falſtaffe, ſerve Got, and leave your deſires, and Fairies will not pinſe you.

Ford. Well ſaid, Fairy Hugh.

Evan. And leave you your jealouzies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never miſtruſt my wife again, till thou art able to wooe her in good Engliſh.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the Sun and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent ſo groſs ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goat too? Shall I have a Coxcombe of Frize? 'Tis time I were choak'd with a piece of toaſted Cheeſe.

Evans. Seeſe is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seeſe and Putter? Have I liv'd to ſtand at the taunt of one that makes Fritters of Engliſh? This is enough to be the decay of Luſt and late-walking through the Realm.

Miſ. Page. Why Sir John, do you think, though we would have thruſt vertue out of our hearts by the head and ſhoulders, and have given our ſelves without ſcruple to hell, that ever the Devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a Hodge-pudding? A bag of Flax?

Miſ. Page. A puft man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as ſlanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job.

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Evan. And given to Fornications, and to Taverns, and Sack, and Wine, and Metheglins, and to drinkings, and ſwearings, and ſtarings? Pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you have the ſtart of me, I am dejected: I am not able to anſwer the Welch Flannel; Ignorance it ſelf is a Plummet ore me; uſe me as you will.

Ford. Marry, ſir, wee'l bring you to Windſor to one Mr. Brooke, that you have cozen'd of money, to whom you ſhould have been a Pander: over and above that you have ſuffer'd, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful Knight, thou ſhalt eat a Poſſet to night at my houſe, where I will deſire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her Mr. Slender hath married her daughter.

Miſ. Page. Doctors doubt that; If Anne Page be my daughter, ſhe is, (by this) Doctor Caius's wife.

Scene VI.

Enter Slender.

Slen. Whoa hoe! hoe! Father Page.

Page. Son? How now? How now ſon, Have you diſpatch'd?

Slen. Diſpatch'd? I'le make the beſt in Gloſterſhire know on't; would I were hang'd la, elſe.

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Miſtris Anne Page, and ſhee's a great lubberly Boy. If it had not been ith' Church, I would have ſwing'd him, or he ſhould have ſwing'd me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never ſtir, and 'tis a Poſt-maſters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think ſo, when I took a Boy for a Girl. He is married to him, (for all he was in womans apparel), I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you ſhould know my daughter By her garments? White

Slen. I went to her in [redacted], and cry'd Mum, and ſhe cry'd Budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Poſt-maſters Boy.

Miſt. Page. Good George be not angry: I knew of your purpoſe, turn'd my daughter into [redacted], and indeed ſhe is now with the Doctor at the Deanry, and there married.

the thanksgiving after meat, do relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any Souldier dislike it.

Luc. I believe thee: for I think thou never was't where Grace was said.

2 Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What? in meeter?

Luc. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any Religion.

Luc. Ay, why not? Grace, is Grace, despight of all controversie: as for example; Thou thy self art a wicked villain, despight of all Grace.

2 Gent. Well: there went but a pair of sheers between us.

Luc. I grant; as there may between the Lists and the Velvet. Thou art the List.

2 Gent. And thou the Velvet; thou art good Velvet; thou'rt a three pil'd-piece, I warrant thee: I had as lief be a List of an English Kersey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Luc. I think thou dost; and indeed with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but whilst I live, for get to drink after thee.

2 Gent. I think I have done my self wrong, have I not?

1 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou are tainted, or free.

Scene IV. Enter Bawd. coming at a distance.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I have purchas'd as many diseases under her Roof,

As come to ——

2 Gent. To what I pray?

1 Gent. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand Dollours a year.

1 Gent. Ay and more.

Luc. A French Crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error, I am sound.

Luc. Nay, not, (as one would say), healthy; but so sound, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impiety has made a feast of thee.

1 Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Sciatica? To the Bawd.

Bawd. Well, well; There's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

2 Gent. Who's that I prithee?

Bawd. Marry sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1 Gent. Claudio to prison? 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis so; I saw him arrested; saw him carried away: and which is more, within these three days his head to be chopt off.

Luc. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it; and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

Luc. Believe me this may be; he promised to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gent. But most of all agreeing with the Proclamation.

Luc. Away, let's go learn the truth of it. Exeunt.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk. How now? what's the news with you?

Scene V. Enter clown.

Clow. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well; what has he done?

Clow. A woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Clow. Groping for Trouts in a peculiar River.

Bawd. What? is there a Maid with child by him?

Clow. No; but there's a woman with Maid by him. you have not heard of the Proclamation, have you?

Bawd. What Proclamation, man?

Clow. All houses in the Suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down.

Bawd. And what shall become of those in the City?

Clow. They shall stand for seed; they had gone down too, but that a wise Burger put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the Suburbs be pull'd down?

Clown. To the ground, Mistris.

Bawd. Why, here's a change indeed in the Commonwealth; what shall become of me?

Clow. Come: fear not you; good Counsellors lack no Clients; though you change your place, you need not change your Trade: I'll be your Tapster still, courage, there will be pity taken on you; you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Bawd. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? let's withdraw.

Clow. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Provost to prison; and there's Madam Juliet. Exeunt.

Scæna VI.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, Officers, Lucio, and two Gentlemen.

Cla. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to th'world? Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in evil disposition,
But from Angelo by special charge.

Clau. Thus can the demi-god (Authority)
Make us pay down, for our offence, by weight;
The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will;
On whom it will not, (so); yet still 'tis just.

Luc. Why, how now Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Clau. From too-much liberty, (my Lucio), liberty;
As surfeit is the father of much fast,
So every scope by the immoderate use
Turns to restraint: our Natures do pursue
(Like Rats that ravin down their proper Bane,)
A thirsty evil, and when we drink, we die.

Luc. If I could speak so wisely, under an arrest, I would send for certain of my Creditors; and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedome, as the mortality of imprisonment: what's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What (but to speak of) would offend again.

Luc. What is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Letchery?

Cla. Call it so.

Pro. Away, sir, you must go.

Cla. One word, good friend: Lucio, a word with you.

Luc. A hundred;
If they'l do you any good: Is Letchery so look'd after?

Cla. Thus stands it with me; upon a true contract
I got possession of Julietta's bed,
You know the Lady, she is fast my wife,
Save that we do the denunciation lack
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Only for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Love
Till Time had made them for us. But it chances,
The stealth of our most mutual entertainment,
With Character too gross, is writ in Juliet.

Luc. With Child, perhaps?

Cla. Unhappily, even so.
And the new Deputy now for the Duke,

Whether

* A Quibble intended between Dollars & Dolours.
† Alluding to the Venereal Scab upon the Head called Corona Veneris.

Whether it be the fault and glimpſe of newneſs,
Or whether that the body publick be
A horſe whereon the Governor doth ride,
Who newly in the ſeat, that it may know
He can command; lets it ſtrait feel the ſpur;
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up,
I ſtagger in: But this new Governour
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties
Which have (like unſcowr'd Armor) hung by th' wall
So long, that nineteen Zodiacks have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and for a name
Now puts the drowſie and neglected Act
Freſhly on me; 'tis ſurely for a name.

Luc. I warrant, it is: and thy head ſtands ſo tickle on thy ſhoulders, that a Milk-maid, if ſhe be in love, may ſigh it off. Send after the Duke, and appeal to him.

Cla. I have done ſo, but he's not to be found.
I prethee (Lucio,) do me this kind ſervice:
This day, my ſiſter ſhould the Cloyſter enter,
And there receive her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my ſtate,
Implore her in my voice, that ſhe make friends
To the ſtrict Deputy; bid her ſelf aſſay him,
I have great hope in that; for in her youth
There is a prone and ſpeechleſs Dialect,
Such as moovers: beſide ſhe hath proſperous Art
When ſhe will play with reaſon, and diſcourſe,
And well ſhe can perſwade.

Luc. I pray ſhe may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which elſe would ſtand upon grievous impoſition; as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be ſorry ſhould be thus fooliſhly loſt, at a game of Tick-tack. I'll to her ſtrait.

Cla. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Luc. Within two hours.

Cla. Come, Officer, away. Exeunt.

Scena VII.
A Monaſtery.

Enter Duke, and Frier Thomas.

Duke. No; holy Father, throw away that thought,
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a compleat boſom: why, I deſire thee
To give me ſecret harbour, hath a purpoſe
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace ſpeak of it?

Duke. My holy ſir, none better knows than you
How I have ever loved the life remov'd,
And held in idle price to haunt aſſemblies,
Where youth, and coſt, and witleſs bravery, keeps.
I have delivered to Lord Angelo
(A man of ſtricture and firm abſtinence)
My abſolute power, and place in Vienna,
And he ſuppoſes me travell'd to Poland;
(For ſo I have ſtrow'd it in the common ear),
And ſo it is receiv'd: Now, (pious ſir)
You will demand of me, why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, My Lord.

Duke. We have ſtrict Statutes, and moſt biting Laws,
(The needful bits and curbs for head-ſtrong ſteeds)
Which for this fourteen years, we have let ſlip.
Even like an ore-grown Lyon in a Cave,
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond Fathers;
Having bound up the threatning twigs of Birch,
Only to ſtick it in their childrens ſight,
For terror, not to uſe; in time the rod
More mock'd than fear'd: ſo our Decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themſelves are dead;
And liberty plucks juſtice by the noſe;
The Baby beats the Nurſe, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It reſted in your Grace
To unlooſe this tied-up Juſtice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadful would have ſeem'd
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people ſcope,
'Twould be my tyranny to ſtrike and gall them,
For what I bid them do: For we bid this be done
When evil deeds have their permiſſive paſs,
And not the puniſhment. therefore (my father),
I have on Angelo impos'd the office;
Who may in th'ambuſh of my name ſtrike home,
And yet, my nature never in the fight
To do in ſlander: and to behold his ſway
I will, as 'twere a brother of your Order,
Viſit both Prince and people; Therefore I prethee
Supply me with the habit, and inſtruct me
How I may formally in perſon bear
Like a true Frier: More reaſons for this action
At your more leiſure, ſhall I render you;
Only this one: Lord Angelo is preciſe,
Stands at a guard with envy: ſcarce confeſſes
That his blood flows, or that his appetite
Is more to bread than ſtone: hence ſhall we ſee
If power change purpoſe, what our Seemers be. Exeunt.

Scena VIII.
A Nunnery.

Enter Iſabell, and Franciſca a Nun.

Iſa. And have you Nuns no farther priviledges?

Nun. Are not theſe large enough?

Iſa. Yes truly; I ſpeak not as deſiring more,
But rather wiſhing a more ſtrict reſtraint
Upon the Siſterhood, the Votariſts of Saint Clare.

Lucio within.

Luc. Hoa! peace be in this place.

Iſa. Who's that which calls?

Nun. It is a mans voice; gentle Iſabella,
Turn you the key, and know his buſineſs of him;
You may; I may not; you are yet unſworn:
When you have vow'd, you muſt not ſpeak with men,
But in the preſence of the Prioreſſe;
Then if you ſpeak, you muſt not ſhew your face,
Or if you ſhew your face, you muſt not ſpeak.
He calls again; I pray you anſwer him. Exit Fran.

Iſa. Peace and proſperity: who is't that calls? Enter Luc.

Luc. Hail Virgin, (if you be) as thoſe cheek-Roſes
Proclaim you are no leſs; can you ſo ſtead me,
As bring me to the ſight of Iſabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair Siſter
To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Iſa. Why her unhappy brother? Let me ask,
The rather, for I now muſt make you know
I am that Iſabella, and his Siſter.

Luc. Gentle and fair, your brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you; he's in priſon.

Iſa. Wo me, for what?

Luc. For that, which if my ſelf might be his Judge,
He ſhould receive his puniſhment in thanks;
He hath got his friend with Child.

Iſa. Sir, make me not your ſtory.

Luc. 'Tis true; I would not, tho 'tis my familiar ſin,
With Maids to ſeem the Lapwing, and to jeſt
Tongue, far from heart: play with all Virgins ſo;
I hold you as a thing en-skied and ſainted,

× The Lapwings fly with ſeeming fright & anxiety far from their Nests to deceive thoſe who ſeek their Young.

By your renouncement an immortal spirit,
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a Saint.
Isa. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Luc. Do not believe it. Fewness, and truth, 'tis thus;
Your brother and his lover have embrac'd;
As those that feed grow full, as blossoming Time
That from the seedness, the bare fallow brings
To teeming foyson; even so her plenteous womb
Expresseth his full Tilth and Husbandry.
Isa. Some one with child by him? my Cosen Juliet?
Luc. Is she your Cosen?
Isa. Adoptedly, as school-maids change their names
By vain, tho apt affection.
Luc. She it is.
Isa. Let him marry her.
Luc. This is the point.
The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many Gentlemen, (my self being one),
In hand, and hope of action; but we do learn,
By those that know the very Nerves of State,
His giving out, were of an infinite distance
From his true meant design upon his place,
(And with full line of his authority,)
Governs Lord Angelo; A man whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one, who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense;
But doth rebate, and blunt his natural edge,
With profits of the mind; Study, and fast.
He (to give fear to use, and liberty,
Which have for long run-by the hideous Law,
As Mice by Lions,) hath pickt out an act,
Under whose heavy sense, your brothers life
Falls into forfeit; he arrests him on it,
And follows close the rigor of the Statute,
To make him an example; all hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace, by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo; And that's my pith of business
'Twixt you, and your poor brother.
Isa. Doth he so,
Seek his life?
Luc. Has censured him already,
And as I hear, the Provost hath a warrant
For's Execution.
Isa. Alas! what poor
Abilities in me, to do him good?
Luc. Assay the power you have.
Isa. My power? alas, I doubt.
Luc. Our doubts are traytors
And makes us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt. Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when Maidens sue
Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions, are as truly theirs,
As they themselves would owe them.
Isa. I'll see what I can do.
Luc. But speedily.
Isa. I will about it strait;
No longer staying, but to give the Mother
Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you;
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.
Luc. I take my leave of you.
Isa. Good sir, adieu. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

The Palace.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, and servants, Justice.

Ang. We must not make a scar-crow of the Law,
Setting it up to fear the Birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custome make it
Their Perch, and not their terror.
Esc. Ay, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little,
Than fall, and bruise to death. alas, this Gentleman
Whom I would save, had a most noble father,
Let but your honour know,
(Whom I believe to be most strait in vertue,)
That in the working of your own affections,
Had time co-heard with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of our blood,
Could have attain'd th'effect of your own purpose,
Whether you had sometime in your life
Err'd in this point, which now you censure him,
And pull'd the Law upon you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, (Escalus)
Another thing to fall. I not deny
The Jury passing on the prisoners life
May in the sworn-twelve, have a thief, or two,
Guiltier than him they try; what's open made to Justice,
That Justice seizes, What knows the Laws
That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant,
The Jewel that we find, we stoop and take't,
Because we see it; but what we do not see,
We tread upon, and never think of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own Judgment pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Enter Provost.

Esc. Be it as your wisdom will.
Ang. Where is the Provost?
Pro. Here if it like your Honour.
Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confessor, let him be prepar'd,
For that's the utmost of his Pilgrimage. Exit Pro.
Esc. Well; heaven forgive him! and forgive us all!
Some rise by sin, and some by vertue fall:
Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Scene II.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officers.

Elb. Come, bring them away; if these be good people in a Common-weale, that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law; bring them away.
Ang. How now sir, what's your name? And what's the matter?
Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor Dukes Constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lean upon Justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour, two notorious Benefactors.
Ang. Benefactors? Well: What Benefactors are they? Are they not Malefactors?
Elb. If it please your Honour, I know not well what they are; But precise villains they are, that I am sure of, and void of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.
Esc. This comes off well; here's a wise Officer.
Ang. Go to: What quality are you of? Elbow is your name?
Why do'st thou not speak, Elbow?
Clo. He cannot sir; he's out at Elbow.
Ang. What are you sir?
Elb. He, sir, a Tapster sir; parcel Bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, sir was (as they say), pluckt down in the Suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house; which, I think is a very ill house too.
Esc. How know you that?
Elb. My wife, Sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour.

Esc. How

Scene III.

Esc. How? thy wife.

Elb. Ay, Sir; whom I thank heaven is an honest woman.

Esca. Do'st thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest my self also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a Bawds house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Esca. How do'st thou know that, Constable?

Elb. Marry sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Esc. By the womans means.

Elb. Ay sir, by Mistris Over-don's means; but as she spit in his face, so she defy'd him.

Clo. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these Varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Esc. Do you hear how he misplaces?

Clo. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing, (saving your honours reverence) for stew'd Prewns; we had but two in the house, which at that very instant time stood, as it were in a fruit dish, (a dish of some three pence; your honours have seen such dishes) they are not China-dishes, but very good dishes.

Esc. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, sir.

Clo. No indeed sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point; as I say, this Mistris Elbow, being (as I say) with child, and being great bellied, and longing (as I said) for prewns: and having no more in the dish (as I said), Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, (as I said), and (as I say), paying for them very honestly; for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you three pence again.

Fro. No indeed.

Clo. Very well; you being then (if you be remembred) cracking the stones of the foresaid Prewns.

Fro. Ay, so I did indeed.

Clo. Why, very well; I telling you then, (if you be remembred,) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you. Fro. All this is true.

Clo. Why, very well then.

Esc. Come, you are a tedious fool; to the purpose; what was done to Elbows wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Esc. No sir, nor I mean it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your Honours leave; And I beseech you, look into Master Froth here, sir, a man of four-score pound a year; whose Father died at Hallowmas. Was't not at Hallowmas Master Froth?

Fro. All-hallond-Eve.

Clo. Why very well; I hope here be truths. he sir, sitting (as I say) in a lower Chair, Sir, 'twas in the bunch of Grapes, where indeed you have a delight to sit, have you not?

Fro. I have so, because it is an open room, and good for Winter.

Clo. Why very well then; I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia,
When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave,
And leave you to the hearing of the cause,
Hoping you'l find good cause to whip them all. Exit Ang.

Scene III.

Esc. I think no less. good morrow to your Lordship. Now sir, come on: What was done to Elbows wife, once more?

Clo. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Esc. Well sir, what did this Gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you sir, look in this Gentlemans face, good Master Froth look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose; doth your honour mark his face?

Esc. Ay sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you mark it well.

Esc. Well, I do so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Esc. Why, no.

Clo. I'le be suppos'd upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him: good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the Constables wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Esc. He's in the right; (Constable) what say you to it?

Elb. First, an't it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his Mistris is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest wicked Varlet; the time is yet to come, that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Esc. Which is the wiser here; Justice, or Iniquity? Is this true?

Elb. O thou Caitiff! O thou Varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your Worship think me the poor Dukes Officer; prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'le have mine action of battery on thee.

Esc. If he took you a box th'ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry I thank your good Worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall do with this wicked Caitiff?

Esc. Truly Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou would'st discover, if thou could'st, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry I thank your Worship for it; Thou seest thou wicked Varlet now, what's come upon thee. Thou art to continue.

Esc. Where were you born, friend? [To Froth.

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Esc. Are you of four-score Pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, and't please you sir.

Esc. So: what trade are ye of, sir? [To the Clown.

Clo. A Tapster, a poor Widows Tapster.

Esc. Your Mistris name?

Clo. Mistris Over-don.

Esc. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir: Over-don by the last.

Esc. Nine? Come hither to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with Tapsters; they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them. get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Fro. I thank your Worship; for mine own part, I never come into any room in a Taphouse, but I am drawn in.

Esc. Well; no more of it Master Froth: farewell: [Exit Froth.
Come you hither to me, M. Tapster; what's your name M. Tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Esc. What else?

Clo. Bum, Sir.

Esc. Troth, and your Bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a Bawd, Pompey; howsoever you colour it being a Tapster; are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Esc. How would you live Pompey? by being a Bawd? what do you think of the Trade, Pompey? is it a lawful Trade?

Clo. If the Law would allow it, sir.

Esc. But the Law will not allow it, Pompey, nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna. Clo. Do's

Scene IV

× He means to say Animal

Clo. Do's your Worſhip mean to geld and ſplay all the Youth in the City?

Eſc. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly Sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then: if your Worſhip will take order for the Drabs and Knaves, you need not to fear the Bawds.

Eſc. There are pretty Orders beginning, I can tell you: It is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a Commiſſion for more heads: If this Law hold in Vienna ten years, I'll rent the faireſt houſe in it after three pence a Bay: If you live to ſee this come to paſs, ſay, Pompey told you ſo.

Eſc. Thank you, good Pompey; and in requital of your Prophecie, hark you, I adviſe you let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatſoever; no, not for dwelling where you do: If I do, Pompey, I ſhall beat you to your Tent, and prove a ſhrewd Cæſar to you: In plain dealing, I ſhall have you whipt: So for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your Worſhip for your good counſel; but I ſhall follow it as the fleſh and fortune ſhall better determine. Whip me? no, no: let Carman whip his Jade; The valiant heart's not whipt out of his Trade. Exit.

Scene V.

Eſc. Come hither to me, Maſter Elbow; come hither, Maſter Conſtable; how long have you been in this place of Conſtable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, ſir.

Eſc. I thought by the readineſs in the Office, you had continued in it ſome time: you ſay, ſeven years together?

Elb. And a half, ſir.

Eſc. Alas! it hath been great pains to you; they do you wrong to put you ſo oft upon't: Are there not men in your Ward ſufficient to ſerve it?

Elb. 'Faith ſir, few of any Wit in ſuch matters; as they are choſen, they are glad to chooſe me for them: I do it for ſome piece of money, and go through with all.

Eſc. Look you bring me in the Names of ſome ſix or ſeven, the moſt ſufficient of your Pariſh.

Elb. To your Worſhip's houſe, ſir?

Eſc. To my houſe; fare you well, what's a clock, think you? Exit Elbow.

Juſt. Eleven, ſir.

Eſc. I pray you, go home to dinner with me.

Juſt. I humbly thank you.

Eſc. It grieves me for the death of Claudio:
But there's no Remedy.

Juſt. Lord Angelo is ſevere.

Eſc. It is but needful:
Mercy is not it ſelf, that oft looks ſo;
Pardon is ſtill the Nurſe of ſecond woe:
But yet, poor Claudio, there is no Remedy.
Come, ſir. Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] VI.

Enter Provoſt, a Servant.

Ser. He's hearing of a Cauſe; he will come ſtraight: I'll tell him of you.

Pro. Pray you do; I'll know
His pleaſure; may be he will relent: alas!
He hath but as offended in a dream:
All Sects, all Ages ſmack of this vice, and he
To die for't!

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter, Provoſt?

Pro. Is it your Will Claudio ſhall die to morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadſt thou not order? Why do'ſt thou ask again?

Pro. Leſt I might be too raſh:
Under your good correction, I have ſeen
When after Execution, Judgment hath
Repented o're his doom.

Ang. [redacted]: let that be mine:
Do you your Office, or give up your Place,
And you ſhall well be ſpar'd.

Pro. I crave your [redacted] pardon:
What ſhall be done, ſir, with the groaning Juliet?
She's very near her hour.

Ang. Diſpoſe of her
To ſome more fitter place, and that with ſpeed.

Ser. Here is the ſiſter of the man condemn'd,
Deſires acceſs to you.

Ang. Hath he a ſiſter?

Pro. Ay my good Lord, a very vertuous maid,
And to be ſhortly of a Siſter-hood,
If not already.

Ang. [redacted]: let her be admitted: Exit Ser.
See you the Fornicatreſs be remov'd;
Let her have needful, but not laviſh means;
There ſhall be order for't.

Enter Lucio and Iſabella. Scene VII.

Pro. 'Save your Honour!

Ang. Stay a little while: y'are welcome; What's your Will?

Iſab. I am a woful Sutor to your Honour,
'Pleaſe but your Honour hear me.

Ang. [redacted]: what's your ſuit?

Iſab. There is a Vice that moſt I do abhor,
And moſt deſire ſhould meet the blow of Juſtice,
For which I would not plead, but that I muſt;
For which I muſt [redacted] plead, [redacted] I am albeit
At war 'twixt will and will not.

Ang. Well; the matter?

Iſab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die;
I do beſeech you let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Pro. Heaven give thee moving graces!

Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?
Why every fault's condemn'd e're it be done;
Mine were the very Cipher of a Function,
To fine the faults, whoſe fine ſtands in Record,
And let go by the actor.

Iſab. Oh juſt, but ſevere Law!
I had a brother then; heaven keep your honour!

Luc. Giv't not o're ſo: to him again, intreat him,
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown;
You are too cold; if you ſhould need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue deſire it:
To him, I ſay.

Iſab. Muſt he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no Remedy.

Iſab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither heaven, nor man grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do't.

Iſab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.

Iſab. But might you do't, and do the World no wrong,
If ſo your heart were touch'd with that remorſe,
As mine is to him?

Ang. He's ſentenc'd; 'tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

Iſab. Too late? why ſo? I that do ſpeak a word,
May call it back again: Well, believe this,
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the King's Crown, nor the deputed Sword,
The Marſhal's Truncheon, nor the Judges Robe,
Become them with one half ſo good a grace
As mercy does: If he had been as you, and you as he,

You

You would have slipt like him, but he, like you,
Would not have been so stern.
Ang. Pray you be gone.
Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabel; should it then be thus?
No; I would tell what 'twere to be a Judge,
And what a Prisoner.
Luc. Ay, touch him; there's the vein.
Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the Law,
And you but waste your words.
Isab. Alas! alas!
Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
And he that might the vantage best have took,
Found out the Remedy. How would you be,
If he, which is the top of Judgment, should
But judge you as you are? Oh, think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new-made.
Ang. Be you content, (fair Maid),
It is the Law, not I, condemns your brother:
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him; he must die to morrow.
Isab. To morrow? Oh, that's sudden.
Spare him, spare him.
He's not prepar'd for death: even for our kitchins
We kill the fowl of season; shall we serve heaven
With less respect than we do minister
To our gross selves? good, good my Lord, bethink you:
VVho is it that hath di'd for this Offence?
There's many have committed it.
Luc. Ay: well said.
Ang. The Law hath not been dead, tho it hath slept:
Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
If the first, that did th' Edict infringe,
Had answer'd for his deed. Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet,
Looks in a glass that shews what future evils
Either new, or by remissness, new conceiv'd,
And so in progress to be hatch'd, and born,
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But here they live, to end.
Isab. Yet shew some pity.
Ang. I shew it most of all when I shew Justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
VVhich a dismiss'd Offence would after gall
And do him right, that answering one soul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to morrow; be content.
Isa. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he that suffers: Oh, it is excellent
To have a Giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a Giant.
Luc. That's well said.
Isa. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne're be quiet;
For every pelting petty Officer
VVould use his heaven for thunder: sweet
Nothing but thunder: Merciful heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Split'st the un-wedgable and gnarled Oke,
Than the soft Myrtil: O but man! proud man,
Dress't in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd
(His glassie Essence), like an angry Ape,
Plays such fantastique tricks before high heaven,
As makes the Angels weep; who with our spleens
VVould all themselves laugh mortal.
Luc. Oh, to him, to him, Wench; he will relent:
He's coming: I perceive't.
Pro. Pray heaven she win him.
Isa. VVe cannot weigh our brother with our self:
Great men may jest with Saints; 'tis Wit in them,
But in the less foul Prophanation.
Luc. Thou'rt right (Girl); more o' that.
Isab. That in the Captain's but a cholerick word,
VVhich in the Soldier is flat blasphemy.
Luc. Art advis'd o' that? more on't. yet more.
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
Isa. Because Authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of Medicine in it self,
That skins the Vice o' th' top: go to your bosom,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brother's fault; if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.
Ang. She speaks, and 'tis such sense,
That my sense breeds with it: fare you well.
Isa. Gentle my Lord, turn back.
Ang. I will bethink me: come again to morrow.
Isa. Hark, how I'll bribe you: good my Lord, turn back.
Ang. How? bribe me?
Isa. Ay, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.
Luc. You had marr'd all else.
Isa. Not with fond Sickles of the tested-gold,
Or stones, whose rate are either rich or poor,
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there,
E're Sun rise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting Maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.
Ang. Well; come to morrow.
Luc. [redacted].
Isa. Heaven keep your honour safe.
Ang. Amen: Pray [Aside]
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.
Isa. At what hour to morrow
Shall I attend you?
Ang. At any time 'fore-noon.
Isa. 'Save your honour. Exeunt. Luc. & Isa:

Ang. From thee; even from thy Vertue!
What's this? What's this? Is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?
Not she; nor doth she tempt; but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sun,
Do as the Carrion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with vertuous season. Can it be,
That Modesty may more betray our sense,
Than Womans lightness? having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the Sanctuary,
And pitch our evils there? Oh fie, fie, fie!
What dost thou? Or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her foully, for those things
That make her good? Oh let her brother live;
Thieves for their Robbery have authority,
VVhen Judges steal themselves. What! do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again?
And feast upon her Eyes? VVhat is't I dream on?
Oh cunning Enemy, that to catch a Saint,
VVith Saints dost bait thou hook. most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin, in loving Vertue: never could the Strumpet,
VVith all her double vigour, Art, and Nature,
Once stir my temper; but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Even till now,
VVhen men were fond, I smil'd, and wondred how. Scena VIII
Exit.

Scæna [redacted]
A Prison.

Enter Duke, and Provoſt.

Duk. Hail to you, Provoſt; ſo I think you are.
Pro. I am the Provoſt; what's your will, good Frier?
Duk. Bound by my Charity, and my bleſt Order,
I come to viſit the afflicted ſpirits
Here in the Priſon; do me the common right
To let me ſee them; and to make me know
The nature of their crimes; that I may miniſter
To them accordingly.
Pro. I would do more than that, if more were needful.

Enter Juliet.

Look here comes one; a Gentlewoman of mine,
VVho falling in the flaws of her own Youth,
Hath bliſter'd her Report: She is with child,
And he that got it, ſentenc'd: a young man
More fit to do another ſuch Offence,
Than die for this.
Duk. VVhen muſt he die?
Pro. As I do think, to morrow.
I have provided for you: ſtay a while,
And you ſhall be conducted.
Duk. Repent you (fair one) of the ſin you carry?
Jul. I do; and bear the ſhame moſt patiently.
Du. I'le teach you how you ſhall araign your conſcience,
And try your penitence, if it be ſound,
Or hollowly put on.
Jul. I'le gladly learn.
Duk. Love you the man that wrong'd you?
Jul. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.
Duk. So then it ſeems your moſt offenceful act
VVas mutually committed.
Jul. Mutually.
Duk. Then was your ſin of heavier kind than his.
Jul. I do confeſs it, and repent it (Father).
Duk. 'Tis meet ſo (daughter); but leſt you do repent
As that the ſin hath brought you to this ſhame,
VVhich ſorrow is always toward our ſelves, not heaven,
Showing we would not ſpare heaven, as we love it,
But as we ſtand in fear.
Jul. I do repent me, as it is an evil,
And take the ſhame with joy.
Duk. There reſt:
Your partner, (as I hear), muſt die to morrow,
And I am going with inſtruction to him;
Grace go with you, Benedicite. [Exit.
Jul. Muſt die to morrow! Oh injurious love,
That reſpits me a life, whoſe very comfort
Is ſtill a dying horror.
Pro. 'Tis pity of him. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted] X.
The Palace.

Enter Angelo.

An. VVhen I would pray, and think, I think, and pray
To ſeveral ſubjects: heaven hath my empty words,
VVhilſt my Invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Iſabel: heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart the ſtrong and ſwelling evil
Of my conception: the ſtate whereon I ſtudied
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown ſeard, and tedious; yea, my Gravity,
Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride,
Could I, with boot, change for an idle plume
Which the air beats for vain: Oh place! oh form!
How often doſt thou with thy caſe, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiſer ſouls
To thy falſe ſeeming? Blood, thou art Blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Devils horn;
'Tis not the devils Creſt: how now? who's there?

Enter Servant.

Ser. One Iſabel, a ſiſter, deſires acceſs to you.
Ang. Teach her the way. Oh heavens
Why do's my blood thus muſter to my heart,
Making both it unable for it ſelf,
And diſpoſſeſſing all my other parts
Of neceſſary fitneſs?
So play the fooliſh throngs with one that ſwounds,
Come all to help him, and ſo ſtop the air
By which he ſhould revive: and even ſo
The general ſubjects to a well-wiſht King,
Quit their own part, and in obſequious fondneſs
Crowd to his preſence, where their untaught love
Muſt needs appear Offence: how now fair Maid?

Enter Iſabella. Scene XI.

Iſa. I am come to know your pleaſure.
Ang. That you might know it, would much better pleaſe me,
Than to demand what 'tis. your brother cannot live.
Iſa. Even ſo? heaven keep your Honour.
Ang. Yet may he live a while; and it may be
As long as you or I; yet he muſt die.
Iſa. Under your Sentence?
Ang. Yea.
Iſa. VVhen, I beſeech you? that in his Reprieve,
(Longer or ſhorter), he may be ſo fitted,
That his ſoul ſicken not.
Ang. Ha? fie, theſe filthy Vices! it were as good
To pardon him, that hath from Nature ſtol'n
A man already made, as to remit
Their ſawcy [redacted], that do coin heavens Image
In ſtamps that are forbid: 'tis all as eaſie,
Falſely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in reſtrained means,
To make a falſe one.
Iſa. 'Tis ſet down ſo in heaven, but not in earth.
Ang. Say you ſo? then I ſhall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the moſt juſt Law
Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him,
Give up your body to ſuch ſweet uncleanneſs
As ſhe that he hath ſtain'd?
Iſa. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body than my ſoul.
Ang. I talk not of your ſoul; our compell'd ſins
Stand more for number than for accompt.
Iſa. How ſay you?
Ang. Nay, I'le not warrant that; for I can ſpeak
Againſt the thing I ſay. Anſwer to this;
I (now the Voice of the Recorded Law),
Pronounce a ſentence on your brother's life:
Might there not be a charity in ſin,
To ſave this brother's life?
Iſa. Pleaſe you to do't,
I'le take it as a peril to my ſoul,
It is no ſin at all, but charity.
Ang. Pleas'd you to do't at peril of your ſoul,
Were equal poize of ſin and charity.
Iſa. That I do beg his life, if it be ſin,
Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my ſuit,
If that be ſin, I'le make it my Morn-prayer,
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your anſwer.
Ang. Nay, but hear me:
Your ſenſe purſues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or ſeem ſo craftie; and that's not good.

Iſa.

Isa. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.
Ang. Thus Wisdom wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth tax it self: As these black Masques
Proclaim an en shield beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could displayed. But mark me, well:
To be received plain, I'le speak more gross:
Your brother is to die.
Isa. So.
Ang. And his Offence is so, as it appears,
Accountant to the Law upon that pain.
Isa. True.
Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question), that you, his sister,
Finding your self desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the Judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the Mannacles
Of the all-[illegible] Law: and that there were
No earthly mean to save him but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body,
To this supposed, or else let him suffer,
What would you do?
Isa. As much for my poor brother as my self;
That is, were I under the terms of Death,
Th' impression of keen Whips, I'ld wear as Rubies,
And strip my self to death, as to a bed,
That longing have been sick for, e're I'ld yeild
My body up to shame.
Ang. Then must your brother die.
Isa. And 'twere the cheaper way;
Better it were a brother dy'd at once,
Than that a sister by redeeming him,
Should die for ever.
Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the Sentence
That you have slander'd so?
Isa. Ignominy in Ransom, and free Pardon,
Are of two houses; lawful Mercy is
Is nothing kin to foul Redemption.
Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a Tyrant,
And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment than a vice.
Isa. Oh pardon me, my Lord; it oft falls out
To have what we would have:
We speak not what we mean:
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.
Ang. We are all frail.
Isa. Else let my brother die,
If not a feodary but only he
Owe, and succeed by weakness.
Ang. Nay, Women are frail too.
Isa. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;
Which are as easie broke as they make forms.
Women! help heaven; Men their creation mar
In profiting by them: Nay, call us ten times frail;
For we are soft, as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
Ang. I think it well;
And from this testimony of your own Sex,
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Than faults may shake our frames), let me be bold;
I do arrest your words: Be that you are;
That is, a Woman; if you be more, you'r none.
If you be one, (as you are well exprest
By all external warrants), shew it now,
By putting on the destin'd Livery.
Isa. I have no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me intreat you speak the former language.
Ang. Plainly conceive I love you.
Isa. My brother did love Juliet;
And you tell me, that he shall die for it.
Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.
Isa. I know your Vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.
Ang. Believe me on mine Honour,
My words express my purpose.
Isa. Ha? Little honour to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose! Seeming, seeming!
I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for't:
Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-stretch'd throat I'le tell the World aloud
What man thou art.
Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoil'd name, th' austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i' th' State,
Will so your accusation over-weigh,
That you shall stifle in your own Report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun,
And now I give my sensual race the rein:
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite,
Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for: [illegible] thy brother
By yielding up thy body to my Will,
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To lingring sufferance: Answer me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
I'le prove a Tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false o're-weighs your true. [Exit.
Isa. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me? O perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approof,
Bidding the Law make curtsie to their Will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th' appetite,
To follow as it draws. I'le to my brother,
Tho he hath fal'n by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of Honour,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'ld yeild them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhorr'd pollution.
Then Isabel live chaste, and brother die;
" More than our brother is our Chastity.
I'le tell him yet of Angelo's Request,
And fit his mind to death for his soul's Rest. [Exit.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.
The Prison.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Duk. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?
Clau. The miserable have no other Medicine
But only hope: I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.
Duk. Be absolute for death; either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life;
If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing
That none but fools would keep; a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyie influences,
That dost this habitation where thou keep'st
Hourly afflict: Meerly thou art Death's fool; *
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet runn'st toward him still. Thou art not noble;
For all th' accommodations that thou bear'st,
Are nurst by baseness: Thou'rt no meaner valiant;
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm. thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok'st; yet grosly fear'st
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy self;
For thou exists on many a thousand grains

* In the simplicity of the Antient Shews upon our Stage it was common to bring in two figures, one representing a Fool, the other Death or Fate. The turn & contrivance of the peice to make the Fool lay many Stratagems to avoid Death which yet brought him more immediately into the Jaws of it.

That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not;
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forgett'st: Thou art not certain;
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moon. If thou art rich, thou'rt poor;
For like an Ass, whose back with Ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy Riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee: Friend, hast thon none,
For thine own bowels which do call thee sire?
The meer effusion of thy proper loins
Do curse the Gout, Sarpego, and the Rheume,
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast not youth, nor age;
But, as it were, an after-dinners sleep,
Dreaming on both; for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
Of palsied-Eld; and when thou art old, and rich,
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty
To make thy Riches pleasant. What's yet in this
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid moe thousand deaths; yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.
Clau. I humbly thank you.
To sue to live, I find I seek to die,
And seeking death, find life: Let it come on.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. What hoa? Peace here; Grace and good Company.
Pro. Who's there? Come in: the wish deserves a welcome.
Duk. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.
Cla. Most holy sir, I thank you.
Isa. My business is a word or two with Claudio.
Pro. And very welcome. look Signior, here's your sister.
Duk. Provost, a word with you.
Pro. As many as you please.
Duk. Bring them to speak where I may be conceal'd, yet hear them.

Exeunt Pro. Duke and Provost.

Cla. Now sister, what's the comfort?
Isa. Why,
As all comforts are; most good, most good indeed:
Lord Angelo having affairs to heaven,
Intends you for his swift Ambassador;
Where you shall be an everlasting Leiger.
Therefore your best appointment make with speed,
To morrow you set on.
Cla. Is there no Remedy?
Isa. None but such Remedy, as to save a head
To cleave a heart in twain.
Cla. But is there any?
Isa. Yes, brother, you may live:
There is a devilish mercy in the Judge,
If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.
Cla. Perpetual durance?
Isa. Ay, just, perpetual durance, a restraint,
Though all the Worlds vastidity you had,
To a determin'd scope.
Cla. But in what nature?
Isa. In such a one, as you consenting to't,
Would bark your honour from that trunk you bear,
And leave you naked.
Clau. Let me know the point.
Isa. Oh, I do fear thee, Claudio, and I quake,
Lest thou a feavourous life should'st entertain,
And six or seven Winters more respect
Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension,
And the poor Beetle that we tread upon,
In corporal sufferance, finds a pang as great
As when a Giant dies.
Cla. Why give you me this shame?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowry tenderness? If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms.
Isa. There spake my brother; there my father's grave
Did utter forth a voice. Yes, thou must die:
Thou art too noble to conserve a life
In base appliances. This outward sainted Deputy,
Whose setled visage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i' th' head, and follies doth emmew,
As Falcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil:
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.
Cla. The [illegible] Angelo?
Isa. Oh, 'tis the cunning Livery of hell,
The damned body to invest and cover
In Priestly gardes. dost thou think, Claudio,
If I would yeild him my Virginity,
Thou might'st be freed.
Cla. Oh, heavens, it cannot be.
Isa. Yes, he would give't thee; from this rank Offence
So to offend him still. This night's the time —
That I should do what I abhor to name,
Or else thou dy'st to morrow.
Cla. Thou shalt not do't.
Isa. Oh, were it but my life,
I'll throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.
Cla. Thanks dear Isabel.
Isa. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to morrow.
Cla. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the Law by th' nose,
When he would force it? sure it is no sin;
Or of the deadly seven it is the least.
Isa. Which is the least?
Cla. If it it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentany trick
Be perdurably fin'd? Oh Isabel.
Isa. What says my brother?
Cla. Death is a fearful thing.
Isa. And shamed life a hateful.
Clo. Ay but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold Obstruction, and to rot;
This sensible warm motion, to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling Region of thick-ribbed Ice,
To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendant World; or to be worse than worst
Of those, that lawless and incertain thought,
Imagine howling; 'tis too horrible!
The wearyest, and most loathed worldly life,
That age, ach, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on Nature, is a Paradise
To what we fear of death.
Isa. Alas! alas!
Cla. Sweet sister, let me live.
What sin you do to save a brother's life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so far,
That it becomes a vertue.
Isa. Oh you beast!
Oh faithless coward! oh dishoneſt wretch!
Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?
Is't not a kind of incest, to take life
From thine own sisters shame? What should I think?
Heaven shield: my mother plaid my father fair:
For such a warped slip of Wilderness
Ne're issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Die, perish! Might but my bending down
Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed.
I'll pay a thousand prayers for thy death;
No word to save thee.
Cla. Nay, hear me, Isabel.
Isa. Oh, fie, fie, fie,
Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade;

Mercy

Mercy to thee would prove it ſelf a Bawd;
'Tis beſt that thou dieſt quickly.

Cla. Oh hear me, Iſabella. [Scene III. Duke ſteps in.

Du. Vouchſafe a word, young ſiſter, but one word. [Pro.

Iſa. What is your will?

Du. Might you diſpenſe with your leiſure, I would by and by have ſome ſpeech with you: the ſatisfaction I would require, is likewiſe your own benefit.

Iſa. I have no ſuperfluous leiſure; my ſtay muſt be ſtolen out of other affairs: but I will attend you a while.

Du. Son, I have over-heard what hath paſt between you and your ſiſter. Angelo had never the purpoſe to corrupt her; only he hath made an eſſay of her vertue, to practiſe his judgment with the diſpoſition of Natures. She, (having the truth of honour in her), hath made him that gracious denial, which he is moſt glad to receive: I am confeſſor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare your ſelf to death: do not ſatisfie your reſolution with hopes that are fallible; to morrow you muſt die; go to your knees, and make ready.

Cla. Let me ask my ſiſter pardon; I am ſo out of love with life, that I will ſue to be rid of it. (Claud. Exit.

Du. Hold you there; farewell. Provoſt, a word with you.

Pro. What's your will (father)?

Du. That now you are come, you will be gone; leave me a while with the Maid; my mind promiſes with my habit, no loſs ſhall touch her by my company.

Pro. In good time. [Pro. Exit.

Du. The hand that hath made you fair, hath made you good; the goodneſs that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodneſs; but grace being the ſoul of your complexion, ſhall keep the body of it ever fair. the aſſault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conveyd to my Underſtanding; and but that frailty hath Examples for his falling, I ſhould wonder at Angelo: how will you do to content this Subſtitute, and to ſave your brother?

Iſa. I am now going to reſolve him: I had rather my brother die by the Law, than my ſon ſhould be unlawfully born. But (Oh), how much is the good Duke deceiv'd in Angelo! if ever he return, and I can ſpeak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or diſcover his government.

Du. That ſhall not be much amiſs; yet as the matter now ſtands, he will avoid your accuſation; he made trial of you only. Therefore faſten your ear on my adviſings, to the love I have in doing good; a Remedy preſents it ſelf. I do make my ſelf believe that you may moſt uprightly do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry Law; do no ſtain to your own gracious perſon, and much pleaſe the abſent Duke, if peradventure he ſhall ever return to have hearing of this buſineſs.

Iſa. Let me hear you ſpeak, father: I have ſpirit to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my ſpirit.

Du. Vertue is bold, and goodneſs never fearful: Have you not heard ſpeak of Mariana, the ſiſter of Frederick, the great Soldier, who miſcarried at Sea?

Iſa. I have heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name?

Du. She ſhould this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by Oath, the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the ſolemnity, her brother Frederick was wrack'd at Sea, having in that periſhed Veſſel, the dowry of his ſiſter. but mark how heavily this befel to the poor Gentlewoman; there ſhe loſt a Noble and Renowned brother, in his love toward her, ever moſt kind and natural; with him the portion and ſinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate-husband, this well ſeeming Angelo.

Iſa. Can this be ſo? did Angelo ſo leave her?

Du. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort: ſwallowed his Vows whole, pretending in her, diſcoveries of diſhonour: in few words, beſtow'd her on her own lamentation, which ſhe yet wears for his ſake; and he, a marble to her ears, is waſhed with them, but relents not.

Iſa. What a merit were it in death to take this poor Maid from the world! what corruption in this life, that it will let this man live? But how out of this can ſhe avail?

Du. It is a Rupture that you may eaſily heal; and the cure of it not only ſaves your brother, but keeps you from diſhonour in doing it.

Iſa. Shew me how, (good father).

Du. This fore-named Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her firſt affection; his unjuſt unkindneſs, (that in all Reaſon ſhould have quenched her Love,) hath, (like an impediment in the Current,) made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo, anſwer his requiring with a plauſible Obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer your ſelf to this advantage; firſt, that your ſtay with him may not be long; that the time may have all ſhadow and ſilence in it; and the place anſwer to convenience. this being granted in courſe: now follows all; we ſhall adviſe this wronged Maid to ſtead up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge it ſelf hereafter, it may compel him to her recompence; and here, by this is your brother ſaved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt Deputy ſcaled. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if you think well to carry this, as you may, the doubleneſs of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Iſa. The image of it gives me content already, and I truſt it will grow to a moſt proſperous perfection.

Du. It lies much in your holding up; haſte you ſpeedily to Angelo; if for this night he intreat you to his bed, give him promiſe of ſatisfaction. I will preſently to St. Luke's; there at the moated Grange reſides this dejected Mariana; at that place call upon me, and diſpatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Iſa. I thank you for this comfort: fare you well, good father. [Exit Iſabella.

Scene IV. Duke

The Street. Enter Elbow, Clown, Officers.

El. Nay, if there be no Remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and ſell men and women like beaſts, we ſhall have all the world drink brown and white baſtard.

Du. Oh heavens! what ſtuff is here?

Clo. 'Twas never merry world ſince of two uſuries the merrieſt was put down, and the worſer allow'd, by order of Law, a furr'd gown to keep him warm; and furr'd with Fox and Lamb-skins too, to ſignifie, that craft being richer than innocency, ſtands for the facing.

Elbow. Come your way, Sir: 'bleſs you, good father Friar.

Du. And you good brother father; what Offence hath this man made you, ſir?

Elb. Marry, ſir, he hath offended the Law; and, ſir, we take him to be a thief too, ſir: for we have found upon him ſir, a ſtrange Pick-lock, which we have ſent to the Deputy.

Du. Fie, ſirrah, a bawd, a wicked bawd!
The evil that thou cauſeſt to be done,
That is thy means to live. Do thou but think
What 'tis to cram a maw, or cloath a back
From ſuch a filthy Vice: ſay to thy ſelf,
From their abominable and beaſtly touches
I drink, I eat away my ſelf, and live.
Canſt thou believe thy living is a life,
So ſtinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed it do's ſtink in ſome ſort, ſir;
But yet, ſir, I would prove ——

Du. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for ſin,
Thou wilt prove his. Take him to priſon, Officer;

Correction and inſtruction muſt both work,
Ere this rude beaſt will profit.

Elb. He muſt before the Deputy, ſir; he has given him warning; the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-maſter; if he be a Whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Du. That we were all, as ſome would ſeem to be,
Free from all faults, as faults from ſeeming free.

Enter Lucio.

Elb. His neck will come to your waſte, a Cord, ſir.

Clo. I ſpy comfort; I cry bail: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Luc. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Cæſar? Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's Images newly made woman to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracting clutch'd? What Reply? Ha? What ſaiſt thou to this Tune, Matter and Method? Is't not drown'd i' th' laſt Rain? Ha? What ſaiſt thou, Trot? Is the World as it was, Man? Which is the way? Is it ſad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Du. Still thus, and thus; ſtill worſe?

Luc. How doth my dear Morſel, thy Miſtreſs? Procures ſhe ſtill? Ha?

Clo. Troth, ſir, ſhe [redacted] beef, and ſhe is her ſelf in the

Luc. Why [redacted] it is the right of it; it muſt be ſo. Ever your freſh Whore, and your powder'd Bawd, an unſhunn'd conſequence, it muſt be ſo. Art going to Priſon, Pompey?

Clo. Yes, faith, ſir.

Luc Why, 'tis not amiſs, Pompey: farewel: go ſay, I ſent thee thither: for debt, Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Luc. Well, then impriſon him; If impriſonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right. Bawd is he doubtleſs, and of antiquity too; Bawd born. Farewell, good Pompey: Commend me to the priſon, Pompey: you will turn good Husband now, Pompey; you will keep the houſe.

Clo. I hope, ſir, your good Worſhip will be my bail.

Luc. No indeed will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear; I will pray, (Pompey) to encreaſe your bondage; if you take it not patiently; Why, your mettle is the more: Adieu, truſty Pompey.
Bleſs you, Friar.

Du. And you.

Luc. Do's Bridget paint ſtill, Pompey? Ha?

Elb. Come your ways, ſir, come.

Clo. You will not bail me then, ſir?

Luc. Then, Pompey, nor now: What news abroad, Friar? What news?

Elb. Come your ways, ſir, come.

Luc. Go to kennel (Pompey), go: Exeunt.
What news, Friar, of the Duke?

Du. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Luc. Some ſay, he is with the Emperor of Ruſſia: other ſome, he is in Rome: but where is he think you?

Du. I know not where; but whereſoever, I wiſh him well.

Luc. It was a mad fantaſtical trick of him, to ſteal from the State, and uſurp the Beggary he was never born to. Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his abſence; he puts tranſgreſſion to't.

Du. He do's well in't.

Luc. A little more lenity to Lechery would do no harm in him: ſomething too crabbed that way, Friar,

Du. It is too general a Vice, and ſeverity muſt cure it.

Luc. Yes, in good ſooth, the Vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied; but it is impoſſible to extirp it quite, Friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They ſay, this Angelo was not made by Man and Woman, after the down-right way of Creation: is it true, think you?

Du. How ſhould he be made then?

Luc. Some report, a Sea-maid ſpawn'd him. Some, that he was begot between two Stock-fiſhes. But it is certain, that when he makes water, his Urine is congeal'd-ice; that I know to be true; and he has no motion generative; that's infallible.

Du. You are pleaſant, ſir, and ſpeak apace.

Luc. Why, what a ruthleſs thing is this in him, for the Rebellion of a Cod-piece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is abſent have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred Baſtards, he would have paid for the nurſing a thouſand. He had ſome feeling of the ſport, he knew the ſervice, and that inſtructed him to mercy.

Du. I never heard the abſent Duke much detected for Women; he was not inclin'd that way.

Luc. Oh, ſir, you are deceiv'd.

Du. 'Tis not poſſible.

Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty; and his uſe was, to put a Ducket in her Clack-diſh; the Duke had Crotchets in him. He would be drunk too, that let me inform you.

Du. You do him wrong ſurely.

Luc Sir, I was an inward of his: a ſhy fellow was the Duke; and I believe I know the cauſe of his withdrawing.

Du. What (I prethee) might be the cauſe?

Luc. No: pardon: 'Tis a ſecret muſt be lockt within the teeth and the lips; but this I can let you underſtand, the greater file of the Subject held the Duke to be wiſe.

Du. Wiſe? Why no queſtion but he was.

Luc. A very ſuperficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Du. Either this is envy in you, folly, or miſtaking: The very ſtream of his life, and the buſineſs he hath helmed, muſt upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but teſtimonied in his own bringings forth, and he ſhall appear to the envious, a Scholar, a Stateſman, and a Soldier. therefore you ſpeak unskilfully: or if your knowledg be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

Luc. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Du. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Luc. Come, ſir, I know what I know.

Du. I can hardly believe that, ſince you know not what you ſpeak. But if ever the Duke return, (as our prayers are he may), let me deſire you to make your anſwer before him: if it be honeſt you have ſpoke, you have courage to maintain it; I am bound to call upon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Du. He ſhall know you better, ſir, if I may live to report you.

Luc. I fear you not.

Du. O, you hope the Duke will return no more; or you imagine me too unhurtful an Oppoſite; but indeed I can do you little harm: You'll forſwear this again?

Luc. I'll be hang'd firſt: Thou art deceived in me, Friar. But no more of this. Canſt thou tell if Claudio die to morrow, or no?

Du. Why ſhould he die, ſir?

Luc. Why? For filling a Bottle with a Tun-diſh: I would the Duke we talk of were return'd again: this ungenitur'd Agent will un-people the Province with Continency. Sparrows muſt not build in his houſe-eves, becauſe they are lecherous: The Duke yet would have dark deeds darkly anſwered; he would never bring them to light: would he were return'd. Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untruſſing. Farewel, good Friar, I prethee pray for me: The Duke (I ſay to thee again) would eat Mutton on Fridays. He's now paſt it; yet (and I ſay to thee) he would mouth with a beggar, tho ſhe

she smelt brown-bread and Garlick: say, that I said so: Farewel. Exit.

Du. No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure scape: Back-wounding calumny
The whitest vertue strikes. What King so strong
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here? Scene VII.

Enter Escalus, Provost, and Bawd, Officers.

Esc. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good my Lord, be good to me; your Honour is accounted a merciful man: good my Lord.

Esc. Double, and trebble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind? This would make mercy swear, and play the Tyrant.

Pro. A Bawd of Eleven years continuance, may it please your Honour.

Bawd. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information against me: Mistris Kate Keep down was with child by him in the Duke's time; he promis'd her marriage: his child is a Year and a Quarter old, come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it my self; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Esc. That fellow is a fellow of much License; Let him be call'd before us. Away with her to prison: Go to: no more words. [Exit with Bawd.] Provost, my Brother Angelo will not be alter'd; Claudio must die to morrow: Let him be furnish'd with Divines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Pro So, please you, this Friar hath been with him, and advis'd him for th' entertainment of death.

Esca. Good even, good father.

Du. Bliss and goodness on you.

Esc. Of whence are you?

Du. Not of this Country, tho my chance is now
To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious Order, late come from the Sea,
In special business from his Holiness.

Esc. What news abroad i' th' World?

Du. None, but that there is so great a Fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it. Novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is vertuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make Societies secure; but security enough to make Fellowships accurst. Much upon this Riddle runs the wisdom of the World; This news is old enough, yet it is every days news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the Duke?

Esc. One, that above all other strifes,
Contended especially to know himself.

Du. What pleasure was he given to?

Esc. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at any thing which profest to make him rejoice. A Gentleman of all Temperance. But leave him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepar'd? I am made to understand, that you have lent him Visitation.

Du. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his Judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of Justice: yet had he framed to himself (by the instruction of his frailty) many deceiving promises of life, which I (by my good leisure) have discredited to him, and now is he resolv'd to die.

Esc. You have paid the Heavens your Function, and the Prisoner the very debt of your Calling. I have labour'd for the poor Gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modesty, but my Brother-Justice have I found so severe, that he hath forc'd me to tell him, he is indeed Justice.

Du. If his own life
Answer the straitness of his proceeding,
It shall become him well; wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenc'd himself.

Esc. I am going to visit the prisoner: Fare you well. Exit.

Du. Peace be with you.
He who the sword of Heaven will bear, Scene VIII.
Should be as holy as severe:
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and Vertue go:
More nor less to others paying,
Than by self-Offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruel striking,
Kills for faults of his own liking!
Twice trebble shame on Angelo,
To weed my Vice, and let his grow!
Oh, what may Man within him hide,
Tho' Angel on the Outward side?
How may likeness [redacted] crimes, Shading.
Making practise on the times,
To draw with idle Spiders strings
Most ponderous and substantial things?
Craft against Vice I must apply.
With Angelo to night shall lye
His Old betroathed (but despised);
So disguise shall by th' disguised
Pay with falshood false exacting,
And perform an old contracting. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

A Grange.

[redacted] Mariana, and Boy, singing.

Song.

Song. Take, Oh take those lips away,
that so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes: the break of day,
lights that do mislead the Morn;
But my kisses bring again, [redacted]
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain.

Enter Duke.

Ma. Break off thy Song, and haste thee quick away:
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
I cry you mercy, sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so musical:
Let me excuse me, and believe me so;
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Du. 'Tis good; tho Musick oft hath such a charm
To make bad, good, and good provoke to harm.
I pray you, tell me, hath any body enquir'd for me here to day? much upon this time have I promis'd here to meet. One.

Mar. You have not been enquir'd after: I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabel.

Du. I do constantly believe you: the time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little; may be I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to your self. Scene IX.

Mar. I am always bound to you. Exit.

Du. Very well met, and well come:
What is the news from this good Deputy?

Isa. He hath a Garden circummur'd with Brick,
Whose Western side is with a Vineyard backt;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key:
This other doth command a little door,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leads;
There have I made my promise, upon the
Heavy middle of the night, to call upon him.

Du. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isa.

Isa. I have tane a due and wary note upon't;
With whispering, and most guilty diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice o're.
Du. Are there no other tokens
Between you 'greed, concerning her observance?
Isa. No; none but only a repair i' th' dark,
And that I have possest him, my most stay
Can be but brief; for I have made him know,
I have a Servant comes with me along,
That stays upon me, whose persuasion is,
I come about my brother.
Du. 'Tis well born up.
I have not yet made known to Mariana.

Enter Mariana.

A word of this. what hoa, within, come forth!
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid;
She comes to do you good. Scene III.
Isa. I do desire the like.
Du. Do you persuade your self that I respect you?
Mar. Good Friar, I know you do, and have found it.
Du. Take then this your companion by the hand,
Who hath a story ready for your ear:
I shall attend your leisure; but make haste;
The vaporous night approaches.
Mar. Wilt please you walk aside? Mar. & Is. Exit.
Du. Oh place, and greatness! millions of false Eyes
Are stuck upon thee: Volumes of Report.
Run with these false and most contrarious Quests
Upon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dream,
And rack thee in their fancies! Welcome! how agreed?

Enter Mariana and Isabel. Scene IV.

Isa. She'll take the enterprize upon her, father,
If you advise it.
Du. It is not my consent,
But my intreaty too.
Isa. Little have you to say
When you depart from him, but soft and low;
Remember now my brother.
Mar. Fear me not.
Du. Nor gentle daughter, fear you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contract;
To bring you thus together, 'tis no sin,
Sith that the Justice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go,
Our Corn's to reap, for yet our Tithe's to sow. Exeunt.

Scena V.
A Prison.

Enter Provost, and Clown.

Pro. Come hither, sirrah: can you cut off a man's head?
Clo. If the man be a Batchellor, sir, I can:
But if he be a married man, he's his wives head,
And I can never cut off a womans head.
Pro. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and yeild me a direct answer. To morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: here is in our prison a common Executioner, who in his Office lacks a helper; if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your Gyves: if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping; for you have been a notorious bawd.
Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, time out of mind, but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman: I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.
Pro. What hoa, Abhorson! where's Abhorson there?

Enter Abhorson.

Abh. Do you call sir?
Pro. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to morrow in your execution: if you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him. he cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a Bawd.
Abh. A Bawd, Sir? fie upon him, he will discredit our mystery.
Pro. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a feather will turn the Scale. Exit.
Clo. Pray sir, by your good favour; for surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look; Do you call, sir, your Occupation a Mystery?
Abh. Ay sir, a Mystery.
Clo. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a Mystery: and your Whores, sir, being members of my Occupation, using painting, do prove my Occupation a Mystery: but what Mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.
Abh. Sir, it is a Mystery.
Clo. Proof.
Abh. Every true man's apparel fits your Thief.
Clo. If it be too little for your Thief, your true man thinks it big enough. If it be too big for your Thief, your Thief thinks it little enough: So every true man's apparel fits your Thief.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Are you agreed?
Clo. Sir, I will serve him: for I do find your Hangman is a more penitent Trade than your Bawd; he doth oftner ask forgiveness.
Pro. You, sirrah, provide your Block and your Axe to morrow, four a clock.
Abh. Come on, (Bawd), I will instruct thee in my Trade: follow.
Clo. I do desire to learn, sir: and I hope; if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me y'are. For truly, sir, for your kindness, I owe you a good turn. Exit.
Pro. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:
Th' one has my pity; not a jot the other,
Being a Murtherer, tho he were my brother. Scene VI.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the Warrant, Claudio, for thy death;
'Tis now dead midnight, and by Eight to morrow
Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?
Cla. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltless labour,
When it lies starkly in the Traveller's bones.
He will not awake.
Pro. Who can do good on him? Exit Cl.
Well, go, prepare your self. But hark, what noise? Noise within.
Heaven give your spirits comfort! by and by,
I hope it is some Pardon, or Reprieve
For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome, father.

Enter Duke.

Du. The best, and wholsom'st spirits of the night,
Invellop you, good Provest: Who call'd here of late?
Pro. None since the Curphew rung.
Du. Not Isabel?
Pro. No.
Du. They will then er't be long.
Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?
Du. There's some in hope.
Pro. It is a bitter Deputy.
Du. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great Justice;
He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself which he spurs on his power
To qualifie in others: were he meal'd with that
Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous;
But this being so, he's just. Now are they come.

This

XXX. The Text here is plainly maim'd & deficient, the words by which Abhorson should prove the Hangman's trade a Mystery are lost. But from what follows the Argument may be conjectured to have been This, That every man's apparel fits the Hangman: to which we may suppose, the Clown reply'd, that for the same reason [illegible] this a Mystery, that corrects the

This is a gentle Provoſt, ſeldom when
The ſteeled Gaoler is the friend of men.
How now? what noiſe? That ſpirit's poſſeſt with haſte
That wounds th' unreſiſting poſtern with theſe ſtrokes.
Pro. There he muſt ſtay until the Officer
Ariſe to let him in; he is call'd up.
Du. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,
But he muſt die to morrow?
Pro. None, ſir, none.
Du. As near the dawning, Provoſt, as it is,
You ſhall hear more e're morning.
Pro. Happily—
You ſomething know; yet I believe there comes
No countermand; no ſuch example have we:
Beſides, upon the very ſiege of Juſtice
Lord Angelo hath to the publick ear,
Profeſt the contrary.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Du. This is his Lords man.
Pro. And here comes Claudio's pardon.
Meſſ. My Lord hath ſent you this note,
And by me this further charge,
That you ſwerve not from the ſmalleſt Article of it,
Neither in time, matter, or other circumſtance.
Good morrow; for as I take it, it is almoſt day.
Pro. I ſhall obey him.
Du. This is his Pardon, purchas'd by ſuch ſin,
For which the Pardoner himſelf is in:
Hence hath Offence his quick celerity,
When it is born in high Authority;
When Vice makes Mercy, Mercy's ſo extended,
That for the faults love, is th' Offender friended.
Now Sir, what news?
Pro. I told you:
Lord Angelo, (be-like) thinking me remiſs
In mine Office, awakens me
With this unwonted putting on, methinks ſtrangely;
For he hath not us'd it before.
Du. Pray let's hear.

Pro. Reads The Letter.

Whatſoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock, and in the afternoon Barnardine: For my better ſatisfaction, let me have Claudio's head ſent me by five. Let this be duly performed with a thought that more depends on it than we muſt yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your Office, as you will anſwer it at your peril.

What ſay you to this, ſir?
Du. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th' afternoon?
Pro. A Bohemian born, but here nurſt up and bred;
One that is a priſoner, nine years old.
Du. How came it, that the abſent Duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do ſo.
Pro. His friends ſtill wrought Reprieves for him;
And indeed his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtful proof.
Du. It is now apparent?
Pro. Moſt manifeſt, and not denied by himſelf.
Du. Hath he born himſelf penitently in priſon?
How ſeems he to be touch'd?
Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken ſleep; careleſs, reckleſs, and fearleſs of what's paſt, preſent, or to come; inſenſible of mortality, and deſperately mortal.
Du. He wants advice.
Pro. He will hear none; he hath evermore had the liberty of the priſon: give him leave to eſcape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft awak'd him, as if to carry him to Execution, and ſhew'd him a ſeeming Warrant for it; it hath not moved him at all.
Du. More of him anon: There is written in your brow, Provoſt, honeſty and conſtancy; if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldneſs of my cunning, I will lay my ſelf in hazard: Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law than Angelo, who hath ſentenc'd him. To make you underſtand this in a manifeſted effect, I crave but four days reſpite, for the which, you are to do me both a preſent and a dangerous courteſie.
Pro. Pray ſir, in what?
Du. In the delaying death.
Pro. Alack! how may I do it? Having the hour limited, and an expreſs command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo, I may make my caſe as Claudio's, to croſs this in the ſmalleſt.
Du. By the Vow of mine Order, I warrant you,
If my inſtructions may be your guide:
Let this Barnardine be this morning executed,
And his head born to Angelo.
Pro. Angelo hath ſeen them both,
And will diſcover the favour.
Du. Oh, death's a great diſguiſer, and you may add to ſhave the head, and tie the beard, and ſay, it was the deſire of the penitent to be ſo barb'd before his death; you know the courſe is common. If any thing fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune; by the Saint whom I profeſs, I will plead againſt it with my life.
Pro. Pardon me, good father; it is againſt my Oath.
Duke. Were you ſworn to the Duke, or to the Deputy?
Pro. To him, and to his Subſtitutes.
Du. You will think you have made no Offence, if the Duke avouch the juſtice of your dealing?
Pro. But what likelihood is in that?
Du. Not a reſemblance, but a certainty. yet ſince I ſee you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor perſuaſion, can with eaſe attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you ſir, here is the hand and ſeal of the Duke; you know the character, I doubt not, and the Signet is not ſtrange to you.
Pro. I know them both.
Du. The Contents of this is the return of the Duke; you ſhall anon over-read it at your pleaſure; where you ſhall find within theſe two days he will be here. This is a thing which Angelo knows not; for he this very day receives Letters of ſtrange tenor, perchance of the Duke's death, perchance entering into ſome Monaſtery, but by chance nothing of what is writ. Look, th' unfolding ſtar calls up the ſhepherd; put not your ſelf into amazement, how theſe things ſhould be; all difficulties are but eaſie when they are known. Call your Executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a preſent ſhrift, and adviſe him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this ſhall abſolutely reſolve you. Come away, it is almoſt clear dawn.

Exit.

Scena VIII.

Enter Clown.

Clo. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our houſe of profeſſion; one would think it were Miſtreſs Over-dons own houſe; for here be many of her Old Cuſtomers: Firſt, here's Young Mr. Raſh; he's in for a Commodity of Brown Paper, and Old Ginger, nineſcore and ſeventeen Pounds; of which he made five Marks ready money: marry then, Ginger was not much in requeſt; for the Old Women were all dead. Then is there here one Mr. Caper, at the ſuit of Maſter Three-Pile, the

Mer

Mercer, for some four suits of Peach-colour'd Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizy, and young Mr. Deep-vow, and Mr. Copper-spurs, and Master Starve Lackey, the Rapier and Dagger man, and young Dropheire, that kill'd lusty Pudding, and Mr. Forth-light, the Tilter, and brave Mr. Shoety, the great Traveller, and wild Half-Canne, that stabb'd Pots, and, I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now for the Lord's sake.

Enter Abhorson.

Abh. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clo. Master Barnardine, you must rise and be hang'd, Master Barnardine.

Abh. What hoa, Barnardine.

Barnardine within. [Quick

Bar. A pox o' your throats; who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clo. Your friend, sir, the Hangman: You must be so good, sir, to rise, and be put to death.

Bar. Away you Rogue, away, I am sleepy.

Abh. Tell him, he must awake, And that quickly too.

Clo. Pray Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abh. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming, sir, he is coming: I hear his straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abh. Is the Axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clo. Very ready, sir.

Bar. How now Abhorson? What's the news with you?

Abh. Truly sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for look you, the Warrant's come.

Bar. You Rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

Clo. Oh, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abh. Look you, sir, here comes your ghostly father; do we jest now, think you?

Du. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Du. Oh sir, you must; and therefore I beseech you look forward on the journey you shall go.

Bar. I swear I will not die to day for any man's persuasion.

Du. But hear you.

Bar. Not a word: if you have any thing to say to me, come to my Ward; for thence will not I to day. Exit.

Scene IX.

Enter Provost.

Du. Unfit to live, or die: Oh gravel heart! After him (fellows): bring him to the block.

Pro. Now sir, how do you find the Prisoner?

Du. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death; And to transport him in the mind he is, Were damnable.

Pro. Here in the prison, father, There died this morning of a cruel Fever, One Ragozine, a most notorious Pirate, A man of Claudio's years; his beard and head Just of his colour. What if we do omit This Reprobate, till he were well enclin'd, And satisfie the Deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Du. Oh, 'tis an accident that heaven provides: Dispatch it presently; the hour draws on Prefixt by Angelo: See this be done, And sent according to command; whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Pro. This shall be done (good father) presently: But Barnardine must die this afternoon: And how shall we continue Claudio, To save me from the danger that might come, If he were known alive?

Du. Let this be done; Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio: Ere twice the Sun hath made his journal greeting To the [illegible] generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Pro. I am your free dependant. Exit.

Du. Quick, [illegible], and send the head to Angelo. Exit Pro.

Now will I write Letters to Angelo, (The Provost he shall bear them), whose contents Shall witness to him I am near at home; And that by great injunctions I am bound To enter publickly: him I'll desire To meet me at the consecrated Fount, A League below the City; and from thence, By cold gradation, and weal-ballanc'd form, We shall proceed with Angelo.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Here is the head, I'll carry it my self.

Du. Convenient is it: Make a swift return; For I would commune with you of such things That want no ear but yours.

Pro. I'll make all speed. Exit.

Scene X.

Isabel within.

Isa. Peace hoa, be here.

Du. The tongue of Isabel. She's come to know, If yet her brother's pardon be come hither: But I will keep her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of despair, When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isa. [illegible], by your leave.

Du. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isa. The better, given me by so holy a man: Hath yet the Deputy sent my brother's pardon?

Du. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from the World; His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isa. Nay, but it is not so.

Du. It is no other. Shew your wisdom, daughter, in your close patience.

Isa. Oh, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.

Du. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isa. Unhappy Claudio, wretched Isabel! Injurious World, most damned Angelo.

Du. This not hurts him, nor profits you a jot: Forbear it therefore, give your cause to heaven: Mark what I say, which you shall find surely By every syllable a faithful verity. The Duke comes home to morrow; [illegible], dry your Eyes: One of our Covent, and his Confessor, Gives me this [illegible] news: Already he hath carried Notice to Escalus and Angelo, Who do prepare to meet him at the gates, (dom There to give up their power, if you can pace your wis- In that good path that I would wish it go, And you shall have your bosom on this wretch, Grace of the Duke, Revenges to your heart, And general Honour.

Isa. I am directed by you.

Du. This Letter then to Friar Peter give; 'Tis that he sent me of the Duke's return: Say, by this token, I desire his company At Mariana's house [illegible]. Her cause, and yours, I'll perfect him withal, and he shall bring you Before the Duke; and to the head of Angelo Accuse him home and home. For my poor self,

I am

I am combined by a ſacred Vow,
And ſhall be abſent. Wend you with this Letter:
Command theſe fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart; truſt not my holy Order
If I pervert your courſe: Who's here?

Enter Lucio. Scene XI.

Luc. Good'even;
Friar, where's the Provoſt?

Duk. Not within, ſir.

Luc. Oh pretty Iſabella, I am pale at mine heart to ſee thine Eyes ſo red; thou muſt be patient; I am fain to dine and ſup with water and bran; I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitful Meal would ſet me to't: but they ſay, the Duke will be here to morrow. By my Troth, Iſabel, I lov'd thy brother: if the Old fantaſtical Duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

Duk. Sir, the Duke is marvellous little beholding to your Reports; but the beſt is, he lives not in them.

Luc. Friar, thou knoweſt not the Duke ſo well as I do; he's a better Woodman than thou tak'ſt him for.

Duk. Well; you'll anſwer this one day. Fare ye well.

Luc. Nay, tarry, I'll go along with thee:
I can tell thee pretty tales of the Duke.

Duk. You have told me too many of him already, ſir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Luc. I was once before him for getting a Wench with child.

Duk. Did you ſuch a thing?

Luc. Yes marry did I; but I was fain to forſwear it;
They would elſe have married me to the rotten Medlar.

Duk. Sir, your company is fairer than honeſt: Reſt you well.

Luc. By my troth I'll go with thee to the lane's end: if baudy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it; nay, Friar, I am a kind of a Bur, I ſhall ſtick. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. XII.

The Palace.

Enter Angelo, and Eſcalus.

Eſc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath diſvouch'd other.

Ang. In moſt uneven and diſtracted manner, his actions ſhew much like to madneſs: pray Heaven his wiſdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gates, and deliver our authorities there?

Eſc. I gueſs not.

Ang. And why ſhould we proclaim it in an hour before his entring, that if any crave redreſs of injuſtice, they ſhould exhibit their petitions in the ſtreet?

Eſc. He ſhews his Reaſon for that; to have a diſpatch of Complants, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which ſhall then have no power to ſtand againſt us.

Ang. Well; I beſeech you let it be proclaim'd betimes i'th' morn; I'll call you at your houſe: give notice to ſuch men of ſort and ſuit as are to meet him.

Eſc. I ſhall, ſir: fare you well. [Exit.

Ang. Good night.
This deed unſhapes me quite, makes me unpregnant,
And dull to all proceedings. A defloured Maid,
And by an eminent body, that enforc'd
The Law againſt it! But that her tender ſhame
Will not proclaim againſt her Maiden loſs,
How might ſhe tongue me! yet Reaſon dares her no;
For my authority bears off a credent bulk,
That no particular ſcandal once can touch,
But it confounds the breather. He ſhould have liv'd,
Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous ſenſe,
Might in the times to come, have ta'ne revenge
By ſo receiving a diſhonour'd life,
With ranſome of ſuch ſhame. Would yet he had liv'd.
Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right; we would, and we would not. [Exit.

Scena [redacted]. XIII.

The fields without the Town. in his own habit

Enter Duke, and Friar Peter.

Duk. Theſe Letters at fit time deliver me.
The Provoſt knows our purpoſe and our plot:
The matter being afoot, keep your inſtruction,
And hold you ever to our ſpecial drift,
Tho ſometimes you do blench from this to that,
As cauſe doth miniſter: Go call at Flavius's houſe,
And tell him where I ſtay: give the like notice
To Valentius, Rowland, and to Craſſius,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But ſend me Flavius firſt.

Peter. It ſhall be ſpeeded well. [Exit.

Enter Varrius.

Duk. I thank thee, Varrius; thou haſt made good haſte:
Come, we will walk. There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius. [Exeunt.

Scena [redacted]. XIV.

Enter Iſabella and Mariana.

Iſa. To ſpeak ſo indirectly I am loath:
I would ſay the truth; but to accuſe him ſo,
That is your part; yet I am advis'd to do it:
He ſays, to vail full purpoſe.

Mar. Be rul'd by him.

Iſa. Beſides, he tells me, that if peradventure
He ſpeak againſt me on the adverſe ſide,
I ſhould not think it ſtrange; for 'tis a Phyſick
That's bitter to ſweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Friar Peter——

Iſa. Oh peace; the Friar is come.

Peter. Come, I have found you out a ſtand moſt fit,
Where you may have ſuch vantage on the Duke,
He ſhall not paſs you.
Twice have the Trumpets ſounded:
The generous and graveſt Citizens
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The Duke is entring:
Therefore hence away. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

The Street

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Eſcalus, Lucio, Citizens at ſeveral doors.

Duk. My very worthy Cozen, fairly met;
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to ſee you.

Ang. Eſc. Happy return be to your Royal Grace!

Duk. Many and hearty thankings be to you both:
We have made enquiry of you, and we hear
Such goodneſs of your Juſtice, that our ſoul

Can-

Cannot but yeild you forth to publick thanks,
Forerunning more requital.
Ang. You make my bonds still greater.
Du. Oh, your desert speaks loud, and I should wrong it
To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves with Characters of Brass,
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of Oblivion. Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know,
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within. Come Escalus,
You must walk by us on our other hand:
And good supporters are you.

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Pet. Now is your time:
Speak loud, and kneel before him.
Isa. Justice, O Royal Duke! vail your regard
Upon a wrong'd, (I would fain have said, a Maid):
Oh worthy Prince, dishonour not your Eye
By throwing it on any other Object,
Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And give me Justice, Justice, Justice, Justice.
Du. Relate your wrongs;
In what, by whom? be brief:
Here is Lord Angelo shall give you Justice;
Reveal your self to him.
Isa. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me seek Redemption of the Devil:
Hear me your self; for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redress from you:
Hear me; Oh hear me here!
Ang. My Lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of Justice.
Isa. By course of Justice!
Ang. And she will speak most bitterly. & Strange.
Isa. Most strange; but yet most truly will I speak:
That Angelo's forsworn: is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murtherer: is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator:
Is it not strange? and strange?
Du. Nay, it is ten times strange.
Isa. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth
To th' end of reckoning.
Du. Away with her: poor soul,
She speaks this in th' infirmity of sense.
Isa. Oh Prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st
There is another comfort than this World,
That thou neglect me not, with that Opinion,
That I am touch'd with madness: make not impossible
That which but seems unlike; 'tis not impossible
But one, the wicked'st Caitiff on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute
As Angelo; even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings, caracts, titles, forms,
Be an Arch-villain; believe it, Royal Prince,
If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,
Had I more name for badness.
Du. By mine honesty,
If she be mad, as I believe no other,
Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As e're I heard in madness.
Isa. O gracious Duke,
Harp not on that; and do not banish Reason
For inequality; but let your Reason serve
To make the truth appear where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.
Du. Many that are not mad
Have sure more lack of Reason.
What would you say?
Isa. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the act of Fornication,
To lose his head, condemn'd by Angelo:
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio, being
As then the Messenger.
Luc. That's I, an't like your Grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poor brother's pardon.
Isa. That's he indeed.
Du. You were not bid to speak. / To Lucio.
Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.
Du. I wish you now then;
Pray you take note of it: and when you have
A business for your self, pray heaven you then
Be perfect.
Luc. I warrant your honour. / Be sure
Du. The Warrant's for your self; take heed to't.
Isa. This Gentleman told something of my tale.
Luc. Right.
Du. It may be right, but you are i' the wrong
To speak before your time. proceed.
Isa. I went
To this pernicious Caitiff Deputy.
Du. That's somewhat madly spoken.
Isa. Pardon it.
The phrase is to the matter. Mended
Du. Mended again: the matter; proceed.
Isa. In brief; to set the needless by, how case
How I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd,
How he refell'd me, and how I replyed
(For this was of much length) the vile conclusion
I now begin with grief and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust,
Release my brother; and after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yeild to him. But the next morn betimes,
His purpose forfeiting, he sends a Warrant
For my poor brother's head.
Du. This is most likely.
Isa. Oh that it were as like as it is true! (speak'st;
Du. By heaven (fond wench), thou know'st not what thou
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hateful practise. First, his Integrity
Stands without blemish: next, it imports no Reason,
That with such vehemence he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off: some one hath set you on:
Confess the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou cam'st here to complain.
Isa. And is this all?
Then Oh you blessed Ministers above,
Keep me in patience; and with ripened time,
Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up
In countenance! Heaven shield your Grace from woe,
As I thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved go.
Du. I know you'ld fain be gone. An Officer;
To prison with her. Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be practise.
Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?
Isa. One that I would were here, Frier Lodowick.
Du. A ghostly Father belike:
Who knows that Lodowick?
Luc. My Lord, I know him; 'tis a meddling Frier;
I do not like the man; had he been Lay, my Lord,
For certain words he spake against your Grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.
Du. Words against me? this a good Frier belike,

And

And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute! Let this Frier be found.
Luc. But yesternight, my Lord, she and that Friar,
I saw them at the prison: a sawcy Friar,
A very scurvy fellow.
Pet. Blessed be your [redacted] Grace:
I have stood by, my Lord, and I have heard
Your Royal Ear abus'd; first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or soil with her,
As she from one ungot.
Du. We did believe no less.
Know you that Frier Lodowick [redacted]
Pet. I know him for a man divine and holy;
Not scurvy, nor a temporary medler,
As he's reported by this Gentleman;
And on my trust, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) misreport your Grace. he did
Luc. My Lord, most villanously; believe it.
Pet. Well; he in time may come to clear himself;
But at this instant he is sick, my Lord,
Of a strange Fever. Upon his meer Request,
Being come to knowledg, that there was complaint
Intended against Lord Angelo, came I hither
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true and false: and what he [redacted] his Oath, upon
And all probation, will [redacted] clear make up
Whensoever he is convented: First, for this woman,
To justifie this worthy Nobleman,
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes,
Till she her self confess it.
Du. Good Friar, let's hear it:
Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
Ah heaven! the vanity of wretched fools! ——
Give us some seats; come Cousin Angelo,
In this I'll be impartial: be you Judge
Of your own Cause. Is this the Witness, Friar? Isabel is carry'd out

Scene III.

Enter Mariana. Veil'd.

First, let her shew her face, and after speak.
Mar. Pardon, my Lord, I will not shew my face
Until my husband bid me.
Du. What, are you married?
Mar. No, my Lord.
Du. Are you a maid?
Mar. No, my Lord.
Du. A Widow then?
Mar. Neither my Lord.
Du. Why, are you nothing then? neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife?
Luc. My Lord, she may be a Punk; for many of them are neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife.
Du. Silence that fellow: I would he had some cause to prattle for himself.
Luc. Well, my Lord.
Mar. My Lord, I do confess I ne're was married,
And I confess besides, I am no maid;
I have known my husband, yet my husband
Knows not, that ever he knew me.
Luc. He was drunk then, my Lord; it can be no better.
Du. For the benefit of silence, would thou wert so too.
Luc. Well, my Lord.
Du. This is no Witness for Lord Angelo.
Mar. Now I come to't, my Lord.
She that accuses him of Fornication,
In self-same manner doth accuse my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with such a time,
When I'le depose I had him in mine arms,
With all th' effect of Love.
Ang. Charges she more than me?
Mar. Not that I know.
Du. No? you say, your husband. To Mariana.
Mar. Why, just, my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinks he knows, that he ne're knew my body;
But knows, he thinks, that he knows Isabels.
Ang. This is a strange abuse: Let's see thy face.
Mar. My husband bids me; now I will unmask. [Unveilin
This is that face, thou cruel Angelo,
Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vow'd contract,
Was fast belockt in thine: This is the body
That took away the match from Isabel,
And did supply thee at thy Garden-house
In her imagin'd person.
Du. Know you this woman?
Luc. Carnally, she says.
Du. Sirrah, no more.
Luc. Enough, [redacted].
Ang. My Lord, I must confess I know this woman;
And five years since there was some speech of marriage
Betwixt my self and her; which was broke off,
Partly for that her promised proportions
Come short of composition; but in chief,
For that her Reputation was dis-valued
In levity; since which time of five years,
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,
Upon my faith and honour.
Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from breath,
As there is sense in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affianced this man's Wife as strongly
As words could make up Vows: And my good Lord,
But Tuesday night last gone, in's Garden-house
He knew me as a Wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees;
Or else for ever be confixed here
A Marble Monument.
Ang. I did but smile till now.
Now, good my Lord, give me the scope of Justice;
My patience here is touch'd; I do perceive
These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member
That sets them on. Let me have way, my Lord,
To find this practice out.
Du. Ay, with my heart;
And punish them to your height of pleasure.
Thou Foolish Frier, and thou pernicious woman,
Compact with her that's gone; think'st thou thy Oaths,
Tho' they would swear down each particular Saint,
Were testimonies 'gainst his worth and credit,
That's seal'd in approbation? You, Lord Escalus,
Sit with my Cousin; lend him your kind pains
To find out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd.
There is another Frier that set them on;
Let him be sent for.
Pet. Would he were here, my Lord; for he indeed
Hath set the women on to this complaint:
Your Provost knows the place where he abides;
And he may fetch him.
Du. [redacted], do it instantly:
And you my noble and well-warranted Cousin
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best
In any chastisement: I for a while
Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have
Well determin'd upon these slanderers. [Exit.
Esc. My Lord, we'l do it throughly; Signior Lucio, did not you say, you knew that Frier Lodowick to be a dishonest person? Scene IV.
Luc. Cucullus non facit Monachum; honest in nothing but in his cloathes, and one that hath spoke most villanous speeches of the Duke.
Esc. We shall intreat you to abide here till he come, and inforce them against him; we shall find this Frier a notable fellow.
Luc. As any in Vienna on my word.

Esc. Call that same Isabel here once again, I would speak with her: pray you, my Lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.

Luc. Not better than he, by her own Report.

Esc. Say you?

Luc. Marry, sir, I think if you handled her privately, She should sooner confess; perchance publickly she'll be asham'd.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Esc. I will go darkly to work with her.

Luc. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.

Esc. Come on, Mistris: here's a Gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the Rascal I spoke of, Here with the Provost.

Esc. In very good time: speak not you to him till we call upon you.

Luc. Mum.

Esc. Come sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confess'd you did.

Du. 'Tis false.

Esc. How? know you where you are?

Du. Respect to your great place! and let the Devil Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne. Where is the Duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Esc. The Duke's in us; and we will hear you speak: Look you speak justly.

Du. Boldly at least. But Oh poor souls, Come you to seek the Lamb here of the Fox? Good night to your Redress: is the Duke gone? Then is your cause gone too. The Duke's unjust, Thus to retort your manifest appeal, And put your tryal in the Villain's mouth Which here you come to accuse.

Luc. This is the Rascal; this is he I spoke of.

Esc. Why, thou unreverend and unhallowed Frier: Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women, To accuse this worthy man; but in foul mouth, And in the witness of his proper ear, To call him Villain; and then to glance from him To th' Duke himself, to tax him with injustice? Take him hence; to th' Rack with him: we'l towze you Joynt by joynt, but we will know his purpose: What? unjust?

Du. Be not so hot: the Duke dare No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own: his Subject am I not, Nor here Provincial; My business in this State Made me a looker on here in Vienna; Where I have seen corruption boyl and bubble, Till it o're-run the Stew: Laws for all faults, But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong statutes Stand like the Forfeits in a Barber's-shop, * As much in mock as mark.

Esc. Slander to th' State! Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him, signior Lucio? Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord. come hither, Goodman Baldpate: do you know me?

Du. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison in the absence of the Duke.

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke?

Du. Most notedly, sir.

Luc. Do you so, sir? And was the Duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Du. You must (sir) change persons with me, e're you make that my Report: you indeed spoke so of him, and much more, much worse.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow! did not I pluck thee by the Nose for thy speeches?

Du. I protest, I love the Duke as I love my self.

Ang. Hark how the Villain would close now after his treasonable abuses.

Esc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withal: Away with him to prison: Where is the Provost? away with him to prison: lay bolts enough upon him; let him speak no more: away with those Giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

Du. Stay, sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, resists he? help him, Lucio.

Luc. Come sir; come sir, come sir: foh, sir: why you bald-pated lying Rascal; you must be hooded, must you? show your knave's visage, with a pox to you; show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour? will't not off? Pulls off the Friar's hood & discovers the Duke.

Du. Thou art the first knave that e're mad'st a Duke. First, Provost, let me bail these gentle three: Sneak not away, sir; for the Frier and you Must have a word anon: lay hold on him. To Lucio.

Luc. This may prove worse than hanging.

Du. What you have spoke, I pardon; sit you down: We'll borrow place of him; Sir, by your leave: To Escalus. Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee Office? If thou hast, To Angelo Rely upon it till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh my dread Lord, I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be undiscernable, When I perceive your Grace, like power Divine, Hath look'd upon my passes: Then, good Prince, No longer Session hold upon my shame; But let my trial be mine own confession: Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Du. Come hither, Mariana: Say: was't thou ever contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my Lord.

Du. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly. Do you the Office (Frier) which consummate: Return him here again: go with him, Provost. Exeunt

Esc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonour, Than at the strangeness of it.

Du. Come hither, Isabel; Your Frier is now your Prince: As I was then Advertising, and holy, to your business (Not changing heart with habit), I am still, Attornied at your service. Scene V.

Isa. Oh give me pardon, That I, your Vassal, have employ'd and pain'd Your unknown Soveraignty.

Du. You are pardon'd, Isabel: And now, dear Maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart: And you may marvel, why I obscur'd my self, Labouring to save his life; and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power: Than let him be so lost: Oh most kind Maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, (Which I did think with slower foot came on,) That brain'd my purpose: but peace be with him! That life is better life, past fearing death, Than that which lives to fear: make it your comfort, So happy is your brother. Scene VI.

Enter Angelo, Maria, Peter, Provost.

Isa. I do, my Lord.

Du. For this new-married man, approaching here, Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd Your well-defended honour; you must pardon him, For Mariana's sake: But as he adjudg'd your brother,

Being

* It is a custom in the Shop's of all mechanick's to make it a forfeiture for any Stranger to use or take up the tools of their trade. In a Barber's shop especially, when hebe to fore Barbers practis'd the undergarts of Surgery, their Instruments being of a nice kind, & their Shops generally full of Idle people [illegible] forfeiture also required for meddling

Being criminal, in double violation
Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependant for your brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law crys out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
An Angelo for Claudio; death for death:
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure;
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure.
Then Angelo, thy fault's manifested: are
Which tho thou would'st deny, denies thee vantage.
We do condemn thee to the very Block.
Where Claudio stoop'd to death; and with like haste,
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my most gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mock me with a husband.

Du. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband,
Consenting to the safe-guard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit; else imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,
And choak your good to come: for his possessions,
Altho by confiscation they are ours,
We do enstate, and widow you withal,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my dear Lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Du. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mar. Gentle my Leige.

Du. You do but lose your labour.
Away with him to death. Now sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, sweet Isabel, take my part;
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to do you service.

Du. Against all sense you do importune her;
Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact,
Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Isabel;
Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me,
Hold up your hands, say nothing; I'll speak all.
They say, best men are moulded out of faults;
And for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Du. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isa. Most bounteous sir, Kneeling.
Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd: I partly think,
A due sincerity governed his deeds,
Till he did look on me: Since it is so,
Let him not die: my brother had but Justice,
In that he did the thing for which he di'd.
For Angelo, his act did not o're-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subjects;
Intents, but meerly thoughts.

Mar. Meerly, my Lord.

Du. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I say:
I have bethought me of another fault.
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?

Pro. It was commanded so.

Du. Had you a special Warrant for the deed?

Pro. No, my good Lord; it was by private message.

Du. For which I do discharge you of your Office:
Give up your keys.

Pro. Pardon me, Noble Lord.
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not;
Yet did repent me after more advice;
For testimony whereof, one in the prison,
That should by private Order else have di'd,
I have reserv'd alive.

Du. What's he?

Pro. His name is Barnardine.

Du. I would'st thou hast done so by Claudio:
Go fetch him hither; let me look upon him. Exit Prov.

Esc. I am sorry one so learned, and so wise
As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grosly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Ang. I am sorry, that such sorrow I procure;
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy:
'Tis my deserving, and I do intreat it.

Scene VII

Enter Barnardine, and Provost, Claudio, Julietta.

Du. Which is that Barnardine?

Pro. This, my Lord.

Du. There was a Friar told me of this man:
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this World,
And squar'st thy life accordingly: Thou'rt condemn'd;
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all:
I pray thee take this mercy to provide
For better times to come: Friar, advise him;
I leave him to you. What muffled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
Who should have di'd when Claudio lost his head,
As like almost to Claudio as himself. [Uncovers him.

Du. If he be like your brother, for his sake [To Isabel
Is he pardon'd, and for your lovely sake
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine;
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that.
By this Lord Angelo perceives he's safe;
Methinks I see a quickning in his eye:
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well;
Look that you love your Wife: her worth worth yours.
I find an apt remission in my self:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon,
You, sirrah, that knew me for a fool, a coward, To Lucio
One all of Luxury, an ass, a mad man;
Wherein have I so deserved of you,
That you extol me thus?

Luc. 'Faith, my Lord, I spoke it but according to the trick; if you will hang me for it, you may, but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipt.

Du. Whipt first, sir, and hang'd after.
Proclaim it, Provost, round about the City:
If any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow
(As I have heard him swear himself, there's one Whom he begot with child), let her appear,
And he shall marry her; the nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whip'd and hang'd.

Luc. I beseech your Highness, do not marry me to a Whore: your Highness said even now, I made you a Duke; good my Lord do not recompence me in making me a Cuckold.

Du. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her:
Thy slanders I forgive, and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits; take him to prison.
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Luc. Marrying a punk, my Lord, is pressing to death,
Whipping and hanging.

Du. Slandering a Prince deserves it.
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore. Her. L. G. H.
Joy to you, Mariana! love her, Angelo:
I have confess'd her, and I know her vertue.
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:
There's more behind that is more gratulate:
Thanks Provost for thy care and secresie;
We shall imploy thee in a worthier place:
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's;
Th' Offence pardons it self. Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine:
So bring us to our Palace, where we'll show
What's yet behind that's meet you all should know. Exeunt

THE
Comedy of Errors. ×

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. Ephesus.

Enter the Duke of Epheſus, with the Merchant of Syracuſa, Jaylor, and other attendants.

Merchant.

PRoceed Salinus to procure my fall,
And by thy doom of death end woes (and all.
Duke. Merchant of Syracuſa, plead (no more;
I am not partial to infringe our (Laws:
The enmity and diſcord which of (late
Sprung from the rancorous Outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants, our well-dealing Countrymen,
Who wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have ſeal'd his rigorous ſtatutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pity from our threatning looks.
For ſince the mortal and inteſtine jars
'Twixt thy ſeditious Countrymen and us,
'T hath in ſolemn Synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracuſians and our ſelves,
T'admit no traffick to our adverſe Towns:
Nay, more; if any born at Epheſus
Be ſeen at any Syracuſian Marts and Fairs:
Again, if any Syracuſian born,
Come to the Bay of Epheſus, he dies;
His goods confiſcate to the Duke's diſpoſe,
Unleſs a thouſand Marks be levied
To quit the penalty, and ranſome him:
Thy ſubſtance, valued at the higheſt rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred Marks;
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.
Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewiſe with the Evening Sun.
Du. Well, Syracuſian, ſay in brief the cauſe,
Why thou departed'ſt from thy native home?
And for what cauſe thou cam'ſt to Epheſus?
Mer. A heavier task could not have neen impos'd,
Than I to ſpeak my grief unſpeakable:
Yet that the World may witneſs, that my end
Was wrought by Nature, not by vile Offence,
I'le utter what my ſorrow gives me leave:
In Syracuſa was I born, and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me too, had not our hap been bad:
With her I liv'd in joy, our Wealth encreaſt
By proſperous Voyages I often made
To Epidamnum, till my Factor's death;
And he great ſtore of goods at random leaving,
Drew me from kind embracements of my ſpouſe;
From whom my abſence was not ſix months old,
Before her ſelf (almoſt at fainting under
The pleaſing puniſhment that women bear)
Had made proviſion for her following me,
And ſoon, and ſafe arrived where I was.
There had ſhe not been long, but ſhe became
A joyful mother of two goodly ſons;
And, which was ſtrange, the one ſo like the other,
As could not be diſtinguiſh'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the ſelf-ſame Inn,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of ſuch a burthen, Male-twins both alike:
Thoſe, for their parents were exceeding poor,
I bought, and brought up to attend my ſons.
My Wife not meanly proud of two ſuch boys,

Made

× The Plot taken from the Menæchmi of Plautus.

Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed; alas! too soon we came aboard.
A league from Epidamnum had we sail'd
Before the always wind-obeying deep,
Gave any tragick instance of our harm;
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant,
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
Which tho my self would gladly have embrac'd,
Yet the incessant weeping of my Wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc't me to seek delays for them and me:
And this it was, (for other means was none):
The Sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the Ship then sinking-ripe to us;
My Wife, more careful for the [redacted] born,
Had fastened him unto a small spare Mast,
Such as Sea-faring men provide for storms;
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whil'st I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my Wife, and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Fastned our selves at either end the Mast,
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the Sun gazing upon the earth,
Dispers't those vapours that offended us;
And by the benefit of his wish'd light,
The Seas waxt calm, and we discovered
Two Ships from far, making amain to us;
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this;
But e're they came, Oh let me say no more;
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Du. Nay, forward Old man, do not break off so;
For we may pity, tho not pardon thee.

Mer. Oh, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily term'd them merciless to us;
For e're the Ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty Rock;
Which being violently born upon,
Our helpful Ship was splitted in the midst:
So that in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike,
What to delight in, what to sorrow for,
Her part, poor soul, seeming as burdened,
With lesser weight, but not with lesser wo,
Was carried with more speed before the wind,
And in our sight they three were taken up
By Fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another Ship had seiz'd on us;
And knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave helpful welcome to their Shipwreck'd guests,
And would have reft the Fishers of their prey,
Had not their Bark been very slow of sail;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Du. And for the sakes of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full,
What hath befall'n them and thee till now.

Mer. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At Eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me,
That his attendant, (for his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name),
Might bear him company in the quest of him:
Whom whil'st I laboured of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five Summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And coasting homeward, came to Ephesus:
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought,
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Du. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have markt
To bear th' extremity of dire mishap;
Now trust me, were it not against our Laws,
Against my Crown, my Oath, my Dignity,
Which Princes would, they may not disanull,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee:
But tho thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd,
But to our honours great disparagement;
Yet will I favour thee in what I can;
Therefore, Merchant, I'll limit thee this day
To seek thy life by beneficial help:
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if not, then thou art doom'd to die:
Jaylor, take him to thy custody.

Jay. I will, my Lord.

Mer. Hopeless and helpless doth Ægeon wend,
But to procrastinate his livelesse end. [Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis of Syracuse, a Merchant, and Dromio.

Mer. Therefore give out, you are of Epidamnum,
Lest that your goods be too soon confiscate:
This very day a Syracusan Merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the Statute of the Town,
Dies e're the weary Sun sets in the West:
There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. Go bear it to the Centaure, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee;
Till that I'll view the manners of the Town:
Within this hour it will be dinner-time;
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine Inn;
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a means. [Exit Dromio.

Ant. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the Town,
And then go to the Inn and dine with me?

E. Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain Merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I crave your pardon, soon at five a clock,
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the Mart,
And afterward consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. Farewel till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the City.

E. Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exit Mer.

Ant. He that commends me to my own content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean seeks another drop,
Who falling there to find his fellow forth,
(Unseen, inquisitive) confounds himself:
So I, to find a Mother and a Brother,
In quest of them (unhappy) lose my self.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Here comes the Almanack of my true date.
What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon.

E. Dro. Return'd ſo ſoon, rather approacht too late:
The Capon burns, the Pig falls from the ſpit:
The clock hath ſtrucken twelve upon the bell;
My Miſtris made it one upon my cheek;
She is ſo hot becauſe the meat is cold;
The meat is cold becauſe you come not home;
You come not home becauſe you have no ſtomach;
You have no ſtomach having broke your faſt:
But we that know what 'tis to faſt and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.

Ant. Stop in your wind, ſir; tell me this I pray,
Where have you left the money that I gave you?

E. Dro. Oh, ſix pence that I had a Wedneſday laſt,
To pay the Sadler for my Miſtris Crupper?
The Sadler had it, ſir; I kept it not.

Ant. I am not in a ſportive humour now;
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being ſtrangers here, how dar'ſt thou truſt
So great a charge from thine own cuſtody?

E. Dro. I pray you jeſt, ſir, as you ſit at dinner:
I from my Miſtris come to you in poſt;
If I return, I ſhall be poſt indeed:
For ſhe will ſcour your fault upon my pate:
Methinks your maw, like mine, ſhould be your Cook,
And ſtrike you home without a meſſenger.

Ant. Come Dromio, come, theſe jeſts are out of ſeaſon;
Reſerve them till a merrier hour than this:
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

E. Dro. To me, ſir? why, you gave no gold to me.

Ant. Come on, ſir knave, have done your fooliſhneſs,
And tell me how thou haſt diſpos'd thy charge?

E. Dro. My charge was but to fetch you from the Mart
Home to your houſe (the Phœnix, ſir), to dinner:
My Miſtris and her ſiſter ſtaies for you.

Ant. Now as I am a Chriſtian anſwer me,
In what ſafe place you have beſtow'd my money;
Or I ſhall break that merry ſconce of yours,
That ſtands on tricks when I am undiſpos'd:
Where is the thouſand marks thou hadſt of me?

E Dro. I have ſome marks of yours upon my pate;
Some of my Miſtris marks upon my ſhoulders;
But not a thouſand marks between you both.
If I ſhould pay your Worſhip thoſe again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. Thy Miſtris marks? what Miſtris, ſlave, haſt thou?

E. Dro. Your Worſhip's Wife, my Miſtris at the Phœnix;
She that doth faſt till you come home to dinner;
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Ant. What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face,
Being forbid? There, take you that, ſir knave.

E. Dro. What mean you, ſir? for God ſake hold your hands:
Nay, and you will not, ſir, I'll take my heels.

Exit Dromio Ep.

Ant. Upon my life, by ſome device or other,
The Villain is o're-wrought of all my money.
They ſay, this Town is full of cozenage:
As nimble Juglers that deceive the eye;
Dark-working Sorcerers that change the mind:
Soul-killing Witches that deform the body;
Diſguiſed Cheaters, prating Mountebanks,
And many ſuch like liberties of ſin:
If it prove ſo, I will be gone the ſooner:
I'll to the Centaur to ſeek this ſlave:
I greatly fear my money is not ſafe.

Exit.

Actus Secundus.

The Houſe of Antipholis of Ephesus.

Enter Adriana, Wife to Antipholis Sereptus, with Luciana, her Siſter.

Adr. Neither my husband, nor the ſlave return'd,
That in ſuch haſte I ſent to ſeek his Maſter?
Sure, Luciana, it is two a clock.

Luc. Perhaps ſome Merchant hath invited him,
And from the Mart he's ſomewhere gone to dinner:
Good ſiſter, let us dine, and never fret:
A man is Maſter of his liberty:
Time is their Maſter; and when they ſee time,
They'll go or come; if ſo, be patient, ſiſter.

Adr. Why ſhould their liberty than ours be more?

Luc. Becauſe their buſineſs ſtill lies out adoor.

Adr. Look, when I ſerve him ſo, he takes it ill.

Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but aſſes will be bridled ſo.

Luc. Why, head-ſtrong liberty is laſht with woe:
There's nothing ſituate under heavens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in ſea, in ſky.
The beaſts, the fiſhes, and the winged fowls,
Are their males ſubjects, and at their controuls:
Man more divine, the Maſter of all theſe,
Lord of the wide world, and wide watry ſeas,
Indued with intellectual ſenſe and ſoul,
Of more preheminence than fiſh and fowl,
Are Maſters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This ſervitude makes you to keep unwed.

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.

Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear ſome ſway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practiſe to obey.

Adr. How if your husband ſtart ſome other where?

Luc. Till he come home again I would forbear.

Adr. Patience unmov'd, no marvel tho ſhe pauſe;
They can be meek that have no other cauſe:
A wretched ſoul bruis'd with adverſity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burd'ned with like weight of pain,
As much, or more we ſhould our ſelves complain;
So thou that haſt no unkind mate to grieve thee,
With urging helpleſs patience would relieve me:
But if thou live to ſee like right bereft,
This fool-beg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day but to try:
Here comes your man, now is your husband nigh.

Scene II.

Enter Dromio Eph.

Adr. Say, is your tardy Maſter now at hand?

E. Dro. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witneſs.

Adr. Say, didſt thou ſpeak with him? know'ſt thou his mind?

E. Dro. Ay, he told his mind upon mine ear,
Beſhrew his hand, I ſcarce could underſtand it.

Luc. Spake he ſo doubtfully, thou could'ſt not feel his meaning?

E. Dro. Nay, he ſtruck ſo plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withal ſo doubtfully, that I could ſcarce underſtand them.

Adr. But ſay, I prithee, is he coming home?
It ſeems he hath great care to pleaſe his wife.

E. Dro. Why, Miſtris, ſure my Maſter is horn-mad.

Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain?

E. Dro. I mean not Cuckold-mad;
But ſure he is ſtark mad:

When

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold:
'Tis dinner-time, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burn, quoth I; my gold, quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I? my gold, quoth he:
Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, Villain?
The Pig, quoth I, is burn'd; my gold, quoth he:
My Mistris sir, quoth I; hang up thy Mistris;
I know not thy Mistris; out on thy Mistris.

Luc. Quoth who?

E. Dro. Quoth my Master: I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no Mistris: so that my errand, due unto my tongue, I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders: for in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dro. Go back again, and be new beaten home? For God's sake send some other Messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. And he will bless that cross with other beating: Between you I shall have a holy head.

Adr. Hence prating peasant, fetch thy Master home.

Dro. Am I so round with you as you with me, That like a foot-ball you do spurn me thus? You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither: If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. Exit.

Luc. Fie, how impatience lowreth in your face!

Adr. His company must do his minions grace, Whil'st I at home starve for a merry look: Hath homely age th' alluring beauty took From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it. Are my discourses dull? barren my wit? If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd, Unkindness blots it more than Marble hard. Do their gay Vestments his affections bait? That's not my fault; he's master of my state. What Ruines are in me that can be found, By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground Of my defeatures. My decayed fair, A sunny look of his would soon repair. But (too unruly Deer) he breaks the pale, And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.

Luc. Self-harming jealousie; fie, beat it hence.

Ad. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense: I know his eye doth homage other-where; Or else what lets it but he would be here? Sister, you know he promised me a chain, Would that alone, alone he would detain, So he would keep fair quarter with his bed. I see the Jewel best enamelled Will lose his beauty; yet the gold bides still That others touch, and often touching will: × Yet Since that my beauty cannot please his eye, I'le weep (what's left) away, and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad Jealousie?

Exeunt.

Scene IV

Enter Antipholis [redacted] of Syracuse.

Ant. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up Safe at the Centaur, and the heedful slave Is wandred forth in care to seek me out. By computation, and mine hosts report, I could not speak with Dromio, since at first I sent him from the Mart: see here he comes.

Enter Dromio Syracusan.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter'd? As you love strokes, so jest with me again: You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold? Your Mistris sent to have me home to dinner? My house was at the Phœnix? Wast thou mad, That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

S. Dro. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?

E. Ant. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.

S. Dro. I did not see you since you sent me hence Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. Villain, thou did'st deny the golds Receipt And told'st me of a Mistris and a dinner. For which I hope thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

S. Dro. I am glad to see you in this merry vein: What means this jest, I pray you, Master, tell me?

Ant. Yea, do'st thou jeer and flout me in the teeth? Think'st thou I jest? hold, take thou that, and that. Beats Dro.

S. Dro. Hold, sir, for God's sake, now your jest is earnest: Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Ant. Because that I familiarly sometimes Do use you for my fool, and chat with you, Your sawciness will jest upon my love, And make a Common of my serious hours. When the Sun shines let foolish gnats make sport, But creep in crannies when he hides his beams: If you will jest with me, know my aspect, And fashion your demeanor to my looks; Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

S. Dro. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head: and you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and insconce it too, or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders: but I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. Dost thou not know?

S. Dro. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. Shall I tell you why?

S. Dro. I, sir, and wherefore; for they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. Why, first for flouting me, and then wherefore, for urging it the second time to me.

S. Dro. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season, when in the Why and the Wherefore is neither Rime nor Reason. Well, sir, I thank you.

Ant. Thank me, sir, for what?

S. Dro. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. I'le make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?

S. Dro. No, sir: I think the Meat wants that I have.

Ant. In good time, sir; what's that?

S. Dro. Basting.

Ant. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.

S. Dro. If it be, sir, I pray you eat not of it.

Ant. Your Reason?

S. Dro. Lest it make you chollerick, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time: there's a time for all things.

S. Dro. I durst have denied that before you were so chollerick.

Ant. By what Rule, sir?

S. Dro. Marry, sir, by a Rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father Time himself.

Ant. Let's hear it.

S. Dro. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by Nature.

Ant. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

S. Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a Periwig, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. Why, is Time such a niggard of hair, being (as it is) so plentiful an excrement?

S. Dro. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts; and what he hath scanted them in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

S. Dro. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

S. Dro.

× wear Gold: & so no man that hath a name
But falshood & corruption doth it shame

Omitted by S. T. H.

S. Dro. The plainer dealer, the ſooner loſt; yet he loſeth it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. For what Reaſon?

S. Dro. For two, and ſound ones too.

Ant. Nay, not ſound ones I pray you.

S. Dro. Sure ones then.

An. Nay, not ſure in a thing falſing.

S. Dro. Certain ones then.

An. Name them.

S. Dro. The one to ſave the money that he ſpends in trying; the other, that at dinner they ſhould not drop in his porrage.

An. You would all this time have prov'd, there is no time for all things.

S. Dro. Marry, and did, ſir; namely, no time to recover hair loſt by nature.

An. But your Reaſon was not ſubſtantial, why there is no time to recover.

S. Dro. Thus I mend it: Time himſelf is bald, and therefore to the World's end, will have bald followers.

An. I knew 'twould be a bald concluſion: but ſoft, who wafts us yonder?

Scene V

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholis, look ſtrange and frown;
Some other Miſtris hath ſome ſweet aſpects;
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou unurg'd would'ſt vow,
That never words were muſick to thine ear,
That never Object pleaſing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat ſweet-ſavour'd in thy taſte,
Unleſs I ſpake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd [illegible].
How comes it now, (my husband), Oh how comes it,
That thou art then eſtranged from thy ſelf?
Thy ſelf, I call it, being ſtrange to me:
That undividable Incorporate
Am better than thy dear ſelf's better part.
Ah do not tear away thy ſelf from me;
For know my love: as eaſie maiſt thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
And take unmingled thence that drop again
Without addition or diminiſhing,
As take from me thy ſelf, and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,
Should'ſt thou hear I were licentious?
And that this body conſecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Luſt ſhould be contaminate?
Would'ſt thou not ſpit at me, and ſpurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,
And tear the ſtain'd skin of my Harlot-brow,
And from my falſe hand cut the Wedding-Ring,
And break it with a deep-divorcing-vow?
I know thou canſt; and therefore ſee thou do it.
I am poſſeſt with an adulterate blot;
My blood is mingled with the crime of luſt:
For if we two be one, and thou play falſe,
I do digeſt the poyſon of my fleſh,
Being ſtrumpeted by thy contagion.
Keep then fair league, and truce with thy true bed:
I live diſtain'd, thou undiſhonoured.

Ant. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not:
In Epheſus I am but two hours old,
As ſtrange unto your town as to your talk,
Who every word by all my wit being ſcann'd,
Wants wit in all one word to underſtand.

Luc. Fie, brother, how the World is chang'd with you!
When were you wont to uſe my ſiſter thus?
She ſent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. By Dromio?

Dro. By me.

Adr. By thee; and thus thou didſt return from him,
That he did buffet thee, and in his blows,
Denied my houſe for his, me for his Wife.

Ant. Did you converſe, ſir, with this Gentlewoman?
What is the courſe and drift of your compact?

S. Dro. I, ſir? I never ſaw her till this time.

Ant. Villain, thou lieſt; for even her very words
Didſt thou deliver to me on the Mart.

S. Dro. I never ſpake with her in all my life.

Ant. How can ſhe thus then call us by our names,
Unleſs it be by inſpiration?

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity,
To counterfeit thus groſly with your ſlave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood?
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will faſten on this ſleeve of thine;
Thou art an Elm, my husband, I a Vine:
Whoſe weakneſs married to thy ſtronger ſtate,
Makes me with thy ſtrength to communicate:
If ought poſſeſs thee from me, it is droſs,
Uſurping Ivy, Brier, or idle Moſs,
Who all for want of pruning, with intruſion,
Infect thy Sap, and live on thy confuſion.

Ant. To me ſhe ſpeaks; ſhe moves me for her theam:
What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or ſleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiſs?
Until I know this ſure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the free'd fallacy.

Luc. Dromio, Go bid the ſervants ſpread for dinner.

S. Dro. Oh for my beads, I croſs me for a ſinner.
This is the Fairy land: Oh ſpight of ſpights:
We talk with Goblins, Owls, and Elves Sprights:
If we obey them not, this will enſue,
They'll ſuck our breath, or pinch us black and blew.

Luc. Why prait'ſt thou to thy ſelf,
Dromio, thou Dromio, ſnail, thou ſlug, thou ſot?

S. Dro. I am transformed, Maſter, am I not?

Ant. I think thou art in mind, and ſo am I.

S. Dro. Nay, Maſter, both in mind and in my ſhape.

Ant. Thou haſt thine own form.

S. Dro. No: I am an Ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Aſs.

S. Dro. 'Tis true, ſhe rides me, and I long for graſs.
'Tis ſo: I am an Aſs: elſe it could never be:
But I ſhould know her as well as ſhe knows me.

Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep,
Whil'ſt Man and Maſter laughs my woes to ſcorn.
Come, ſir, to dinner; Dromio, keep the gate;
Husband, I'll dine above with you to day,
And ſhrive you of a thouſand idle pranks;
Sirrah, if any ask you for your Maſter,
Say, he dines forth, and let no creature enter:
Come ſiſter; Dromio, play the Porter well.

Ant. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping, or waking, mad, or well adviſ'd?
Known unto theſe, and to my ſelf diſguis'd?
I'll ſay as they ſay, and perſevere ſo:
And in this miſt at all adventures go.

S. Dro. Maſter, ſhall I be Porter at the gate?

Adr. Ay, and let none enter, leſt I break your pate.

Luc. Come, come, Antipholis, we dine too late.

Exe.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Street Before Anti: Houſe

Enter Antipholis of Epheſus, his man Dromio, Angelo, the Goldſmith, and Balthazar the Merchant.

E. Ant. Good ſignior Angelo, you muſt excuſe us all:
My

My Wife is ſhrewiſh when I keep not hours;
Say, that I linger'd with you at your Shop
To ſee the making of her Carkanet,
And that to morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villain that would face me down,
He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thouſand Marks in gold;
And that I did deny my Wife and Houſe:
Thou drunkard thou, what did'ſt thou mean by this?

E. Dro. Say what you will, ſir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart, I have your hand to ſhow:
If the skin were parchment, & the blows you gave were ink,
Your hand-writing would tell you what I think.

E. Ant. I think thou art an aſs.

E. Dro. Marry, ſo it doth appear
By the wrongs I ſuffer, and the blows I bear:
I ſhould kick being kickt; and being at that paſs,
You would keep from my heels, and beware of an aſs.

E. An. Y'are ſad, Signior Balthazar: pray God our cheer
May anſwer my good will, and your good welcome here.

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap, ſir, & your welcome dear.

E. Ant. Ah ſignior Balthazar, either at fleſh or fiſh,
A table-full of welcome makes ſcarce one dainty diſh.

Bal. Good meat, ſir, is common, that every churl affords.

Ant. And welcome more common; for that's nothing but words.

Bal. Small cheer, and great welcome, makes a merry feaſt.

Ant. I, to a niggardly Hoſt, and more ſparing Gueſt:
But tho my cates be mean, take them in good part;
Better cheer may you have, but not with better heart.
But ſoft; my door is lockt; go bid them let us in.

E. Dro. Maud, Briget, Marian, Ciſly, Gillian, [redacted]

S. Dro. Mome, Malt-horſe, Capon, Coxcombe, Idiot Patch.
Either get thee from the door, or ſit down at the hatch:
Doſt thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'ſt for ſuch ſtore,
When one is one too many? go get thee from the door.

E. Dro. What patch is made our porter? my Maſter ſtays in the ſtreet.

S. Dro. Let him walk from whence he came, leſt he catch cold on's feet.

E. Ant. Who talks within there? hoa, open the door.

S. Dro. Right, ſir, I'le tell you when, and you'l tell me wherefore.

Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner? I have not din'd to day.

S. Dro. Nor to day here you muſt not: come again when you may.

Ant. What art thou that keep'ſt me out from the houſe I owe?

S. Dro. The Porter for this time, ſir, and my name is Dromio.

E. Dro. O Villain, thou haſt ſtol'n both mine Office and my Name.
The one ne're got me credit, the other mickle blame:
If thou had'ſt bid Dromio to day in my place,
Thou woul'ſt have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an aſs.

Enter Luce.

Luc. What a coile is there, Dromio? who are thoſe at the gate?

E. Dro. Let my Maſter in, Luce.

Luc. Faith, no; he comes too late; and ſo tell your Maſter.

E. Dro. O Lord, I muſt laugh: have at you with a Proverb.
Shall I ſet in my ſtaff.

Luc. Have at you with another; that's when? can you tell?

S. Dro. If thy name be called Luce, Luce, thou haſt anſwer'd him well.

Ant. Do you hear, you Minion, you'l let us in, I hope?

Luc. I thought to have askt you.

S. Dro. And you ſaid, no.

E. Dro. So, come, help, well ſtruck; there was blow for blow.

Ant. Thou baggage, let me in.

Luc. Can you tell for whoſe ſake?

E. Dro. Maſter, knock the door hard.

Luc. Let him knock till it ake.

Ant. You'l cry for this, Minion, if I beat the door down.

Luc. What needs all that, and a pair of ſtocks in the Town?

[redacted] Adriana. within

Adr. Who is that at the door that keeps all this noiſe?

S. Dro. By my troth, your Town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. Are you there, Wife? you might have come before.

Adr. Your Wife, ſir knave? go get you from the door.

E. Dro. If you went in pain, Maſter, this knave would go ſore.

Ang. Here is neither cheer, ſir, nor welcome; we would fain have either.

Baltz. In debating which was beſt, we ſhall part with neither.

E. Dro. They ſtand at the door, Maſter; bid them welcome hither.

Ant. There is ſomething in the wind, that we cannot get in.

E. Dro. You would ſay ſo, Maſter, if your garments were thin.
Your Cake here is warm within: you ſtand here in the cold.
It would make a man as mad as a Buck to be ſo bought and ſold.

Ant. Go fetch me ſomething, I'le break ope the gate.

S. Dro. Break, any breaking here, and I'le break your knaves pate.

E. Dro. A man may break a word with you, ſir, and words are but wind,
I, and break it in your face, ſo he break it not behinde.

S. Dro. It ſeems thou want'ſt breaking; Out upon thee, hinde.

E. Dro. Here's too much: Out upon thee; I pray thee let me in.

S. Dro. I, when fowls have no feathers, and fiſh have no fin.

Ant. Well, I'le break in: go borrow me a Crow.

E. Dro. A crow without feather, Maſter, mean you ſo?
For a fiſh without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:
If a crow help us in, ſirrah, we'l pluck a crow together.

Ant. Go, get thee gone, fetch me an Iron Crow.

Balth. Have patience, ſir: Oh let it not be ſo;
Herein you war againſt your Reputation,
And draw within the compaſs of ſuſpect,
Th'unviolated honour of your Wife.
Once this your long experience of her wiſdom,
Her ſober vertue, years, and modeſty,
Plead on your part ſome cauſe to you unknown;
And doubt not, ſir, but ſhe will well excuſe
Why at this time the doors are made againſt you.
Be rul'd by me, depart in patience,
And let us to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about evening come your ſelf alone,
To know the Reaſon of this ſtrange reſtraint.
If by ſtrong hand you offer to break in
Now in the ſtirring paſſage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that ſuppoſed by the common Rout,
Againſt your yet ungalled eſtimation,

That

That may with foul intrusion enter in,
And dwell upon your grave when you are dead;
For slander lives upon succession;
For ever hous'd where it once gets possession.
Ant. You have prevail'd; I will depart in quiet,
And in despight of mirth mean to be merry:
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretty and witty, wild, and yet too gentle;
There will we dine: this woman that I mean,
My Wife (but I protest without desert)
Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal:
To her will we to dinner, get you home,
And fetch the chain; by this I know 'tis made;
Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine;
For there's the house: That chain I will bestow
(Be it for nothing but to spight my Wife),
Upon my hostess there: good sir, make haste:
Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,
I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'l disdain me.
Ang. I'll meet you at that place, some hour, sir, hence.
Ant. Do so; this jest shall cost me some expence. Exeunt.

Scene II.

Enter Luciana, with Antipholis of Syracusa.

Luc. And may it be, that you have quite forgot
A husband's Office? Shall Antipholis, hate
Even in the spring of Love, thy Love-springs rot?
Shall love in buildings grow so ruinate?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then for her wealths-sake use her with more kindness:
Or if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth,
Muffle your false love with some shew of blindness;
Let not my sister read it in your eye;
Be not thy tongue thy own shames Orator;
Look sweet, speak fair; become disloyalty:
Apparel Vice like Vertues harbinger:
Bear a fair presence, tho your heart be tainted;
Teach sin the carriage of a holy Saint;
Be secret false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple thief brags of his own attain?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy looks at board:
Shame hath a bastard-frame, well managed;
Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word:
Alas poor women, make us not believe
(Being compact of credit), that you love us;
Tho others have the arm, shew us the sleeve:
We in your motion turn; and you may move us.
Then gentle brother, get you in again;
Comfort my sister, chear her, call her Wife:
'Tis holy sport to be a little vain,
When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife,
S. Ant. Sweet Mistress (what your name is else, I know not),
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine:
Less in your knowledg, and your grace you show not,
Than our earths wonder, more than earth, divine.
Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak;
Lay open to my earthy gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,
The foulded meaning of your words deceit;
Against my souls pure truth why labour you,
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transform me then, and to your power I'll yeild.
But if that I am I; then well I know,
Your weeping sister is no Wife of mine,
Nor to her bed a homage do I owe:
Far more, far more to you do I decline:
Oh train me not, sweet Mermaid with thy note,
To drown me in thy sisters flood of tears:
Sing Siren for thy self, and I will dote:
Spread o're the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take thee, and there lie:
And in that glorious supposition think,
He gains by death that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink.
Luc. What, are you mad, that you do reason so?
S. Ant. Not mad, but mated; how, I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.
S. Ant. For gazing on your beams, fair Sun being by.
Luc. Gaze when you should, and that will clear your sight.
S. Ant. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me, love? call my sister so.
S. Ant. Thy sisters sister.
Luc. That's my sister.
S. Ant. No: it is my self, mine own selfs better part:
Mine eyes clear eye, my dear hearts dearer heart,
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hopes aim,
My sole earths heaven, and my heavens claim.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be. mean
S. Ant. Call thy self, sister sweet; for I mean thee:
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life:
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife;
Give me thy hand.
Luc. Oh soft sir, hold you still:
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will. Exit Luc.

Scene III.

Enter Dromio, Siracusan.

S. Ant. Why how now, Dromio, where runn'st thou so fast?
S. Dro. Do you know me, sir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my self?
S. Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy self.
S. Dro. I am an ass, I am a womans man, and besides my self.
S. Ant. What womans man? and how besides thy self?
S. Dro. Marry sir, besides my self, I am due to a woman. One that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.
S. Ant. What claim lays she to thee?
S. Dro. Marry sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast; not that I being a beast, she would have me, but that she being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.
S. Ant. What is she?
S. Dro. A very reverent body: ay such a one as a man may not speak of, without he say, sir reverence: I have but lean luck in the match; and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.
S. Ant. How dost thou mean, a fat marriage?
S. Dro. Marry sir, she's the Kitchin-wench, and all grease, and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a Lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her Rags, and the Tallow in them, will burn a Poland Winter: if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole World.
S. Ant. What complexion is she of?
S. Dro. Swart, like my shooe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: for why? she sweats, a man may go over-shooes in the grime of it.
S. Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.
S. Dro. No, sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.
S. Ant. What's her name?
S. Dro. Nell, sir: but her name is three quarters; that's an Ell and three quarters will not measure her from hip to hip.
S. Ant. Then she bears some breadth?
S. Dro. No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.
S. Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro.

Dro. Marry ſir, in her buttocks; I found it out by the bogs.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrenneſs, hard in the palm of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forehead, arm'd, and reverted, making war againſt her hair.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalky Cliffs, but I could find no whiteneſs in them; But I gueſs, it ſtood in her chin, by the ſalt Rheume that ran between France and it.

Ant. Where Spain?

Dro. Faith, I ſaw it not; but I felt it hot in her breath.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Bro. Oh ſir, upon her noſe, all o're embelliſhed with Rubies, Carbuncles, Saphires, declining their rich aſpect to the hot breath of Spain, who ſent whole Armadoes of Carracts to be ballaſt at her noſe.

Ant. Where ſtood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh ſir, I did not look ſo low. To conclude, this drudg, or Diviner, laid claim to me, call'd me Dromio, ſwore I was aſſur'd to her, told me what privy marks I had about me, as the marks on my ſhoulder, the Mole in my neck, the great Wart on my left arm, that I, amaz'd, ran from her, as a Witch. And I think, if my breaſt had not been made of faith, and my heart of ſteel, ſhe had transform'd me to a Curtal dog, and made me turn i' th' wheel.

Ant. Go hie thee preſently; poſt to the Road;
And if the wind blow any way from ſhore,
I will not harbour in this Town to night.
If any Bark put forth, come to the Mart;
Where I will walk till thou return to me:
If every one knows us, and we know none,
'Tis time I think to trudg, pack and be gone.

Dro. As from a Bear a man would run for life,
So fly I from her that would be my Wife. Exit.

Ant. There's none but Witches do inhabit here;
And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence:
She that doth call me husband, even my ſoul
Doth for a wife abhor: But her fair ſiſter,
Poſſeſt with ſuch a gentle ſoveraign grace,
Of ſuch inchanting preſence and diſcourſe,
Hath almoſt made me Traitor to my ſelf:
But leaſt my ſelf be guilty to ſelf-wrong,
I'll ſtop mine ears againſt the Mermaids ſong.

Enter Angelo with the Chain.

Ang. M. Antipholis!

Ant. Ay that's my name.

Ang. I know it well ſir, lo, here's the Chain;
I thought to have tane you at the Porpentine:
The Chain unfiniſht made me ſtay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I ſhall do with this?

Ant. What pleaſe your ſelf, ſir: I have made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me, ſir? I beſpoke it not.

Ang. Not once, not twice, but twenty times you have:
Go home with it, and pleaſe your Wife withal;
And ſoon at ſupper-time I'll viſit you,
And then receive my money for the Chain.

Ant. I pray you, ſir, receive the money now,
For fear you ne're ſee Chain, nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man, ſir: fare you well. Exit.

Ant. What I ſhould think of this, I cannot tell:
But this I think, there's no man is ſo vain,
That would refuſe ſo fair an offer'd Chain.
I ſee a man here needs not live by ſhifts,
When in the ſtreets he meets ſuch golden gifts:
I'll to the Mart, and there for Dromio ſtay;
If any Ship put out, then ſtrait away. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Merchant, Goldſmith, and an Officer.

Mer. You know ſince Pentecoſt the ſum is due;
And ſince I have not much importun'd you;
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Perſia, and want Gilders for my Voyage:
Therefore make preſent ſatisfaction;
Or I'll attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Even juſt the ſum that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholis;
And in the inſtant that I met with you,
He had of me a Chain: at five a clock
I ſhall receive the money for the ſame:
Pleaſeth you walk with me down to his houſe,
I will diſcharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter Antipholis Epheſ. Dromio from the Courtezans.

Off. That labour you may ſave: See where he comes.

Ant. While I go to the Goldſmith's houſe, go thou
And buy a Ropes end; that will I beſtow
Among my Wife, and their Confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day:
But ſoft: I ſee the Goldſmith: get thee gone;
Buy thou a Rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. I buy a thouſand pound a year? I buy a Rope.
Exit Dromio.

Eph. Ant. A man is well hope up that truſts to you:
I promiſed your preſence, and the Chain;
But neither Chain nor Goldſmith came to me:
Belike you thought our love would laſt too long
If it were chain'd together: and therefore came not.

Gold. Saving your merry humour, here's the Note,
How much your Chain weighs to the utmoſt carat;
The fineneſs of the Gold, and chargeful faſhion;
Which doth amount to three odd Duckets more
Than I ſtand debted to this Gentleman;
I pray you ſee him preſently diſcharg'd;
For he is bound to Sea, and ſtays but for it.

Ant. I am not furniſh'd with the preſent money;
Beſides, I have ſome buſineſs in the Town;
Good Signior take the ſtranger to my houſe,
And with you take the Chain, and bid my Wife
Diſburſe the ſum on the receipt thereof;
Perchance I will be there as ſoon as you.

Gold. Then you will bring the Chain to her your ſelf.

Ant. No: bear it with you, leſt I come not time enough.

Gold. Well ſir, I will: Have you the Chain about you?

Ant. And if I have not, ſir, I hope you have:
Or elſe you may return without your money.

Gold. Nay, come, I pray you, ſir, give me the Chain;
Both Wind and Tide ſtays for the Gentleman;
And I to blame have held him here too long.

Ant. Good Lord, you uſe this dalliance to excuſe
Your breach of promiſe to the Porpentine:
I ſhould have chid you for not bringing it;
But like a ſhrew, you firſt begin to brawl.

Mer. The hour ſteals on; I pray you, ſir, diſpatch.

Gold. You hear how he importunes me, the Chain:

Ant. Why, give it to my Wife, and fetch your money.

Gold. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either ſend the Chain, or ſend me by ſome token.

Ant. Fie, now you run this humour out of breath:
Come, where's the Chain? I pray you let me ſee it.

Mer.

Mer. My buſineſs cannot brook this dalliance:
Good ſir ſay, whe'r you'l anſwer me, or no:
If not, l'le leave him to the Officer.
Ant. I anſwer you? Why ſhould I anſwer you?
Gold. The money that you owe me for the Chain.
Ant. I owe you none, till I receive the Chain.
Gold. You know I gave it you half an hour ſince.
Ant. You gave me none; you wrong me much to ſay ſo.
Gold. You wrong me more, ſir, in denying it:
Conſider how it ſtands upon my credit.
Mer. Well, Officer, arreſt him at my ſuit.
Offi. I do; and charge you in the Duke's Name to obey me.
Gold. This touches me in Reputation.
Either conſent to pay the ſum for me;
Or I attach you by this Officer.
Ant. Conſent to pay that I never had:
Arreſt me, fooliſh fellow, if thou dar'ſt.
Gold. Here is thy fee; arreſt him, Officer.
I would not ſpare my brother in this caſe,
If he ſhould ſcorn me ſo apparently.
Offi. I do arreſt you, ſir; you hear the ſuit.
Ant. I do obey thee till I give thee bail.
But ſirrah, you ſhall buy this ſport as dear
As all the metal in your ſhop will anſwer.
Gold. Sir, ſir, I ſhall have Law in Epheſus,
To your notorious ſhame, I doubt it not.

Scene II.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. Maſter, there's a Bark of Epidamnum,
That ſtays but till her Owner comes aboard;
Then, ſir, ſhe bears away. Our fraughtage, ſir,
I have convey'd aboard; and I have brought
The Oyl, the Balſamum, and Aqua-vitæ.
The Ship is in her trim; the merry wind
Blows fair from land; they ſtay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Maſter, and your ſelf.
Ant. How now! a mad man! Why, thou peeviſh ſheep,
What Ship of Epidamnum ſtays for me?
S. Dro. A Ship you ſent me to, to hire waſtage.
Ant. Thou drunken ſlave, I ſent thee for a Rope;
And told thee to what purpoſe and what end.
S. Dro. You ſent me for a Ropes end as ſoon:
You ſent me to the Bay, ſir, for a Bark.
Ant. I will debate this matter at more leiſure,
And teach your ears to liſt me with more heed.
To Adriana, Villain, hie thee ſtrait:
Give her this key, and tell her in the Desk
That's cover'd o're with Turkiſh Tapiſtry,
There is a purſe of Duckets; let her ſend it:
Tell her, I am arreſted in the ſtreet;
And that ſhall bail me; hie thee ſlave; be gone:
On Officer to priſon till it come. Exeunt.
S. Dro. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowſabel did claim me for her husband;
She is too big, I hope, for me to compaſs:
Thither I muſt, altho againſt my will;
For Servants muſt their Maſters minds fulfil. Exit.

Scene III.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee ſo?
Might'ſt thou perceive auſterely in his eye,
That he did plead in earneſt, yea or no?
Look'd he or red or pale, or ſad or merrily?
What Obſervation mad'ſt thou in this caſe,
Of his heart's Meteors tilting in his face?
Luc. Firſt he denied you had in him no right.
Adr. He meant he did me none; the more my ſpight.
Luc. Then ſwore he, that he was a ſtranger here.
Adr. And true he ſwore, though yet forſworn he were.
Luc. Then pleaded I for you.
Adr. And what ſaid he?
Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.
Adr. With what perſuaſion did he tempt thy love?
Luc. With words that in an honeſt ſuit might move.
Firſt, he did praiſe my beauty, then my ſpeech.
Adr. Did'ſt ſpeak him fair?
Luc. Have patience I beſeech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me ſtill;
My tongue, tho not my heart, ſhall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old and ſere,
Ill-fac'd, worſe bodied, ſhapeleſs every where:
Vicious, ungentle, fooliſh, blunt, unkind,
Stigmatical in making, worſe in mind.
Luc. VVho would be jealous then of ſuch a one?
No evil loſt is wail'd when it is gone.
Adr. Ah! but I think him better than I ſay:
And yet would herein others eyes were worſe!
Far from her neſt the Lapwing cries away:
My heart prays for him, tho my tongue do curſe.

Scene IV.

Enter S. Dromio.

Dro. Here: go; the desk, the purſe: ſweet now make haſte.
Luc. How haſt thou loſt thy breath?
S. Dro. By running faſt.
Adr. VVhere is thy Maſter, Dromio? Is he well?
S. Dro. No: he's in Tartar limbo; worſe than hell:
A devil in an everlaſting garment hath him;
One whoſe hard heart is button'd up with ſteel:
A Fiend, a Fairy, pitileſs and rough:
A Wolf; nay, worſe, a fellow all in Buff;
A back-friend, a ſhoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The paſſages of allies, creeks, and narrow lands:
A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot well;
One that before the Judgment carries poor ſouls to hell.
Adr. VVhy man, what is the matter?
S. Dro. I do not know the matter; he is reſted on the caſe.
Adr. VVhat, is he arreſted? tell me at whoſe ſuit?
S. Dro. I know not at whoſe ſuit he is arreſted: well: but he's in a ſuit of buff which reſted him; that I can tell: VVill you ſend him Miſtris Redemption, the money in his desk?
Adr. Go fetch it, ſiſter: this I wonder at.
Exit Luciana.
That he unknown to me ſhould be in debt:
Tell me, was he arreſted on a bond?
S. Dro. Not on a bond, but on a ſtronger thing;
A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?
Adr. VVhat, the chain?
S. Dro. No, the bell: 'tis time that I were gone:
It was Two e're I left him, and now the clock ſtrikes One.
Adr. The hour's come back! that did I never hear.
S. Dro. Oh yes; if any hour meet a Sergeant, a turns back for very fear.
Adr. As if Time were in debt: how fondly do'ſt thou reaſon?
S. Dro. Time is a very bankrout, and owes more than he's worth to ſeaſon.
Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men ſay,
That time comes ſtealing on by night and day?
If I be in debt and theft, and a Sergeant in the way,
Hath he not Reaſon to turn back an hour in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Luc. Go, Dromio; there's the money; bear it ſtraight,
And bring thy Maſter home immediately.
Come ſiſter, I am preſt down with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort and my injury. Exeunt.

Enter

Scene V The Street

Enter Antipholis Siracusian.

An. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me,
As if I were their well acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me, some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop,
And show'd me Silks that he had bought for me,
And therewithal took measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland Sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio, Sira.

S. Dro. Master, here's the gold you sent me for; what have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?

Ant. What gold is this? What Adam do'st thou mean?

S. Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise; but that Adam that keeps the prison; he that goes in the calves-skin, that was kil'd for the Prodigal: he that came behinde you sir, like an evil Angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

An. I understand thee not.

S. Dro. No? why 'tis a plain case: he that went like a Base Viol in a case of leather; the man sir, that when Gentlemen are tired gives them a fob, and rests them: he sir that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his Mace, than a Morrice Pike. ×

Ant. What! thou mean'st an officer?

S. Dro. Ay sir, the Serjeant of the Band: he that brings any man to answer it that breaks his Band; one that thinks a man alwayes going to bed, and saith, God give you good rest.

Ant. Well sir, there rest in your foolery.
Is there any Ship puts forth to night? may we be gone?

S. Dro. Why sir, I brought you word an hour since that the Bark Expedition put forth to night, and then, were you hindred by the Serjeant to tarry for the Hoy Delay? Here are the Angels, that you sent for, to deliver you.

Ant. The fellow is distract, and so am I,
And here we wander in Illusions:
Some blessed power deliver us from hence.

Scene VI

Enter a Curtizan.

Cur. Well met, well met, Master Antipholis.
I see sir, you have found the Goldsmith now:
Is that the Chain you promis'd me to day?

Ant. Sathan avoid, I charge thee tempt me not.

S. Dro. Master, is this Mistris Sathan?

Ant. It is the devil.

S. Dro. Nay, she is worse, she is the devils dam: And here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes that the wenches say God dam me, That's as much to say, God make me a light wench. It is written they appear to men like angels of light, light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn: ergo, light wenches will burn, come not near her.

Cur. Your man and you are marvellous merry sir.
Will you go with me, we'll mend our dinner here?

S. Dro. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. Why Dromio?

S. Dromio. Marry he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.

Ant. Avoid thou fiend, what tel'st thou me of supping?
Thou art, (as you are all) a sorceresse?
I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cur. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the chain you promis'd,
And I'll be gone sir, and not trouble you.

S. Dro. Some devils ask but the parings of ones nail, a rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, a nut, a cherry-stone; but she more covetous, would have a chain. Master be wise, and if you give it her, the devil will shake her Chain, and fright us with it.

Cur. I pray you sir, my Ring, or else the Chain,
I hope you do not mean to cheat me so?

Ant. Avant thou witch: Come Dromio let us go.

S. Dro. ~~Flie pride, says the Peacock, Mistris that you know.~~ Scene VII. Exeunt.

Cur. Now out of doubt Antipholis is mad,
Else would he never so demean himself,
A Ring he hath of mine worth forty Duckets,
And for the same he promis'd me a Chain,
Both one and other he denies me now:
The reason that I gather he is mad,
(Besides this present instance of his rage,)
Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner,
Of his own doors being shut against his entrance,
Belike his wife acquainted with his fits,
On purpose shut the doors against his way.
My way is now to hie home to his house,
And tell his wife that being Lunatick,
He rush'd into my house, and took perforce
My Ring away. This course I fittest choose,
For forty Duckets is too much to lose. Exit.

Enter Antipholis Ephes. with a Jaylor.

An. Fear me not man, I will not break away, Scene VIII.
I'll give thee ere I leave thee so much money,
To warrant thee as I am'rested for.
My wife is in a wayward mood to day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger,
That I should be attach'd in Ephesus,
I tell you 'twill sound harshly in her ears.

Enter Dromio Eph. with a ropes end.

Here comes my Man, I think he brings the money.
How now sir? Have you that I sent you for?

E. Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Anti. But where's the Money?

E. Dro. Why sir, I gave the Money for the Rope.

Ant. Five hundred Duckets villain for a rope?

E. Dro. I'll serve you sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

E. Dro. To a ropes end sir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. And to that end sir, I will welcome you. Beats him.

Offi. Good sir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in adversity.

Offi. Good now, hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather perswade him to hold his hands.

Anti. Thou whorson senseless Villain.

E. Dro. I would I were senseless sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Anti. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an Asse.

E. Dro. I am an Asse indeed, you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my Nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am wak'd with it when I sleep, rais'd with it when I sit, driven out of doors with it when I go from home, welcom'd home with it when I return; nay I bear it on my shoulders, as a begger wont her brat, and I think when he hath lam'd me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Scene IX.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and a Schoolmaster, called Pinch.

Ant. Come go along, my wife is coming yonder.

E. Dro. Mistris respice finem, respect your end, or rather the prophesie like the Parrot, beware the ropes end. +

Anti. Wilt thou still talk? Beats Dro.

Cur. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adri. His incivility confirms no lesse.
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjurer,

× Alluding to the Pike men in Prince Maurice's army which were a famous body of Soldiers att that time.

+ A word taught Parrots. A Rope, a Rope.

Establish him in his true sence again,
And I will please you what you will demand.
Luc. Alas how fiery and how sharp he looks,
Cur. Mark how he trembles in his extasie!
Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.
Ant. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.
Pinch. I charge thee Satan, hous'd within this man
To yeild possession to my holy prayers,
And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight,
I conjure thee by all the Saints in Heaven.
Ant. Peace doting wizard, peace; I am not mad.
Adr. Oh that thou wer't not, poor distressed soul!
Ant. You minion you, are these your Customers?
Did this companion with the saffron face
Revel and feast it at my house to day,
Whilst upon me the guiltie doors were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house?
Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home,
Where would you had remaind until this time,
Free from these slanders, and this open shame.
Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villain, what sayest thou?
Dro. Sir sooth to say, you did not dine at home.
Ant. Were not my doors lockt up, and I shut out?
Dro. Perdie, your doors were lockt, and and you shut out.
Ant. And did not she her self revile me there?
Dro. Sans Fable, she her self revil'd you there.
Ant. Did not her Kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?
Dro. Certes she did, the Kitchen vestal scorn'd you:
Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?
Dro. In verity you did, my bones bear witness,
That since have felt the vigor of his rage.
Adr. It's good to smooth him in these contraries?
Pinch. It is no shame, the fellow finds his vein,
And yeelding to him, humors well his frenzy.
Ant. Thou hast suborn'd the Goldsmith to arrest me.
Adr. Alas, I sent you Money to redeem you,
By Dromio here, who came in hast for it.
Dro. Money by me? Heart and good will you might,
But surely Master, not a rag of Money.
Ant. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of Ducats?
Adri. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.
Luci. And I am witness with her that she did.
Dro. God and the Rope-maker bear me witness,
That I was sent for nothing but a rope.
Pinch. Mistris both man and Master is possest,
I know it by their pale and deadly looks,
They must be bound and laid in some dark room.
Ant. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to day,
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?
Adr. I did not, gentle husband lock thee forth.
Dro. And gentle M. I receiv'd no gold:
But I confess sir, that we were lock'd out.
Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou speak'st false in both.
Ant. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned pack,
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me:
But with these nails I'd pluck out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shameful sport.
Enter three or four, and offer to bind him:
He strives.
Adr. Oh bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.
Pinch. More company, the fiend is strong within him.
Luc. Ay, me poor man, how pale and wan he looks.
Ant. What, will you murther me, thou Jaylor thou?
I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?
Off. Masters let him go; he is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantick too.
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish Officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?
Off. He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Bear me forthwith unto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt grows I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor see him safe convey'd
Home to my house, oh most unhappy day!
Ant. Oh most unhappy strumpet!
Dro. Master, I am here entred in bond for you.
Ant. Out on thee Villain, wherefore dost thou mad me?
Dro. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master, cry the devil.
Luc. God help poor souls, how idly do they talk!
Adr. Go bear him hence, sister go you with me:
Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?
Exeunt. Manet Offic. Adri. Luci Courtizan.
Off. One Angelo a Goldsmith; do you know him?
Adr. I know the man; what is the sum he owes?
Off. Two hundred Ducats.
Adr Say, how grows it due?
Off. Due for a Chain your husband had of him.
Adr. He did bespeak a Chain for me, but had it not.
Cour. When as your husband all in rage to day.
Came to my house, and took away my Ring,
(The Ring I saw upon his finger now)
Straight after did I meet him with a Chain,
Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.
Come Jaylor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholis Siracusian with his Rapier drawn, and Dromio Sirac.

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose again.
Adr. And come with naked swords;
Let's call more help to have them bound again.
Run all out.
Off. Away, they'll kill us.
Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.
S. Ant. I see these Witches are afraid of swords.
S. Dro She that would be your wife, now ran from you.
Ant. Come to the Centaur, fetch our stuff from thence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboard.
Dro. Faith stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm: you saw they spake us fair, gave us gold, me thinks they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn Witch.
Ant. I will not stay to night for all the Town,
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.
A Street before the Priory

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith

Gold. I am sorry Sir, that I have hindred you,
But I protest he had the Chain of me,
Though most dishonestly he did deny it.
Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the City?
Gold Of very reverent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belov'd,
Second to none that lives here in the City;
His word might bear my wealth at any time.
Mer. Speak softly, yonder as I think he walks.
Enter Antipholis and Dromio again.
Gold. 'Tis so; and that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore (most monstrously) to have.
Good sir draw near to me, I'll speak to him.
Signior Antipholis, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,

And not without some scandal to your self,
With circumstance and oaths, so to deny
This chain, which now you wear so openly,
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controversie,
Had hoisted sail, and put to sea to day:
This chain you had of me, can you deny it?
Ant. I think I had, I never did deny it.
Mer. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.
Ant. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it?
Mer. These ears of mine thou knowst did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pity that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.
Ant. Thou art a Villain to impeach me thus,
I'll prove mine honour, and my honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.
Mer. I dare and do defie thee for a villain.
They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, and others.
Adr. Hold, hurt him not for Gods sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and bear them to my house.
S. Dro. Run master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Priory, in, or we are spoil'd.
Exeunt to the Priory.

Enter Lady Abbesse.

Abb. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither?
Adr. Fetch my poor distracted husband hence;
Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.
Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
Mer. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.
Abb. How long hath this possession held the man?
Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad,
And much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoon his passion
Ne're brake into extremity of rage.
Ab. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck at Sea,
Buried some dear friend, hath not else his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawful love?
A sin prevailing much in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.
Which of these sorrows is he subject to?
Adr. To none of these except it be the last;
Namely, some love that drew him oft from home.
Ab. You should for that have reprehended him.
Ad. Why so I did.
Ab. Ay but not rough enough.
Ad. As roughly as my modesty would let me.
Ab. Haply in private.
Ad. And in assemblies too.
Ab. Ay but not enough.
Ad. It was the copy, of our conference.
In bed he slept not for my urging it;
At board he fed not for my urging it:
Alone, it was the subject of my Theam;
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him, it was vile and bad.
Ab. And thereof came it that the man was mad!
The venomous clamours of a jealous woman,
Poysons more deadly than a mad dogs tooth.
It seems his sleeps were hindred by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou sai'st his meat was sauc'd with thy upbraidings,
Unquiet meals makes ill digestions,
Thereof the raging fire of feaver bred,
And what's a Feaver but a fit of Madness?
Thou say'st his sports were hindred by thy brawls.
Sweet recreation barr'd what doth ensue,
But moody and dull melancholy,
Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair,
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life
In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:
The consequence is then, thy jealous fits
Have scar'd thy Husband from the use of wits.
Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he demean'd himself rough, rude and wildly.
Why bear you those rebukes, and answer not?
Ad. She did betray me to my own reproof.
Good people, enter and lay hold on him.
Ab. No, not a creature enters in my house.
Ad. Then let your servants bring my husband forth.
Ab. Neither; he took this place for sanctuary,
And it shall priviledge him from your hands,
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or lose my labour in assaying it.
Ad. I will attend my Husband, be his Nurse,
Diet his sickness, for it is my Office,
And will have no Attorney but my self,
And therefore let me have him home with me.
Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him stir,
Till I have us'd the approved means I have,
with wholsome Sirrups, Drugs, and holy Prayers
To make of him a formal man again;
It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order,
Therefore depart and leave him here with me.
Ad. I will not hence, and leave my Husband here;
And ill it doth beseem your holiness
To separate the Husband and the Wife.
Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not have him.
Exit Abb.
Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.
Ad. Come go, I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my tears and prayers
Have won his Grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbesse. Exeunt.

Enter Merchant and Goldsmith.

Mer. By this I think the Dial points at five:
Anon I'me sure the Duke himself in person
Comes this way to the Melancholly vale;
The place of death and sorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the Abbey here.
Gold. Upon what cause?
Mer. To see a reverend Syracusian Merchant;
Who put unluckily into this Bay
Against the Laws and Statutes of this Town,
Beheaded publickly for his offence.
Gold. See where they come, we will behold his death.
Luc. Kneel to the Duke before he passe the Abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, and the Merchant of Syracuse bareheaded, with the Headsman, and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publickly,
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Justice most sacred Duke, against the Abbess.
Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend Lady.
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.
Ad. May it please your Grace, Antipholis my husband,
Whom I made Lord of me, and all I had,
(At your important Letters) this ill day,
A most outragious fit of madness took him,
That desp'rately he hurried through the street,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,
Doing displeasure to the Citizens,
By rushing in their houses; bearing thence
Rings, Jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whil'st to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not, by what strong escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant, and himself,
Each one with ireful passion, with drawn Swords
Met us again, and madly bent on us,

Chac'd us away; till raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them; then they fled
Into this Abby, whither we pursu'd them,
And here the Abbesse shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth that we may bear him hence.
Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and born hence for help.
Duke Long since thy husband serv'd me in my Wars,
And I to thee ingag'd a Princes word,
When thou did'st make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go some of you knock at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbesse come to me?
I will determine this before I stir. Scene IV.

Enter a Messenger:

Mess. O Mistris, Mistris, shift, and save your self,
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the Maids a row, and bound the Doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pails of puddl'd myre to quench the hair;
My Mr. preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with Scissars nicks him like a fool:
And sure (unless you send some present help)
Between them they will kill the Conjurer.
Ad. Peace fool, thy Master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.
Mess. Mistris upon my life I tell you true,
I have not breath'd almost since I did see it.
He cryes for you, and vows if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you. Cry within.
Hark, hark, I hear him Mistris: flie, be gone.
Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing: guard with Halberds.
Ad. Ay me, it is my husband: witness you,
That he is born about invisible,
Even now we hous'd him in the Abbey here,
And now he's there, past thought of humane reason.

Enter E. Antipholis, and E. Dromio of Ephesus. Scene V.

E. Ant. Justice most gracious Duke, oh grant me Justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took
Deep scars to save thy life, even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me Justice.
Mer. Fat. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote, I see my son Antipholis and Dromio.
E. Ant. Justice (sweet prince) against that woman
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife; (there;
That hath abused and dishonoured me.
Even in the strength and height of injury:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That She this day hath shameless thrown on me.
Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.
E. Ant. This day, (great Duke) she shut the doors upon me.
Whilst she with Harlots feasted in my house.
Duke. A grievous fault; say woman didst thou so?
Ad. No, my good Lord: My self, he, and my Sister,
To day did dine together: so befall my soul,
As this is false he burthens me withall.
Luc. Ne're may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your Highness simple truth!
Gold. O perjur'd woman! They are both forsworn,
In this the Mad man justly chargeth them.
E. Ant. My Liege, I am advised what I say,
Neither disturb'd with the effect of Wine,
Nor heady-rash provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner;
That Goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it; for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him. In the street I met him,
And in his company that Gentleman.
There did this perjur'd Goldsmith swear me down,
That I this day from him receiv'd the Chain,
Which God he knows, I saw not; For the which
He did arrest me with an Officer.
I did obey, and sent my Pesant home
For certain Ducats: he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the Officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By th'way, we met my wife, her sister and a rabble more
Of vile Confederates: Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd Villain;
A meer Anatomy, a Mountebank,
A thred-bare Jugler, and Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-sharp-looking-wretch;
A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsooth took on him as a Conjurer:
And gazing in my eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no-face (as t'were) out-facing me,
Cryes out, I was possest. Then altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together;
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds asunder,
I gain'd my freedome, and immediately
Ran hither to your Grace, whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames, and great indignities.
Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him;
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.
Duke. But had he such a Chain of thee, or no?
Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in here,
These people saw the Chain about his neck.
Mer. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine,
Heard you confess you had the Chain of him,
After you first forswore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my sword on you;
And then you fled into this Abbey here,
From whence I think you are come by miracle.
E. Ant. I never came within these Abbey walls,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me;
I never saw the Chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false you burthen me withall.
Duke. Why what an intricate impeach is this?
I think you all have drunk of Circes Cup:
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been.
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:
You say he din'd at home, the Goldsmith here
Denies that saying. Sirra, what say you?
E. Dro. Sir, he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine. Cup
Cur. He did, and from my finger snatch't that Ring.
E. Ant. 'Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.
Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the Abbey here?
Cur. As sure (my Liege) as I do see your Grace.
Duke. Why this is strange: Go call the Abbesse hither;
I think you are all mated, or stark mad. Exit. One to the Ab.

Enter one to the Abbesse. Scene VI.

Fa. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speak a word;
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the sum that may deliver me.
Duke. Speak freely Syracusan what thou wilt.
Fath. Is not your name sir, call'd Antipholis?
And is not that your bond-man Dromio?
E. Dro. Within this hour I was his bondman sir,
But he, I thank him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dromio, and his man unbound.
Fath. I am sure both of you remember me.
Dro. Our selves we do remember sir, by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches Patient, are you Sir?
Father. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

E. Ant.

E. Ant. I never saw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh! grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And careful hours with times deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
Ant. Neither.
Fat. Dromio, nor thou?
Dro. No trust me sir, nor I.
Fat. I am sure thou dost.
E. Dromio. I sir, but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.
Fat. Not know my voice! oh times extremity,
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short years, that here my only Son
Knows not my feeble Key of untun'd cares?
Tho' now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming Winters drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze up;
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left;
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses, I cannot err.
Tell me, thou art my Son Antipholis.
Ant. I never saw my Father in my life.
Fa. But seven years since, in Syracusa Bay,
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my Son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City.
Can witness with me that it is not so.
I ne're saw Syracusa in my life.
Duk. I tell thee Syracusan, twenty years
Have I been Patron to Antipholis,
During which time he ne're saw Syracusa:
I see thy age, and dangers make thee dote.

Scene VII.

Enter the Abbesse with Antipholis Siracusan, and Dromio Sirac.

Abbes. Most mighty Duke, behold a man much wronged.

All gather to see them.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other;
And so of these which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? who deciphers them?
S. Dromio. I Sir am Dromio, command him away.
E. Dro. I Sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Ægeon art thou not? or else his ghost?
S. Drom. Oh my old Master, who hath bound him here?
Abb. Who ever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty:
Speak old Ægeon, if thou be'st the man
That had'st a Wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fair Sons?
Oh if thou be'st the same Ægeon, speak:
And speak unto the same Æmilia.
Duke. Why here begins his morning story right:
These two Antipholis, these two so like,
And these two Dromio's, one in semblance:
[redacted] wrack at Sea, Both sides emerging from theirs
These are the Parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Fat. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia,
If thou art she, tell me where is that Son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft.
Abb. By men of Epidamium, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my Son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamium.
What then became of them I cannot tell;
I, to this fortune that you see me in.
Duke. Antipholis thou cam'st from Corinth first.
S. Ant. No sir, not I, I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which.
E. Ant. I came from Corinth my most gracious Lord.
E. Dro. And I with him.
E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that most famous Warriour,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned Uncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Mistris.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No, I say nay to that.
S. Ant. And so do I, yet did she call me so:
And this fair Gentlewoman, here her sister
Did call me Brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.
Goldsmith. That is the Chain, Sir, which you had of me.
S. Ant. I think it be Sir, I deny it not.
E. Ant. And you sir for this Chain arrested me.
Gold. I think I did Sir, I deny it not.
Adr. I sent you money Sir to be your bail
By Dromio, but I think he brought it not.
E. Dro. No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purse of Duckets I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meet each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
E. Ant. These Duckets pawn I for my Father here.
Duk. It shall not need, thy Father hath his life.
Cur. Sir, I must have that Diamond from you.
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the Abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place;
That by this sympathized one days error,
Have suffered wrong. Go, keep us company,
And we shall [redacted] full satisfaction. have
Thirty three years have I [redacted] gone in travel 25 S. T. H.
Of you my Sons, [redacted] till this present hour
My heavy burthens are delivered:
The Duke my Husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Nativity,
Go to a Gossips feast, and go with me,
After so long grief such [redacted]. felicity!
Duke. With all my heart i'le Gossip at this feast.

Exeunt omnes. Manet the two Dromio's and two Brothers.

S. Dro. Master, shall I fetch your stuffe from shipboard?
E. An. Dromio, what stuffe of mine hast thou embark'd?
S. Dro. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur,
S. Ant. He speaks to me, I am your Master Dromio.
Come go with us, we'll look to that anon;
Embrace thy Brother there, rejoice with him. Exeu. 2 An.
S. Dro. There is a fat friend at your masters house.
That kitchen'd me for you to day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife:
E. D. Methinks you are my glass, and not my brother:
I see by you, I am a sweet fac'd youth,
Will you walk in to see their Gossiping?
S. Dro. Not I Sir; you are my Elder.
E. Dro. That's a question, how shall I try it?
S. D. We'll draw Cuts for the [redacted]; till then, lead thou first.
E. Dro. Nay then thus. ——— Embracing
We came into the world like Brother and Brother:
And now lets go hand in hand, not one before another.

Exeunt.

Much ado about Nothing.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. Messina.

A Court before Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato Governour of Messina, [redacted], Hero his Daughter, and Beatrice, his Neece, with a Messenger.

Leonato.

I Learn in this Letter, that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this; he was not three Leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mes. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice it self, when the atchiever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mes. Much deserv'd on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath born himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a Lamb, the feats of a Lion; he hath indeed better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mes. I have already delivered him Letters, and there appears much joy in him, even so much, that joy could not shew it self modest enough, without a badg of bitterness.

Leo. Did he break out into tears?

Mes. In great measure.

Leo. A kind overflow of kindness; there are no faces truer, than those that are so wash'd; how much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping?

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto return'd from the Wars, or no?

Mes. I know none of that name, Lady; there was none such in the Army of any sort.

Leo. What is he that you ask for, Neece?

Hero. My Cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mes. O he is return'd, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his Bills here in Messina, and challeng'd Cupid at the flight; and my Uncles fool reading the Challenge, subscrib'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Bird-bolt. I pray you, how many hath he kill'd and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he kill'd? for indeed, I promise to eat all of his killing.

Leon. 'Faith Neece, you tax Signior Benedick too much; but he'll meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mes. He hath done good service Lady, in these wars.

Bea. You had musty victuals, and he hath holp to eat it; he's a very valiant Trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomack.

Mes. And a good Soldier too, Lady.

Beat. And a good Soldier to a Lady? But what is he to a Lord?

Mes. A Lord to a Lord, a Man to a Man, stuft with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so indeed, he is no less than a stuft man: but for the stuffing, well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not (sir) mistake my Neece; there is a kind of merry War betwixt Signior Benedick and her; they never meet, but there is a skirmish of Wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his Companion now? He hath every month a new sworn Brother.

Mes. Is it possible?

Beat. Very easily possible; he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

Mes. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No; and he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you who is his Companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the Devil?

Mes. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease; he is sooner caught than the Pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio, if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere it be cur'd.

Mes. I will hold friends with you, Lady.

Beat. Do good friend.

Leo. You'll ne're run mad Neece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mes. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Scene II.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, and John the Bastard.

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace; for, trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

Pedro. You embrace your charge most willingly: I think this is your daughter.

Leo. Her Mother hath many times told me so.

Ben. Were you in doubt, that you askt her?

Leo. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a Child.

Pedro. You have it full, Benedick; we may guess by this, what you are, being a man, truly the Lady fathers her self; be happy, Lady, for you are like an honourable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her Father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick, no Body marks you.

Ben. What my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as Signior Benedick? Courtesie it self must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Ben. Then is Courtesie a turn-coat; but it is certain I am loved of all Ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not an hard heart, for truly I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women! they would else have been troubled with a pernicious Sutor. I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that; I had rather hear my Dog bark at a Crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Ben.

* The Story from Ariosto, Orl. Fur. l. 5.
* She gives him this Name to ridicule in him the Character of a Blustering Soldier, the Word

Ben. God keep your Ladiſhip ſtill in that mind! ſo ſome Gentleman or other ſhall ſcape a predeſtinate ſcratcht face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worſe, if 'twere ſuch a face as yours were.

Ben. Well you are a rare Parrot teacher.

Beat. A Bird of my tongue, is better than a Beaſt of yours.

Ben. I would my horſe had the ſpeed of your tongue, and ſo good a continuer; but keep your way a God's name, I have done.

Beat. You always end with a Jade's trick; I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the ſum of all: Don John Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick; my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all; I tell him we ſhall ſtay here, at the leaſt a month, and he heartily prays ſome occaſion may detain us longer: I dare ſwear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you ſwear, my Lord, you ſhall not be forſworn; let me bid you welcome, my Lord; being reconciled to the Prince your Brother, I owe you all duty. (To D. John.

John. I thank you, I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Pleaſe it your Grace lead on?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will go together.

Scene III.

Exeunt. Manet Benedick and Claudio.

Clau. Benedick, didſt thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato.

Ben. I noted her not, but I look'd on her.

Clau. Is ſhe not a modeſt young Lady?

Ben. Do you queſtion me, as an honeſt man ſhould do, for my ſimple true judgment? or would you have me ſpeak after my cuſtom, as being a profeſſ'd tyrant to their ſex?

Clau. No, I prethee ſpeak in ſober judgment.

Ben. Why i'faith methinks ſhe's too low for an high praiſe, too brown for a fair praiſe, and too little for a great praiſe; only this commendation I can afford her, that were ſhe other than ſhe is, ſhe were unhandſome; and being no other but as ſhe is, I do not like her.

Clau. Thou think'ſt I am in ſport, I pray thee tell me truly how thou lik'ſt her.

Ben. Would you buy her, that you enquire after her?

Clau. Can the world buy ſuch a Jewel?

Ben. Yea, and a caſe to put it into, but ſpeak you this with a ſad brow? Or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter: Come, in what Key ſhall a man take you to go in the Song.

Clau. In mine eye, ſhe is the ſweeteſt Lady that ever I look on.

Ben. I can ſee yet without Spectacles, and I ſee no ſuch matter; there's her Couſin, and ſhe were not poſſeſt with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the firſt of May doth the laſt of December: but I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

Clau. I would ſcarce truſt my ſelf, tho I had ſworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Ben. Is't come to this? in faith hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with ſuſpition? ſhall I never ſee a batchelor of threeſcore again? go to, i'faith, and thou wilt needs thruſt thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and ſigh away Sundays; look, Don Pedro is returned to ſeek you.

Scene IV.

Enter Don Pedro, [redacted].

Pedr. What ſecret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's House.

Bened. I would your Grace would conſtrain me to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Ben. You hear, Count Claudio; I cannot be ſecret as a dumb man, I would have you think ſo; but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance; he is in love, with whom? now that is your Graces part: mark how ſhort his anſwer is; Hero, Leonato's ſhort Daughter.

Clau. If this were ſo, ſo were it uttered.

Ben. Like the old Tale, my Lord, it is not ſo, nor 'twas not ſo: but indeed, God forbid it ſhould be ſo.

Clau. If my paſſion change not ſhortly, God forbid it ſhould be otherwiſe.

Pedro. Amen, if you love her, for the Lady is very well worthy.

Clau. You ſpeak this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedro. By my troth I ſpeak my thought.

Clau. And in faith, my Lord, I ſpoke mine.

Ben. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I ſpeak mine.

Clau. That I love her, I feel.

Ped. That ſhe is worthy, I know.

Ben. That I neither feel how ſhe ſhould be loved, nor know how ſhe ſhould be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will dye in it at the ſtake.

Ped. Thou waſt ever an obſtinate Heretick in the deſpight of beauty.

Clau. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that ſhe brought me up, I likewiſe give her moſt humble thanks: but that I will have a recheate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an inviſible baldrick, all women ſhall pardon me; becauſe I will not do them the wrong to miſtruſt any, I will do my ſelf the right to truſt none; and the fine is, (for the which I may go the finer), I will live a Batchelor.

Ped. I ſhall ſee thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Ben. With anger, with ſickneſs, or with hunger, my Lord, not with love: prove that ever I looſe more blood with love, than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a Ballad-makers pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-houſe for the ſign of blind Cupid.

Ped. Well, if ever thou do'ſt fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a Cat, and ſhoot at me, and he that hits me, let him be clapt on the ſhoulder, and call'd Adam.*

Ped. Well, as time ſhall try: in time the ſavage Bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The ſavage bull may, but if ever the ſenſible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bulls horns, and ſet them in my forehead, and let me be vilely painted, and in ſuch great Letetrs as they write, Here is good horſe to hire; let them ſignifie under my ſign, Here you may ſee Benedick the married man.

Clau. If this ſhould ever happen, thou wouldſt be horn mad.

Pe. Nay, if Cupid have not ſpent all his Quiver in Venice,o thou wilt quake for this ſhortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

Ped. Well, you will temporize with the hours; in the mean time, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's, commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at ſupper; for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almoſt matter enough in me for ſuch an Embaſſage, and ſo I commit you.

Clau. To the tuition of God. From my houſe if I had it,

Pedro. The ſixth of July, Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay mock not, mock not; the body of your diſcourſe is ſometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but ſlightly baſted on neither: e're you flout old ends any further, examine your conſcience, and ſo I leave you.

Scene V. Exit.

Clau. My Liege, your Highneſs now may do me good.

Ped. My love is thine to teach, teach it but how,

And

* Alluding to One Adam Bell a famous Archer of Old.

o Beſides that Venice is as remarkable for freedoms in amorous intrigues as Cyprus was of old. The may be gather conjecture, why this Expreſſion is here us'd: The Italians give to [illegible] of their principal [illegible]

And thou ſhalt ſee how apt it is to learn
Any hard Leſſon, that may do thee good.
Clau. Hath Leonato any ſon my Lord?
Pedro. No child but Hero, ſhe's his onely heir:
Doſt thou affect her, Claudio?
Clau. O my Lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I look'd upon her with a ſouldiers eye,
That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand,
Than to drive liking to the name of love;
But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts
Have left their places vacant: in their rooms
Come throng'd ſoft and delicate deſires,
All prompting me how fair young Hero is,
Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.
Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover preſently,
And tire the hearer with a book of words:
If thou doſt love fair Hero, cheriſh it,
And I will break with her: waſt not to this end,
That thou began'ſt to twiſt ſo fine a ſtory?
Clau. How ſweetly do you miniſter to love,
That know loves grief by his complexion!
But left my liking might too ſudden ſeem,
I would have ſalv'd it with a longer treatiſe.
Pedro. What need the bridge much broader then the flood?
The faireſt [redacted] is the neceſſity:
Look, what will ſerve, is fit; 'tis once, thou loveſt,
And I will fit thee with the remedy,
I know we ſhall have revelling to night;
I will aſſume thy part in ſome diſguiſe,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio,
And in her boſome I'll unclaſp my heart,
And take her hearing priſoner with the force
And ſtrong incounter of my amorous tale:
Then after, to her father will I break,
And the concluſion is, ſhe ſhall be thine,
In practiſe let us put it preſently. [Exeunt.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my couſin your ſon? hath he provided this muſick?
Old. He is very buſie about it; but brother, I can tell you news that you yet dream'd not of.
Leo. Are they good?
Old. As the event ſtamps them, but they have a good cover; they ſhew well outward. the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick Pleached alley in my orchard, were thus over-heard by a man of mine: the Prince diſcovered to Claudio that he loved my Neece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and he found her accordant, meant to take the preſent time by the top, and inſtantly break with you of it.
Leo. Hath the fellow any wit, that told you this?
Old. A good ſharp fellow, I will ſend for him, and queſtion him your ſelf.
Leo. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear it ſelf: but I will acquaint my daughter with all, that ſhe may be the better prepared for anſwer, if peradventure this be true: go you and tell her of it: couſins, you know what you have to do. O I cry you mercy friend, go you with me and I will uſe your skill; good couſin have a care this buſie time. [Exeunt.

Scene VI. The Street.

Enter Don John the Baſtard, and Conrade his companion.

Con. What the good yeare my Lord, why are you thus out of meaſure ſad?
John. There is no meaſure in the occaſion that breeds it, therefore the ſadneſs is without limit.
Con. You ſhall hear reaſon.
John. And when I have heard it, what bleſſing bringeth it?
Con. If not a preſent remedy, yet a patient ſufferance.
John. I wonder that thou (being, as thou ſaiſt thou art, born under Saturn), goeſt about to apply a morall medecine to a mortifying miſchief: I cannot hide what I am: I muſt be ſad when I have cauſe, and ſmile at no mans jeſts; eat when I have ſtomach, and wait for no mans leiſure; ſleep when I am drow ſie, and tend on no mans buſineſs; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.
Con. Yea, but you muſt not make the full ſhow of this till you may do it without controlment; you have of late ſtood out againſt your brother, and he hath tane you newly into his grace, where it it is impoſſible you ſhould take root, but by the fair weather that you make your ſelf; it is needful that you frame the ſeaſon for your own harveſt.
John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a roſe in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be diſdain'd of all, then to faſhion a carriage to rob love from any: in this (though I cannot be ſaid to be a flattering honeſt man) it muſt not be denyed but I am a plain dealing villain; I am truſted with a muzzel, and infranchiſed with a clog, therefore I have decreed, not to ſing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and ſeek not to alter me.
Conr. Can you make no uſe of your diſcontent?
John. I will make all uſe of it, for I uſe it onely.
Who comes here? what news Borachio.

Enter Borachio.

Bora. I came yonder from a great ſupper; the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.
John Will it ſerve for any Model to build miſchief on? What is he for a fool that betroth's himſelf to unquietneſs?
Bor. Marry it is your brothers right hand.
John. Who, the moſt exquiſite Claudio?
Bor. Even he.
John. A proper ſquire; and who, and who, which way looks he?
Bor. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and Heir of Leonato.
John. A very forward March-chick! how come you to this?
Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was ſmoaking a muſty room, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in ſad conference: I whipt behind the Arras, and there heard it agreed upon that the Prince ſhould woo Hero for himſelf, and having obtain'd her, give her to Count Claudio.
John. Come, come, let us thither, this may prove food to my diſpleaſure; that young ſtart-up hath all the glory of my overthrow; if I can croſs him any way, I bleſs my ſelf every way; you are both ſure, and will aſſiſt me?
Conr. To the death, my Lord.
John. Let us to the great ſupper, their cheer is the greater that I ſubdued; would the cook were of my mind! ſhall we go prove what's to be done?
Bor. We'll wait upon your Lordſhip.

[Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, his brother, [redacted], Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his neece, [redacted]. Margaret & Ursula.

Leona. Was not Count John here at ſupper?
Brot. I ſaw [redacted]
Beat. How tartly that Gentleman looks! I never can ſee him, but I am heart-burn'd an hour after.
Hero. He is of a melancholly diſpoſition.
Beat. He were an excellent man that were made juſt in the mid-way between him and Benedick, the one is too like an image, and ſaies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldeſt ſon, evermore tatling.
Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count

John's

Johns mouth, and half Count Johns melancholly in Signior Benedick's face.

Beat. With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Brot. Infaith she's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst, I shall lessen God's sending that way; for it is said, God sends a curst Cow short horns, but to a Cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns.

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband, for the which blessing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in a woollen.

Leon. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? dresse him in my apparel, and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? he that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that hath no beard is lesse then a man; and he that is more than a youth, is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take six pence in earnest of the Bearherd and lead his Apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell?

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Devil meet me like an old Cuckold, with his horns on his head, and say get you to heaven Beatrice, get you to heaven, here's no place for you maids; so deliver I up my Apes, and away to Saint Peter, for the heavens; he shews me where the Batchellors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Brot. Well Neece, I trust you will be rul'd by your father. — — — To Hero.

Beat. Yes, faith, it is my cousins duty to make curtsie, and say, as it please you; but yet for all that cousin, let him be a handsom fellow, or else make another curtisie, and say, father, as it pleases me.

Leon. Well Neece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other mettal than earth; would it not grieve a woman to be overmastred with a piece of valiant dust? to make account of her life to a clod of cold wayward marle? no Uncle, I'll none; Adams sons are brethren, and truly I hold it a sin to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you; if the Prince do sollicite you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the musick, cousin, if you be not woo'd in good time; if the Prince be too importune, tell him there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer; for hear me Hero, wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch-jigge, a measure, and a cinquepace; the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jigg, (and full as fantastical); the wedding mannerly modest, (as a measure), full of state and anchentry; and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace faster and faster, till he sinks into his grave.

Leon. Cousin you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beatrice. I have a good eye Uncle, I can see a Church by day light.

Leon. The revellers are entring, brother; make good room.

Scene II.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio, Benedicke, and Balthazar, [illegible], Maskers with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk, and especially when I walk away.

Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so when I please.

Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour; for God defend the Lute should be like the case.

Pedro. My visor is Philemons roof, within the house is Love.

Hero. Why then your visor should be thatcht.

Pedro. Speak low if you speak Love. † (Drawing her aside to whisper.)

Bale. Well, I would you did like me.

Mar. So would not I for your own sake, for I have many ill qualities.

Bale. Which is one?

Mar. I say my prayers aloud.

Bale. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen.

Mar. God match me with a good dancer.

Balth. Amen.

Mar. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done! answer Clerk.

Balth. No more words, the Clerk is answered.

Ursula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Anthonio.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Ursula. I know you by the wagling of your head.

Anth. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Ursu. You could never do him so ill, well, unless you were the very man: here's his dry hand up and down; you are he, you are he.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Ursula. Come, come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it self? go to, mum, you are he, graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales; well, this was Signior Benedicke that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Beat. Why he is the Princes jester, a very dull fool, onely his gift is, in devising impossible slanders; none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany; for he both pleaseth men, and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him; I am sure he is in the fleet, I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do, he'll but break a comparison or two on me, which peradventure (not markt, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholly, and then there's a Partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Bea. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. Exeunt.

Scene III. Musick for the dance.

John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: the Ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing.

John Are not you Signior Benedicke?

Clau. You know me well, I am he.

John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love, he is enamor'd on Hero, I pray you dissuade him from her, she is no equal for his birth; you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Clau. How know you he loves her?

John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too, and he swore he would marry her to night.

John. Come, let us to the banquet. Exeunt manet. Clau.

Clau.

† This seems to be Quoted from a Song or Verses then commonly known.

Clau. Thus answer I in name of Benedick,
But hear this ill news with the ears of Claudio.
'Tis certain so, the Princewoo's for himself.
Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the Office and affairs of love;
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues.
Let every eye negotiate for it self,
And trust no Agent; for beauty is a witch,
Against whose charms, faith melteth into blood:
This is an accident of hourly proof,
Which I mistrusted not. Farewell then [illegible] Hero.

Enter Benedicke.

Bene. Count Claudio?

Clau. Yea the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Clau. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next Willow, about your own business, Count. What fashion will you wear the Garland of? About your neck, like a Usurers chain? Or under your arm, like a Lieutenants scarf? You must wear it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why that's spoken like an honest Drover, so they sell Bullocks: but did you think the Prince would have served you thus?

Clau. I pray you leave me.

Bene. No no! you strike like the blind-man; 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Clau. If it will not be, I'll leave you. Exit.

Bene. Alas poor hurt fowl, now will he creep into sedges: but that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! the Princes fool! Ha? it may be I go under that title, because I am merry; yea but so I am apt to do my self wrong: I am not so reputed, it is the base (though bitter) disposition of Beatrice, that puts the word into her person, and so gives me out; well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Scene IV.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count? did you see him?

Bene. Troth, my Lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame, I found him here as melancholly as a Lodge in a Warren; I told him, (and I think, told him true,) that your grace had got the will of this young Lady, and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a School-boy, who being over-joyed with finding a birds nest, shews it his companion, and he steals it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust, a transgression? the transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who (as I take it) have stolen his birds nest.

Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you, the Gentleman that danc'd with her, told her she is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O she misus'd me past the indurance of a block; an oak but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her; she told me, not thinking I had been my self, that I was the Princes Jester, and that I was duller than a great thaw; hudling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveiance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me; she speaks poyniards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her, she would infect to the north star; I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgrest; she would have made Hercules have turnd spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. come, talk not of her, you shall find her in the infernal Ate in good apparel. I would to God some scholar would conjure her, for certainly while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary, and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Scene V.

Enter Claudio, and Beatrice, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Look here she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command me any service to the worlds end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a tooth-Picker now from the furthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Prester Johns foot; fetch you a hair off the great Chams beard; do you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather then hold three words conference with this Harpy; you have no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not, I cannot indure this Ladies tongue. Exit.

Pedro. Come Lady, come, you have lost the heart of Signior Benedicke.

Beat. Indeed my Lord, he lent it me a while, and I gave him use for it, a double heart for a single one; marry, once before he won it of of me, with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lost it.

Pedro. You have put him down, Lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools: I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherefore are you sad?

Clau. Not sad my Lord.

Pedro. How then? sick?

Clau. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither sad nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil Count, civil as an Orange, and something of a jealous complexion.

Pedro. I faith Lady, I think your blazon to be true, though I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. here Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leona. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes; his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it.

Beat. Speak Count, 'tis your Cue.

Clau. Silence is the perfectest Herald of joy; I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours; I give away my self for you, and doat upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak cousin, or (if you cannot) stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

Pedro. In faith Lady you have a merry heart.

Beat. Yea my Lord I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care, my cousin tells him in his ear that he is in her heart.

Clau. And so she doth cousin.

Beat. Good Lord, for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burn'd, I may sit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you have me? Lady.

Beat. No my Lord, unless I might have another for working-working-dayes, your Grace is too coſtly to wear every day: But I beſeech your Grace pardon me, I was born to ſpeak all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your ſilence moſt offends me, and to be merry beſt becomes you; for out of queſtion, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No ſure my Lord, my mother cryed; but then there was a ſtar danc'd, and under that I was born. Coſins God give you joy!

Leon. Neece, will you look to thoſe things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy Uuncle, by your Graces pardon. [Exit Beatrice.

Scene VI

Prince. By my troth, a pleaſant ſpirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholly element in her, my Lord, ſhe is never ſad, but when ſhe ſleeps, and not ever ſad then; for I have heard my daughter ſay, ſhe hath often dreamt of unhappineſs, and wak't her ſelf with laughing.

Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means, ſhe mocks all her wooers out of ſuit.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedicke.

Leona. O lord, my Lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themſelves mad.

Prince. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to Church?

Clau. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.

Leona. Not till Monday, my dear ſon, which is hence a juſt ſeven night, and a time too brief to, to have all things anſwer mind.

Prince. Come, you ſhake the head at ſo long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time ſhall not go dully by us; I will in the interim, undertake one of Hercules labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, th' one with th'other; I would fain have it a match, and I doubt not but to faſhion it, if you three will but miniſter ſuch aſſiſtance as I ſhall give you direction.

Leona. My Lord, I am for you, though it coſt me ten nights watchings.

Clau. And I, my Lord.

Prin. And you too, gentle Hero.

Hero. I will do any modeſt office, my Lord, to help my couſin to a good husband.

Prin. And Benedicke is not the unhopefulleſt husband that I know: thus far can I praiſe him, he is of a noble ſtrain, of approved valour, and confirmd honeſty. I will teach you how to humour your couſin, that ſhe ſhall fall in love with Benedicke, and I, with your two helps will ſo practiſe on Benedicke, that in deſpite of his quick wit, and his queaſie ſtomack, he ſhall fall in love with Beatrice: if we can do this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory ſhall be ours, for we are the only love-gods; go with me, and I will tell you my driſt. [Exeunt.

Another Apartment in Leonato's House. Scene VII. Enter John and Borachio.

John It is ſo, the Count Claudio ſhall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea my Lord, but I can croſs it.

John. Any bar, any croſs, any impediment, will be medicinable to me; I am ſick in diſpleaſure to him, and whatſoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine, how canſt thou croſs this marriage?

Bor. Not honeſtly my Lord, but ſo covertly, that no diſhoneſty ſhall appear in me.

Joh. ſhew me briefly how.

Bor. I think I told your Lordſhip a year ſince, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

John. I remember.

Bor. I can at any unſeaſonable inſtant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladys chamber window.

John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bor. The poyſon of that lies in you to temper, go you to the Prince your brother, ſpare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, (whoſe eſtimation do you mightily hold up,) to a contaminated ſtale, ſuch a one as Hero.

John. What proof ſhall I make of that?

Bor. Proof enough, to miſuſe the Prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato; look you for any other iſſue?

John. Only to deſpite them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bor. Go then find me a meet hour, to draw on Pedro, and the Count Claudio, alone; tell them that you know that Hero, loves me, intend a kind of zeal both to the Prince and Claudio, (as in a love of your brothers honor who hath made this match), and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cozen'd with the ſemblance of a maid, that you have diſcoverd thus; they will ſcarcely believe this without trial: offer them inſtances which ſhall bear no leſs likelihood, than to ſee me at her chamber window; hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret term me [redacted], and bring them to ſee this, the very night before the intenced wedding; for in the mean time, I will faſhion the matter, that Hero ſhall be abſent, and there ſhall appear ſuch ſeeming truths of Hero's diſloyalty, that jealouſie ſhall be call'd aſſurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

Joh. Grow this to what adverſe iſſue it can, I will put it in practiſe: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thouſand ducats.

Bor. Be thou conſtant in the accuſation, and my cunning ſhall not ſhame me.

John. I will preſently go learn their day of marriage. [Exeunt

Scene VIII Leonato's Garden. Enter Benedicke [redacted] & Boy.

Bene. Boy!

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber window lies a book, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already ſir. [Exit Boy.

Bene. I know that, but I would have thee hence, and here again—I do much wonder, that one man ſeeing how much another man is a fool, when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will after he hath laught at ſuch ſhallow follies in others, become the argument of his own ſcorn, by falling in love! and ſuch a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no muſick with him but the drum and the fife, and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known when he would have walkt ten mile a foot, to ſee a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake carving the faſhion of a new doublet: he was wont to ſpeak plain, and to the purpoſe, (like an honeſt man and a ſouldier), and now is he turn'd orthographer, his words are a very fantaſtical banquet, juſt ſo many ſtrange diſhes. may I be ſo converted, and ſee with theſe eyes? I cannot tell, I think not: I will not be ſworn, but love may transform me to an oyſter; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyſter of me, he ſhall never make me ſuch a fool; one woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wiſe, yet I am well: another vertuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman ſhall not come in my grace: rich ſhe ſhall be, that's certain; wiſe, or I'll none; vertuous, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; Noble, or not I for an Angel; of good diſcourſe, an excellent Muſitian, and her hair ſhall be of what colour it pleaſe God; ha! the Prince and Monſieur Love. I will hide me in the Arbor. [withdraws

Scene IX.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and [redacted]

Prince. Come, ſhall we hear this muſick?

Claud. Yea my good Lord; how ſtill the evening is,
As huſht on purpoſe to grace harmony!

Prince

* Hinting Satirically at the art uſed by Ladys in dying their hair of a colour different from what is is by nature.

Prince. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Clau. O very well my Lord: the musick ended,
We'l fit the [redacted]-fox with a penny worth.

Prince. Come Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my Lord, [redacted] so bad a voice,
To slander musick any more than once.

Prince. It is the witness still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his own perfection;
I pray thee sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit,
To her he thinks not worthy, yet he woo's,
Yet will he swear he loves.

Prince. Nay pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks,
Note notes forsooth, and nothing.

Bene. Now divine air, now is his soul ravish't, is it not strange that sheeps guts should hale souls out of mens bodies? well, a horn for my money when all's done.

The Song.

Sigh no more, Ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant never:
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe,
Into hey nony, nony.

Sing no more ditties, sing no more;
Of dumps so dull and heavy,
The frauds of men were ever so,
Since summer first was leafy,
Then sigh not so, &c.

Prince. By my troth a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no faith, thou sing'st well enough for a shift.

Bene. And he had been a dog that should have howl'd thus, they would have hang'd him, and I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief; I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

Prince. Yea marry; dost thou hear Balthazar? I pray thee get us some excellent musick; for to morrow night we would have it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord. [Exit Balthazar.

Prince. Do so, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

Clau. O Ay, stalk on, stalk on, the fowl sits. I did never think that Lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful, that she should so doat on Signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible, sits the wind in that corner? [Aside.

Leon. By my troth my Lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that she loves him with an inraged affection, it is past the infinite of thought.

Prince. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers [redacted].

Prince. Why what effects of passion shews she?

Claud. Bait the hook well, the fish will bite. [Speaking low.

Leon. What effects my Lord? she will sit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me; I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leo. I would have sworn it had, my Lord, especially against Benedick.

Bene. I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it; knavery cannot sure hide himself in such reverence. [Aside.

Claud. He hath tane th' infection, hold it up. [Speaking low.

Prince Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leonato. No, and swears she never will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter sayes: shall I, sayes she, that have so oft encountred him with scorn, write to him that I love him?

Leo. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him, for she'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper; my daughter tells us all.

Cla. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O when she had writ it, and reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet.

Clau. That.

Leon. O she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence, raild at her self, that she should be so immodest, to write to one that she knew would flout her: I measure him says she, by my own spirit, for I should flout him if he writ to me, yea though I love him, I should.

Clau. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses; O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter says so, and the extasie hath so much overborn her, that my daughter is sometime afeard she will do a desperate out-rage to her self, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Clau. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor Lady worse.

Prin. And he should, it were an alms to hang him; she's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all suspition) she is vertuous.

Clau. And she is exceeding wise.

Prin. In every thing, but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O my Lord, wisdome and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that blood hath the victory; I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her Unkle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daft all other respects, and made her half my self; I pray you tell Benedick of it, and hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good think you?

Cla. Hero thinks surely she will die, for she says she will die, if he love her not, and she will die ere she make her love known; and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crosness.

Prin. She doth well; if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man (as you know all) hath a contemptible spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Clau. 'Fore God, and in my mind very wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Hector, I assure you; and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise; for either he avoids them with with great discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, a must necessarily keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

Prin. And so will he do, for the man doth fear God, howbeever it seems not in him, by some large jests he will make: well I am sorry for your Niece, shall we go see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my Lord, let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, thats impossible, she may wear her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter, let it cool the while, I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Claud. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the same Net spread for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry; the sport will be, when they hold an opinion of anothers dotage, and no such matter; that's the Scene that I would see, which will be meerly a dumb shew; let us send her to call him in to dinner. Scene X. Ben: from Arbour Exeunt.

Ben. This can be no trick, the conference was sadly born, they have the truth of this from Hero, they seem to pity the Lady; it seems her affections have the full bent love me? why it must be requited: I hear how I am censur'd; they say I will bear my self proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too, that she will rather dye than give any sign of affection: I did never think to marry: I must not seem proud: happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is fair; 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and vertuous, 'tis so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me, by my troth it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly; for I will be horribly in love with her; I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have rail'd so long against marriage; but doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips and sentences, and these paper-bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would dye a batchellor, I did not think I should live till I were married; here comes Beatrice: by this day, she's a fair Lady, I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Ben. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me; if it had been painful, I would not have come.

Ben. You take pleasure then in the message.

Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knifes point, and choak a Daw withal: you have no stomach Signior, fare you well. Exit.

Ben. Ha, against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner: there's a double meaning in that: I took no more pains for those thanks, than you took pains to thank me; that's as much as to say, any pains that I take for you is as easie as thanks: if I do not take pity of her, I am a Villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew: I will go get her picture. [Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scene: 1
Continues in the Garden.

Enter Hero [redacted] Margaret and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret run thee in to the parlour,
There shalt thou find my Cousin Beatrice,
Proposing with the Prince and Claudio,
Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula
Walk in the Orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her; say that thou over-heardst us,
And bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where honey-suckles ripened by the sun
Forbid the Sun to enter; like Favourites
Made proud by Princes, that advance their pride
Against that power that bred it; there will she hide her,
To listen to our purpose; this is thy office,
Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'le make her come I warrant presently. [Exit.

Hero. Now Ursula when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must onely be of Benedick;
When I do name him, let it be thy part
To praise him more than ever man did merit,
My talk to thee must be how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice; of this matter
Is little Cupids crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by hear-say: now begin.

Enter Beatrice. running towards The Arbour.

For look where Beatrice like a Lapwing runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait;
So angle we for Beatrice, who even now,
Is couched in the woodbine coverture;
Fear you not my part of the Dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her that her ear lose nothing
Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it: ——
No truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful,
I know her spirits are as coy and wild,
As Haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure,
That Benedick loves Beatrice so intirely?

Hero. So says the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?

Hero. They did intreat me to acquaint her of it,
But I perswaded them, if they lov'd Benedick,
To wish him wrastle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so, doth not the Gentleman
Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O God of love! I know he doth deserve,
As much as may be yielded to a man:
But nature never fram'd a womans heart,
Of prouder stuff then that of Beatrice;
Disdain and Scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,
Mis-prizing what they look on, and her wit
Values it self so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak; she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self indeared.

Urs. Sure I think so,
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why you speak truth, I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd,
But she would spell him backward; if fair-fac'd,

She would ſwear the gentleman ſhould be her ſiſter;
If black, why Nature drawing of an antick,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a launce ill-headed:
If low, and agat very vilely cut:
If ſpeaking, why a vane blown with all winds;
If ſilent, why a block moved with none.
So turns ſhe every man the wrong ſide out,
And never gives to truth and Vertue that
Which ſimpleneſs and merit purchaſeth.

Urſ. Sure, ſure, ſuch carping is not commendable.

Hero. No, not to be ſo odd, and from all faſhions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable.
But who dare tell her ſo? if I ſhould ſpeak,
She would mock me into air, O ſhe would laugh me
Out of my ſelf, preſs me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedick like covered fire,
Conſume away in ſighs, waſt inwardly;
It were a bitter death, to die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Urſ. Yet tell her of it, hear what ſhe will ſay.

Her. No, rather I will go to Benedick,
And counſel him to fight againſt his paſſion,
And truly Ile deviſe ſome honeſt ſlanders,
To ſtain my couſin with; one doth not know,
How much an ill word may impoiſon liking.

Urſ. O do not do your couſin ſuch a wrong.
She cannot be ſo much without true judgment,
Having ſo ſwift and excellent a wit,
As ſhe is priz'd to have, as to refuſe
So rare a Gentleman as ſignior Benedick.

Her. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted, my dear Claudio.

Urſ. I pray you be not angry with me, Madam,
Speaking my fancy; Signior Benedick,
For ſhape, for bearing, argument and valour
Goes formoſt in report through Italy.

Her. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.

Urſ. His excellence did earn it ere he had it:
When are you married Madam?

Her. Why every day to morrow, come go in,
I'le ſhew thee ſome attires, and have thy counſel,
Which is the beſt to furniſh me to morrow.

Urſ. She's tane I warrant you,
We have caught her Madam.

Hero. If it prove ſo, then loving goes by haps,
Some Cupids kill with arrows, ſome with traps. [Exeunt.

Beat. What fire is in my ears? can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and ſcorn ſo much?
Contempt, farwell, and maiden pride, adieu,
No glory lives behind the back of ſuch,
And Benedick, love on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dos't love, my kindneſs ſhall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band.
For others ſay thou doſt deſerve, and I
Believe it better than reportingly. [Exit.

Scene II. Leonato's House.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

Prince. I do but ſtay till your marriage be conſummate, and then I go toward Arragon.

Clau. I'le bring you thither my Lord, if you'l vouchſafe me.

Prin. Nay, that would be as great a ſoil in the new gloſs of your marriage, as to ſhew a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it. I will onely be bold with Benedick for his company; for from the crown of his head, to the ſole of his foot, he is all mirth; he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-ſtring, and the little hang-man dare not ſhoot at him; he hath a heart as ſound as a bell, and the tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue ſpeaks.

Ben. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

Leo. So ſay I; methinks you are ſadder.

Clau. I hope he be in love.

Prin. Hang him truant, there's no true drop of blood in him to be truly toucht with love; if he be ſad, he wants money.

Ben. I have the tooth-ach.

Prin. Draw it.

Ben. Hang it.

Clau. You muſt hang it firſt, and draw it afterwards.

Prin. What? ſigh for the tooth-ach?

Leon. Which is but a humour or a worm.

Ben. Well, every one can maſter a grief, but he that has it.

Clau. Yet ſay I, he is in love.

Prin. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unleſs it be a fancy that he hath to ſtrange diſguiſes, as to be a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow; unleſs he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it to appear he is.

Clau. If he be not in love with ſome woman, there is no believing old ſigns, he bruſhes his hat a mornings; What ſhould that bode?

Prin. Hath any man ſeen him at the Barbers?

Clau. No, but the Barbers man hath been ſeen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already ſtuft tennis balls.

Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he did, by the loſs of a beard.

Prin. Nay a rubs himſelf with Civet, can you ſmell him out by that?

Clau. That's as much as to ſay, the ſweet youth's in love.

Prin. The greateſt note of it is his melancholy.

Clau. And when was he wont to waſh his face?

Prin. Yea, or to paint himſelf? for the which I hear what they ſay of him.

Clau. Nay, but his jeſting ſpirit, which is now crept into a lute-ſtring, and now govern'd by ſtops——

Prin Indeed that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.

Clau. Nay, but I know who loves him.

Prin. That would I know too; I watrant one that knows him not.

Clau. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in deſpight of all dies for him.

Prin. She ſhall be buried with her face upwards. *

Ben. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ach, old ſignior walk aſide with me, I have ſtudied eight or nine wiſe words to ſpeak to you, which theſe hobby-horſes muſt not hear: Exe. Bene. & Leon.

Prin. For my life to break with him about Beatrice.

Clau. Tis even ſo, Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Scene III.

Enter John the Baſtard.

Baſt. My Lord and brother, God ſave you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Baſt. If your leſure ſerv'd, I would ſpeak with you.

Prin. in private?

Baſt. If it pleaſe you; yet Count Claudio may hear; for what I would ſpeak of, concerns him.

Prin. What's the matter?

Baſt. Means your Lordſhip to be married to morrow? To Claudio.

Prin. You know he does.

Baſt. I know not that when, he knows what I know.

Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you diſcover it.

Baſt. You may think I love you not, let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifeſt; for my brother (I think, he holds you well, and in dearneſs of heart) hath holp to effect your enſuing marriage; ſurely ſute ill ſpent, and labour ill beſtowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

Baſt.

* They ſhould be buried with their heels upwards was a proverbial ſaying heretofore in use & applied to those who had met with any piece of fortune very ſurprising & very rare

Baſt. I came hither to tell you, and circumſtances ſhortned (for ſhe hath been too long a talking of), the Lady is diſloyal.

Clau. Who? Hero?

Baſt. Even ſhe, Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.

Clau. Diſloyal?

Baſt. The word is too good to paint out her wickedneſs; I could ſay ſhe were worſe; think you of a worſe title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant; go but with me to night, you ſhall ſee her chamber window entred, even the night before her wedding-day; if you love her, then, to morrow wed her; but it would better fit your Honour to change your mind.

Clau. May this be ſo?

Prin. I will not think it.

Baſt. If you dare not truſt that you ſee, confeſs not that you know; if you will follow me, I will ſhew you enough; and when you have ſeen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Clau. If I ſee any thing to night why I ſhould not marry her to morrow in the congregation where I ſhould wed, there will I ſhame her.

Prin. And as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to diſgrace her.

Baſt. I will diſparage her no farther, till you are my witneſſes; bear it coldly but till night, and let the iſſue ſhew it ſelf.

Prin. O day untowardly turned!

Clau. O miſchief ſtrangely thwarting!

Baſt. O plague right well prevented! ſo will you ſay when you have ſeen the ſequel. Scene V. The ſame. Exeunt.

Enter Dogbery and his compartner, with the Watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or elſe it were pity but they ſhould ſuffer ſalvation, body and ſoul.

Dog. Nay, that were puniſhment too good for them, if they ſhould have any allegiance in them, being choſen for the Princes Watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogbery.

Dog. Firſt, Who think you the moſt diſartleſs man to be Conſtable?

Watch. 1. Hugh Otecake, ſir, or George Seacole; for they can write and read.

Dog. Come hither Neighbour Seacole; God hath bleſt you with a good Name; to be a well-favoured man, is the gift of Fortune, but to write and read comes by Nature.

VVatch. 2. Both which Maſter Conſtable ——

Dog. You have: I knew it would be your anſwer. well, for your favour ſir, why give God thanks, and make no boaſt of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of ſuch vanity: you are thought here to be the moſt ſenſleſs and fit man for the Conſtable of the Watch; therefore bear you the Lanthorn; this is your charge: You ſhall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man ſtand in the Princes name.

VVatch. 2 How if a will not ſtand?

Dog. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and preſently call the reſt of the Watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not ſtand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes ſubjects.

Dog. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes ſubjects: you ſhall alſo make no noiſe in the ſtreets; for, for the Watch to babble and talk, is moſt tollerable, and not to be endured.

VVatch. We will rather ſleep than talk; we know what belongs to a Watch.

Dog. Why you ſpeak like an ancient and moſt quiet Watchman, for I cannot ſee how ſleeping ſhould offend; only have a care that your bills be not ſtoln: well, you are to call at all the Alehouſes, and bid them that are drunk get them to bed.

VVatch. How if they will not?

Dog. Why then let them alone till they are ſober; if they make you not then the better anſwer, you may ſay they are not the men you took them for.

VVatch. Well, ſir.

Dog. If you meet a thief, you may ſuſpect him by vertue of your office, to be no true man; and for ſuch kind of men, the leſs you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honeſty.

VVatch. If we know him to be a thief, ſhall we not lay hands on him?

Dog. Truly by your office you may; but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd: the moſt peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him ſhew himſelf what he is, and ſteal out of his company.

Verg. You have been always call'd a merciful man, partner.

Dog. Truly I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honeſty in him.

Verges. If you hear a child cry in the night, you muſt call to the Nurſe, and bid her ſtill it.

VVatch. How if the Nurſe be aſleep, and will not hear us?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying: for the Ewe that will not hear her Lamb when it baes, will never anſwer a Calf when he bleats.

Verges. 'Tis very true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you Conſtable are to preſent the Princes own perſon; if you meet the Prince in the night, you may ſtay him.

Verges. Nay, birlady that I think I cannot.

Dog. Five ſhillings to one on't with any man that knows the Statutes, he may ſtay him, marry not without the Prince be willing: for indeed the Watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to ſtay a man againſt his will.

Verges. Birlady I think it be ſo.

Dog. Ha, ah, ha, well maſters good night, and there be any matter of weight chances, call up me; keep your fellows counſel, and your own, and good night, come Neighbour.

VVatch. VVell maſters, we hear our charge, let us go ſit here upon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honeſt neighbours. I pray you watch about Signior Leonato's door, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coil to night; adieu, be vigilant I beſeech you. Scene V. Exeunt. Dog. & Ver

Enter Borachio and Conrade,

Bor. VVhat, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, ſtir not. [Aside

Bor. Conrade I ſay.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Bor. Maſs and my elbow itcht, I thought there would a ſcab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an anſwer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Bor. Stand thee cloſe then under this Pent-houſe, for it drizles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. Some treaſon maſters, yet ſtand cloſe.

Bor. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thouſand Ducats.

Con. Is it poſſible that any villany ſhould be ſo dear?

Bor. Thou ſhouldſt rather ask if it were poſſible any villany ſhould be ſo rich? for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bor. That ſhews thou art unconfirm'd, thou knoweſt that the faſhion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bor. I mean the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bor. Tush, I may as well say the fool's the fool, but seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. I know that deformed; he has been a vile thief this seven years, he goes up and down like a Gentleman: I remember his name.

Bor. Did'st thou not hear somebody?

Con. No, 'twas the vane on the house.

Bor. Seest thou not (I say) what a deformed thief this fashion is, how giddily he turns about all the Hot-bloods, between fourteen and five and thirty, sometimes fashioning them like Pharaos soldiers in the rechie painting, sometimes like God-Bell's priests in the old Church window, sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smircht worm-eaten tapestry, where his Cod-piece seems as massie as his club?

Con. All this I see, and see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man; but art not thou thy self giddy with the fashion, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bor. Not so neither, but know that I have to night wooed Margaret the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leans me out at her mistres chamber window, bids me a thousand times good night—I tell this tale vilely: I should first tell thee how the Prince Claudio, and my Master planted, and placed, and possessed by my Master Don John, saw afar off in the Orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought thy Margaret was Hero?

Bor. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio, but the devil my Master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths which first possest them, partly by the dark night which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villany, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged, swore he would meet her as he was appointed next morning at the Temple, and there, before the whole Congregation shame her with what he saw o're night, and send her home again without a Husband.

Watch. 1. We charge you in the Princes name stand.

Watch. 2. Call up the right master Constable, we have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in a Common-wealth.

Watch. 1. And one Deformed is one of them, I know him, he wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters.

Watch. 2. You'll be made bring Deformed forth I warrant you.

Con. Masters, never speak, we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bor. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these mens bills.

Con. A commodity in question I warrrant you, come we'll obey you. Exeunt.

Scene VI. Leonato's House.

Enter Hero, and Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Ursula wake my Cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will Lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well. Exit.

Mar. Troth, I think your other rebato were better.

Hero. No pray thee good Meg I'le wear this.

Mar. By my troth's not so good, and I warrant your Cousin will say so.

Hero. My Cousin's a fool, and thou art another, I'll wear none but this.

Mar. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your Gown's a most rare fashion ifaith, I saw the dutchess of Millains Gown, that they praise so.

Hero. O that exceeds they say.

Mar. By my troth's but a Night-Gown in respect of yours, cloth a gold and cuts, and lac'd with silver, set with pearls down-sleeves, side-sleeves, and skirts, round, underborn with a blewish tinsel; but for a fine queint graceful and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee, art not asham'd?

Marg. Of what Lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your Lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, saving your reverence, a husband: and bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend no body; is there any harm in the heavier for a husband? none I think, and it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy, ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Scene VII.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Beat. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now? do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Mar. Clap's into Light o' love, (that goes without a burden,) do you sing it, and I'le dance it.

Beat. Ye light a love with your heels; then if your husband have stables enough, you'll look he shall lack no barns.

Mar. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five a clock cousin, 'tis time you were ready; by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a hauk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beat. What means the fool trow?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one their hearts desire!

Hero. These gloves the Count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuft Cousin, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and stuft! there's a goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O God help me, God help me, how long have you profest apprehension?

Mar. Ever since you left it; doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap, by my troth I am sick.

Mar. Get you some of this distill'd carduus benedictus, and lay it to your heart, it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus? you have some moral in this benedictus.

Mar. Moral? no by my troth, I have no moral meaning, I meant plain holy thistle; you may think perchance that I think you are in love, nay birlady I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can, nor indeed I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man; he swore he would never marry, and yet now in despight of his heart he eats his meat without grudging; and how you may be converted I know not, but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this thy tongue keeps?

Mar. Not a false gallop.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to Church. Hero.

× Meaning Sampson.

Hero. Help to dreſs me good coze, good Meg, good Urſula. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII.

Enter Leonato, and the Conſtable and the Headborough.

Leonata. What would you with me, honeſt neighbour?

Conſt. Dog. Marry, ſir I would have ſome confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief I pray you, for you ſee 'tis a buſie time with me.

Conſt. Dog. Marry, this it is ſir.

Headb. Yes in truth it is ſir.

Leon. What is it my good friends?

Conſt. Dog. Goodman Verges, ſir ſpeaks a little of the matter, an old man ſir, and his wits are not ſo blunt, as God help, I would deſire they were, but, in faith honeſt as the skin between his brows.

Headb. Yes I thank God, I am as honeſt as any man living, that is an old man, and no honeſter than I.

Conſt. Dog. Comparisons are odorous, palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Conſt. Dog. It pleaſes your worſhip to ſay ſo, but we are the poor Dukes Officers, but truly for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a King, I could find in my heart to beſtow it all of your worſhip.

Leon. All thy tediouſneſs on me, ah?

Conſt. Dog. Yea, and 'twere a thouſand times more than 'tis, for I hear as good exclamation on your Worſhip, as of any man in the City, and tho' I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Headb. And ſo am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to ſay.

Headb. Marry, ſir, our watch to night, excepting your worſhips preſence, have tane a couple of as arrant knaves, as any in Meſſina.

Conſt. Dog. A good old man ſir, he will be talking as they ſay; when the age is in, the wit is out, God help us, it is a world to ſee: well ſaid i'faith neighbour Verges, well, [illegible] a good man, and two men rides an horſe, one muſt ride behind, an honeſt ſoul i'faith ſir, by my troth he is, as ever broke bread, but God is to be worſhipt; all men are not alike, alas good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed neighbour he comes too ſhort of you.

Conſt. Dog. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I muſt leave you.

Conſt. Dog. One word, ſir, our watch have indeed comprehended two aſpitious perſons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worſhip.

Leon. Take their examination your ſelf, and bring it me, I am now in great haſt, as may appear unto you.

Conſt. It ſhall be ſuffigance. [Exit.

Leon. Drink ſome wine ere you go: fare you well. Meſ

Meſ. My Lord, they ſtay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I'll wait upon them. I am ready. [Exit Leon.

Dough. Go good partner, go get you to Francis Seacoale, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the Goal; we are now to examine thoſe men.

Verges. And we muſt do it wiſely.

Dough. We will ſpare for no wit, I warrant you; here's that ſhall drive ſome of them to a non-come, only get the learned writer to ſet down our excommunication, and meet me at the Goal. [Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scene I

A Church.

Enter Prince, Baſtard, Leonata, Frier, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leon. Come Frier Francis, be brief, only to the plain form of marriage, and you ſhall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Fran. You come hither my Lord to marry this Lady.

Clau. No.

Leon. To be married to her, Frier, you come to marry her.

Frier. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

Hero. I do.

Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you ſhould not be conjoined, I charge you on your ſouls to utter it.

Clau. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None my Lord.

Frier. Know you any, Count?

Leon. I dare make his anſwer, None.

Clau. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Ben. How now! interjections? why then, ſome be of laughing, as ha, ha, he.

Clau. Stand thee by Frier: father by your leave,
Will you with [illegible] free and unconſtrained ſoul
Give me this maid your daughter?

Leon. As freely ſon, as God did give her me.

Clau. And what have I to give you back, whoſe worth
May counterpoiſe this rich and precious gift?

Prin. Nothing, unleſs you render her again.

Clau. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulneſs:
There Leonato, take her back again,
Give not this rotten Orange to your friend,
She's but the ſign and ſemblance of her honour:
Behold how like a maid ſhe bluſhes here!
O what authority and ſhew of truth
Can cunning ſin cover it ſelf withal!
Comes not that blood, as modeſt evidence,
To witneſs ſimple Vertue? would you not ſwear,
All you that ſee her, that ſhe were a maid,
By theſe exteriour ſhews? But ſhe is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed;
Her bluſh is guiltineſs, not modeſty.

Leon. What do you mean, my Lord?

Clau. Not to be married,
Not knit my ſoul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my Lord, if you in your own proof,
Have vanquiſht the reſiſtance of [illegible] youth,
And made deſeat of her virginity—— (her,

Clau. I know what you would ſay: if I have known
You will ſay, ſhe did imbrace me as a husband,
And ſo extenuate the forehand ſin. No Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his ſiſter, ſhewed
Baſhful ſincerity and comely love.

Hero. And ſeem'd I ever otherwiſe to you?

Clau. Out on thee ſeeming! I will write againſt it,
You ſeem to me as Diana in her Orb,
As chaſt as is the bud ere it be blown:
But you are more intemperate in your blood,
Than Venus, or thoſe pamper'd animals,
That rage in ſavage ſenſuality.

Hero. Is my Lord well, that he doth ſpeak ſo wide?

Leon. Sweet Prince, why ſpeak not you?

Prin. What ſhould I ſpeak?
I ſtand diſhonour'd that have gone about,
To link my dear friend to a common ſtale.

Leon. Are theſe things ſpoken, or do I but dream?

Baſt. Sir they are ſpoken, and theſe things are true.

Ben. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Clau. Leonato, ſtand I here?
Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?
Is this face Hero's? are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is ſo, but what of this my Lord?

Clau. Let me but move one queſtion to your daughter,
And by that fatherly and kindly power,
That you have in her, bid her anſwer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do ſo, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me, how am I beſet!
What kind of catechizing call you this?
Leon. To make you anſwer truly to your name.
Hero. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any juſt reproach?
Clau. Marry that can Hero,
Hero it ſelf can blot out Hero's vertue.
What man was he, talkt with you yeſternight,
Out at your Window betwixt twelve and one?
Now if you are a Maid, anſwer to this.
Hero. I talkt with no man at that hour, my Lord.
Prin. Why then you are no maiden. Leonato,
I am ſorry you muſt hear: upon mine honour,
My ſelf, my brother, and this grieved Count
Did ſee her, hear her, at that hour laſt night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber window,
Who hath indeed moſt like a liberal villain
Confeſt the vile encounters they have had
A thouſand times in ſecret.
John, Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,
Not to be ſpoken of,
There is not chaſtity enough in language,
Without offence, to utter them: thus pretty Lady
I am ſorry for thy much miſgovernment.
Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadſt thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts and counſels of thy heart?
But fare thee well, moſt foul, moſt fair, farewell
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity,
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of Love,
And on my eyelids ſhall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never ſhall it more be gracious.
Leon. Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?
Bea. Why how now couſin, wherefore ſink you down?
Baſt. Come, let us go: theſe things come thus to light,
Smother her ſpirits up. Ex. Ped. John, & Claud.
Ben. How doth the Lady? Scene 11.
Beat. Dead I think, help Uncle,
Hero, Why Hero! Uncle! Signior Benedick! Frier!
Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand;
Death is the faireſt cover for her ſhame,
That may be wiſht for.
Beat. How now couſin Hero?
Fri. Have comfort Lady.
Leo. Doſt thou look up?
Fri. Yea, wherefore ſhould ſhe not?
Leo. Wherefore? Why doth not every earthly thing
Cry ſhame upon her? Could ſhe here deny
The ſtory that is printed in her blood?
Do not live, Hero, do not ope thine eyes:
For did I think thou would'ſt not quickly die,
Thought I thy ſpirits were ſtronger than thy ſhame's
My ſelf would on the rearward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Griev'd I, I had but one?
Chid I, for that at frugal natures [redacted] hand
One too much by thee? why had I one?
Why ever was't thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not, with charitable hand
Took up a beggars iſſue at my gate's,
Who ſmeered thus, and mir'd with infamy,
I might have ſaid, no part of it is mine,
This ſhame derives it ſelf from unknown loins;
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on, mine ſo much,
That I my ſelf, was to my ſelf not mine,
Valuing of her, why ſhe, O ſhe is fal'n
Into a pit of Ink, that the wide ſea
Hath drops too few, to waſh her clean again,
And ſalt too little, which may ſeaſon give
To her foul tainted fleſh.
Ben. Sir, ſir, be patient: for my part, I am ſo attired in wonder, I know not what to ſay.
Beat. O on my ſoul my couſin is belied.
Ben. Lady were you her bedfellow laſt night?
Bea. No truly I not; although until laſt night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O that is ſtronger made
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron.
Would the Prince lie, and Claudio would he lie,
Who lov'd her ſo, that ſpeaking of her foulneſs,
Waſh'd it with tears? Hence from her, let her die.
Fri. Hear me a little, for I have only been ſilent ſo long, and given way unto this courſe of fortune, by noting of the Lady, I have mark'd
A thouſand bluſhing apparitions,
To ſtart in her face, a thouſand innocent ſhame's
In Angel whiteneſs bear away thoſe bluſhes,
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that theſe Princes hold
Againſt her maiden truth. Call me a fool,
Truſt not my reading, nor my obſervations,
Which with experimental ſeal doth warrant
The tenure of my book: truſt not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor dignity,
If this ſweet Lady lie not guiltleſs here,
Under ſome biting error.
Leon. Frier, it cannot be;
Thou ſeeſt that all the Grace that ſhe hath left,
Is, that ſhe will not add to her damnation
A ſin of perjury; ſhe not denies it:
Why ſeek'ſt thou then to cover with excuſe,
That which appears in proper nakedneſs?
Fri. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know that do accuſe me, I know none:
If I know more of any man alive
Than that which maiden modeſty doth warrant,
Let all my ſins lack mercy! O my Father,
Prove you that any man with me converſe,
At hour's unmeet, or that I yeſternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuſe me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is ſome ſtrange miſpriſion in the Prince.
Ben. Two of them have the very bent of honor,
And if their Wiſdom's be miſled in this,
The practiſe of it lives in John the baſtard,
Whoſe ſpirits toil in frame of villanies.
Leon. I know not: if they ſpeak but truth of her,
Theſe hands ſhall tear her; If they wrong her honor,
The proudeſt of them ſhall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet ſo dried this blood of mine,
Nor age ſo eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made ſuch havock of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me ſo much of friends,
But they ſhall find awaked in ſuch a kind,
Both ſtrength of limb, and policy of mind,
Ability in means, and choice of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.
Fri. Pauſe a while,
And let my counſel ſway you in this caſe,
Your daughter here the Princeſs (left for dead);
Let her a while be ſecretly kept in,
And publiſh it that ſhe is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning oſtentation,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournful Epitaph's, and do all rites,
That appertain unto a burial.
Leon. What ſhall become of this? What will this do?
Fri. Marry this well carried, ſhall on her behalf,
Change ſlander to remorſe, that is ſome good:
But not for that dream I on this ſtrange courſe,
But on this travel look for greater birth:
She dying, as it muſt be ſo maintain'd,
Upon the inſtant that ſhe was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd,
Of every hearer: for ſo it falls out,
That what we have, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and loſt,

Why then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue that poſſeſſion would not ſhew us
Whiles it was ours; ſo will it fare with Claudio:
When he ſhall hear ſhe dyed upon his words,
Th' Idea of her life ſhall ſweetly creep
Into his ſtudy of imagination,
And every lovely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparell'd in more precions habit;
More moving, delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye aud proſpect of his ſoul,
Than when ſhe liv'd indeed: then ſhall he mourn,
If ever Love had intereſt in his Liver,
And wiſh he had not ſo accuſed her;
No, tho he thought his accuſation true:
Let this be ſo, and doubt not but ſucceſs
Will faſhion the event in better ſhape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be level'd falſe,
The ſuppoſition of the Ladies death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy.
And if it ſort not well, you may conceal her,
As beſt befits her wounded Reputation,
In ſome Reclufive and Religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Ben. Signior Leonato, let the Frier adviſe you,
And tho you know my inwardneſs and love
Is very much unto the Prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As ſecretly and juſtly, as your ſoul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief, Alaſs!
The ſmalleſt twine may lead me.

Frier. 'Tis well conſented, preſently away,
For to ſtrange ſores, ſtrangely they ſtrain the cure:
Come Lady, dye to live, this Wedding-day
Perhaps is but prolong'd; have patience and endure. [Exeunt.

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while? Scena III.

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

Bene. I will not deſire that.

Beat. You have no reaſon, I do it freely.

Bene. Surely I do believe your fair Couſin is wrong'd.

Beat. Ah how much might the man deſerve of me that would right her!

Bene. Is there any way to ſhew ſuch friendſhip?

Beat. A very even way, but no ſuch friend.

Bene. May a man do it?

Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world ſo well as you; is not that ſtrange?

Beat. As ſtrange as the thing I know not; it were as poſſible for me to ſay, I loved nothing ſo well as you; but believe me not; and yet I lye not; I confeſs nothing, nor I deny nothing! I am ſorry for my Couſin.

Bene. By my Sword, Beatrice thou lov'ſt me.

Beat. Do not ſwear by it and eat it.

Bene. I will ſwear by it that you love me; and I will make him eat it that ſays I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bene. With no ſauce that can be deviſed to it: I proteſt I love thee.

Beat. Why then God forgive me.

Bene. What offence ſweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have ſtayed me in a happy hour; I was about to proteſt I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with ſo much of my heart, thar none is left to proteſt.

Bene. Come, bid me do any thing for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha! not for the wide World.

Beat. You kill me to deny; farewell.

Bene. Tarry ſweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone tho I am here; there is no love in you; nay I pray you let me go.

Bene. Beatrice!

Beat. Infaith I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends firſt.

Beat. You dare eaſier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beat. Is a not approved in the height a Villain, that hath ſlandered, ſcorned, diſhonoured my Kinſwoman? O that I were a man! What, bear her in hand until they come to take hands, and then with publick accuſation, uncovered ſlander, unmittigated rancour?—O God that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me Beatrice.

Beat. Talk with a man out at a Window—a proper ſaying.

Bene. Nay but Beatrice.

Beat. Sweet Hero, ſhe is wrong'd, ſhe is ſlandered, ſhe is undone.

Bene. But?——

Beat. Princes and Counſes! ſurely a princely teſtimony, a goodly Count-Comfect, a ſweet Gallant ſurely! O that I were a man for his ſake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my ſake! But manhood is melted into curteſies, valour into complement, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too; he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and ſwears it; I cannot be a man with wiſhing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry good Beatrice, by this hand I love thee.

Beat. Uſe it for my love ſome other way than ſwearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your ſoul the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?

Beat. Yea, as ſure as I have a thought or a ſoul.

Bene. Enough. I am engag'd, I will challenge him, I will kiſs your hand, and ſo leave you; by this hand Claudio ſhall render me dear account; as you hear of me, ſo think of me; go comfort your couſin, I muſt ſay ſhe is dead, and ſo farewell. Scene IV [Exeunt.

A Priſon.

Enter the Conſtables, Borachio, Jaylor and the Town Clerk in Gowns.

Keeper. Is our whole diſſembly appeared?

Cowly. O a ſtool and cuſhion for the Sexton.

Sexton. Which be the Malefactors?

Andrew. Marry, that am I, and my partner.

Dogb. Nay, that's certain, we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before Maſter ~~Conſtable~~. Town Clerk

To Clk. Yea marry, let them come before me: what is your name friend?

Bor. Borachio.

T. Clk. Pray write down Borachio. Yours ſirrah?

Conr. I am a Gentleman ſir, and my name is Conrade.

T. Clk. VVrite down Maſter Gentleman Conrade; maſters, do you ſerve God?

Dogb. Maſters, it is proved already that you are little better than falſe knaves, and it will go neer to be thought ſo ſhortly; how anſwer you for your ſelves?

Conr. Marry, ſir, we ſay we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow I aſſure you, but I will go about with him: come you hither ſirrah, a word in your ear, ſir; I ſay to you, it is thought you are falſe knaves.

Bor. Sir, I ſay to you, we are none.

Dogb. Well, ſtand aſide, 'fore God they are both in a tale; have you writ down they are none?

Sext. Maſter ~~Conſtable~~, you go not the way to examine, you muſt call forth the VVatch that are their accuſers.

Dogb. Yea marry, that's the eſteſt way, let the VVatch come forth: maſters, I charge you in the Princes name accuſe theſe men.

1. Watch.

T. Clk. Write down that they hope they ſerve God: Write God firſt; for God defend but God ſhould go before ſuch villains.

Watch. 1. This man said sir, that Don John the Princes brother was a villain.

Kemp. Write down, Prince John a villain: why this is flat perjury, to call a Princes brother villain.

Bor. Master ~~Constable~~ Town Clerk

Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

Watch. 2. Marry that he had received a thousand Ducats of Don John, for the accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

Kemp. Flat Burglary as ever was committed.

Const. Yea by th'mass that it is.

Sexton. What else fellow?

Watch. 1. And that Count Claudio did mean upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Kemp. O villain! thou wilt be condemn'd into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more masters than you can deny, Prince John is this morning secretly stoln away: Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and upon the grief of this suddenly died. Master Constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato, I will go before, and shew him their examination. Exit.

Const. Come, let them be opinion'd.

Sext. Let them be in the hands of Coxcomb.

Kemp. God's my life, where's the Sexton? let him write down the Princes Officer Coxcomb: come, bind them; thou naughty varlet.

Conrade. Away, you are an ass, you are an ass.

Kemp. Dost thou not suspect my place? dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were here to write me down an ass! but masters, remember that I am an ass; tho it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass; No thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be prov'd upon thee by good witness; I am a wise fellow, and which is more, an officer, and which is more, a housholder, and which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any in Messina, and one that knows the Law, go to, and a rich fellow enough, go to, and a fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him; bring him away; O that I had been writ down an ass! Exit.

Actus Quintus. Scene 1. Before Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and his brother.

Brother. If you go on thus, you will kill your self,
And 'tis not wisdom thus to second grief,
Against your self.
Leon. I pray thee cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless,
As water in a sieve; give not me counsel,
Nor let no comfort ~~to~~ delight mine ear,
But such a one whose wrongs doth suit with mine;
Bring me a father that so lov'd his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine,
And bid him speak of patience,
Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answer every strain for strain;
As thus for thus, and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form;
If such a one will smile and stroke his beard,
And ~~bid~~ wag, cry hem, when he should groan,
Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk,
With candlewasters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience,
But there is no such man; for brother, men
Can counsel, and give comfort to that grief,
Which they themselves not feel, but tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before
Would give preceptial medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread,
Charm ach with air, and agony with words.
No, no, 'tis all mens office, to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow;
But no mans vertue nor sufficiency
To be so moral, when he shall endure
The like himself; therefore give me no counsel,
My griefs cry louder than advertisement.
Broth. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
Leo. I pray thee peace, I will be flesh and blood,
For there was never yet Philosopher,
That could endure the tooth-ach patiently;
How ever they have writ the stile of gods,
And made a push at chance and sufferance.
Broth. Yet bend not all the harm upon your self,
Make those that do offend you suffer too.
Leon. There thou speak'st reason; nay I will do so,
My soul doth tell me, Hero is bely'd,
And that shall Claudio know, so shall the Prince,
And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Scene II.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Broth. Here comes the Prince and Claudio hastily.
Prin. Good den, good den.
Clau. Good day to both of you.
Leon. Hear you my Lords?
Prin. We have some haste, Leonato.
Leo. Some haste my Lord! well fare you well my Lord.
Are you so hasty now? well, all is one.
Prin. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.
Brot. If he could right himself with quarrelling,
Some of us would lye low.
Clau. Who wrongs him?
Leon Marry, thou dost wrong me, thou dissembler thou:
Nay never lay thy hand upon thy sword,
I fear thee not.
Clau. Marry, beshrew my hand,
If it should give your age such cause of fear;
Infaith my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leo. Tush, tush, man, never fleer and jest at me,
I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool,
As under priviledge of age to brag,
What I have done, being young, or what would do,
Were I not old: know Claudio to thy head,
Thou hast so wrong'd my innocent Child and me,
That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by,
And with grey hairs and bruise of many days,
Do challenge thee to trial of a man;
I say thou hast bely'd mine innocent Child,
Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancestors,
O, in a tomb where never scandal slept,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villany.
Clau. My villany?
Leon. Thine Claudio, thine I say.
Prin. You say not right, old man.
Leon. My Lord, my Lord,
I'll prove it on his body if he dare;
Despight his nice fence, and his active practice,
His May of youth, and bloom of lusty hood.
Clau. Away, I will not have to do with you.
Leo. Canst thou so daffe me? thou hast kill'd my child,
If thou kill'st me boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Bro. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed,
But that's no matter, let him kill one first,
Win me and wear me, let him answer me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me,
Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foyning fence;

Nay

Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your ſelf, God knows I lov'd my Neece;
And ſhe is dead, ſlander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well anſwer a man indeed,
As I dare take a Serpent by the tongue.
Boys, Apes, Braggarts, Jacks, Milkſops.

Leon. Brother Anthony.

Brot: Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they weigh, even to the utmoſt ſcruple;
Scambling, outfacing, faſhion-mongring boys,
That lye, and cog. and flout, deprave, and ſlander;
Go antickly, and ſhow outward hidiouſneſs,
And ſpeak off half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies if they durſt,
And this is all.

Leon. But brother Anthony!

Ant. Come 'tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not [illegible] your patience,
My heart is ſorry for your daughters death;
But on my honour, ſhe was charg'd with nothing
But was true, and very full of proof.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord——

Prince. I will not hear you.

Enter Benedick.

Leon. No! come brother away, I will be heard.

Exeunt ambo.

Bro: And ſhall, or ſome of us will ſmart for it.

Prin. See, ſee, here comes the man we went to ſeek.

Clau. Now Signior, what news?

Ben. Good day, my Lord:

Prin. Welcome Signior, you are almoſt come to part almoſt a fray.

Clau. We had like to have had our two noſes ſnapt off with two old men without teeth.

Prin. Leonato and his brother; what thinkſt thou? had we fought, I doubt we ſhould have been too young for them.

Ben. In falſe quarrel there is no true valour: I came to ſeek you both.

Clau. We have been up and down to ſeek thee, for we are high proof melancholly, and would fain have it beaten away: wilt thou uſe thy wit?

Ben. It is in my ſcabbard, ſhall I draw it?

Prin. Doſt thou wear thy wit by thy ſide?

Clau. Never any did ſo, tho very many have been beſide their wit: I will bid thee draw, as we do the Minſtrels draw to pleaſure us.

Prin. As I am an honeſt man he looks pale: art thou ſick, or angry?

Clau. What! Courage man: What tho' care kill'd a Cat, thou haſt mettle enough to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I ſhall meet your Wit in the career, and you charge it againſt me. I pray you, chuſe another ſubject.

Clau. Nay then give him another ſtaff, this laſt was broke croſs.

Prin. By this light, he changes more and more: I think he be angry indeed.

Clau. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Ben. Shall I ſpeak a word in your ear?

Clau. God bleſs me from a challenge!

Ben. You are a Villain, I jeſt not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare: do me right, or I will proteſt your cowardiſe: you have kill'd a ſweet Lady, and her death ſhall fall heavy on you, let me hear from you.

Clau. Well I will meet you, ſo I may have good cheer.

Prin. What a feaſt?

Clau. I faith I thank him, he hath bid me to calves heads and a Capon, the which if I do not carve moſt curiouſly, ſay my knife's naught: ſhall I not find a Woodcock too?

Ben. Sir, your Wit ambles well, goes eaſily.

Prin. I'll tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy Wit the other day: I ſaid thou hadſt a fine wit; true ſays ſhe, a fine little one; no, ſaid I, a great wit; right ſays ſhe, a great groſs one: nay, ſaid I, a good wit: juſt ſaid ſhe, it hurts no body; nay ſaid I, the Gentleman is wiſe; certain ſaid ſhe, a wiſe Gentleman; nay ſaid I, he hath the tongues; that I believe, ſaid ſhe, for he ſwore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forſwore on Tueſday morning; there's a double tongue, there's two tongues. Thus did ſhe an hour together tranſ-ſhape thy particular virtues, yet at laſt ſhe concluded with a ſigh, thou waſt the propereſt man in Italy.

Clau. For the which ſhe wept heartily, and ſaid ſhe car'd not.

Prin. Yea that ſhe did; but yet for all that, and if ſhe did not hate him deadly, ſhe would love him dearly; the old mans daughter told us all.

Clau. All, all; and moreover, God ſaw him when he was hid in the garden.

Prin. But when ſhall we ſet the ſalvage Bulls horns on the ſenſible Benedick's head?

Clau. Yea, and text underneath, Here dwells Benedick the married man.

Bene. Fare you well, Boy, you know my mind, I will leave you now to your goſſip-like humor, you break jeſts as braggards do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not: my Lord, for your many courteſies I thank you; I muſt diſcontinue your company; your Brother the Baſtard is fled from Meſſina; you have among you, killed a ſweet and innocent Lady, for my Lord Lack-beard there, he and I ſhall meet, and till then peace be with him.

Exit Ben.

Prin. He is in earneſt.

Clau. In moſt profound earneſt, and I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

Prince. And hath challeng'd thee.

Clau. Moſt ſincerely.

Prin. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hoſe, and leaves off his wit?

[redacted]

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to ſuch a man.

Prin. But ſoft you, let me ſee, pluck up my heart, and be ſad; did he not ſay my brother was fled?

Conſt. Come you ſir, if Juſtice cannot tame you, ſhe ſhall ne're weigh more reaſons in her ballance; nay, and you be a curſing hypocrite once, you muſt be lookt to.

Prin. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Borachio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence, my Lord.

Prin. Officers, what offence have theſe men done?

Conſt. Marry ſir, they have committed falſe report, moreover they have ſpoken untruths, ſecondarily they are ſlanders, ſixth and laſtly, they have belyed a Lady; thirdly, they have verified unjuſt things, and to conclude, they are lying knaves.

Prin. Firſt I ask thee what they have done, thirdly I ask thee what's their offence; ſixth and laſtly why they are committed; and to conclude, What lay you to their charge?

Clau. Rightly reaſoned, and in his own diviſion, and by my troth, there's one meaning well ſuited.

Prin. Whom have you offended maſters, that you are thus bound to your anſwer? this learned Conſtable is too cunning to be underſtood; what's your offence?

Bor. Sweet Prince, let me go no farther to mine anſwer; do you hear me, and let this Count kill me: I have deceived even your very eyes; what your wiſdoms could not diſcover, theſe ſhallow fools have brought to light, who in the night heard me confeſſing to this man, how Don John your brother incenſed me to ſlander the Lady Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and ſaw me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you diſgrac'd grac'd her when you ſhould marry her; my villany they have upon record, which I had rather ſeal with my death, than repeat over to my ſhame; the Lady is dead upon mine and my maſters falſe accuſation; and briefly, I deſire nothing but the reward of a villain.

Prince. Runs not this ſpeech like iron through your blood?

Clau. I have drunk poiſon whiles he utter'd it.

Prin. But did my brother ſet thee on to this?

Bor. Yea, [redacted] paid me richly for the practice of it.

Prin. He is compos'd of treachery, & fram'd
And fled he is upon this villany.

Clau. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear
In the rare ſemblance that I lov'd it firſt.

Conſt. Come bring away the plaintifs, by this time our Sexton hath informed Signior Leonato of the matter; and maiſters, do not forget to ſpecifie when time and place ſhall ſerve, that I am an Aſs.

Con. 2. Here, here comes maiſter Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Scene V.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the Villain? let me ſee his eyes,
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him; which of theſe is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou, art thou the ſlave that with thy breath
Haſt kill'd mine innocent child?

Bor. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not ſo Villain, thou beliſt thy ſelf;
Here ſtand a pair of honourable men,
A third is fled, that had a hand in it:
I thank you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthy deeds,
'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Clau. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I muſt ſpeak; chuſe your revenge your ſelf,
Impoſe me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my ſin; yet ſinn'd I not,
But in miſtaking [redacted]

Prin. By my ſoul nor I;
And yet to ſatisfie this good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.

Leon. You cannot bid my daughter live, again.
That were impoſſible; but I pray you both
Poſſeſs the people in Meſſina here,
How innocent ſhe died, and if your love
Can labour ought in ſad invention,
Hang her an Epitaph upon her Tomb,
And ſing it to her bones, ſing it to night:
To morrow morning come you to my houſe,
And ſince you could not be my ſon-in-law,
Be yet my Nephew; my brother hath a daughter,
Almoſt the copy of my child that's dead,
And ſhe alone is heir to both of us,
Give her the right you ſhould have giv'n her couſin,
And ſo dies my revenge.

Clau. O noble ſir!
Your overkindneſs doth wring tears from me:
I do embrace your offer, and diſpoſe
For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I will expect your coming;
To night I take my leave: this naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I believe was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my ſoul ſhe was not;
Nor knew not what ſhe did when ſhe ſpoke to me,
But always hath been juſt and vertuous,
In any thing that I do know by her.

Conſt. Moreover ſir, which indeed is not under white and black, this plaintif here, the offender did call me aſs; I beſeech you let it be remembred in his puniſhment; and alſo the Watch heard them talk of one Deformed; they ſay he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in Gods name, the which he hath us'd ſo long, and never paid, that now men grow hard hearted, and will lend nothing for Gods ſake: pray you examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honeſt pains.

Conſt. Your worſhip ſpeaks like a moſt thankful and reverend youth, and I praiſe God for you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Conſt. God ſave the foundation.

Leon. Go, I diſcharge thee of thy priſoner; and I thank thee.

Conſt. I leave an errant knave with your worſhip, which I beſeech your worſhip to correct your ſelf, for the example of others; God keep your worſhip, I wiſh your worſhip well; God reſtore you to health; I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be wiſh'd, God prohibit it, come neighbour. Exe

Leon. Until to morrow morning, Lords, farewel.

Exe un.

Brot. Farewel my Lords, we look for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not fail.

Clau. To night I'll mourn with Hero.

Leon. Bring you theſe fellows on, we'll talk with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. Exeunt

Scene VI. Leonato's House

Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Ben. Pray thee ſweet Miſtreſs Margaret, deſerve well at my hands, by helping me to the ſpeech of Beatrice.

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praiſe of my beauty?

Ben. In ſo high a ſtile Margaret, that no man living ſhall come over it; for in moſt comely truth thou deſerveſt it.

Mar. To have no man come over me; why, ſhall I always keep below ſtairs?

Ben. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours as blunt as the Fencers foils, which hit but hurt not.

Ben. A moſt manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman; and ſo I pray thee call Beatrice; I give thee the bucklers.

Mar. Give us the ſwords, we have bucklers of our own.

Ben. If you uſe them Margaret, you muſt put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maids.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs. Exit Margaret.

Ben. And therefore will come. The god of love that ſits above, and knows me, and knows me how pitiful I deſerve, I mean in ſinging; but in loving, Leander the good ſwimmer, Troilus the firſt employer of panders, and a whole book full of theſe quondam carpet-mongers, whoſe names yet run ſmoothly in the even road of a blank verſe, why they were never ſo truly turned over, as my poor ſelf in love; marry I cannot ſhew it in rime; I have tried, I can find out no rime to Lady but baby, an innocent rime; for ſcorn, horn, a hard rime; for ſchool, fool, a babling rime; very ominous endings, no, I was not born under a riming Planet; for I cannot woo in feſtival terms.

Scene VII.

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldſt thou come when I call'd thee?

Beat. Yea Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Ben. O ſtay but till then.

Beat. Then, is ſpoken; fare you well now; and yet ere I go, let me go with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath paſt between you and Claudio.

Ben.

Ben. Only foul words, and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words are but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unkist.

Ben. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sence, so forcible is thy wit; but I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward; and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politick a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Ben. Suffer love! a good epithet, I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spight of your heart, I think; alas poor heart, if you spight it for my sake, I will spight it for yours, for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Ben. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Ben. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that liv'd in the time of good neighbours; if a man do not erect in this age his own Tomb ere he dyes, he shall live no longer in monuments than the Bells ring, and the Widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Ben. [illegible], why an hour in clamour, and a quarter in the sun; therefore it is most expedient for the wise, if Don Worm (his conscience) find no impediment to the contrary, to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to my self; so much for praising my self; who I my self will bear witness is praise-worthy; nnd now tell me how doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Ben. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Enter Ursula.

Ben. Serve God, love me, and mend; there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Urs. Madam you must come to your Uncle, yonders old coil at home; it is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsly accus'd, the Prince and Claudio mightily abused, and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone; will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news Signior?

Ben. I will live in thy heart, dye in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes: and moreover I will go with thee to thy Unkles. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII.

A Church.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or four with Tapers.

Clau. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord. Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that dy'd with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb.

Clau. Now musick sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

Song.

Pardon goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy Virgin knight;
For the which with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight assist our moan,
Help us to sigh and groan.
Heavily, heavily.
Graves yawn and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Le. Now unto thy bones good night, yearly will I do (this right.
Prin. Good morrow masters, put your torches out,
The Wolves have prey'd, and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsie East with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leave us; fare you well.
Clau. Good morrow masters; each his several way.
Prin. Come let us hence, and put on other weeds,
And then to Leonato's we will go.
Clau. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed,
Than this for whom we rendred up this woe. [Exeunt.

Scene IX. Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Benedick, Margaret, Ursula, Old man, Frier, Hero.

Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent?
Leon. So are the Prince and Claudio who accus'd her,
Upon the error that you heard debated.
But Margaret was in some fault for this;
Although against her will as it appears,
In the true course of all the question.
Old. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.
Ben. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.
Leon. Well daughter, and you Gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by your selves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd:
The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour
To visit me; you know your office, brother,
You must be father to your brothers daughter,
And give her to young Claudio. [Exeunt Ladies.
Old. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.
Ben. Frier, I must intreat your pains, I think.
Frier. To do what Signior?
Ben. To bind me, or undo me, one of them:
Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior,
Your Neece regards me with an eye of favour.
Old. That eye my daughter lent her, 'tis most true.
Ben. And I do with an eye of love requite her.
Leon. The sight whereof I think you had from me,
From Claudio and the Prince; but what's your will?
Ben. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical,
But for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin'd,
I'th state of honourable marriage,
In which good I shall desire your help.
Leon. My heart is with your liking.
Frier. And my help. Scene X.

Enter Prince and Claudio with attendants.

Prin. Good morrow to this fair assembly.
Leon. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudio,
We here attend you; are you yet determin'd
To day to marry with my brothers daughter?
Clau. I'll hold my mind were she an Ethiope. Ex An.
Leon. Call her forth brother, here's the Frier ready.
Prin. Good morrow Benedick; why, what's the matter
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, of cloudiness?
Clau. I think he thinks upon the savage bull:
Tush, fear not man, wee'l tip thy horns with gold,
And so all Europe shall rejoyce at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.
Ben. Bull Jove sir, had an amiable low,
And some such strange bull leapt your fathers cow,
And got a calf in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat. Scene XI.

Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula. masked

Clau. For this I owe you; here comes other reknings.
Which is the Lady I must seize upon?

Leo.

Leon. This fame is she, and I do give you her.
Clau. Why then she's mine; sweet let me see your face.
Leon. No that you shall not, till you take her hand,
Before this Frier, and swear to marry her.
Clau. Give me your hand before this holy Frier,
I am your husband if you like of me. Unmasks
Hero. And when I liv'd I was your other wife,
And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.
Clau. Another Hero?
Hero. Nothing certainer.
One Hero died, but I do live, defiled
And surely as I live I am a maid.
Prin. The former Hero, Hero, that is dead.
Leon. She died my Lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.
Frier. All this amazement can I qualifie,
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'll tell thee largely of fair Hero's death:
Mean time let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chappel let us presently.
Ben. Soft and fair Frier, which is Beatrice?
Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will?
Ben. Do not you love me?
Beat. Why, no more than reason.
Ben. Why then your Uncle, and the Prince, & Claudio, have been deceived; they swore you did.
Beat. Do not you love me?
Ben. Troth no, no more than reason.
Beat. Why then my Cousin Margaret and Ursula
Are much deceiv'd, for they did swear you did.
Ben. They swore you were almost sick for me.
Beat. They swore you were well-nigh dead for me.
Ben. 'Tis no matter, then you do not love me?
Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence.
Leon. Come Cousin, I am sure you love the Gentleman.
Clau. And I'll be sworn upon't that he loves her,
For here's a paper written in his hand,
A halting Sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And here's another,
Writ in thy cousins hand, stolen from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.
Ben. A miracle, here's our own hand's against our hearts; come I will have thee, but by this light I take thee for pity.
Beat. I would not deny you, but by this good day, I yield upon great perswasion, and partly to save your life, for as I told, you were in a consumption.
Leon. Peace, I will stop your mouth. Kisses her.
Prin. How dost thou Benedick the married man?
Ben. I'll tell thee what Prince, a College of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour; dost thou think I care for a Satyr or an Epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with brains, a shall wear nothing handsome about him; in brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me, for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion: for thy part Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruis'd, and love my cousin.
Clau. I had well hoped thou would'st have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgel'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of question thou will be, if my Cousin no not look exceeding narrowly to thee.
Ben. Come, come, we are friends; let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives heels.
Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.
Ben. First, of my word, therefore play musick: Prince, thou art sad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife; there is no staff more reverend than one tipt with horn. Enter Mes.
Messen. My Lord, your brother John is tane in flight,
And brought with armed men back to Messina.
Ben. Think not on him till to morrow; I'll devise thee brave punishments for him: strike up Pipers. Dance.

Exeunt om.

*Love's Labours lost.

Scene. The King of Navarre's Palace & the Country near it

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Biron, Longaville and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

LEt Fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live registred upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death: omitted
When spight of cormorant devouring Time, buy
Th'endeavour of this present breath may
That honour which shall bate his Sythes keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore brave Conquerors (for so you are),
That war against your own affections,
And the huge Army of the worlds desires,
Our late Edict shall strongly stand in force;
Navar shall be the wonder of the world,
Our Court shall be a little Academy,
Still and contemplative in living Arts.
You three, Biron, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years term to live with me,
My fellow Scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here.
Your oaths are past, and now subscribe your names:
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to do as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep them too.
Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine;
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankerout quite the wits.
Dum.

* In This Play are to be perceived Several strokes of Shakespears Pen but The whole ought by no means to pass for the work of it

Dum. My loving Lord, Dumaine is mortified,
The groſſer manner of theſe worlds delights,
He throws upon the groſs worlds baſer ſlaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all theſe living in Philoſophy.
Biron. I can but ſay their proteſtation over,
So much (dear Liege) I have already ſworn,
That is, to live and ſtudy here three years.
But there are other ſtrict obſervances:
As, not to ſee a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beſide;
The which I hope is not enrolled there.
And then to ſleep but three hours in the night,
And not be ſeen to wink of all the day,
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day;
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
O, theſe are barren tasks, too hard to keep;
Not to ſee Ladies, ſtudy, faſt, not ſleep.
Ferd. Your oath is paſt to paſs away from theſe.
Biron. Let me ſay no, my Liege, and if you pleaſe.
I onely ſwore to ſtudy with your Grace,
And ſtay here in your Court for three years ſpace.
Long. You ſwore to that Biron, and to the reſt.
Bir. By yea and nay, ſir, then I ſwore in jeſt.
What is the end of ſtudy, let me know?
Ferd. Why that to know, which elſe we ſhould not know.
Bir. Things hid and barr'd (you mean) from common ſence.
Ferd. Ay, that is ſtudies god-like recompence.
Bir. Come on then, I will ſwear to ſtudy ſo,
To know the thing I am forbid to know;
As thus, to ſtudy where I well may dine,
When I to faſt expreſly am forbid;
Or ſtudy where to meet ſome Miſtreſs fine,
When Miſtreſſes from common ſenſe are hid.
Or having ſworn too hard a keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If ſtudies gain be thus, and this be ſo,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know.
Swear me to this, and I will ne're ſay no.
Ferd. Theſe be the ſtops that hinder ſtudy quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.
Bir. Why? all delights are vain, but that moſt vain,
Which with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain,
As painfully to pore upon a book,
To ſeek the light of truth, while truth the while
Doth falſly blind the eye-ſight of his look:
Light, ſeeking light, doth light of light beguile:
So ere you find where light in darkneſs lies,
Your light grows dark by loſing of your eyes.
Study me how to pleaſe the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye;
Who dazling ſo, that eye ſhall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heavens glorious Sun,
That will not be deep ſearch'd with ſawcy looks;
Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save baſe authority from others Books.
Theſe earthly Godfathers of heavens lights,
That give a name to every fixed ſtar,
Have no more profit of their ſhining nights,
Than thoſe that walk, and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is to know nought but fame;
And every Godfather can give a name.
Ferd. How well he's read, to reaſon againſt reading!
Dum. Proceeded well, to ſtop all good proceeding.
Long. He weeds the Corn, and ſtill lets grow the weeding.
Bir. The Spring is near, when Green Geeſe are a breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Bir. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reaſon nothing.
Bir. Something then in rime.
Long. Biron is like an envious ſneaping Froſt,
That bites the firſt-born Infants of the Spring.
Bir. Well, ſay I am; why ſhould proud Summer boaſt,
Before the birds have any cauſe to ſing?
Why ſhould I joy in any abortive birth?
At Chriſtmas I no more deſire a Roſe,
Than wiſh a Snow in May's new fangled ſhows:
But like of each thing that in ſeaſon grows.
So you to ſtudy now it is too late,
That were to climb o're the houſe t' unlock the gate.
Ferd. Well, ſit you out; go home, Biron: adieu.
Bir. No my good Lord, I have ſworn to ſtay with you.
And though I have for barbariſm ſpoke more,
Than for that Angel knowledge you can ſay,
Yet confident I'll keep what I have ſwore,
And bide the penance of each three years day.
Give me the Paper, let me read the ſame,
And to the ſtrict'ſt decrees I'll write my name.
Ferd. How well this yielding reſcues thee from ſhame!
Bir. Item, That no woman ſhall come within a mile of my Court.
Hath this been proclaimed?
Long. Four dayes ago.
Bir. Let's ſee the penalty.
On pain of loſing her tongue:
Who devis'd this penalty?
Lon. Marry that did I.
Bir. Sweet Lord, and why?
Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.
A dangerous Law againſt gentility!
Item, If any man be ſeen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he ſhall endure ſuch publick ſhame as the reſt of the Court can poſſibly deviſe.
Bir. This article my Liege your ſelf muſt break;
For well you know here comes in Embaſſy
The French Kings daughter, with your ſelf to ſpeak,
A Maid of Grace and compleat Majeſty,
About ſurrender up of Aquitain
To her decrepit, ſick, and bed-rid Father:
Therefore this Article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes the admired Princeſs hither.
Ferd. What ſay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot.
Bir. So ſtudy evermore is overſhot,
While it doth ſtudy to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it ſhould:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth moſt,
'Tis won as Towns with fire; ſo won, ſo loſt.
Ferd. We muſt of force diſpence with this Decree,
She muſt lie here on meer neceſſity.
Bir. Neceſſity will make us all forſworn
Three thouſand times within this three years ſpace;
For every man with his affects is born,
Not by might, maſtered, but by ſpecial grace.
If I break faith, this word ſhall break for me,
I am forſworn on meer neceſſity.
So to the Laws at large I write my name,
And he, that breaks them in the leaſt degree,
Stands in attainder of eternal ſhame.
Suggeſtions are to others as to me;
But I believe although I ſeem ſo loth,
I am the laſt that will laſt keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation granted?
Ferd. Ay, that there is; our Court you know is haunted
With a conceited Traveller of Spain,
A man in all the world, new faſhions planted,
That hath a mint of phraſes in his brain:
One, whom the muſick of his own vain tongue,
Doth raviſh like inchanting harmony:
A man of complements, whom right and wrong
Have choſe as umpire of their mutinie.

This child of fancie, that Armado hight,
For interim to our ſtudies, ſhall relate,
In high-born words the worth of many a Knight:
From tawny Spain loſt in the worlds debate.
How you delight, my Lords, I know not, I.
But I proteſt, I love to hear him lie,
And I will uſe him for my Minſtrelſie.

Bir. Armado is a moſt illuſtrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, faſhions own Knight,

Long. Coſtard the ſwain, and he, ſhall be our ſport;
And ſo to ſtudy, three years is but ſhort.

Enter a Conſtable with Coſtard with a Letter.

Conſt. Which is the Duke's own perſon.

Bir. This fellow; what would'ſt?

Con. I my ſelf reprehend his own perſon, for I am his Graces Tharborough: But I would ſee his own perſon in fleſh and blood.

Bir. This is he.

Con. Signior Arme, Arme commends you. There's villany abroad, this letter will tell you more.

Clow. Sir, the contempt thereof are as touching me.

Ferd. A Letter from the magnificent Armado.

Bir. How low ſoever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low having: God grant us patience.

Bir. To hear, or forbear hearing?

Long. To hear meekly, ſir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.

Bir. Well ſir, be it as the ſtile ſhall give us cauſe to climb in the merrineſs.

Clow. The matter is to me, ſir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Bir. In what manner?

Clow. In manner and form, following, ſir, all thoſe three. I was ſeen with her in the Manor houſe, ſitting with her upon the Form, and taken following her into the Park; which put together, is in manner and form following. Now ſir, for the Manner: is the manner of a man to ſpeak to a Woman; for the Form, in ſome form.

Bir. For the following, ſir.

Clow. As it ſhall follow in my correction; and God defend the right.

Ferd. Will you hear this Letter with attention?

Bir. As we would hear an Oracle.

Clow. Such is the ſimplicity of man to hearken after the fleſh.

Ferd. Great Deputy, the Welkins Vicegerent, and ſole Dominator of Navarre, my ſouls earths God, and bodies foſtring Patron——

Coſt. Not a word of Coſtard yet.

Ferd. So it is.——

Coſt. It may be ſo; but if he ſay it is ſo, he is, in telling true: but ſo, ſo

Ferd. Peace,——

Clow. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight.

Ferd. No words,——

Clow. Of other mens ſecrets, I beſeech you.

Ferd. So it is, beſieged with ſable coloured melancholly, I did commend the black oppreſſing humour to the moſt wholeſome Phyſick of thy health-giving aire: And as I am a Gentleman, betook my ſelf to walk: the time When? about the ſixth hour, When beaſts moſt graze, birds beſt peck, and men ſit down to that nouriſhment which is called Supper: So much for the time when. Now for the ground Which? which, I mean, I walkt upon, it is ycleped, Thy Park. Then for the place Where, where, I mean, I did incounter that obſcene and moſt prepoſterous event that draweth from my ſnow-white Pen the Ebon-coloured Ink, which here, thou viewſt, beholdeſt, ſurveyeſt, or ſeeſt. But to the place Where; it ſtandeth North North East and by East from the Weſt corner of thy curious knotted Garden. There did I ſee that low ſpirited Swain, that baſe Minow of thy mirth, (Clown. Me?) that unlettered ſmall-knowing ſoul, (Clow. Me?) that ſhallow vaſſal, (Clow. Still me?) which, as I remember, hight Coſtard, (Clow. O me!) ſorted and conſorted contrary to thy eſtabliſhed proclaimed Edict and Continent Canon: Which with, O with, but with this I paſſion to ſay wherewith.

Clown. With a Wench.

Ferd. With a child of our Grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more underſtanding, a woman; him, I (as my ever eſteemed duty pricks me on) have ſent to thee, to receive the meed of puniſhment by the ſweet Graces Officer Anthony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and eſtimation.

Ant. Me, an't ſhall pleaſe you? I am Anthony Dull.

Ferd. For Jaquenetta (ſo is the weaker veſſel called) which I apprehended with the aforeſaid ſwain, I keep her as a veſſel of thy Laws fury, and ſhall at the leaſt of thy ſweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

Don Adriano de Armado.

Bir. This is not ſo well as I looked for, but the beſt that ever I heard.

Ferd. Ay, the beſt for the worſt. But ſirra, What ſay you to this?

Clown. Sir I confeſs the Wench.

Ferd. Did you hear the Proclamation?

Clown. I do confeſs much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Ferd. It was proclaimed a years impriſonment to be taken with a Wench.

Clown. I was taken with none, ſir, I was taken with a Damoſel.

Ferd. Well, it was proclaimed Damoſel.

Clo. This was no damoſel neither, ſir, ſhe was a Virgin.

Ferd. It is ſo varied too, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Clown. If it were, I deny her Virginity: I was taken with a Maid.

Ferd. This Maid will not ſerve your turn ſir.

Clown. This Maid will ſerve my turn ſir.

Ferd. Sir, I will pronounce your ſentence: You ſhall faſt a week with Bran and Water.

Clown. I had rather pray a Month with Mutton and Porridge.

Ferd. And Don Armado ſhall be your Keeper.
My Lord Biron, ſee him deliver'd ore,
And go we Lords to put in practice that
Which each to other hath ſo ſtrongly ſworn. [Exeunt.

Bir. I'll lay my head to any good mans Hat,
Theſe oaths and Laws will prove an idle ſcorn.
Sirra, come on.

Clown. I ſuffer for the truth ſir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true Girl; and therefore welcome the ſour cup of proſperity: affliction may one day ſmile again, and untill then ſit down ſorrow.

Enter Armado a Braggart, and Moth his Page.

Brag. Boy, What ſign is it when a man of great ſpirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great ſign ſir, that he will look ſad.

Brag. Why? ſadneſs is one and the ſelf-ſame thing, dear Imp.

Boy. No, no, O Lord ſir, no.

Brag. How canſt thou part ſadneſs and melancholy, my tender Juvenal?

Boy. By a familiar demonſtration of the working, my tough Signior.

Brag. Why tough Signior? Why tough Signior?

Boy. Why tender Juvenal? Why tender Juvenal!

Brag. I ſpoke it tender Juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young dayes, which we may nominate tender.

Boy.

Boy. And I tough Signior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Brag. Pretty and apt.

Boy. How mean you sir, I pretty and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Brag. Thou pretty, because little.

Boy. Little pretty, because little; wherefore apt?

Brag. And therefore apt, because quick.

Boy. Speak you this in my praise, Master?

Brag. In thy condign praise.

Boy. I will praise an Eele with the same praise.

Brag. What? that an Eele is ingenious?

Boy. That an Eele is quick.

Brag. I do say thou art quick in answers. Thou heat'st my blood.

Boy. I am answer'd sir.

Brag. I love not to be crost.

Boy. He speaks ~~the clean~~ contrary, crosses love not him.

Brag. I have promis'd to study 3 years with the ~~Duke~~.

Boy. You may do it in an hour sir.

Brag. Impossible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Brag. I am ill at reckoning, it fits the spirit of a Tapster.

Boy. You are a Gentleman and a Gamester ~~sir~~.

Brag. I confess both, they are both the varnish of a compleat man.

Boy. Then I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deuce ace amounts to.

Brag. It doth amount to one more than two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar call three. Brag. True.

Boy. Why, sir is this such a piece of study? Now here's three studied, ere you'll thrice wink; and how easie it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing-horse will tell you.

Brag. A most fine figure.

Boy. To prove you a Cypher. [Aside.

Brag. I will hereupon confess I am in love; and as it is base for a Souldier to love, so am I in love with a base Wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection, would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransome him to any French Courtier for a new devis'd courtesie. I think scorn to sigh, me thinks I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me boy; What great men have been in love?

Boy. Hercules, Master.

Brag. Most sweet Hercules! more authority dear boy, name more; and sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Sampson, Master, he was a man of good carriage, great carriage; for he carried the Town Gates on his back like a Porter, and he was in love.

Brag. O well-knit Sampson, strong-jointed Sampson! I do excel thee in my Rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying Gates. I am in love too. Who was Sampsons Love my dear Moth?

Boy. A woman, Master.

Brag. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Brag. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Boy. Of the Sea-water Green, sir.

Brag. Is that one of the four complexions?

Boy. As I have read sir, and the best of them too.

Brag. Green indeed is the colour of Lovers: but to have a Love of that colour, me thinks Sampson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so, sir, for she had a green wit.

Brag. My Love is most immaculate white and red.

Boy. Most ~~im~~maculate thoughts Master, are mask'd under such colours.

Brag. Define, define, well educated infant.

Boy. My Fathers wit, and my Mothers tongue assist me.

Brag. Sweet invocation of a child, most pretty and pathetical!

Boy. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne're be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown;
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.
A dangerous rime, Master, against the reason of white and red.

Brag. Is there not a ballet boy, of the King and the beggar?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a ballet, some three ages since, but I think now 'tis not to be found; or if it were, it would neither serve for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will have that subject newly writ o're, that I may example my digression by some mighty president. Boy, I do love that Country Girl that I took in the Park with the rational Hind Costard; she deserves well.

Boy. To be whip'd; and yet a better Love than my Master. deserves [Aside

Brag. Sing, boy, my spirit grows heavy in love.

Boy. And that's great marvel, loving a light Wench.

Brag. I say sing.

Boy. Forbear, till this company be past.

Scene IV.

Enter Clown, Constable, and Wench.

Kings

Const. Sir, the ~~Dukes~~ pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe, and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance; but he must fast three dayes a week: for this Damsel, I must keep her at the Park, she is allow'd for the Day-woman. Fare you well. Exit.

Brag. I do betray my self with blushing: Maid.

Maid. Man.

Brag. I will visit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by.

Brag. I know where it is situate.

Maid. Lord how wise you are.

Brag. I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With that face?

Brag. I love thee.

Maid. So I heard you say.

Brag. And so farewell.

Maid. Fair weather after you!
Come Jaquenetta, away. [Exeunt.

Brag. Villain thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clo. Well sir, I hope when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Brag. Thou shalt be heavily punished. o Lowers

Clo. I am more bound to you than your ~~fellows~~, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Con. Take away this Villain, shut him up.

Boy. Come, you transgressing slave, away.

Clow. Let me not be pent up, sir, I will be fast being loose.

Boy. No, sir, that were fast and loose; thou shalt to prison.

Clow. Well, if ever I do see the merry dayes of desolation that I have seen, some shall see.

Boy. What shall some see?

Clow. Nay, nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be silent in their words, and therefore I will say nothing; I thank God, I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet. Moth & Cost. Exeunt

Brag. I do affect the very ground (which is base) where her shoe (which is baser) guided by her foot (which is basest) doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falſhood, if I love. And how can that be true love, which is falſly attempted? Love is a familiar, Love is a Devil; there is no evil Angel but Love, yet Sampſon was ſo tempted, and he had an excellent ſtrength; Yet was Solomon ſo ſeduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupids But-ſhaft is too hard for Hercules Club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniards Rapier: the firſt and ſecond cauſe will not ſerve my turn; the Paſſado he reſpects not, the Duello he regards not; his diſgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to ſubdue men. Adieu Valour, ruſt, Rapier, be ſtill, Drum, for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Aſſiſt me, ſome extemporal God of Rime, for I am ſure I ſhall turn Sonnet. Deviſe, Wit, Write, Pen, for I am for whole volumes in Folio. Exit

Finis Actus Primi.

Actus Secundus. Scene 1.

Before the King of Navarre's Palace.

Enter the Princeſs of France, with three attending Ladies, and three Lords.

Boyet. Now, Madam ſummon up your deareſt ſpirits,
Conſider whom the King your Father ſends;
To whom he ſends, and what's his Embaſſie.
Your ſelf, held precious in the worlds eſteem,
To parlee with the ſole inheritour
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchleſs Navarre; the plea of no leſs weight
Than Aquitain, a Dowry for a Queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As Nature was in making Graces dear,
When ſhe did ſtarve the general world beſide,
And prodigally gave them all to you.
Prin. Good L. Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,
Need not the painted flouriſh of your praiſe;
Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not uttered by baſe ſale of Chapmens tongues.
I am leſs proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wiſe,
In ſpending thus your wit in praiſe of mine.
But now to task the tasker; good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noyſe abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful ſtudy ſhall out-wear three years,
No woman may approach his ſilent Court;
Therefore to's ſeemeth it a needful courſe,
Before we enter his forbidden Gates,
To know his pleaſure, and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthineſs, we ſingle you,
As our beſt moving fair Sollicitor.
Tell him the Daughter of the King of France,
On ſerious buſineſs, craving quick diſpatch,
Importunes perſonal conference with his Grace.
Haſt, ſignifie ſo much, while we attend,
Like humble viſag'd Suitors his high will.
Boyet. Proud of imployment, willingly I go. Exit.
Prin. All pride is willing pride, and your's is ſo;
Who are the Votaries, my loving Lords, that are Vow-fellows with this virtuous Duke? King.
Lor. Longavile is one.
Prin. Know you the man?
Lad. I knew him Madam at a Marriage Feaſt,
Between L. Perigort, and the beauteous heir
Of Jaques Faulconbridge ſolemnized.
In Normandy ſaw I this Longavile.
A man of Soveraign parts he is eſteem'd:
Well fitted in the Arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The only ſoil of his fair virtues gloſs,
(If virtues gloſs will ſtain with any ſoil,)
Is a ſharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whoſe edge hath power to cut, whoſe will ſtill wills,
It ſhould none ſpare that come within his power.
Prin. Some merry mocking Lord, is't ſo?
Lad. 1. They ſay ſo moſt, that moſt his humours know.
Prin. Such ſhort liv'd wits do wither as they grow.
Who are the reſt?
Lad. The young Dumain, a well accompliſh'd youth,
Of all, that Virtue love, for Virtue loved.
Moſt power to do moſt harm, leaſt knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill ſhape good,
And ſhape to win grace, though he had no wit.
I ſaw him at the Duke Alanzoes once,
And much too little of that good I ſaw,
Is my report to his great worthineſs.
Roſa. Another of theſe Students at that time,
Was there with him, as I have heard a truth;
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never ſpent an hours talk withall.
His eye begets occaſion for wit,
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jeſt,
Which his fair tongue (conceits Expoſitor)
Delivers in ſuch apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play Truant at his Tales,
And younger hearings are quite raviſhed,
So ſweet and voluble is his diſcourſe.
Prin. God bleſs my Ladies, are they all in love?
That every one her own hath garniſhed,
With ſuch bedecking ornaments of praiſe?
Ma. Here comes Boyet

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, now what admittance Lord?
Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his Competitors in oath,
Were all addreſt to meet you gentle Lady,
Before I came: Marry thus I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to beſiege his Court,
Than ſeek a diſpenſation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled houſe.

Scene II.

Enter Navar, Longavile, Dumain, and Biron.

Here comes Navarre.
Nav. Fair Princeſs, welcome to the Court of Navarre.
Prin. Fair I give you back again, and welcome I have not yet: the roof of this Court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too baſe to be mine.
Nav. You ſhall be welcome, Madam to my Court.
Prin. I will be welcome then; Conduct me thither.
Na. Here me dear Lady, I have ſworn an oath.
Prin. Our Lady help my Lord, he'll be forſworn.
Nav. Not for the world, fair Madam, by my will.
Prin. Why, will ſhall break it will, and nothing elſe.
Nav. Your Ladyſhip is ignorant what it is.
Prin. Were my Lord ſo, his ignorance were wiſe,
Where now his knowledge muſt prove ignorance.
I hear your Grace hath ſworn out Houſe-keeping:
'Tis deadly ſin to keep that oath, my Lord,
And ſin to break it:
But pardon me I am too ſudden bold;
To teach a Teacher ill beſeemeth me,
Vouchſafe to read the purpoſe of my coming,
And ſuddenly reſolve me in my ſuit.
Nav. Madam, I will, if ſuddenly I may.
Prin. You will the ſooner that I were away,
For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me ſtay.

Bir

Bir. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Roſa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Bir. I know you did.
Roſa. How needleſs was it then to ask the queſtion?
Bir. You muſt not be ſo quick.
Roſ. 'Tis long of you that ſpur me with ſuch queſtions.
Bir. Your wit's too hot, it ſpeeds too faſt, 'twill tire.
Roſa. Not till it leave the Rider in the mire.
Bir. What time a day?
Roſa. The hour that fools ſhould ask.
Bir. Now fair befall your mask.
Roſa. Fair falls the face it covers.
Bir. And ſend you many lovers.
Roſa. Amen, ſo you be none.
Bir. Nay then will I be gone.
Fer. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thouſand Crowns;
Being but th' one half of an intire ſum,
Diſburſed by my father in his wars.
But ſay that he, or we, as neither have
Receiv'd that ſum; yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thouſand more; in ſurety of ~~the~~ which,
One part of Aquitain is bound to us,
Although not valued to the moneys worth:
If then the King your father will reſtore
But that one half which is unſatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitain,
And hold fair friendſhip with his Majeſty:
But that it ſeems he little purpoſeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid,
An hundred thouſand Crowns, and not demands
One payment of an hundred thouſand Crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitain;
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitain, ſo gaelded as it is.
Dear Princeſs, were not his requeſts ſo far
From reaſon's yielding, your fair ſelf ſhould make
A yielding 'gainſt ſome reaſon in my breſt,
And go well ſatisfied to France again.
Prin. You do the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In ſo unſeeming to confeſs receit
Of that which hath ſo faithfully been paid.
Fer. I do proteſt I never heard of it,
And if you prove it, I'le repay it back
Or yield up Aquitain.
Prin. We arreſt your word:
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For ſuch a ſum, from ſpecial Officers,
Of Charles his Father.
Fer. Satisfie me ſo.
Boyet. So pleaſe your Grace, the packet is not come.
Where that and other ſpecialties are bound;
To morrow you ſhall have a ſight of them.
Fer. It ſhall ſuffice me; at which enterview,
All liberal reaſon ~~would~~ I yield unto:
Mean time, receive ſuch welcome at my hand,
As Honor, without breach of Honor may
Make tender of, to thy true worthineſs.
You may not come fair Princeſs in my gates,
But here without you ſhall be ſo receiv'd,
As you ſhall deem your ſelf lodg'd in my heart,
Though ſo deni'd farther harbour in my houſe:
Your own good thoughts excuſe me, and farewel;
To morrow we ſhall viſit you again.
Prin. Sweet health and fair deſires conſort your grace.
Fer. Thy own wiſh, wiſh I thee, in every place. Exit.
Boy. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.
La. Ro. Pray you do my commendations,
I would be glad to ſee it.
Boy. I would you heard it groan.
La. Ro. Is the ſoul ſick?
Boy. Sick at the heart.
La. Ro. Alack let it blood.
Boy. Would that do it good?
La. Ro. My Phyſick ſayes I.
Boy. Will you prick't with your eye,
La. Ro. No poynt, with my knife.
Boy. Now God ſave thy life.
La. Ro. And yours from long living.
Bir. I cannot ſtay thanksgiving. Exit.

~~Enter Dumain.~~

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word: what Lady is that ſame?
Boy. The heir of Alanſon, Roſaline her name.
Dum. A gallant Lady; Mounſieur fare you well. Exit.

~~Enter Longaville.~~

Long. I beſeech you a word: what is ſhe in ~~the~~ white?
Boy. A woman ſometimes, if you ſaw her in the light.
Long. Perchance light in the light: I deſire her name.
Boy. She hath but one for her ſelf,
To deſire that were a ſhame.
Lon. Pray you ſir, whoſe daughter?
Boy. Her mothers, I have heard.
Lon. Gods bleſſing a your beard.
Boy. Good ſir be not offended.
She is an heir of Faulconbridge.
Long. ~~Nay, my choller is ended~~: She is a moſt ſweet Lady.
Boy. Not unlike ſir, that may be. Exit Long.

Enter Biron.

Bir. What's her name in the Cap?
Boy. Katherine by good hap.
Bir. Is ſhe wedded, or no
Boy. To her will ſir, or ſo.
Bir. You are welcome ſir, adieu.
Boy. Farewel to me ſir, and welcome to you. Exit.
La. Ma. That laſt is Biron, the merry mad-cap Lord.
Not a word with him, but a jeſt.
Boy. And every jeſt but a word.
Pri. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boy. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to boord.
Lad. Ma. Two hot Sheeps marry;
And whereſore not Ships?
Boy. No ſheep (ſweet Lamb) unleſs we feed on your lips.
La. You ſheep and I paſture; ſhall that finiſh the jeſt?
Boy. So you grant paſture for me.
La. Not ſo gentle beaſt.
My Lips are no Common, though ſeveral they be.
Boy. Belonging to whom?
La. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be jangling, but gentles agree.
This civil war of wits were much better uſed
On Navar and his book-men, for here 'tis abuſed.
Boy. If my obſervation (which very ſeldome lyes
By the hearts ſtill rhetorick, diſcloſed with eyes)
Deceive me not now, Navar is infected.
Prin. With what?
Boy. With that which we Lovers intitle affected;
Prin Your reaſon.
Boy. Why all his behaviours do make their retire
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough deſire.
His heart like an Agot with your print impreſſed,
Proud with his form, in his eye pride expreſſed:
His tongue all impatient to ſpeak and not ſee,
Did ſtumble with haſt in his eye-ſight to be.
All ſenſes to that ſence did make their repair,
To feel only looking on faireſt of fair:
Me thought all his ſenſes were lock'd in his eye,
As Jewels in Criſtal for ſome Prince to buy:
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were glaſt.
Did point out to buy them along as you paſt.
His faces own margent did coat ſuch amazes,
That all eyes ſaw his eyes inchanted with gazes.
I'le give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
And you give him for my ſake, but one loving kiſs.

Prin. Come to our Pavillion, Boyet is disposed.

Boy. But to speak that in words, which his eye, hath I only have made a mouth of his eye, (disclos'd,
By adding a tongue, which I know will not lye.

Lad. R. Thou art an old Love-monger, and speakest skilfully.

Lad. Ma. He is Cupids Grandfather, and learns news of him.

Lad. 2. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boy. Do you hear my mad Wenches?

Lad. 1. No.

Boy What then, do you see?

Lad. 2. Ay our way to be gone.

Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertia.

The Park.

Enter Braggart, and Boy.

Song.

Brag. Warble child, make passionate my sense of hearing.

Boy. Concolinel. ——— Singing

Brag. Sweet Aer, go tenderness of years; take this Key, give inlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither: I must employ him in a letter to my Love.

Boy. Will you win your love with a French braul?

Brag. How meanest thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat master, but to jigg off a tune at the tongues end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eye: sigh a note and sing a note, sometimes through the throat: if you swallowed love with singing, love sometimes through the nose, as if you snuft up love by smelling love, with your hat penthouse-like o're the shop of your eyes; with your arms crost on your thinbelly doublet (like a Rabbet on a spit) or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away: these are complements, these are humours, these betray nice wenches that would be betrayed without these, and make them men of note: do you note me? that most are affected to these?

Brag. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Boy. By my Pen of observation.

Brag. But O, but O. ——— a

Boy. The Hobby-horse is forgot.

Brag. Call'st thou my love Hobby-horse?

Boy. No Master, the Hobby-horse is but a Colt, and your Love perhaps, a Hackney:
But have you forgot your Love?

Brag. Almost I had.

Boy. Negligent student, learn her by heart.

Brag. By heart, and in heart boy.

Boy. And out of heart Master: all those three I will prove.

Brag. What wilt thou prove?

Boy. A man, if I live, (and this) by, in, and, out of without, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Brag. I am all these three.

Boy. And three times as much more; and yet nothing at all.

Brag. Fetch hither the Swain, he must carry me a letter.

Boy. A message well sympathiz'd, a Horse to be embassador for an Ass. Aside

Brag. Ha, ha, What sayest thou?

Boy. Marry sir, you must send the Ass upon the Horse, for he is very slow gated: but I go.

Brag. The way is but short, away.

Boy. As swift as Lead, sir.

Brag. Thy meaning pretty ingenious? is not Lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

Boy. Minime honest Master, or rather, Master, no.

Brag. I say Lead is slow.

Boy. You are too swift, sir, to say so.
Is that Lead slow, which is fir'd from a Gun?

Brag. Sweet smoak of Rhetorick,
He reputes me a Cannon; and the Bullet, that's he:
I shoot thee at the Swain.

Boy. Thump then, and I flee. Exit.

Brag. A most acute Juvenal, voluble and free of grace;
By thy favour sweet Welkin, I must sigh in thy face.
Most rude melancholy, Valour gives thee place.
My Herald is return'd.

Scene II

Enter Page, and Clown.

Pag. A wonder Master, here's a Costard broken in shin.

Arm. Some Enigma, some riddle, no Lenvoy begin.

Clow. No egma, no riddle, no Lenvoy, no salve, in the male sir. O sir, Plantan, a plain Plantan: no Lenvoy, no Lenvoy, or salve sir, but Plantan.

Arm. By vertue thou inforcest laughter, thy filly thought, my spleen, the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O pardon me my stars, doth the inconsiderate take salve for Lenvoy, and the world Lenvoy for a salve?

Pag. Do the wise think them other, is not Lenvoy a salve. (plain

Arm. No Page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make
Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been sain.
Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my Lenvoy.

The Fox, the Ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

Page. Until the Goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

A good Lenvoy, ending in the Goose: would you desire more? (flat

Clow. The Boy hath sold him a bargain, a Goose, that's
Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast as loose:
Let me see a fat Lenvoy, I that's a fat Goose.

Arma. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?

Boy. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for a Lenvoy.

Clow. True, and I for a Plantan:
Thus came your argument in:
Then the boys fat Lenvoy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market.

Arma. But tell me: How was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Pag. I will tell you sensibly.

Clow. Thou hast no feeling of it Moth,
I will speak that Lenvoy.
I Costard running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter,

Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirra Costard, I will infranchise thee.

Clow. O, marry me to one Francis, I smell some Lenvoy, some Goose in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean, setting thee at liberty. Enfreedoming thy person; thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Clow. True, true, and now you will be my purgation and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the country Maid Jaquenetta: there is remuneration, for the best ward of mine honors is rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow. ——— Exit.

Pag. Like the sequel I.
Signior Costard adieu.

Clo. My sweet ounce of mans flesh, my in-cony Jew: Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration, O, that's the Latin word for three-farthings: Three farthings remuneration, What's the price of this yncle? 1.d. no, I'll give you a remuneration: Why? It carries it. remuneration? Why? It is a fairer name than a French-Crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Scene III.

Enter Birone.

Bir. O my good knave Costard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. Pray you sir, How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Bir. What is a remuneration?
Cost. Marry, sir, half penny farthing.
Bir. O, Why then three farthings worth of silk.
Cost. I thank your worship, God be w' you.
Bir. O stay, slave, I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall intreat.
Clow. When would you have it done sir?
Bir. O, this after-noon.
Clow. Well, I will do it, sir: Fare you well.
Bir. O, thou knoweſt not what it is.
Clow. I shall know, sir when I have done it.
Bir. Why villain, thou must know it first.
Clow. I will come to your worship to morrow morning.
Bir. It must be done this after-noon,
Hark slave, it is but this:
The Princess comes to hunt here in the Park:
And in her train there is a gentle Lady;
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her; ask for her,
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd up counsel. There's thy guerdon; go.
Clow. Guerdon, O sweet Guerdon, better than remuneration, a leavenpence-farthing better: most sweet guerdon. I will do it sir in print: guerdon, remuneration.

Exit.

Bir. O! and I forsooth in love,
I that have been loves whip;
A very beadle to a humorous sigh: A Critick;
Nay, a night-watch Constable.
A domineering pedant o're the boy,
Than whom no mortal so magnificent:
This wimpled, whining, purblind wayward boy,
This signior Junio giant dwarf, dan Cupid,
Regent of Love-rimes, Lord of folded arms,
Th'anointed soveraign of sighs and groans:
Liege of all loyterers, and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Plackets, King of Codpieces.
Sole Emperator, and great general
Of trotting Parators (O my little heart!):
And I to be a Corporal of his field,
And wear his colours like a Tumblers hoop?
What? I love! I sue! I seek a wife,
A woman, that is like a German Clock,
Still a repairing: ever out of frame,
And never going aright, being but a Watch:
But being watch'd, that it may still go right.
Nay to be perjur'd, which is worst of all:
And among three, to love the worst of all,
A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes,
Ay, and by heaven, one that will do the deed,
Tho Argus were her Eunuch and her guard;
And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!
To pray for her, go to: it is a plague
That Cupid will impose for my neglect
Of his Almighty, dreadful, little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue and groan,
Some men must love my Lady, and some Joan.

Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scene I.

A Pavilion in the Park near the Palace.

Enter the Princess, a Forester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Prin. Was that the King that spur'd his horse so hard,
Against the steep uprising of the hill?
Boy. I know not, but I think it was not he.
Prin. VVho e're he was, he shew'd a mounting mind.
VVell Lords, to day we shall have our dispatch,
On Saturday we will return to France.
Then Forester, my friend, VVhere is the Bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in?
For. Hereby upon the edge of yonder Coppice,
A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.
Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot.
For. Pardon me, for I meant not so.
Prin. VVhat, what? First praise me, then again say no.
O short-liv'd pride. Not fair? alack for wo.
For. Yes Madam, fair.
Prin. Nay, never paint me now,
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glass) take this for telling true:
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit
Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresie in fair, fit for these days,
A giving hand tho foul shall have the praise.
But come, the bow: Now mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accounted ill.
Thus will I save my credit in the shoot,
Not wounding pity would not let me do't: omitted
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.
And out of question, so it is sometimes.
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
When for Fames sake to praise an outward part,
VVe bend to that, the working of the heart.
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor Deers blood, that my heart means no ill.
Boy. Do not curst wives hold that self-soveraignty
Only for praise sake, when they strive to be
Lords o're their Lords?
Prin. Only for praise, and praise we may afford,
To any Lady that subdues a Lord.

Enter Clown.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.
Clow. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head Lady?
Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.
Clo. VVhich is the greatest Lady, the highest? omitted
Prin. The thickest, and the talleſt.
Clo. The thickest, and the talleſt; it is so, truth is truth.
And your waſt Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a these maids girdles for your waste should be fit.
Are not you the chief woman? You are the thickest here.
Prin What's your will sir? What's your will?
Clow. I have a Letter from Monsieur Birone,
To one Lady Rosaline,
Prin. O thy letter, thy letter: He's a good friend of mine.
Stand aside good bearer.
Boyet. You can carve,
Break up this Capon;

X meaning the letter

Boy

as poulet in french signifies both a chicken & a Love Letter.

Boy. I am bound to ſerve.
This Letter is miſtook: it importeth none here;
It is writ to Jaquenetta.
Prin. We will read it, I ſwear.
Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet reads.

BY heaven, that thou art fair, is moſt infallible; true that thou art beauteous: truth it ſelf, that thou art lovely; more fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth it ſelf; have commiſeration on thy heroical Vaſſal. The magnanimous and moſt illuſtrate King Cophetua ſet eye upon the pernicious and indubitate Beggar Zenelophon; and he it was that might rightly ſay, Veni, vidi, vici; VVhich to anatomize in the vulgar, (O baſe and obſcure vulgar!) videlicet, he came, ſaw and overcame; he came one; ſee two, overcame three. Who came? the King. VVhy did he come? to ſee. Why did he ſee? to overcome. To whom came he? to the begger. What ſaw he? the begger. Who overcame he? the begger. The concluſion is victory, On whoſe ſide? the Kings; the captive is inrich'd; On whoſe ſide? the beggars. The cataſtrophe is a Nuptial: On whoſe ſide? the Kings: no, on both in one, or one in both: I am the King, (for ſo ſtands the compariſon) thou the beggar, for ſo witneſſeth thy lowlineſs. Shall I command thy love? I may. Shall I enforce thy love? I could. Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What ſhalt thou exchange for rags? Robes: for tittles? titles: for thy ſelf, me? Thus expecting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part:

Thine in the deareſt deſign of induſtry,

Don Adriano de Armado:

Thus doſt thou hear the Nemean Lion roar,
'Gainſt thee thou Lamb, that ſtandeſt as his prey:
Submiſſive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forrage will incline to play:
But if thou ſtrive (poor ſoul) what art thou then?
Food for his rage, repaſture for his den.

Prin. VVhat plume of feather is he that indited this Letter? What vain? What Weathercock? Did you ever hear better?
Boy. I am much deceived, but I remember the ſtile.
Prin. Elſe your memory is bad, going o're it e're while.
Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court,
A Phantaſme, a Monarcho, and one that makes ſport
To the Prince and his Book-mates.
Prin. Thou fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?
Clow. I told you, my Lord.
Prin. To whom ſhould'ſt thou give it?
Clow. From my Lord to my Lady.
Prin. From which Lord to which Lady?
Clow. From my Lord Berown, a good maſter of mine,
To a Lady of France that he called Roſaline.
Prin. Thou haſt miſtaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here ſweet, put up this, 'twill be thine another day.
Exeunt.

Boy. Who is the ſhooter? who is the ſhooter?
Roſa. Shall I teach you to know?
Boy. I my continent of beauty.
Roſa. Why ſhe that bears the Bow. Finely put off.
Boy. My Lady goes to kill horns, but if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miſcarry.
Finely put on.
Roſa. Well then, I am the ſhooter.
Boy. And who is your Dear?
Roſa. If we chooſe by horns, your ſelf come not near.
Finely put on indeed.

Mari. You ſtill wrangle with her, Boyet and ſhe ſtrikes at the brow.
Boy. But ſhe her ſelf is hit lower:
Have I hit her now.
Roſa. Shall I come upon thee with an old ſaying, that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it.
Boy. So I may anſwer thee with one as old, that was woman when Queen Guinover of Britain was a little wench as touching the hit it.
Roſa. Thou canſt not hit it, hit it, hit it.
Thou canſt not hit it my good man.
Boy. I cannot, cannot, cannot:
And I cannot another can. Exit.
Clo. By my troth moſt pleaſant, how both did fit it.
Mar. A mark marvellous well ſhot, for they both did hit it.
Boy. A mark, O mark but that mark: a mark ſays my Lady.
Let the mark have a prick in't, to meet at, if it may be.
Mar. Wide a'th bow hand, i'faith your hand is out.
Clo. Indeed a'muſt ſhoot nearer, or he'l ne're hit the clout.
Boy. And if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.
Clo. Then will ſhe get the upſhot by cleaving the Pin.
Mar. Come, come, you talk greaſily, your lips grow foul.
Clo. She's too hard for you at pricks, ſir, challenge her to bowl.
Boy. I fear too much rubbing, good night my good Owl.
Clo. By my ſoul a Swain, a moſt ſimple Clown.
Lord, Lord! how the Ladies and I have put him down.
O my troth moſt ſweet jeſts, moſt incony vulgar wit,
When it comes ſo ſmoothly off, ſo obſcenely, as it were, ſo fit.
Armado ath to ſide, O a moſt dainty man.
To ſee him walk before a Lady, and to bear her Fan.
To ſee him kiſs his hand, and how moſt ſweetly a will ſwear:
And his Page at other ſide, that handful of wit,
Ah heavens, it is a moſt pathetical nit.
Sowla, Sowla. Exeunt.

Shout within.

Scene II.

Enter Dull. Holofernes, the Pedant. and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reverent ſport truly, and done in the teſtimony of a good conſcience.
Ped. The Dear was (as you know) ſanguis in blood, ripe as a Pomwater, who now hangeth like a Jewel in the ear of Cœlo the ſky, the welkin, the heaven, and anon falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the ſoil, the land, the earth.
Curat. Nath. Truly Maſter Holofernes, the epithetes are ſweetly varied like a ſcholar at the leaſt: but ſir I aſſure ye, it was a Buck of the firſt head.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.
Dul. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Moſt barbarous intimation: yet a kind of inſinuation, as it were in via, in way of explication facere: as it were replication, or rather oſtentare, to ſhow as it were his inclination after his undreſſed, unpoliſhed, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or rathereſt unconfirmed faſhion, to inſert again my haud credo for a Deer:
Dul. I ſaid the Deer was not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Twice ſod ſimplicity, bis coctus; O thou monſter ignorance, how deformed doeſt thou look?
Nath. Sir he hath never fed on the dainties that are bred in a book.

He

He hath not eat paper as it were ;
He hath not drunk ink.
His intellect is not repleniſhed, he is only an animal, only ſenſible in the duller parts ; and ſuch barren plants are ſet before us, that we thankful ſhould be ; which we taſte, and feeling, are for thoſe parts that do fructifie in us more than he.
For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiſcreet, or a fool ;
So were there a patch ſet on Learning, to ſee him in a School.
But omne bene ſay I, being of an old Fathers mind,
Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.

Dul. You two are book-men ; Can you tell by your wit, What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet ?

Hol. Dictiſſima goodman Dull, Dictiſſima goodman Dull.

Dull What is dictiſſima ?

Nath. A title to Phœbe, to Luna, to the Moon.

Hol. The Moon was a month old when Adam was no more.
And wrought not to five-weeks when he came to five-ſcore.
Th'alluſion holds in the Exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed, the Colluſion holds in the Exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I ſay the alluſion holds in the Exchange.

Dull. And I ſay the polluſion holds in the Exchange ; for the Moon is never but a month old ; and I ſay beſide that, 'twas a Pricket that the Princeſs kill'd.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal Epitaph on the death of the Deer, and to humour the ignorant call'd the Deer, the Princeſs kill'd a Pricket.

Nath. Perge good Maſter Holofernes, perge, ſo it ſhall pleaſe you to abrogate ſcurrility.

Hol. I will ſomething effect the Letter, for it argues facility.

The praiſefull Princeſs pierc'd and prikt a pretty pleaſing pricket.
Some ſay a Sore, but not a ſore, till now made ſore with ſhooting
The Dogs did yell, put all to Sore, then Sorel jumpt from Thicket ;
Or Pricket-ſore, or elſe Sorell, the people fall a hooting.
If Sore be ſore, then all to Sore, makes fifty ſores, O ſorell !
Of one ſore I an hundred make by adding but one more L.

Nath. A rare talent.

Dul. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Nath. This is a gift that I have ſimple ; ſimple, a fooliſh extravagant ſpirit, full of forms, figures, ſhapes, objects, Ideas, apprehenſions, motions, revolutions. Theſe are begot in the ventricle of memory, nouriſht in the womb of primater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occaſion ; but the gift is good in thoſe in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Hol. Sir, I praiſe the Lord for you, and ſo may my Pariſhioners, for their Sons are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly under you ; you are a good member of the common-wealth.

Nath. Me hercule, If their Sons be ingenuous, they ſhall want no inſtruction ; If their Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But Vir ſapit, qui pauca loquitur, a ſoul Feminine ſaluteth us.

Scene III.

Enter Jaquenetta and the Clown

Jaque. God give you good morrow Maſter Perſon.

Nath. Maſter Perſon, quaſi perſon And if one ſhould be perſt, Which is the one ?

Clow. Marry Maſter Schoolmaſter, he that is likeſt to a hogſhead.

Nath. Of perſing a Hogſhead, a good cluſter of conceit in a turph of Earth, fire enough for a Flint, Pearl enough for a Swine : 'tis pretty, it is well.

Jaqu. Good Maſter Perſon be ſo good as read me this Letter ; it was given me by Coſtard, and ſent me from Don Armatho. I beſeech you read it.

Nath. Fauſte precor gelida, quando, pecus omne ſub umbra, ruminat, and ſo forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may ſpeak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice, Venetia, venetia, qui non te vidit non te prædicat. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan. Who underſtandeth thee not, ut re ſol la mi fa. Under pardon ſir, What are the contents ? or rather as Horace ſaies in his, What ! my ſoul verſes.

Hol. Ay ſir, and very learned.

Nath. Let me hear a ſtaff, a ſtanza, a verſe, Lege domine.
If Love make me forſworn, how ſhall I ſwear to love ?
Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed,
Though to my ſelf forſworn, to thee I'le faithful prove.
Thoſe thoughts to me were Oakes, to thee like Oſiers bowed,
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes.
Where all thoſe pleaſures live, that art would comprehend:
If knowledg be the mark, to know thee ſhall ſuffice,
Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee commend,
All ignorant that ſoul, that ſees thee without wonder:
Which is to me ſome praiſe, that I thy parts admire ;
Thy eye Joves lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder.
Which not to anger bent, is muſick, and ſweet fire.
Celeſtial as thou art, Oh pardon love, this wrong,
That ſings heavens praiſe, with ſuch a earthly tongue.

Ped. You find not the apoſtrophes, and ſo miſs the accent. Let me ſuperviſe the canzonet.

Nath. Here are only numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poeſie caret : Ovidius Naſo was the man. And why indeed Naſo, but for ſmelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy ? the jerks of invention imitary is nothing : So doth the Hound his maſter, the Ape his keeper, the tyred Horſe his rider : But Damoſella Virgin, Was this directed to you ?

Jaque. Ay ſir, from one Mounſieur Birone, one of the ſtrange Queens Lords.

Nath. I will overglance the ſuperſcript.
To the ſnow-white hand of the moſt beauteous Lady, Roſaline. I will look again on the intellect of the Letter, for the nomination of the party written, to the perſon written unto.
Your Ladiſhips in all deſired employment, Birone.

Ped. Sir Holofernes, this Birone is one of the Votaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a ſequent of the ſtranger Queens ; which accidentally, or by the way of progreſſion, hath miſcarried. Trip and go my ſweet ; deliver this Paper into the hand of the King, it may concern much ; ſtay not thy compliment, I forgive thy duty ; adieu.

Maid. Good Coſtard, go with me.
Sir God ſave your life.

Coſt. Have with thee my girl. Exit.

Hol. Sir you have done this in the fear of God very religiouſly : and as a certain father ſaith——

Ped. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear colourable colours. But to return to the Verſes, did they pleaſe you Sir Nathaniel ?

Nath. Marvellous well for the Pen.

Ped. I do dine to day at the fathers of a certain Pupil

P ll of mine, where if (being repaſt) it ſhall pleaſe you to gratifie the table with a grace, I will on my priviledge I have with the parents of the foreſaid Child and Pupil, undertake your ben venuto, where I will prove thoſe Verſes to be very unlearned, neither ſavouring of Poetry, Wit or Invention. I beſeech your Society.

Nath. And thank you too: for ſociety (ſaith the text) is the happineſs of life.

Peda. And certes the text moſt infallibly concludes it. Sir I do invite you too, you ſhall not ſay me nay: Pauca verba.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. Exeunt.

Scene IV.

Enter Biron with a Paper in his hand, alone.

Biro. The King he is hunting the Dear.
I am courſing my ſelf.

They have pitcht a Toyl, I am toyling in a pitch; pitch that defiles; defile, a foul word: Well, ſet thee down ſorrow; for ſo they ſay the fool ſaid, and ſo ſay I, and I the fool: Well proved wit. By the Lord this Love is as mad as Ajax, it kills ſheep, it kills me, I a ſheep: Well proved again on my ſide. I will not love; if I do, hang me: i'faith I will not. O but her eye: by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lye and lye in my throat. By heaven I do love, and it hath taught me to Rime, and to be mallicholly: and here is part of my Rime, and here my mallicholly. Well, ſhe hath one o'my Sonnets already, the Clown bore it, the Fool ſent it, and the Lady hath it: ſweet Clown, ſweeter Fool, ſweeteſt Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God give him grace to groan.

He ſtands aſide. The King entreth.

King. Ay me.

Bir. Shot by heaven; proceed ſweet Cupid, thou haſt thumpt him with thy birdbolt under the left pap: in faith ſecrets.

King. So ſweet a kiſs the golden Sun gives not, Reading
To thoſe freſh morning drops upon the Roſe,
As thy eye-beams when their freſh Rayes have ſmote
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows.
Nor ſhines the ſilver Moon one half ſo bright,
Through the tranſparent boſoms of the deep,
As doth my face through tears of mine give light:
Thou ſhin'ſt in every tear that I do weep,
No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee,
So rideſt thou triumphing in my woe.
Do but behold the tears that ſwell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will ſhew:
But do not love thy ſelf, then thou wilt keep
My tears for glaſſes, and ſtill make me weep.
O Queen of Queens, how far doſt thou excel,
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell
How ſhall ſhe know my griefs? I'le drop the paper.
Sweet leaves ſhade folly. Who is he comes here?

Enter Longaville. The King ſteps aſide.

What! Longaville and reading: liſten ear.

Bir. Now in thy likeneſs one more fool appears.

Long. Ay me, I am forſworn.

Bir. Why he comes in like a perjur'd, wearing papers.

King. Long. In love I hope, ſweet fellowſhip in ſhame.

Bir. One drunkard loves another of the name.

Lon. Am I the firſt that have been perjur'd ſo? (know,

Bir. I could put thee in comfort: not by two, that I
Thou makeſt the triumviry, the corner cap of ſociety,
The ſhape of Loves Tyburn, that hangs up ſimplicity.

Lon. I fear theſe ſtubborn lines lack power to move:
O ſweet Maria, Empreſs of my love,
Theſe numbers will I tear, and write in proſe.

Bir. O Rimes are guards on wanton Cupids hoſe:
Diſfigure not his ſhop.

Lon. This ſame ſhall go. He reads the Sonnet.

Did not the heavenly Rhetorick of thine eye,
(Gainſt whom the world cannot hold argument)
Perſwade my heart to this falſe perjury?
Vows for thee broke deſerve not puniſhment:
A woman I forſwore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddeſs, I forſwore not thee.
My Vow was earthy, thou a heavenly Love.
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all diſgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is.
Then thou fair Sun, which on my earth doſt ſhine,
Exhal'ſt this vapour-vow; in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine;
If by me broke, what fool is not ſo wiſe,
To loſe an oath, to win a Paradiſe?

Bir. This is the liver vein, which makes fleſh a deity;
A green Gooſe, a Goddeſs; pure, pure Idolatry.
God amend us, God amend, we are much out o'th' way.

Enter Dumaine.

Lon. By whom ſhall I ſend this? (Company?) Stay.

Bir. All hid, all hid, an old infant play;
Like a demy God, here ſit I in the ſky,
And wretched fools ſecrets heedfully o're eye.
More Sacks to the Mill! O heavens I have my wiſh,
Dumain transform'd; four Woodcocks in a diſh.

Dum. O moſt divine Kate.

Biro. O moſt prophane coxcomb. [Aside

Dum. By heaven the wonder of a mortal eye.

Bir. By earth ſhe is not, corporal, there you lye. [Aside

Dum. Her amber hairs for foul hair Amber coted. [Aside

Bir. An Amber coloured Raven was well noted. [Aside

Dum. As upright as the Cedar.

Bir. Stoop I ſay, her ſhoulder is with child. [Aside

Dum. As fair as day.

Bir. Ay, as ſome days, but then no ſun muſt ſhine. [Aside

Dum. O that I had my wiſh?

Long. And I had mine. [Aside

Kin. And mine too, good Lord.

Bir. Amen, ſo I had mine. Is not that a good word? [Aside

Dum. I would forget her, but a Feaver ſhe
Reigns in my blood, and will remembred be.

Bir. A Feaver in your blood! why then inciſion
Would let her out in Sawcers, ſweet miſpriſion. [Aside

Dum. Once more I'le read the Ode that I have writ.

Bir. Once more I'le mark how Love can vary Wit. [Aside

Dumain reads his Sonnet.

On a day, alack the day!
Love, whoſe Month is every May,
Spy'd a bloſſome paſſing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the Velvet leaves, the wind,
All unſeen, can paſſage find.
That the Lover ſick to death,
Wiſh'd himſelf the heavens breath.
Air, (quoth he) thy cheeks may blow,
Air, would I might triumph ſo.
But alack my hand is ſworn,
Ne're, to pluck thee from thy throne;
Vow alack for youth unmeet,
Youth ſo apt to pluck a ſweet.
Do not call it ſin in me,
That I am forſworn for thee.
Thou, for whom Jove would ſwear,
Juno but an Ethiope were,
And deny himſelf for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy Love.

This will I ſend, and ſomething elſe more plain,
That ſhall expreſs my true-loves faſting pain;
O would the King, Biron, and Longaville

Were

Were Lovers too ill to example ill,
Would from my fore-head wipe a perjur'd note:
For none offend, where all alike do dote.
Lon. Dumain, thy Love is far from charity,
That in Loves griefe deſir'ſt ſociety:
You may look pale, but I ſhould bluſh I know,
To be o're-heard, and taken napping ſo.
King. Come ſir, you bluſh as his, your caſe is ſuch,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You do not love Maria, Longaville
Did never Sonnet for her ſake compile?
Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart
His loving boſome, to keep down his heart?
I have been cloſely ſhrowded in this buſh
And markt you both, and for you both did bluſh.
I heard your guilty Rimes, obſerv'd your faſhion;
Saw ſighs reek from you, noted well your paſſion.
Ay me, ſayes one! O Jove, the other cries;
Her hairs were Gold, Cryſtal the others eyes.
You would for Paradiſe break faith and troth,
And Jove for your Love would infringe an oath.
What will Birone ſay when that he ſhall hear
A faith infringed, which ſuch zeal did ſwear?
How will he ſcorn? how will he ſpend his wit?
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did ſee,
I would not have him know ſo much by me.
Bir. Now ſtep I forth to whip hypocriſie.
Ah good my Liege, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace haſt thou thus to reprove
Theſe worms for loving, that art moſt in love?
Your eyes do make no coaches in your tears,
There is no certain Princeſs that appears;
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing;
Tuſh, none but Minſtrels like of Sonnetting.
But are you not aſham'd? nay, are you not
All three of you, to be thus much o're ſhot?
You found his Mote, the King your Mote did ſee:
But I a Beam do find in each of three.
O, what a Scene of fool'ry have I ſeen,
Of ſighs, of groans, of ſorrow, and of teen!
O me, with what ſtrict patience have I ſat,
To ſee a King transformed to a Gnat?
To ſee great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
And profound Solomon tuning a Jygge?
And Neſtor play at puſh-pin with the boyes,
And Critick Timon laugh at idle toyes.
Where lies thy grief? O tell me good Dumain;
And gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my Lieges? all about the breaſt.
A Candle hoa!
Kin. Too bitter is thy jeſt,
Are we betrayed thus to thy over-view?
Bir. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
I that am honeſt, I that hold it ſin
To break the vow I am engaged in.
I am betray'd by keeping company
With men, like men of ſtrange inconſtancy.
When ſhall you ſee me write a thing in rime?
Or groan for Joan? or ſpend a minutes time
In pruning me? when ſhall you hear that I will praiſe a hand, a foot, a face, an eye, a gate, a ſtate, a brow, a breaſt, a waſt, a leg, a limb?
Kin. Soft, whither away ſo faſt?
A true man, or a thief, that gallops ſo?
Bir. I poſt from Love, good Lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta, and Clown.

Jaque. God bleſs the king.
Kin. What Preſent haſt thou there?
Clo. Some certain treaſon.
Kin. What makes treaſon here?
Clo. Nay it makes nothing ſir.
Kin. If it mar nothing neither,
The treaſon and you go in Peace together.
Jaque. I beſeech your Grace let this Letter be read,
Our perſon miſdoubts it: it was treaſon he ſaid.
Kin. Birone, read it over. He reads the Letter.
Where hadſt thou it?
Jaque. Of Coſtard.
Kin. Where hadſt thou it?
Coſt. Of Don Adramadio, Don Adramadio.
Kin. How now, what is in you? why doſt thou tear it?
Bir. A toy my Liege, a toy: your grace needs not fear it.
Long. It did move him to paſſion, and therefore let's hear it.
Dum. It is Birones writing, and here is his name.
Bir. Ah you whoreſon loggerhead, you were born to do me ſhame.
Bir. Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confeſs, I confeſs.
King. What?
Bir. That you three fools, lackt me fool, to make up the meſs.
He, he, and you: and you my Liege, and I,
Are pick-purſes in Love, and we deſerve to die.
O diſmiſs this audience, and I ſhall tell you more.
Dum. Now the number is even.
Bir. True, true, we are four: will theſe Turtles be gone?
Kin. Hence ſirs, away. Exit. Cos. & Jaq.
Clo. Walk aſide the true folk, and let the traytors ſtay
Bir. Sweet Lords, ſweet Lovers, O let us imbrace:
As true we are as fleſh and blood can be.
The Sea will ebb and flow, heaven will ſhew his face:
Young blood doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot croſs the cauſe why we were born:
Therefore of all hands muſt we be forſworn.
King. What did theſe rent lines ſhew ſome love of thine? (Roſaline,
Bir. Did they, quoth you? Who ſees the heavenly
That (like a rude and ſavage man of Inde)
At the firſt opening of the gorgeous Eaſt,
Bows not his vaſſal head, and ſtrucken blind,
Kiſſes the baſe ground with obedient breaſt?
What peremptory Eagle-ſighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her Majeſty?
Kin. What zeal, what fury hath inſpir'd thee now?
My Love (her Miſtris) is a gracious Moon,
She (an attending Star) ſcarce ſeen a light.
Bir. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Birone.
O but for my Love, day would turn to night,
Of all complexions the cull'd ſovereignty,
Do meet as at a Fair in her Fair cheek,
Where ſeveral Worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants, that want it ſelf doth ſeek.
Lend me the flouriſh of all gentle tongues,
Fie painted Rhetorick! O ſhe needs it not;
To things of ſale, a ſellers praiſe belongs:
She paſſes praiſe, then praiſe too ſhort doth blot.
A withered Hermite, five ſcore winters worn,
Might ſhake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varniſh Age, as if new born,
And gives the Crutch the Cradles infancy.
O 'tis the Sun that maketh all things ſhine.
Kin. By heaven, thy Love is black as Ebony.
Bir. Is Ebony like her? O word divine?
A Wife of ſuch Wood were felicity.
O who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may ſwear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that ſhe learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair that is not full ſo black.
Kin. O paradox, black as the badge of hell,
The hue of Dungeons, and the ſchool of Night:
And beauties creſt becomes the heavens well.
Bir. Devils ſooneſt tempt reſembling ſpirits of Light,
O, if in black my Ladies brow be deckt,

It mourns, that painting and uſurping hair
Should raviſh doters with a falſe aſpect:
And therefore is ſhe born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the faſhion of the dayes,
For native Blood is counted painting now:
And therefore red that would avoid diſpraiſe,
Paints its ſelf black, to imtate her brow.
Dum. To look like her are Chimney-Sweepers black.
Lon. And ſince her time, are Colliers counted bright.
King. And Ethiops of their ſweet complexion crack.
Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for Dark is light.
Bir. Your Miſtreſſes dare never come in rain,
For fear their Colours ſhould be waſht away.
Kin. 'Twere good yours did: for ſir to tell you plain,
I'lt find a fairer face not waſht to day.
Bir. I'lt prove her fair, or talk till Dooms-day here.
Kin. No Devil will fright thee then ſo much as ſhe.
Dum. I never knew man hold vile ſtuff ſo dear.
Lon. Look, here's thy love, my foot and her face ſee.
Bir. O if the ſtreets were paved with thine Eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for ſuch tread.
Dum. O vile, then as ſhe goes, what upward lyes?
The ſtreet ſhould ſee as ſhe walk'd over Head.
Kin. But what of this, are we not all in Love?
Bir. Nothing ſo ſure, and thereby all forſworn.
Kin. Then leave this chat, and good Birong now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.
Dum. A marry there, ſome flattery for this evil.
Long. O ſome authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, ſome quillets, how to cheat the devil.
Dum. Some ſalve for Perjury.
Bir. O 'tis more than need.
Have at you then affections, men at arms;
Conſider what you firſt did ſwear unto:
To faſt, to ſtudy, and to ſee no Woman;
Flat Treaſon 'gainſt the Kingly ſtate of youth.
Say, Can you faſt? your ſtomachs are too young:
And abſtinence ingenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to ſtudy (Lords)
In that each of you have forſworn his Book,
Can you ſtill dream and pore, and thereon look?
For when would you, my Lord or you, or you,
Have found the ground of ſtudys Excellence,
Without the Beauty of a Womans face?
From Womens eyes this Doctrine I derive;
They are the Ground, the Books, the Academes,
From whence doth ſpring the true Promethean fire:
Why, univerſal plodding, poyſons up
The nimble Spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long during action tires
The ſinewy vigour of the Traveller.
Now for not looking on a Womans face,
You have in that forſworn the uſe of Eyes;
And ſtudy too, the cauſer of your vow.
For where is any Author in the World,
Teaches ſuch Beauty as a Womans Eye?
Learning is but an adjunct to our ſelf,
And where we are, our Learning likewiſe is.
Then when our ſelves we ſee in Ladies Eyes,
Do we not likewiſe ſee our Learning there?
O, we have made a Vow to ſtudy, Lords,
And in that vow we have forſworn our Books:
For when would you (my Liege) or you, or you,
In Leaden contemplation have found out
Such fiery Numbers as the prompting Eyes
Of Beauties tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other ſlow Arts entirely keep the brain;
And therefore finding barren practiſers,
Scarce ſhew a harveſt of their heavy toyle.
But Love firſt learned in a Ladies Eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain:
But with the motion of all Elements,
Courſes as ſwift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their Offices.
It adds a precious ſeeing to the Eye:
A Lovers eyes will gaze an Eagle blind:
A Lovers ear will hear the loweſt ſound,
When the ſuſpitious head of Theft is ſtopt,
Loves feeling is more ſoft and ſenſible,
Than are the tender Horns of Cockled Snayles.
Loves Tongue proves dainty Bacchus, groſs in taſte;
For Valour, is not Love a Hercules?
Still climing trees in the Heſperides.
Subtil as Sphinx, as ſweet and muſical,
As bright Appollo's Lute, ſtrung with his Hair.
And when Love ſpeaks, the voice of all the gods,
Make Heaven drowſie with the Harmony.
Never durſt Poet touch a Pen to write,
Until his Ink were tempred with Loves ſighs;
O then his Lines would raviſh ſavage Ears,
And plant in Tyrants mild humility.
From Womens Eyes this Doctrine I derive:
They ſparkle ſtill the right Promethean fire,
They are the Books, the Arts, the Academes,
That ſhew, contain, and nouriſh all the World;
Elſe none at all in ought proves excellent.
Then Fools you were theſe Women to forſwear:
Or keeping what is ſworn, you will prove fools.
For wiſdoms ſake, (a word that all men love);
Or for Loves ſake, a word that loves all men;
Or for Mens ſake, the Author of theſe Women;
Or Womans ſake, by whom we men are men,
Let us once loſe our oaths, to find our ſelves;
Or elſe we loſe our ſelves, to keep our Oaths.
It is Religion to be thus forſworn,
For Charity it ſelf fulfills the Law;
And who can ſever Love from Charity?
Kin. Saint Cupid then, and Soldiers to the Field,
Bir. Advance your ſtandards, and upon them Lords;
Pell, mell, down with them: but be firſt adviſ'd,
In conflict that you get the Sun of them.
Lon. Now to plain dealing, lay theſe glozes by,
Shall we reſolve to woo theſe Girls of France,
Kin. And win them too; therefore let us deviſe,
Some entertainment for them at their Tents.
Bir. Firſt from the Park let us conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his fair Miſtreſs; in the Afternoon
We will with ſome ſtrange paſtime ſolace them;
Such as the ſhortneſs of the time can ſhape;
For Revells, Dances, Masks, and merry hours,
Forerun fair Love, ſtrewing her way with Flowers.
Kin. Away, away, no time ſhall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.
Bir. Alone, alone ſowed Cockle reap'd no Corn,
And Juſtice always whirls in equal meaſure:
Light Wenches may prove plagues to men forſworn;
If ſo, our Copper buys no better Treaſure.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scene 1.

Enter the Pedant, Curate, and Dull.

Ped. Satis quid ſufficit.

Cur. I praiſe God for you, ſir, your reaſons at Dinner have been ſharp and ſententious: pleaſant without ſcurrillity, witty without affectation, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and ſtrange without Hereſie: I did converſe this quondam day with a companion of the Kings, who is intituled, nominated or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Ped. Novi hominem tanquam te. His humour is loſty, his diſcourſe peremptory; his Tongue filed, his Eye ambitious; his Gate Majeſtical, and his general behaviour vain, vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Curat. A most singular and choice Epithet,

Draw's out his Table-book.

Ped. He draweth out the thred of his verbosity, finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such phanatical phantasms, such insociable and point devise companions, such rackers of ortagraphy, as to speak dout fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt; d e b t, not det: he clepeth a Calf, Cauf: half, hauf: neighbour vocatur nebour; neigh, abreviated ne: this is abhominable, which we would call abominable: it insinuateth me of infamy: ne intelligis, domine, to make frantick, lunatick.

Cura. Laus deo, bene intelligo.

Peda. Bome boon for boon prescian, a little scratch, 'twill serve.

Enter Braggart, Boy.

Curat. Vides-ne quis venit? Peda. Video. & gaudeo.

Brag. Chirra. Peda. Quare Chirra, not Sirrah?

Brag. Men of peace well encountred.

Peda. Most military sir, salutation.

Boy They have been at a great feast of Languages, & stole the scraps.

Clo. O they have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy Master hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: Thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon. Page. Peace, the peal begins.

Brag. Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Page. Yes, yes, he teaches boys the Horn-book: What is A b spelt backward with the horn on his head?

Peda. Ba, pueritia with a horn added.

Pag. Ba most silly Sheep, with a horn: you hear his learning.

Peda Quis, quis, thou Consonant?

Page The last of the five vowels, if you repeat them, or the fifth if I.

Peda I will repeat them: a, e, I. ——

Page The Sheep, the other two concludes it o u.

Brag. Now by the salt wave of the mediteraneum, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit, snip snap, quick and home; it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit.

Peda Thou disputest like an Infant; go, whip thy Gigg.

Page Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy circum circa a gigg of a Cuckolds horn.

Clown And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy Ginger-bread: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy Master, thou half-penny purse of wit, thou Pidgeon-egg of discretion. O, and the heavens were so pleased, that thou wert but my Bastard! What a joyful father wouldst thou make me? Go to, thou hast it ad dunghil, at the fingers ends, as they say.

Peda Oh, I smell false Latin, dunghel for unguem.

Brag. Arts-man præambula, we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the Charge-house on the top of the Mountain? Peda Or Mons-on the hill.

Brag. At your sweet pleasure, for the Mountain.

Peda I do sans question.

Brag. Sir, it is the Kings most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the Princess at her Pavillion, in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noon.

Peda The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the after-noon: the word is well cull'd, choice, sweet, and apt, I do assure you sir, I do assure.

Brag. Sir, the King is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye very good friend; for what is inward between us, let it pass—I do beseech thee, remember thy curtesie—I beseech thee apparel thy head: and among other importunate and most serious designs, and of great import indeed too—but let that pass, for I must tell thee it will please his Grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger thus dally with my excrement, with my mustachio; but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world I recount no fable, some certain special honours it pleaseth his Greatness to impart to Armado a Souldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world; but let that pass—the very all of all is—but sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, that the King would have me present the Princess (sweet chuck) with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work: Now understanding that the Curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth (as it were) I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Ped. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Holofernes, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendred by our assistants at the Kings command. and this most gallant, illustrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princess: I say none so fit, to present the Nine Worthies.

Curate Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Ped. Josua, your self: my self, and this gallant gentleman Judas Machabeus, this Swain (because of his great limb or joint) shall pass Pompey the great, the Page, Hercules.

Brag. Pardon sir, error: he is not quantity enough for that Worthies thumb he is not so big as the end of his Club.

Ped. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a Snake; and I will have an Apology for that purpose.

Pag. An excellent device: so if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, Well done Hercules, now thou crushest the Snake; that is the way to make an offence gracious, tho few have the grace to do it.

Brag. For the rest of the Worthies?

Ped. I will play three my self. Pag. Thrice worthy Gentleman.

Brag. Shall I tell you a thing? Ped. We attend.

Brag. We will have, if this fadge not, an Antique. I beseech you follow.

Ped. Via, good-man Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull Nor understood none neither sir.

Ped. Alone, we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so: or will play on the taber to the Worthies, and let them dance the hey.

Ped. Most Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away.

Exeunt.

Enter Princess, and Ladies. Scene III.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.
A Lady wall'd about with Diamonds! look you, what I have from the King. Rosa. Madam, came nothing else along with that?
Prin. Nothing but this? yes, as much love in Rime,
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all,
That he was fain to seal on Cupids name.
Rosa. That was the way to make his god-head wax,
For he hath been five thousand years a boy.
Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.
Rosa. You'll ne're be friends with him, a kild your sister.
Kath He made her melancholly, sad and heavy,
And so she died; had she been light like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might have been a Grandam ere she died.
And so may you; For a light heart lives long.
Rosa. What's your dark meaning mouse of this light word?
Kath A light condition in a beauty dark.
Rosa. We need more light to find your meaning out.
Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff:
Therefore I'll darkly end the argument.
Ros. Look what you do, you do it still i'th dark.
Kath. So do not you, for you are a light Wench.
Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.
Kat. You weigh me not, O, that's you care not for me.
Ros. Great reason; for past care, is still past cure.
Prin. Well handled both; a set of wit well played.
But Rosaline you have a favour too? Who sent it? and what is it?
Ros. I would you knew.
And if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great, be witness this.
Nay I have Verses too, I thank Birone,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground.
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairies.
O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter.
Pri. Any thing like? Ros. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise.
Prin. Beauteous Ink; a good conclusion.
Kat. Fair as a text B in a Copy-book.
Ros. Ware pensils. How? let me not die your debtor, my red Dominical, my golden letter.
O that your face were full of Oes!
Prin. A pox of that jest, and I beshrew all shrows:
But Katharine what was sent to you
From fair Dumain? Kath. Madam, this Glove.
Prin. Did he not send you twain?
Kath. Yes Madam, and moreover,
Some thousand Verses of a faithful Lover.
A huge translation of hypocrisie,
Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.
Mar. This, and these Pearls, to me sent Longaville
The letter is too long by half a mile.
Prin. I think no less; Dost thou not wish in heart
The Chain were longer, and the letter short?
Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.
Prin. We are wise girls, to mock our lovers so.
Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.
That same Birons I'll torture ere I go.
O that I knew he were but in by th' week!
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek,
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rimes,
And shape his service all to my behests,
And make him proud to make me proud with jests.
So portent like would I o'resway his state,
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.
Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,
As wit turn'd fool; folly in wisdom hatch'd,
Hath wisdoms warrant, and the help of School,
And wits own grace to grace a learned Fool.
Ros. The blood of youth burns not in such excess,
As gravities revolt to wantonness
Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strange a note,
As fool'ry in the Wise, when wit doth dote:
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove by Wit, worth in simplicity.

Scene IV.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.
Boy. O, I am ſtab'd with laughter, where's her Grace?
Prin. Thy news Boyet? Boy. Prepare, Madam, prepare.
Arm, Wenches, arm, incounters mounted are
Againſt your peace, Love doth approach, diſguis'd:
Armed in arguments, you'll be ſurpris'd.
Muſter your Wits, ſtand in your own defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards, and fly hence.
Prin. Saint Dennis, to Saint Cupid; What are they
That charge their breath againſt us? Say, ſcout, ſay.
Boy. Under the cool ſhade of a Sycamore,
I thought to cloſe mine eyes ſome half an hour;
When lo to interrupt my purpos'd reſt,
Toward that ſhade, I might behold addreſt
The King and his companions; warily
I ſtole into a neighbour thicket by,
And over-heard, what you ſhall over-hear:
That by and by diſguis'd they will be here.
Their Herald is a pretty knaviſh Page,
That well by heart hath con'd his embaſſage,
Action and accent did they teach him there,
Thus muſt thou ſpeak, and thus thy body bear,
And ever and anon they made a doubt,
Preſence majeſtical would put him out:
For, quoth the King, an Angel ſhalt thou ſee;
Yet fear not thou, but ſpeak audaciouſly.
The Boy reply'd, an Angel is not evil;
I ſhould have feard her, had ſhe been a Devil.
With that all laugh'd, and clap'd him on the ſhoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praiſes bolder.
One rub'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and ſwore,
A better ſpeech was never ſpoke before.
Another with his finger, and his thumb,
Cry'd via, we will do't, come what will come.
The third he caperd and cryed, All goes well:
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell;
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With ſuch a zealous laughter, ſo profound,
That in this ſpleen ridiculous, appears,
To check their folly, paſſions, ſolemn tears.
Prin. But what, but what, come they to viſit us?
Boy. They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus,
Like Muſcovites, or Ruſſians, as I gueſs,
Their purpoſe is to parley, court, and dance,
And every one his Love-feat will advance
Unto his ſeveral Miſtreſs: Which they'll know
By favours ſev'ral, which they did beſtow.
Prin. And will they ſo? the Gallants ſhall be taskt;
For Ladies, we will every one be maskt:
And not a man of them ſhall have the grace,
Deſpight of ſuit, to ſee a Ladies face.
Hold Roſaline, this Favour thou ſhalt wear,
And then the King will court thee for his Dear;
Hold, take thou this my ſweet, and give me thine;
So ſhall Biron take me for Roſaline.
And change your Favours too, ſo ſhall your Loves
Woo contrary, deceiv'd by theſe removes.
Roſ. Come on then, wear the favours moſt in ſight.
Kath. But in this changing, What is your intent?
Prin. The effect of my intent, is to croſs theirs;
They do it but in mocking merriment,
And mock for mock is onely my intent.
Their ſeveral Counſels they unboſom ſhall
To Loves miſtook, and ſo be mockt withal:
Upon the next occaſion that we meet
With Viſages diſplayed to talk and greet.
Roſ. But ſhall we dance, if they deſire us to't?
Prin. No, to the death we will not move a foot,
Nor to their pen'd ſpeech render we no grace:
But while 'tis ſpoke, each turn away her face.
Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.
Prin. Therefore I do it, and I make no doubt,
The reſt will ne're come in, if he be out.
There's no ſuch ſport, as ſport by ſport orethrown;
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own;
So ſhall we ſtay mocking intended game,
And they well mockt, depart away with ſhame. Sound.
Boy. The Trumpet ſounds, be maskt, the maskers come. Scene V.
Enter Blackmoors with muſick, the Boy with a ſpeech, and the reſt of the Lords diſguiſed. The Muscovites
Pag. All hail, the richeſt Beauties on the earth.
Boy. Beauties no richer than rich Taffata.
Pag. A holy parcel of the faireſt dames, that ever turn'd their backs to mortal views. The Ladies turn their back to him.
Bir. Their eyes villain, their eyes.
Pag. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views. Out.
Boy. True, out indeed.
Pag. Out of your favours heavenly ſpirits, vouchſafe not to behold.
Bir. Once to behold, rogue.
Pag. Once to behold with your ſun beamed-eyes,——
With your ſun-beamed eyes.——
Boy. They will not anſwer to that Epithete,
You were beſt call it Daughter-beamed eyes.
Pag. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.
Bir. Is this your perfectneſs? be gone you rogue.
Roſ. What would theſe ſtrangers?
Know their minds Boyet.
If they do ſpeak our language, 'tis our will
That ſome plain man recount their purpoſes.
Know what they would?
Boy. What would you with the Princeſs?
Bir. Nothing but peace, and gentle viſitation.
Roſ. What would they, ſay they?
Boy. Nothing but peace, and gentle viſitation.
Roſ. Why that they have, and bid them ſo be gone.
Boy. She ſays you have it, and you may be gone.
Kin. Say to her we have meaſured many miles,
To tread a meaſure with you on the graſs.
Boy. They ſay that they have meaſured many a mile,
To tread a meaſure with you on this graſs.
Roſ. It is not ſo. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they have meaſured many,
The meaſure then of one is eaſily told.
Boy. If to come hither, you have meaſur'd miles,
And many miles; the Princeſs bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill up one mile?
Bir. Tell her we meaſure them by weary ſteps.
Boy She hears her ſelf. Roſ. How many weary ſteps
Of many weary miles you have ore-gone,
Are numbred in the travel of one mile?
Bir. We number nothing that we ſpend for you,
Our duty is ſo rich, ſo infinite,
That we may do it ſtill without accompt.
Vouchſafe to ſhew the ſunſhine of your face,
That we (like ſavages) may worſhip it.
Roſ. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.
Kin. Bleſſed are clouds, to do as ſuch clouds do.
Vouchſafe bright Moon and theſe thy ſtars, to ſhine,
(Thoſe clouds removed) upon our watery eyne,
Roſ. O vain petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requeſts but Moon-ſhine in the water.
Kin. Then in our meaſure, vouchſafe but one change;
Thou bidſt me beg, this begging is not ſtrange.
Roſ. Play muſick then; nay you muſt do it ſoon.
Not yet no dance; thus change I like the moon.
Kin. Will you not dance; How come you thus eſtranged?
Roſ. You took the Moon at full, but now ſhe's changed.
Kin. Yet ſtill ſhe is the Moon, and I the Man.
Roſ. The muſick plays, vouchſafe ſome motion to it;
Our ears vouchſafe it. Kin. But your legs ſhould do it.
Roſ. Since you are ſtrangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice, take hands, we will not dance.
Kin. Why take you hands then?
Roſ. Onely to part friends.
Curt'ſie ſweet hearts, and ſo the Meaſure ends.
Kin. More meaſure of this meaſure; be not nice.
Roſ. We can afford no more at ſuch a price.
Kin. prize your ſelves then; what buys your company?
Roſ. Your abſence onely. Kin. That can never be.
Roſ. Then cannot we be bought; and ſo adieu,
Twice to your Viſor, and half once to you.
Kin. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.
Roſ. In private then. Kin. I am beſt pleas'd with that.
Bir. White-handed Miſtreſs, one ſweet word with thee.
Prin. Hony, and Milk, and Sugar; there is three.
Bir. Nay then two treys, and if you grow ſo nice;
Methegline, Wort, and Malmſey; well run dice:
There's half a dozen ſweets.
Prin. Seventh ſweet adieu, ſince you can cog.
I'll play no more with you. Bir. One word in ſecret.
Prin Let it not be ſweet. Bir. Thou griev'ſt my gall.
Prin. Gall's bitter. Bir. Therefore meet.
Du. Will you vouchſafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it. Dum. Fair Lady:
Mar. Say you ſo? Fair Lord; Take you that for your fair Lady.
Dum. Pleaſe it you, As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.
Ca: Mar. What, was your vizard made without a tongue?
Long. I know the reaſon Lady why you ask.
Mar. O for your reaſon, quickly ſir, I long.
Long. You have a double tongue within your mask.
And would afford my ſpeechleſs vizard half.
Mar. Veal quoth the Dutch-man; is not Veal a Calf?
Long A Calf fair Lady. Mar. No, a fair Lord Calf.
Long. Let's part the word. Mar. No, I'll not be your half;
Take all and wean it, it may prove an Ox.
Long. Look how you But your ſelf in theſe ſharp mocks.
Will you give horns chaſt Lady? Do not ſo.
Mar. Then die a Calf before your horns do grow.
Long. One word in private with you ere I die.

Mar. Bleat

Kat. Bleat ſoftly then, the Butcher hears you cry.
Boy. The tongues of mocking Wenches are as keen
As is the Razors Edge inviſible:
Cutting a ſmaller hair than may be ſeen,
Above the ſence of ſence ſo ſenſible:
Seemeth their conference, their conceits have wings,
Fleeter than Arrows, Bullets, Wind, thought, ſwifter things.
Roſ. Not one word more my Maids, break off, break off.
Bir. By Heaven all dry-beaten with pure ſcoff.
Kin. Farewel mad Wenches, you have ſimple Wits.
Scene VI. [King &c Exeunt.
Prin. Twenty Adieus, my frozen Moſcovites.
Are theſe the breed of Wits ſo wondred at?
Boy. Tapers they are, with your ſweet breaths puſt out.
Roſ. Well-liking Wits they have, groſs, groſs, fat, fat.
Prin. O Poverty in Wit, Kingly poor flout.
Will they not (think you) hang themſelves to Night?
Or ever but in Vizards ſhew their faces.
This pert Birone was out of count'nance quite.
Roſ. O! They were all in lamentable caſes.
The King was weeping-ripe for a good word.
Prin. Birone did ſwear himſelf out of all ſuit.
Mar. Dumaine was at my Service, and his Sword:
No point (quoth I;) my Servant ſtraight was mute.
Kat. Lord Longaville ſaid I came o're his Heart;
And trow you what he call'd me?
Prin. Qualm perhaps.
Kat. Yes, in good faith.
Prin. Go Sickneſs as thou art.
Roſ. Well, better wits have worn plain ſtatute caps,
But will you hear, the King is my Love ſworn.
Prin. And quick Birone hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longaville was for my Service born.
Mar. Dumain is mine as ſure as bark on Tree.
Boy. Madam, and pretty Miſtreſſes give ear,
Immediately they will again be here
In their own ſhapes; for it can never be,
They will digeſt this harſh Indignity.
Prin. Will they return?
Boy. They will, they will, God knows,
And leap for joy, though they are lame with Blows:
Therefore change Favours, and when they repair,
Blow like ſweet Roſes, in the Summer Air.
Prin. How blow? how blow? ſpeak to be underſtood.
Boy. Fair Ladies maſkt, are Roſes in their bud:
Diſmaſkt, their damask ſweet commixture ſhown,
Are Angels vailing Clouds, or Roſes blown.
Prin. Avaunt perplexity! What ſhall we do,
If they return in their own ſhapes to woo?
Roſ. Good Madam, if by me you'll be adviſ'd,
Let's mock them ſtill as well known as diſguis'd:
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Diſguis'd like Muſcovites in ſhapeleſs Gear;
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their ſhallow ſhows, and Prologue vilely pen'd,
And their rough carriage ſo ridiculous,
Should be preſented at our Tent to us.
Boy. Ladies, withdraw, the Gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to our Tents, as Roes run o're the Land.
[Exeunt.
Scene VII.
Enter the King and the reſt.

King. Fair ſir, God ſave you! Where's the Princeſs?
Boy Gone to her Tent.
Pleaſe it your Majeſty command me any Service to her?
King. That ſhe vouchſafe me audience for one word.
Boy. I will, and ſo will ſhe, I know my Lord. Exit.
Bir. This fellow picks up wit as Pigeons Peas,
And utters it again, when Jove doth pleaſe.
He is Wits Pedler, and retails his Wares
At Wakes, and Waſſels, Meetings, Markets, Fairs:
And we that ſell by groſs, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with ſuch ſhow.
This Gallant pins the Wenches on his Sleeve;
Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve.
He can carve too, and liſp: Why this is he,
That Kiſt away his hand in courteſie.
This is the Ape of Form, Monſieur the nice,
That when he plays at Tables, chides the Dice
In honourable Terms: nay he can ſing
A mean moſt meanly, and in Uſhering
Mend him who can; the Ladies call him ſweet:
The ſtairs as he treads on them kiſs his Feet.
This is the flower that ſmiles on every one,
To ſhew his Teeth as white as Whale his Bone.
And Conſciences that will dye in Debt,
Pay him the Duty of Honey-tongued Boyet.
Kin. A Blifter on his ſweet Tongue with my Heart,
That put Armados Page out of his part!
Scene VIII.
Enter Ladies.

Bir. See where it comes. Behaviour what wert thou,
Till this mad-man ſhew'd thee? And what art thou now?
Kin. All hail ſweet Madam, and fair time of day.
Prin. Fair in all Hail is foul, as I conceive.
Kin. Conſtrue my ſpeeches better if you may.
Prin. Then wiſh me better, I will give you leave.
Kin. We came to viſit you, and purpoſe now
To lead you to our Court, vouchſafe it then.
Prin. This Field ſhall hold me, and ſo hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.
Kin. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke;
The vertue of your eye muſt break my oath.
Pr. You nickname vertue: Vice you ſhould have ſpoke:
For vertues office never breaks mens troth.
Now by my Maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unſullied Lilly, I proteſt,
A World of torments though I ſhould endure,
I would not be your houſes gueſt:
So much I hate a breaking cauſe to be,
Of Heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.
Kin. O, you have liv'd in deſolation here,
Unſeen, unviſited, much to our ſhame.
Prin. Not ſo my Lord, it is not ſo I ſwear,
We have had paſtimes here, and pleaſant game,
A Meſs of Ruſſians left us but of late.
Kin. How Madam? Ruſſians?
Prin. In truth, my Lord.
Trim gallants, full of Courtſhip and of State.
Roſ. Madam ſpeak true. It is not ſo my Lord:
My Lady (to the manner of the days)
In courteſie gives undeſerving praiſe.
We four indeed confronted were with four,
In Ruſſian habit: Here they ſtay'd an hour,
And talk'd apace: and in that hour, (my Lord),
They did not bleſs us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but I think,
When they are thirſty, fools would fain have drink.
Bir. This jeſt is dry to me. Fair, gentle, ſweet,
Your wit makes wiſe things fooliſh, when we greet
With eyes beſt ſeeing, Heavens fiery Eye,
By light we loſe light; your capacity
Is of that nature, as to your huge ſtore
Wiſe things ſeem fooliſh, and rich things but poor.
Roſ. This proves you wiſe and rich; for in my Eye—
Bir. I am a Fool, and full of Poverty.
Roſ. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to ſnatch words from my Tongue.
Bir. O, I am yours, and all that I poſſeſs.
Roſ. All the Fool mine.
Bir. I cannot give you leſs.
Roſ. Which of the Vizards was it that you wore?
Bir. Where? when? What Vizard?
Why demand you this?

* Vailing is here to be diſtinguiſh'd from Veiling & carries the ſame ſenſe as in the phraſe vailing a Bonnet, that is putting off, lowering, ſinking down.

Roſ. There, then, that vizard, that ſuperfluous caſe,
That hid the worſe, and ſhew'd the better face.
Kin. We are deſcried,
They'll mock us now down right.
Dum. Let us confeſs and turn it to a jeſt.
Prin. Amaz'd my Lord? Why looks your Highneſs ſad?
Roſ. Help hold his brows, he'll ſwound: why look you pale?
Sea-ſick I think, coming from Muſcovy.
Bir. Thus pour the ſtars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of braſs hold longer out?
Here ſtand I, Lady, dart thy skill at me,
Bruiſe me with ſcorn, confound me with a flout,
Thruſt thy ſharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
And I will wiſh thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Ruſſian habit wait.
O! never will I truſt to ſpeeches pen'd,
Nor to the motion of a School-boys tongue,
Nor never come in vizards to my friend,
Nor woo in rime like a blind-harpers ſong,
Taffata phraſes, ſilken terms preciſe,
Three-pil'd Hyperboles, ſpruce affection;
Figures pedantical, theſe ſummer flyes,
Have blown me full of maggot oſtentation,
I do forſwear them, and I here proteſt,
By this white Glove (how white the hand God knows)
Henceforth my wooing mind ſhall be expreſt
In ruſſet yeas, and honeſt kerſie noes.
And to begin Wench, (ſo God help me law,)
My love to thee is ſound, ſans crack or flaw.
Roſ. Sans, Sans, I pray you.
Bir. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage: bear with me, I am ſick.
I'll leave it by degrees: both let us ſee,
Write Lord have mercy on us, and thoſe three,
They are infected, in their hearts it lies,
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
Theſe Lords are viſited, you are not free;
For the Lords tokens on you both I ſee.
Prin. No, they are free that gave theſe tokens to us.
Bir. Our ſtates are forfeit, ſeek not to undo us.
Roſ. It is not ſo; for how can this be true,
That you ſtand forfeit, being thoſe that ſue?
Bir. Peace, for I will not have to do with you.
Roſ. Nor ſhall not, if I do as I intend.
Bir. Speak for your ſelves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us ſweet Madam, for our rude tranſgreſſion, ſome fair excuſe.
Prin. The faireſt is confeſſion.
Were you not here but even now diſguis'd?
Kin. Madam, I was.
Prin. And were you well adviſ'd?
Kin. I was, fair Madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whiſper in your Ladies ear?
Kin. That more than all the world I did reſpect her.
Prin. When ſhe ſhall challenge this, you will reject her.
Kin. Upon my honour no.
Prin Peace, peace, forbear:
Your oath once broke, you force not to forſwear.
Kin. Deſpiſe me when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will, and therefore keep it, Roſaline,
What did the Ruſſian whiſper in your ear?
Roſ. Madam, he ſwore that he did hold me dear
As precious eye-ſight, and did value me
Above this World: adding there moreover,
That he would wed me, or elſe die my Lover.
Prin. God give thee joy of him; the Noble Lord
Moſt honourably doth uphold his word.
Kin. What mean you Madam?
By my life, my troth,
I never ſwore this Lady ſuch an oath.
Roſ. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this: But take it ſir again.
Kin. My faith, and this, to th' Princeſs I did give;
I knew her by this Jewel on her ſleeve.
Prin. Pardon me ſir, this Jewel did ſhe wear;
And Lord Birone (I thank him) is my dear.
What? Will you have me, or your Pearl again?
Bir. Neither of either; I remit both twain.
I ſee the trick on't: Here was a conſent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To daſh it like a Chriſtmaſs Comedy.
Some carry-tale, ſome pleaſe-man, ſome ſlight Zany,
Some mumble-news, ſome trencher-knight, ſome Dick
That ſmiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick
To make my Lady laugh, when ſhe's diſpos'd,
Told our intents before; which once diſclos'd,
The Ladies did change Favours, and then we
Following the ſigns, woo'd but the ſign of ſhe.
Now to our perjury, to add more terror,
We are again forſworn in will and error.
Much upon this it is: and might not you
Foreſtal our ſport, to make us thus untrue?
Do not you know my Ladies foot byth' ſquare?
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And ſtand between her back ſir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jeſting merrily?
You put our Page out: go, you are allow'd,
Die when you will, a ſmock ſhall be your ſhrow'd.
You leer upon me, do you? There's an eye
Wounds like a Leaden ſword.
Boy. Full merrily hath this brave manager, this carreer been run.
Bir. Lo, he is tilting ſtraight. Peace, I have done.

Enter Clown.

Welcome pure wit, thou prat'ſt a fair fray.
Clo. O Lord ſir, they would know
Whether the three Worthies ſhall come in, or no.
Bir. What, are there but three?
Clo. No ſir, but it is vara fine,
For every one purſents three.
Bir. And three times thrice is nine.
Clo. Not ſo ſir, under correction ſir, I hope it is not ſo.
You cannot beg us ſir, I can aſſure you, ſir, we know what we know: I hope three times thrice ſir.——
Bir. Is not nine.
Clo. Under correction ſir, we know where-until it doth amount.
Bir. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.
Clo. O Lord ſir, it were pity you ſhould get your living by reckoning ſir.
Bir. How much is it?
Clo. O Lord ſir, the parties themſelves, the actors ſir, will ſhew where-until it doth amount; for mine own part, I am (as they ſay, but to perfect one man in one poor man) Pompion the great ſir.
Bir. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Clo. It pleaſed them to think me worthy of Pompey the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to ſtand for him.
Bir. Go, bid them prepare. Exit.
Clo. We will turn it finely off ſir, we will take ſome care.
King. Birone, they will ſhame us;
Let them not approach.
Bir. We are ſhame-proof, my Lord: and 'tis ſome policy, to have one ſhow worſe than the King and his company.
Kin. I ſay they ſhall not come.
Prin. Nay my good Lord, let me o're rule you now;
That ſport beſt pleaſes, that doth leaſt know how.
Where Zeal ſtrives to content, and the contents

Dies,

Dies, in the Zeal of that which it preſents;
Their form confounded, makes moſt form in Mirth;
When great things labouring periſh in their Birth.
Bir. A right deſcription of our ſport my Lord.

Scene IX.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Anointed, I implore ſo much expence of thy Royal ſweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.
Prin. Doth this man ſerve God?
Bir. Why ask you?
Prin. He ſpeaks not like a man of God's making.
Brag. That's all one, my fair ſweet honey Monarch; For I proteſt, the Schoolmaſter is exceeding fantaſtical: Too too vain, too too vain. But we will put it, (as they ſay), to Fortuna delaguart. I wiſh you the peace of mind moſt Royal Cupplement.
King. Here is like to be a good preſence of Worthies; He preſents Hector of Troy, the Swain Pompey the great, the Pariſh-Curate, Alexander, Armadoes Page Hercules, the Pedant Judas Machabeus. And if theſe four Worthies in their firſt ſhew thrive, theſe Four will change Habits, and preſent the other Five.
Bir. There is not five in the firſt ſhew.
King. You are deceived, 'tis not ſo.
Bir. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Prieſt, the Fool, and the Boy.
A bare throw at Novum, and the whole World again,
Cannot prick out five ſuch, take each one in's vein.
King. The Ship is under Sail, and here ſhe comes amain.

Enter Pompey.

Clo. I Pompey am.
Boy. You lie, you are not he.
Clo. I Pompey am.
Boy. With Libbards head on Knee.
Bir. Well ſaid old mocker,
I muſt needs be friends with thee.
I Pompey am, Pompey ſurnam'd the big.
Du. The Great.
Clo. It is great ſir; Pompey ſurnam'd the great,
That oft in Field, with Targe and Shield,
did make my Foe to ſweat:
And travelling along this coaſt, I here am come by chance;
And lay my Arms before the Legs of this ſweet Laſs of France.
If your Ladyſhip would ſay thanks Pompey, I had done.
Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.
Clo. 'Tis not ſo much worth; but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in great.
Bir. My hat to a Half-penny, Pompey proves the beſt Worthy.

Enter Curate, for Alexander.

Curat. When in the World I liv'd, I was the World's Commander.
By Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, I ſpread my conquering Might:
My Eſcutcheon plain declares that I am Aliſander.
Boy. Your noſe ſaies no, you are not:
For it ſtands too right.
Bir. Your Noſe ſmells no, in this moſt tender ſmelling Knight.
Prin. The Conqueror is diſmaid:
Proceed good Alexander.
Cur. When in the World I lived, I was the Worlds Commander.
Boy. Moſt true, 'tis right; you were ſo Aliſander.
Bir. Pompey the great.
Clo. Your Servant and Coſtard.
Bir. Take away the Conqueror, take away Aliſander.
Clo. O Sir, you have overthrown Aliſander the Conqueror: you will be ſtrap'd out of the painted cloth for this; your Lion that holds the Poll-ax ſitting on a Cloſe-ſtool, will be given to Ajax.X He will be the ninth Worthy. A Conqueror, and afraid to ſpeak? Run away for ſhame Aliſander. There an't ſhall pleaſe you: a fooliſh mild man, an honeſt man, look you, and ſoon daſh'd. He is a marvellous good Neighbour, inſooth. and a very good Bowler: but for Aliſander, alas you ſee, how 'tis a little ore-parted. But there are Worthies a coming, will ſpeak their mind in ſome other ſort. he's
Clo. Stand aſide good Pompey. Exit Clo.

Enter Pedant for Judas, and the Boy for Hercules.

Ped. Great Hercules is preſented by this Imp,
Whoſe Club kill'd Cerberus that three-Headed Canus;
And when he was a Babe, a Child, a ſhrimp,
Thus did he ſtrangle Serpents in his Manus:
Quoniam, he ſeemeth in minority;
Ergo, I come with this Apology.
Keep ſome ſtate in thy Exit, and vaniſh. Exit Boy.
Ped Judas I am.
Dum. A Judas?
Ped. Not Iſcariot Sir.
Judas I am, ycliped Machabeus.
Dum. Judas, Machabeus clipt, is plain Judas?
Bir. A kiſſing Traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?
Ped. Judas I am.
Dum. The more ſhame for you Judas.
Ped. What mean you ſir?
Boy. To make Judas hang himſelf.
Ped. Begin ſir, you are my Elder:
Bir. Well followed, Judas was hang'd on an Elder.
Ped. I will not be put out of countenance.
Bir. Becauſe thou haſt no Face.
Ped. What is this.
Boy. A Cittern Head.
Dum. The head of a Bodkin.
Bir. A Deaths face in a Ring.
Lon. The face of an old Roman coyn, ſcarce ſeen.
Boy. The Pummel of Caſars Faulchion.
Dum. The carv'd bone face on a Flask.
Bir. St. Georges half Cheek in a brooch.
Dum. I and in a brooch of Lead.
Bir. Ay, and worn in the Cap of a Tooth-drawer.
And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance.
Ped. You have put me out of countenance.
Bir. Falſe, we have given thee faces.
Ped. But you have outfac'd them all.
Bir. And thou wert a Lion we would do ſo.
Boy. Therefore as he is an Aſs, let him go:
And ſo adieu, ſweet Jude; Nay, why doſt thou ſtay?
Dum. For the latter end of his Name.
Bir. For the Aſs to the Jude; give it him. Jud-as away.
Ped. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.
Boy. A light for Monſieur Judas, it grows dark he may ſtumble.
Prin. Alas poor Machabeus, how hath he been baited.

Enter Braggart.

Bir. Hide thy Head Achilles, here comes Hector in Arms.
Dum. Tho my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.
King. Hector was but a Trojan in reſpect of this.
Boy. But this is Hector?
Kin. I think Hector was not ſo clean timber'd,
Lon. His Leg is too big for Hector.
Dum. More Calf certain.
Boy. No; he is beſt indued with the ſmall.
Bir. This can't be Hector.

X A ridicule upon the Arms given to Alexander in the History of the Nine Worthys
Y ends in a wretched quibble on the word Ajax & A-jaxes.

Dum. He's a god or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, gave Hector a gift.

Dum. A gilt Nutmeg.

Bir. A Lemon.

Lon. Stuck with Cloves.

Dum. No cloven.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, gave Hector a gift, the Heir of Illion;
A man so breathed, that certain he would fight: yea
From Morn 'till Night, out of his Pavillion.
I am that Flower.

Dum. That Mint.

Long. That Columbine.

Brag. Sweet Lord Longaville rein thy Tongue.

Lon. I must rather give it the Rein; for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay and Hector's a Grey-hound.

Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten,
Sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried:
But I will forward with my device;
Sweet Royalty, bestow on me the sence of Hearing.

~~Birone stops forth.~~

Prin. Speak brave Hector; we are much delighted.

Brag. I do adore thy sweet Graces slipper.

Boy. Loves here by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the Yard.

Brag. This Hector far surmounted Hannibal.

The party is gone.

Clo. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two Months on her way.

Brag. What meanest thou?

Clow. Faith unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor Wench is cast away; she's quick, the Child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Brag. Dost thou infamonize me among Potentates? Thou shalt die.

Clo. Then shall Hector be whipt for Jaquenetta that is quick by him; and hang'd for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey.

Boy. Renowned Pompey.

Bir. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Bir. Pompey is moved, more Ates, more Ates stir them on, stir them on.

Dum. Hector will Challenge him.

Bir. Ay, if I have no more mans blood in's belly, than will sup a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I do Challenge thee.

Clo. I will not fight with a Pole like a Northern man; I'll slash; I'll do it by the Sword: I pray you let me borrow my Arms again.

Dum Room for the incensed Worthies.

Clo. I'll do it in my Shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey.

Pag. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the Combat? what mean you? you will lose your Reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Soldiers, pardon me, I will not Combate in my Shirt.

Du. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Bir. What reason have you for't?

Bra. The naked truth of it is, I have no Shirt, I go woolward for Penance.

Boy. True, and it was enjoyned him in Rome for want of Linnen; since when, I'll be sworn he wore none, but a Dishclout of Jaquenetta's, and that he wears next his Heart for a favour.

Scene X.

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur Marcade.

Mar. God save you Madam.

Prin. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interruptest our merriment.

Marc. I am sorry Madam, for the news I bring is heavy in in my Tongue. The King your Father.— — —

Prin. Dead for my life.

Mar. Even so: My tale is told.

Bir. Worthies away, the Scene begins to Cloud.

Bra. For mine own part, I breathe free Breath; I have seen the day of wrong, through the little hole of Discretion, and I will right my self like a Soldier.

[Exeunt Worthies.

Kin. How fare's your Majesty?

Prin. Boyet prepare, I will away to night.

Kin. Madam, not so, I do beseech you, stay.

Prin. Prepare I say. I thank you, gracious Lords,
For all your fair endeavours; and entreats,
Out of a new sad soul, that you vouchsafe,
In your rich Wisdom to excuse or hide,
The liberal opposition of our spirits;
If over-boldly we have born our selves,
In the converse of breath, (your gentleness
Was guilty of it.), Farewel worthy Lord;
An heavy heart bears not an ~~humble~~ nimble Tongue:
Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks,
For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

Kin. The extream parts of time, extreamly forms
All causes to the purpose of his speed,
And often at his very loose decides
That, which long process ~~of time~~ could not arbitrate.
And though the mourning brow of progeny
Forbid the smiling courtesie of Love;
The holy suit which fain it would convince,
Yet since Love's Argument was first on foot,
Let not the cloud of Sorrow justle it
From what it purposed: since to wail friends lost,
Is not by much so wholesome, profitable,
As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not, my griefs are double.

Bir. Honest plain words, best pierce the eares of grief;
And by these badges understand the King,
For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
Play'd foul play with our oaths: your beauty, Ladies
Hath much deformed us, fashioning our humours
Even to the opposed end of our intents;
And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,
As Love is full of unbefitting strains,
All wanton as a child, skipping and vain.
Form'd by the Eye, and therefore like the Eye,
Full of straying shapes, of habits, and of forms,
Varying in Subjects as the Eye doth rowl,
To every varied object in his glance;
Which party-coated, presence of loose Love
Put on by us, if in your heavenly eyes,
Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities;
Those heavenly eyes that look into these faults,
Suggested us to make: therefore Ladies,
Our Love being yours, the Errour that Love makes
Is likewise yours. We to our selves prove false,
By being once false, for ever to be true
To those that make us both, fair Ladies, you;
And even that falshood in it self a Sin,
Thus purifies it self, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your Letters, full of Love:
Your favours, the Embassadors of Love:
And in our Maiden Council rated them
At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesie,
As bumbast, and as lining to the time:
But more devout than these are our respects
Have we not been; and therefore met your Loves
In their own fashion, like a Merriment.

Du.

Du. Our Letters Madam, shew'd much more than jest.
Long. So did our looks.
Rosa. We did not coat them so.
King. Now at the latest Minute of the Hour,
Grant us your loves.
Prin. A time methinks too short,
To make a World-with-out end bargain in;
No, no, my Lord, your Grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this;
If for my Love (as there is no such cause)
You will do ought, this shall you do for me;
Your Oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked Hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the World;
There stay, until the Twelve Celestial Signs
Have brought about their annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life,
Change not your offer made in heat of Blood;
If Frosts, and Fasts, hard Lodging, and thin Weeds
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your Love,
But that it bear this trial, and last love;
Then at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge by these Deserts;
And by this Virgin palm, now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and till that instant shut
My woful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the Tears of Lamentation,
For the remembrance of my Fathers death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part,
Neither intituled in the others heart.
King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye:
Hence ever then, my Heart is in thy Breast.
Bir. And what to my Love? and what to me?
Ros. You must be purged too, your Sins are rack'd,
You are attaint with fault and Perjury:
Therefore if you my favour mean to get,
A Twelve-month shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.
Dum. But what to me my Love? but what to me?
Kat. A Wife, a Beard, fair Health, and Honesty;
With three-fold love, I wish you all these three.
Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle Wife?
Kat. Not so, my Lord; a Twelve-month and a day,
I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd Wooers say.
Come when the King doth to my Lady come;
Then if I have much love, I'll give you some.
Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.
Kath. Yet swear not, least ye be forsworn again.
Long. What says Maria?
Mari. At the Twelve-months end,
I'll change my black Gown, for a faithful Friend.
Lon. I'll stay with patience: but the time is long.
Mari. The liker you; few taller are so young.
Bir. Studies my Lady? Mistress, look on me,
Behold the Window of my Heart, mine Eye:
What humble Suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for my Love.
Rosa. Oft have I heard of you my Lord Birone,
Before I saw you; and the Worlds large tongue
Proclaims you for a man repleat with mocks,
Full of comparisons, and wounding flouts,
Which you on all Estates will execute,
That lye within the mercy of your Wit;
To weed this Wormwood from your fruitful brain,
And therewithal to win me, if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won;
You shall this Twelve-month-term from day to day,
Visit the speechless Sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your Wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.
Bir. To move wild laughter in the throat of Death?
It cannot be, it is impossible.
Mirth cannot move a Soul in Agony.
Rosa. Why that's the way to choak a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers give to Fools:
A jests prosperity, lies in the Ear
Of him that hears it, never in the Tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
Deaft with the clamours of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle scorns; continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withal;
But if they will not, throw away that Spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your Reformation.
Bir. A Twelve month? Well, befall what will befall,
I'll jest a Twelve-month in an Hospital.
Prin. Ay sweet my Lord, and so I take my leave. To the Kin
King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.
Bir. Our wooing doth not end like an old Play:
Jack hath not Jill: these Ladies courtesie
Might well have made our sport a Comedy.
King. Come, sir, it wants a Twelve-month and a day,
And then 'twill end.
Bir. That's too long for a Play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Majesty vouchsafe me.
Prin. Was not that Hector?
Dum. The worthy Knight of Troy.
Brag. I will kiss thy Royal Finger, and take leave.
I am a Votary; I have vow'd to Jaquenetta to hold the Plough for her sweet love three years. But most esteemed greatness, will you hear the Dialogue that the two Learned men have compiled, in praise of the Owl and the Cuckow? It should have followed in the end of our Shew.
Kin. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Brag. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter.
This, Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owl,
The other by the Cuckow.
Ver. begin.

The Song.

When Daisies pied, and Violets blew,
And Cuckow-buds of yellow hue:
And Lady Smocks all Silver white,
Do paint the Meadows with delight;
The Cuckow then on every Tree
Mocks Married men; for thus Sings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a Married Ear.

When Shepherds Pipe on Oaten Straws,
And merry Larks are Ploughmens Clocks:
When Turtles tread, and Rooks and Daws,
And maidens bleach their Summer Smocks;
The Cuckow then on every Tree
Mocks married men; for thus Sings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a Married Ear.

Winter.

When Icickles hang by the Wall,
And Dick the Shepheard blows his Nail;
And Tom bears Logs into the Hall,
And Milk comes frozen home in Pail:

When

When blood is nipt, and wayes be foul,
Then nightly ſings the ſtaring Owle
Tu-whit, to-who.
A merry note,
While greaſie Jone doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the Wind doth blow,
And coſting drowns the parſons Saw:
And Birds ſit brooding in the Snow,
And Martians Noſe looks red and raw;

When roſted Crabs hiſs in the bowl,
Then nightly ſings the ſtaring Owle,
Tu-whit, to-who;
A merry note;
While greaſie Jone doth keel the pot.

Brag. The words of Mercury
Are harſh after the Songs of Apollo:
You that way; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

A Midſummers nights Dream.

Actus Primus. Scene 1. Athens.

Enter Theſeus, Hippolita, with others. philostrate

Theſeus.

NOw fair Hippolita, our nuptial hour
Draws on apace; four happy dayes bring in how ſlow
Another Moon: but oh, me thinks,
This old Moon wanes! She lingers my deſires
Like to a ſtep-dame, or a Dowager,
Long withering out a young mans re-venue.

Hip. Four dayes will quickly ſteep themſelves in nights,
Four nights will quickly dream away the time:
And then the Moon, like to a ſilver bow,
Now bent in heaven, ſhall behold the night
Of our ſolemnities.

The. Go, Philoſtrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble ſpirit of mirth,
Turn melancholly forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pomp. Exit Phi:
Hippolita, I woo'd thee with my ſword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lyſander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theſeus, our renowned Duke.
The. Thanks good Egeus; what's the news with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint
Againſt my child, my daughter Hermia.

Stand forth Demetrius.

My Noble Lord,
This man hath my conſent to marry her.

Stand forth Lyſander.

And my gracious Duke,
This hath bewitch'd the boſome of my child:
Thou, thou, Lyſander, thou haſt given her rimes,
And interchang'd love-token with my child:
Thou haſt by Moon-light at her window ſung,
With faining voice, verſes of faining love,
And ſtolne the impreſſion of her fantaſie,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds conce its,
Knacks, trifles, Noſegayes, ſweet-meats, (meſſengers
Of ſtrong prevailment in unhardned youth)
With cunning haſt thou filch'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience, (which is due to me)
To ſtubborn harſhneſs. And my gracious Duke,
Be it ſo ſhe will not here before your Grace,
Conſent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priviledge of Athens,
As ſhe is mine, I may diſpoſe of her:
Which ſhall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediatley provided in that caſe.

The. What ſay you Hermia? be advis'd fair Maid.
To you your Father ſhould be as a God;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted; and within his power,
To leave the figure, or diſfigure it:
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.

Her. So is Lyſander.

The. In himſelf he is;
But in this kind, wanting your Fathers voice,
The other muſt be held the worthier.

Her. I would my Father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes muſt with his judgement look.

Her. I do intreat your Grace to pardon me;
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modeſty
In ſuch a preſence here to plead my thoughts:
But I beſeech your Grace, that I may know
The worſt that may befall me in this caſe,
If I refuſe to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the ſociety of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, queſtion your deſires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, (yield to your Fathers choice)
You can endure the livery of a Nun,
For aye to be in ſhady Cloiſter mew'd,
To live a barren ſiſter all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitleſs Moon.

Thrice

Thrice bleſſed they that maſter ſo their Blood,
To undergo ſuch Maiden Pilgrimage!
But earthlier happy is the Roſe diſtill'd,
Than that which withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, Lives, and Dies, in ſingle bleſſedneſs.
Her. So will I grow, ſo live, ſo die, my Lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin Patent up
Unto his Lordſhip, to whoſe unwiſhd yoak.
My ſoul conſents not to give ſovereignty.
The. Take time to pauſe, and by the next New Moon,
The ſealing day betwixt my Love and me,
For everlaſting bond of fellowſhip,
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For diſobedience to your Fathers will,
Or elſe to wed Demetrius as he would,
Or on Dianas Altar to proteſt
For aye, auſterity and ſingle life.
Dem. Relent, ſweet Hermia, and Lyſander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.
Lyſ. You have her Fathers Love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermias: do you marry him.
Egeus. Scornful Lyſander! true, he hath my Love;
And what is mine, my Love ſhall render him.
And ſhe is mine, and all my right of her
I do eſtate unto Demetrius.
Lyſ. I am my Lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well poſſeſt: my Love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius:
And (which is more than all theſe boaſts can be),
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why ſhould not I then proſecute my right?
Demetrius, I'le avouch it to his head,
Made Love to Nedars Daughter, Helena,
And won her ſoul; and ſhe (ſweet Lady) dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in Idolatry,
Upon this ſpotted and inconſtant man.
The. I muſt confeſs, that I have heard ſo much,
And with Demetrius thought to have ſpoke thereof;
But being over-full of ſelf-affairs,
My mind did loſe it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you ſhall go with me;
I have ſome private ſchooling for you both.
For you fair Hermia, look you arm your ſelf,
To fit your fancies to your Fathers will;
Or elſe the Law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of ſingle life.
Come my Hippolita, what cheer my Love?
Demetrius and Egeus go along;
I muſt employ you in ſome buſineſs
Againſt our nuptials, and conſer with you
Of ſomething nearly that concerns your ſelves.
Ege. With duty and deſire we follow you. Exeunt.

Manet Lyſander and Hermia. Scene II.

Ly. How now my Love? VVhy is your cheek ſo pale?
How chance the Roſes there do fade ſo faſt?
Her. Belike for want of Rain, which I could well
Beteem them from the tempeſt of mine eyes.
Lyſ. Hermia, for ought that ever I could Read,
Could ever hear by Tale or Hiſtory,
The courſe of true love never did run ſmooth,
But either it was different in blood.
Her. O croſs! too high to be enthrall'd to love.
Lyſ. Or elſe miſgraffed, in reſpect of years.
Her. O ſpight! too old to be engag'd to young.
Lyſ. Or elſe it ſtood upon the choice of [illegible] friends.
Her. O hell! to chooſe love by anothers eye!
Lyſ. Or if there were a ſympathy in choice,
VVar, death, or ſickneſs, did lay ſiege to it;
Making it momentary, as a ſound:
Swift as a ſhadow, ſhort as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a ſpleen) unfolds both heaven and earth;
And ere a man hath power to ſay, behold,
The jaws of darkneſs do devour it up,
So quick bright things come to confuſion.
Her. If then true Lovers have been ever croſt,
It ſtands as an Edict in deſtiny:
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Becauſe it is a cuſtomary croſs,
As due to Love, as thoughts, and dreams, and ſighs,
VViſhes and Tears, poor Fancies followers!
Lyſ. A good perſwaſion; therefore hear me Hermia,
I have a VVidow Aunt, a Dowager,
Of great revenue, and ſhe hath no Child;
From Athens is her houſe remov'd ſeven leagues,
And ſhe reſpects me as her only Son.
There gentle Hermia, may I marry thee,
And to that place, the ſharp Athenian Law
Cannot purſue us. If thou lov'ſt me, then
Steal forth thy Fathers houſe to morrow night;
And in the VVood, a League without the Town,
(VVhere I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do obſervance to a morn of May)
There will I ſtay for thee.
Her. My good Lyſander,
I ſwear to thee, by Cupid's ſtrongeſt bow,
By his beſt arrow with the golden head,
By the ſimplicity of Venus Doves,
By that which knitteth ſouls, and proſpers love,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queen,
VVhen the falſe Trojan under ſail was ſeen;
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
(In number more than ever women ſpoke);
In that ſame place thou haſt appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meet with thee.
Lyſ. Keep promiſe, Love: look here comes Helena.

Scene III. Enter Helena.

Her. God ſpeed fair Helena! whither away?
Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unſay;
Demetrius loves you fair; O happy fair!
Your eyes are load-ſtars, and your tongues ſweet air
More tuneable then Lark to Shepherds ear,
VVhen VVheat is green, when Haw thorn Buds appear.
Sickneſs is catching: O, were favour ſo,
Yours would I'd catch, fair Hermia ere I go,
My ear ſhould catch your voice, my eye, your eye,
My tongue ſhould catch, your tongues ſweet melody.
VVere the VVorld mine, Demetrius being bated,
The reſt I'd give to be to you tranſlated.
O teach me how you look, and with what art
You ſway the motion of Demetrius heart.
Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me ſtill.
Hel. O that your frowns would teach my ſmiles ſuch (ſkill!
Her. I give him curſes, yet he gives me love.
Hel. O, that my prayers could ſuch affection move.
Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly Helena is none of mine. (mine!
Hel. None but your beauty, would that fault were
Her. Take comfort; he no more ſhall ſee my face,
Lyſander and my ſelf will fly this place.
Before the time I did Lyſander ſee,
Seem'd Athens like a paradiſe to me.
O then, what graces in my Love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a Heaven into Hell?
Lyſ. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold;
To morrow night when Phœbe doth behold
Her ſilver viſage in the watry glaſs,
Decking with liquid pearl, the bladed graſs
(A time that Lovers flights doth ſtill conceal)
Through Athens gate, have we devis'd to ſteal.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Upon faint Primroſe beds were wont to lye,
Emptying our boſomes of their counſel ſweld;

There

There my Lyſander, and my ſelf ſhall meet,
And thence from Athens turn away our eyes,
To ſeek new friends and ſtrange companies.
Farewel ſweet play-fellow, pray thou for us,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keep word Lyſander, we muſt ſtarve our ſight,
From lovers food, till morrow deep midnight.
Exit Hermia.

Lyſ. I will my Hermia. Helena adieu;
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you.
Exit Lyſander.

Hell. How happy ſome, o're other ſome can be?
Through Athens I am thought as fair as ſhe.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not ſo:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes;
So I, admiring of his qualities:
Things baſe and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can tranſpoſe to form and dignity;
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind:
Nor hath loves mind of any judgment taſte;
Wings and no eyes, figure, unheedy haſt.
And therefore is Love laid to be a Child,
Becauſe in choice he often is beguil'd,
As waggiſh Boys themſelves in game forſwear;
So the Boy Love is perjur'd every where.
For ere Demetrius lookt on Hermias eyne,
He hail'd down oths that he was only mine.
And when this Hail ſome heat from Hermia felt,
So he diſſolv'd, and ſhowrs of oaths did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermias flight:
Then to the Wood will he to morrow night
Purſue her; and for this intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expence:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his ſight thither, and back again.
Exit.

Scene IV.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Joyner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the Bellows-mender, Snowt the Tinker, and Starveling the Taylor.

Qu. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were beſt to call them generally, man by man, according to the ſcrip.

Qu. Here is the ſcrowl of every mans name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Dutcheſs, on his wedding day at night.

Bot. Firſt, good Peter Quince, ſay what the Play treats on; then Read the Names of the Actors; and ſo grow on to appoint.

Qu. Marry our Play is the moſt lamentable Comedy, and moſt cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work I aſſure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quince, call forth your Actors by the ſcrowl. Maſters ſpread your ſelves.

Quince. Anſwer as I call you. Nick Bottom the Weaver.

Bottom. Ready: name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quince. You Nick Bottom are ſet down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus, a Lover, or a Tyrant?

Quince. A Lover that kills himſelf moſt gallantly for Love.

Bot. That will ask ſome tears in the true performing of it; if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move ſtorms; I will condole in ſome meaſure. To the reſt yet, my chief humour is for a Tyrant; I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a Cat in, to make all ſplit the raging Rocks, and ſhivering Shocks ſhall break the Locks of Priſon Gates, and Phibbus carre ſhall ſhine from far, and make and mar the ſooliſh Fates. * This was lotty. Now name the reſt of the Players. This is Ercles vein, a Tyrants vein; a Lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute the Bellows-mender.

Flu. Here Peter Quince.

Qu. You muſt take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby, a wandring Knight?

Qu. It is the Lady that Pyramus muſt Love.

Flu. Nay faith, let not me play a woman, I have a Beard coming.

Qu. That's all one, you ſhall play it in a Maſk, and you may ſpeak as ſmall as you will.

Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too; I'll ſpeak in a monſtrous little voice, Thiſbe, Thiſbe, ah Pyramus my lover dear, thy Thisby dear, and Lady dear.

Quin. No, no, you muſt play Pyramus; and Flute you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Qu. Robin Starveling, the Taylor.

Star. Here Peter Quince.

Quince. Robin Starveling, you muſt play Thisbys Mother?

Tom Snowt, the Tinker.

Snowt. Here Peter Quince.

Qu. You Pyramus's father; my ſelf, Thisbis father; Snug, the Joyner, you the Lyons part; and I hope there is a Play fitted.

Snug. Have you the Lyons part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am ſlow of ſtudy.

Qu. You may do it Extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the Lyon too, I will roar, that I will do any mans heart good to hear me. I will roar, that I will make the Duke ſay, Let him roar again, let him roar again.

Qu. If you ſhould do it too terribly, you would fright the Dutcheſs and the Ladies, that they would ſhriek, and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every mothers ſon.

Bottome. I grant you friends, if that you ſhould fright the Ladies out of their Wits, they would have no more diſcretion but to hang us; but I will aggravate my voice ſo, that I will roar you as gently as any ſucking Dove; I will roar and 'twere any Nightingale.

Quince. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Pyramus is a ſweet-fac'd man, a proper man as one ſhall ſee in a ſummers day; a moſt lovely Gentleman-like-man; therefore you muſt needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What Beard were I beſt to play it in?

Quin Why, what you will.

Bot. I will diſcharge it, in either your ſtraw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple in grain beard, or your French-crown colour'd beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French-Crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-fac'd. But maſters here are your parts, and I am to entreat you, requeſt you, and deſire you, to con them by to morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the Town, by Moon-light, there we will rehearſe; for if we meet in the City, we ſhall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a Bill of properties, ſuch as our Play wants. I pray you fail me not.

Bot. We will meet, and there we may rehearſe more obſcenely and courageouſly. Take pains, be perfect, adieu.

Quin. At the Dukes oak we meet.

Bot. Enough, hold or cut bow-ſtrings. * Exeunt.

* A proverbial phraſe ſignifying, without fail, or in all Events.

* This was probably a piece of nonſensical bombast taken out of ſome fooliſh play known at that time.

Actus Secundus. Scene I.
The Wood.

Enter a Fairie at one door, and Robin Good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now, ſpirit, whither wander you?
Fai. Over hill, over dale, through buſh, through briar,
Over park, over pale, through flood, through fire,
I do wander every where, ſwifter than the Moons ſphere;
And I ſerve the Fairy Queen, to dew her orbs upon the green;
The Cowſlips tall, her penſioners be,
In their gold coats, ſpots you ſee,
Thoſe be Rubies, Fairy favours,
In thoſe freckles, live their ſavours:
I muſt go ſeek ſome dew drops here, & There
And hang a pearl in every cowſlips ear.
Farewel thou Lob of ſpirits, I'le be gon,
Our Queen and all her Elves come here anon.
Rob. The King doth keep his Revels here to night,
Take heed the Queen come not within his ſight,
For Oberon is paſſing fell and wrath,
Becauſe that ſhe, as her attendant, hath
A lovely boy ſtoln from an Indian King,
She never had ſo ſweet a changeling;
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of this train, to trace the Forreſts wild.
But ſhe (per-force) with-holds the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or ſpangled ſtar-light ſheen,
But they do ſquare, that all their Elves for fear
Creep into Acorn cups and hide them there.
Fai. Either I miſtake your ſhape and making quite,
Or elſe you are that ſhrew'd and knaviſh ſpirit
Call'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not he,
That fright the maidens of the Vilagry
Skim milk, and ſometimes labour in the Quern,
And bootleſs make the breathleſs huſwife churn;
And ſometime make the drink to bear no barme,
Miſlead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm,
Thoſe that Hobgoblin call you, and ſweet Puck,
You do their work, and they ſhall have good luck.
Are not you he? The ſame
Rob. Thou ſpeak'ſt aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night:
I jeſt to Orberon, and make him ſmile,
When I a fat and bean-fed Horſe beguile,
Neighing in likeneſs like a filly foal;
And ſometimes lurk I in a Goſſips bowl,
In very likeneſs of a roaſted crab:
And when ſhe drinks, againſt her lips I bob,
And on her withered dewlap pour the Ale.
The wiſeſt Aunt telling the ſaddeſt tale,
Sometime for three-foot ſtool, miſtaketh me;
Then ſlip I from her bum, down topples ſhe, raile or
And tailour cries, and falls into a cough
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and ſwear,
A merrier hour was never waſted there,
But room Fairy, here comes Oberon. make
Fai. And here my Miſtreſs:
Would that we were gone.

Scene II.

Enter King of Fairies at one door with his train, and the Queen at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moon-light,
Proud Titania.
Qu. What, jealous Oberon? Fairy skip hence,
I have forſworn his bed and company,
Ob. Tarry raſh Wanton, am not I thy Lord?
Qu. Then I muſt be thy Lady; but I know
When thou waſt ſtoln away from Fairy Land,
And in the ſhape of Corin, ſate all day,
Playing on pipes of Corn, and verſing love
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here
Come from the farthest ſteep of India?
But that forſooth the bouncing Amazon,
Your buskin'd Miſtreſs, and your Warriour love,
To Theſeus muſt be Wedded; and you come,
To give their bed joy and proſperity.
Ob. How canſt thou thus for ſhame, Titania,
Glance at my credit, with Hippolita,
Knowing I know thy love to Theſeus?
Didſt thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Peregenia, whom he ravished?
And make him with fair Eagles break his faith Aegles
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?
Qu. Theſe are the forgeries of jealouſie;
And never ſince the middle Summers ſpring, S. TH. That Met we on hill, in dale, forreſt, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by ruſhy brook,
Or on the beached margent of the ſea,
To dance our ringlets to the whiſtling wind,
But with thy brawls thou haſt diſturb'd our ſport.
Therefore the winds piping to us in vain,
As in revenge have ſuck'd up from the ſea,
Contagious foggs; Which falling in the land, S. T. H yelking
Hath every petty River made ſo proud,
That they have over-born their Continents.
The Oxe hath therefore ſtretch'd his yoak in vain,
The Ploughman loſt his ſweat, and the green Corn
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold ſtands empty in the drowned field,
And Crows are fatted with the murrion flock;
The Nine-mens-morris is fill'd up with mud,
And the queint Mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread are undiſtinguiſhable.
The humane mortals want their winter chere,
No night is now with hymn, or carol bleſt;
Therefore the Moon (the governeſs of flouds,)
Pale in her anger, waſhes all the air;
That Rheumatick diſeaſes do abound.
And through this diſtemperature, we ſee,
The ſeaſons alter; hoary headed froſts
Fall in the freſh lap of the crimſon Roſe;
And on old Hyems chin and Icy crown,
An odorous Chaplet of ſweet Summer buds
Is as in mockery ſet. The Spring, the Summer,
The chiding Autumn, angry Winter, change
Their wonted Liveries; and the amazed world,
By their increaſe, now knows not which is which;
And this ſame progeny of evill comes
From our debate, from our diſſention,
We are their parents and original.
Ob. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why ſhould Titania croſs her Orberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman.
Qu. Set your heart at reſt,
The Fairy-land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a Votreſs of my Order,
And in the ſpiced Indian air by night
Full often ſhe hath goſſipt by my ſide,
And ſat with me on Neptunes yellow ſands,
Marking th'embarked traders of the flood,
When we laught to ſee the ſails conceive,
And grow big bellied with the wanton wind:
Which ſhe with pretty and with ſwimming gate.
Following (her womb then rich with my young ſquire)
Would imitate, and ſail upon the Land,
To fetch me trifles and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But ſhe being mortal of that boy did die,

And

* Crab apples.

And for her ſake I do rear up her boy,
And for her ſake I will not part with him.
Ob. How long within this Wood intend you ſtay?
Qu. Perchance till after Theſeus Wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And ſee our Moon-light Revels, go with us;
If not, ſhun me and I will ſpare your haunts.
Ob. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee. Elves
Qu. Not for thy Fairy Kingdom. Fairies away:
We ſhall chide down right, If I longer ſtay. Exeunt.
Ob Well, go thy way; thou ſhalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this Injury.——
My gentle Puck come hither; thou remembreſt
Since I ſat upon a promontory,
And heard a Mear-maid on a Dolphins back,
Uttering ſuch Dulcet and Harmonious breath,
That the rude Sea grew civil at her Song,
And certain Stars ſhot madly from their Spheare,
To hear the Sea-maids Muſick.
Pu. I remember.
Ob. That very time I ſaw (but thou could'ſt not),
Flying between the cold Moon and the Earth,
Cupid all arm'd; a certain aim he took
At a fair Veſtal, Throned by the Weſt,
And loos'd his Love-ſhaft ſmartly from his Bow,
As it would pierce a hundred thouſand hearts,
But I might ſee young Cupids fiery ſhaft
Quench in the chaſt beams of the watry Moon;
And the Imperial Votreſs paſſed on,
In Maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell upon a little Weſtern Flower;
Before, Milk-white; now purple with loves wound,
And maidens call it, Love in Idleneſs.
Fetch me that Flower; the Herb I ſhew'd thee once,
The juice of it, on ſleeping Eye-lids laid,
Will make a Man or Woman madly doate
Upon the next live Creature that it ſees.
Fetch me this herb, and be thou here again,
Ere the Leviathan can ſwim a league.
Pu. I'll put a Girdle about the Earth in forty Minutes.
Exit.

Ob. Having once this juice,
I'le watch Titania, when ſhe is aſleep,
And drop the liquor of it on her eyes:
The next thing when ſhe waking looks upon,
(Be it on Lyon, Bear, or Wolf, or Bull,
On medling Monkey, or on buſy Ape)
She ſhall purſue it, with the Soul of Love:
And ere I take this Charm off from her ſight,
(As I can take it with another herb)
I'le make her render up her Page to me.
But who comes here? I am inviſible,
And I will over-hear their conference.

Scene III.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore purſue me not,
Where is Lyſander, and fair Hermia?
The one I'le ſlay, the other ſlayeth me.
Thou told'ſt me they were ſtoln into this wood;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Becauſe I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence get thee gone, and follow me no more.
Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adamant,
But yet you draw not Iron; for my heart
Is true as Steel. Leave your power to draw,
And I ſhall have no power to follow you.
Dem. Do I entice you? do I ſpeak you fair?
Or rather do I not in plaineſt truth,
Tell you I do not, nor I cannot love you?
Hel. And even for that do I love thee the more;
I am your Spaniel, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Uſe me but as your Spaniel, ſpurn me, ſtrike me,
Neglect me, loſe me; only give me leave
(Unworthy as I am), to follow you.
What worſer place can I beg in your Love,
(And yet a place of high reſpect with me)
Than to be uſed as you do your Dog? Mr. J. A uſe
Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my Spirit,
For I am ſick when I do look on thee.
Hel. And I am ſick when I look not on you.
Dem. You do impeach your modeſty too much,
To leave the City, and commit your ſelf
Into the hands of one that loves you not,
To truſt the opportunity of Night,
And the ill counſel of a deſart place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.
Hel. Your virtue is my priviledge; for that
It is not night when I do ſee your face.
Therefore I think I am not in the Night,
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you in my reſpect are all the World.
Then how can it be ſaid I am alone,
When all the World is here to look on me?
Dem. I'le run from thee and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild Beaſts.
Hel. The wildeſt hath not ſuch a heart as you;
Run when you will, the ſtory ſhall be chang'd:
Appollo flies, and Daphne holds the Chace;
The Dove purſues the Griffin, the mild Hind
Makes ſpeed to catch the Tyger. Bootleſs ſpeed,
When Cowardiſe purſues, and Valour flies.
Dem. I will not ſtay thy queſtions; let me go;
Or if you follow me, do not believe,
But I ſhall do thee miſchief in the VVood.
Hel. Ay in the Temple, in the Town, and Field.
You do me miſchief. Fye Demetrius,
Your wrongs do ſet a ſcandal on my Sex:
We cannot fight for Love, as men may do;
We ſhould be woo'd, and were not made to woos.
I follow thee, and make a Heaven of Hell,
To dye upon the hand I love ſo well. Exit. Scene IV.
Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he do leave this Grove.
Thou ſhalt fly him, and he ſhall ſeek thy love.
Haſt thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Puck.

Pu. Ay, there it is.
Ob. I pray thee give it me,
I know a bank where the wild Time blows,
Where the Oxſlips and the nodding Violet grows,
Quite over Cannoped with luſcious Woodbine,
With ſweet muſk Roſes, and with Eglantine,
There ſleeps Titania, ſometime of the Night,
Lull'd in theſe flowers, with dances and delight:
And there the Snake throws her enammel'd Skin,
VVeed wide enough to wrap a Fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'le ſtreak her Eyes,
And make her full of hateful Fantaſies.
Take thou ſome of it, and ſeek through this Grove;
A ſweet Athenian Lady is in Love
With a diſdainful youth; annoint his Eyes,
But do it when the next thing he eſpies,
May be the Lady. Thou ſhalt know the man,
By the Athenian Garments he hath on.
Effect it with ſome care, that he may prove
More fond on her, than ſhe upon her love;
And look thou meet me, ere the firſt Cock crow.
Pu. Fear not my Lord, your ſervant ſhall do ſo. Exeunt.
Enter Queen of Fairies, with her Train. Scene
Qu. Come, now a Roundel, and a Fairy Song:
Then for the third part of a Minute, hence,
Some to kill Cankers in the Muſk Roſe buds,
Some war with Reremiſe, for their leathern wings,
To make my ſmall Elves Coats, and keep ſome back

The

* A compliment to Queen Elizabeth: as it ſeems probable that Mary Queen of Scots was pointed atto in the preceding Speech of Oberon.

The Clamorous Owl, that Nightly hoots, and wonders
At our queint spirits, Sing me now a sleep,
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies Sing

You spotted Snakes with double tongue,
Thorny Hedgehoggs be not seen,
Newts and blind worms do no wrong,
Come not near our Fairy Queen.
Philomela with melody,
Sing in your sweet Lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla lulla, lullaby:
Never harm, nor spell, nor Charm,
Come our lovely Lady nigh,
So good night with Lullaby.

2. Fairy.

Weaving Spiders, come not here;
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence:
Beetles black approach not near;
Worm nor Snail do no offence.
Philomela with melody, &c.

1. Fairy.

Hence away; now all is well:
One aloof, stand Centinel. [Exeunt Fairys.

Enter Oberon. & anoints her Eye lids.

Ob. What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true Love take;
Love and Languish for his sake;
Be it Ounce, or Cat, or Bear,
Pard, or Boar, with bristled Hair,
In thy eye that shall appear,
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear,
Wake when some vile thing is near. Exit Obe.

Enter Lysander and Hermia. Scene VI.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandring in the Woods;
And to speak troth, I have forgot our way:
We'll rest us Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so Lysander; find you out a Bed,
For I upon this Bank will rest my Head.

Lys. One Turf shall serve as Pillow for us both,
One Heart, one Bed, two Bosoms, and one Troth.

Her. Nay good Lysander, for my sake my dear,
Lie further off yet, do not lie so near.

Lys. O take the sence sweet, of my innocence,
Love takes the meaning, in Loves conference,
I mean that my Heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart can you make of it.
Two Bosoms interchanged with an oath,
So then two Bosoms, and a single Troth:
Then by your side, no Bed-room me deny
For lying so, Hermia, I do not lye.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily;
Now much beshrew my manners, and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lyed.
But gentle friend, for Love and Curtesy
Lye further off in human Modesty,
Such separation, as may well be said
Becomes a Vertuous Batchelor, and a Maid,
So far be distant, and good night sweet Friend;
Thy Love ne're alter till thy sweet Life end.

Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair Prayer, say I,
And then end Life, when I end Loyalty:
Here is my Bed; sleep give thee all his Rest.

Her. With half that wish, the wishers eyes be prest. [They sleep.

Enter Puck

Pu. Through the Forrest have I gone,
But Athenian find I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This Flowers force in stirring Love:
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear;
This is he (my Master said)
Despised the Athenian Maid;
And here the Maiden sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground
Pretty soul, she durst not lye
Near this lack-love, this kill curtesy.
Churl upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this Charm doth owe;
When thou wak'st, let Love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eye-lid:
So awake when I am gon;
For I must now to Oberon. [Exit.

Scene VII.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Say, tho thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou Darling leave me? do not so.
De. Stay on thy peril, I alone will go.

[Exit Demetrius.

Hel. O I am out of breath, in this fond chace;
The more my Prayer, the lesser is my Grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'r she lies:
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears,
If so, my eyes are oftner washt then hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a Bear;
For Beasts that meet me, run away for fear,
Therefore no marvel, tho Demetrius
Do as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine,
Made me compare with Hermia's sphery eyne?
But who is here? Lysander on the Ground:
Dead or a sleep? I see no Blood, no Wound.
Lysander, if you live, good Sir awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake. [Wakes.
Transparent Helena, nature here shews art,
That through thy Bosom makes me see thy Heart.
Where Demetrius? Oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perish on my Sword?

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander, say not so;
What tho he love your Hermia? Lord, what tho?
Yet Hermia still Loves you; then be content

Lys. Content with Hermia? No I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent;
Not Hermia, but Helena I love:
Who will not change a Raven for a Dove?
The will of man is by his reason sway'd:
And reason says you are the worthier Maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their Season:
So I being young, till now ripe not to Reason,
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the Marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes, where I o'relook
Loves stories, written in Loves richest Book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no nor never can
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
Good troth you do me wrong (good sooth you do)
In such disdainful manner, me to woo.
But fare you well: perforce I must confess,
I thought you Lord of more true gentleness.
Oh, that a Lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd! [Exit

Lys. She sees not Hermia, sleep thou there,
And never mayst thou come Lysander near;
For as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to a stomach brings;
Or as the heresies that men do leave,
Are hated most of those that did deceive;
So thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,

Of all be hated: but the moſt of me,
And all my powers, addreſs your love and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her Knight. [Exit.
Her. Help me, Lyſander, help me, do thy beſt.
To pluck this crawling Serpent from my breſt:
Aye me, for pity, what a dream was here?
Lyſander, look, how I do quake with fear?
Me-thought a Serpent eat my Heart away,
And you ſate ſmiling at his cruel prey.
Lyſander, what remov'd? Lyſander, Lord,
What out of hearing, gone? No ſound, no word?
Alack where are you? ſpeak and if you hear;
Speak of all Loves; I ſwound almoſt with fear.
No, then I well perceive you are not nigh,
Either death or you I'll find immediately. [Exit.

Actus Tertius.

The Wood. Enter the Clowns.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat, and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearſal. This green plot ſhall be our ſtage, this hauthorn brake our tyring Houſe, and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the Duke.

Bot. Peter Quince?

Peter. What ſaſt thou bully Bottome?

Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Piramus and Thisby, that will never pleaſe. Firſt, Piramus muſt draw a Sword to kill himſelf; which the Ladies cannot abide. How anſwer you that?

Snout. By'laken, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe we muſt leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit, I have a device to make all well. Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue ſeem to ſay, We will do no harm with our Swords, and that Pyramus is not kill'd indeed; and for the more better aſſurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottome the Weaver; this will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have ſuch a Prologue, and it ſhall be written in eight and ſix.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the Ladies be afear'd of the Lion?

Star. I fear it, I promiſe you.

Bot. Maſters, you ought to conſider with your ſelves; to bring in (God ſhield us) a Lion among Ladies, is a moſt dreadful thing; For there is not a more fearful wild fowl than your Lion living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore another Prologue muſt tell he is not a Lion.

Bot. Nay, you muſt name his name, and half his face muſt be ſeen through the Lions neck, and he himſelf muſt ſpeak through, ſaying thus, or to the ſame defect; Ladies, or Fair Ladies, I would wiſh you, or I would requeſt you, or I would intreat you, not to fear, not to tremble; my Life for yours; If you think I come hither as a Lion, it were pity of my Life; No, I am no ſuch thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly he is Snug the Joiner.

Quince. Well, it ſhall be ſo; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moon-Light into a Chamber; for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by Moon-light.

Snug. Doth the Moonſhine that Night we play our Play?

Bot. A Calender, a Calender, look in the Almanack, find out Moon-ſhine, find out Moon-ſhine.

Quin. Yes, it doth ſhine that night.

Bot. Why then may you leave a Caſement of the great Chamber window, (where we play) open, and the Moon may ſhine in at the Caſement.

Qu. Ay, or elſe one muſt come in with a buſh of thorns and a lanthorn, and ſay he comes to diſfigure, or to preſent the perſon of Moon-ſhine. Then there is another thing, we muſt have a wall in the great Chamber; for Piramus and Thisby (ſays the ſtory) did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall. What ſay you Bottome?

Bot. Some man or other muſt preſent wall, and let him have ſome Plaſter, or ſome Lome, or ſome rough-caſt about him, to ſignify wall; or let him hold his fingers thus; and through that cranny ſhall Pyramus and Thisby whiſper,

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, ſit down every mothers ſon, and rehearſe your parts. Pyramus, you begin; when you have ſpoken your ſpeech, enter into that Brake, and ſo every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-ſpuns have we ſwaggering here,
So near the Cradle of the Fairy Queen?
What, a Play toward? I'll be an auditor;
An actor too perhaps, if I ſee cauſe.

Qu. Speak Pyramus; Thisby, ſtand forth.

Pir. Thisby, the flowers of odious ſavours ſweet.

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pir. Odours ſavours ſweet,
So hath thy breath, my deareſt Thisby dear.
But hark, a voice! ſtay thou but here a while,
And by and by I will to thee appear. [Exit. Pir.

Puck. A ſtranger Pyramus, then ere plaid here! [Aside.

Thisb. Muſt I ſpeak now?

Quin. Ay marry muſt you. For you muſt underſtand he goes but to ſee a noiſe that he heard, and is to come again.

This. Moſt radiant Pyramus, moſt Lilly white of hue,
Of colour like the red Roſe on triumphant Bryer,
Moſt briſky Juvenil, and eke moſt lovely Jew,
As true as trueſt horſe, that yet would never tire,
I'll meet thee Piramus, at Ninnies Tomb.

Quin. Ninus Tomb, man? why, you muſt not ſpeak that yet; that you anſwer to Pyramus; you ſpeak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter, your cue is paſt; it is never tire.

Thisb. O, as true as trueſt Horſe, that yet would never tire: Re-enter Bottom with an Asses Head.

Pir. If I were fair, Thisby I were only thine.

Peet. O monſtrous! O ſtrange. We are haunted; pray maſters, fly maſters, help. [The Clowns Exeunt.

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a Round,
Through bog, through buſh, through brake, through bryer;
Sometimes a Horſe I'll be, ſometimes a Hound,
A Hog, a Headleſs Bear, ſometimes a fire,
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar and burn,
Like Horſe, Hound, Hog, Bear, fire, at every turn. [Exit.

Enter Piramus with the Aſs Head.

Bot. why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afeard. Enter Snout.

Sn. O Bottome, thou art chang'd; What do I ſee on thee?

Bot. What do you ſee? You ſee an Aſs-head of your own, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Bleſs thee Bottome, bleſs thee; thou art tranſlated. [Exit. Bot.

Bot. I ſee their knavery, this is to make an aſs of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not ſtir from this place, do what they can; I will walk up and down here, and will ſing, that they ſhall hear I am not afraid.

The Woſel cock, ſo black of hue.
With Orange-tawny bill.
The Throſtle with his note ſo true,
The Wren and little quil.

Tita. What Angel wakes me from my flowry bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Lark,
The plainſong Cuckow gray;
Whoſe note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not anſwer, nay:
For indeed, who would ſet his wit to ſo fooliſh a bird?
Who would give a bird the lye, tho he cry Cuckow, never ſo?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, ſing again,
Mine ear is much enamoured of thy note;
On the firſt view to ſay, to ſwear I love thee.
So is mine eye enthralled to thy ſhape,
And thy fair vertues force (perforce) doth move me,

Bot. Methinks miſtreſs, you ſhould have little reaſon for that: and yet to ſay the truth, reaſon and love keep little company together, now-a-days. The more the pity, that ſome honeſt neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occaſion.

Tita. Thou art as wiſe as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not ſo neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to ſerve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood, do not deſire to go,
Thou ſhalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a ſpirit of no common rate;
The Summer ſtill doth tend upon my ſtate,
And I do love thee; therefore go with me,
I'll give thee Fairies to attend on thee;
And they ſhall fetch thee Jewels from the deep,
And ſing, while thou on preſſed flowers doth ſleep:
And I will purge thy mortal groſsneſs ſo,
That thou ſhalt like an airy ſpirit go.

Enter Peaſe-bloſſom, Cobweb, Moth, Muſtard-ſeed, and four Fairies.

Fair. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Where ſhall we go?

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this Gentleman.
Hop in his walks, and gambole in his eyes,
Feed him with Apricocks and Dewberies,
With purple Grapes, green Figs, and Mulberries,
The hony-bags ſteal from the Humble Bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs.
And light them at the fiery Glow-worms eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to ariſe:
And pluck the wings from painted Butterflies,
To fan the Moon beams from his ſleeping eyes.
Nod to him Elves, and do him courteſies.

1. Fai. Hail mortal, hail.
2. Fai. Hail.
3. Fai. Hail.

Bot. I cry your worſhips mercy heartily, I beſeech your worſhips name.

Cob. Cobw.b.

Bot. I ſhall deſire you of more acquaintance, good Maſter Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I ſhall make bold with you.
Your name honeſt Gentleman?

Peaſ. Peaſe-Bloſſom.

Bot. I pray you commend me to Miſtreſs Squaſh your Mother, and to Maſter Peaſcod your Father. Good Maſter Peaſe-bloſſom, I ſhall deſire of you more acquaintance too. Your name I beſeech you ſir?

Muſ. Muſtard-ſeed!

Bot. Good Maſter Muſtard-ſeed; I know your patience well: that ſame cowardly gyant-like Ox-beef, hath devoured many a Gentleman of your houſe. I promiſe you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I deſire your more acquaintance, good Maſter Muſtard-ſeed.

Tita. Come wait upon him, lead him to my bower.
The Moon methinks, looks with a watry eye,
And when ſhe weeps, weeps every little flower,
Lamenting ſome enforced chaſtity.
Tye up my Loveſo tongue, bring him ſilently.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.

Enter King of Fairies, ſolus.

Ob. I wonder if Titania be awak'd:
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which ſhe muſt dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my meſſenger: how now mad ſpirit,
What night-rule now about this haunted Grove?

Puck. My Miſtreſs with a monſter is in love,
Near to her cloſe and conſecrated bower,
While ſhe was in her dull and ſleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian ſtalls,
Were met togethet to rehearſe a Play,
Intended for great Theſeus nuptial day.
The ſhalloweſt thick-skin of that barren ſort,
Who Pyramus preſented, in their ſport,
Forſook his Scene, and entred in a brake;
When I did him at this advantage take,
An Aſſes pole I fixed on his head;
Anon his Thisby muſt be anſwered,
And forth my Mimick comes: when they him ſpie,
As wild-Geeſe, that the creeping Fowler eye,
Or ruſſet-pated choughs, many in ſort,
(Riſing and cawing at the Guns report,)
Sever themſelves, and madly ſweep the ſky;
So at his ſight, away his fellows flie,
And at our ſtamp, here o're and o're one falls;
He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their ſenſe thus weak, loſt with their fears thus ſtrong,
Made ſenſeleſs things begin to do them wrong.
For briars and thorns at their apparel ſnatch,
Some ſleeves, ſome hats, from yielders all things catch,
I led them on in this diſtracted fear,
And left ſweet Pyramus tranſlated there:
When in that moment (ſo it came to paſs)
Titania wak't, and ſtraightway lov'd an Aſs.

Ob. This falls out better than I could deviſe:
But haſt thou yet latch'd the Athenian eyes,
With the love juice as I did bid thee do?

Rob. I took him ſleeping, (that is finiſht too);
And the Athenian Woman by his ſide,
That, when he wakes of force ſhe muſt be ey'd.

Scene V.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ob. Stand cloſe, this is the ſame Athenian.

Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man.

Dem. O why rebuke you him that loves you ſo?
Lay breath ſo bitter on your bitter foe,

Her. Now I but chide, but I ſhould uſe thee worſe,
For thou I fear, haſt given me cauſe to curſe,
If thou haſt ſlain Lyſander in his ſleep,
Being ore ſhooes in blood, plunge in the deep, and kill me too:
The Sun was not ſo true unto the day,
As he to me. Would he have ſtollen away,
From ſleeping Hermia? I'll believe as ſoon
This whole earth may be bord, and that the Moon
May through the Center creep, and ſo diſpleaſe
Her brothers noon-tide, with th' Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou haſt murdred him,

So ſhould a murtherer look, ſo dead, ſo grim.
Dem. So ſhould the murthered look, and ſo ſhould I,
Pierc't through the heart with your ſtern cruelty:
Yet you the murtherer looke as bright as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering ſphere.
Her. What's this to my Lyſander? Where is he?
Ah good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?
Dem. I'de rather give his carkaſs to my hounds.
Her. Out dog, out cur, thou driv'ſt me paſt the bounds
Of Maidens patience. Haſt thou ſlain him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.
Oh, once tell true, and even for my ſake,
Durſt thou a looke upon him, being awake?
And haſt thou kill'd him ſleeping? O brave touch!
Could not a worm, an Adder do ſo much?
An adder did it, for with doubler tongue
Than thine, (thou ſerpent) never adder ſtung.
Dem. You ſpend your paſſion on a miſpriz'd mood;
I am not guilty of Lyſander's blood;
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.
Her. I pray thee tell me then that he is well.
Dem. And if I could, what ſhould I get therefore?
Her. A priviledg never to ſee me more;
And from thy hated preſence part I: ſo [redacted]
Whether he be dead or no. Exit.
Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein,
Here therefore for a while I will remain.
So ſorrows heavineſs doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt ſlip doth ſorrow owe,
Which now in ſome ſlight meaſure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make ſome ſtay. Lies down.

Ob. What haſt thou done? Thou haſt miſtaken quite,
And laid thy love juice on ſome true-loves ſight:
Of thy miſpriſion muſt perforce enſue
Some true love turn'd, and not a falſe turn'd true.
Rob. Then fate o're rules; that one man holding troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.
Ob. About the wood, go ſwifter than the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find.
All fancy-ſick ſhe is, and pale of cheer,
With ſighs of love, that coſts the freſh blood dear.
By ſome illuſion ſee thou bring her here,
I'le charm his eyes againſt ſhe doth appear.
Rob. I go, I go; look how I go,
Swifter than arrow from the Tartars bow. Exit.
Ob. Flower of this purple die, Anoints Demetrius Eyes.
Hit with Cupids archery,
Sink in apple of his eye,
When his love he doth eſpy,
Let her ſhine as glorioully
As the Venus of the ſky.
When thou wak'ſt, if ſhe be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our Fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth miſtook by me,
Pleading for a lovers fee.
Shall we their fond Pageant ſee?
Lord, what fools theſe mortals be!
Ob. Stand aſide: the noiſe they make,
Will cauſe Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once wooe one,
That muſt needs be ſport alone:
And thoſe things do beſt pleaſe me,
That befal prepoſterouſly.

Scene VII.

Enter Lyſander and Helena.

Lyſ. Why ſhould you think that I ſhould woo in ſcorn?
Scorn and deriſion never comes in tears.
Look when I vow, I weep, and vows ſo born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can theſe things in me ſeem ſcorn to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more,
When truth kills truth, O deviliſh holy fray!
Theſe vows are Hermia's. Will you give her o're?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh.
Your vows to her and me, (put in two ſcales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lyſ. I had no judgment when to her I ſwore.
Hel. Nor none in my mind, now you give her ore.
Lyſ. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.
Dem. O Helen, goddeſs, nymph, perfect, divine,
To what? my love, ſhall I compare thine eyne,
Chryſtal is muddy; O how ripe in ſhow,
Thy lips, thoſe kiſſing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus ſnow,
Fann'd with the Eaſtern wind, turns to a Crow,
When thou hold'ſt up thy hand. O let me kiſs
This Princeſs of pure white, this ſeal of bliſs.
Hel. O ſpight, O hell, I ſee you are all bent
To ſet againſt me, for your merrimen t:
If you were civil, and knew courteſie,
You would not do me thus much injury,
Can you not hate me as I know you do,
But you muſt join in ſouls to mock me too?
If you are men, as men you are in ſhow,
You would not uſe a gentle Lady ſo?
To vow, and ſwear, and ſuperpraiſe my parts,
When I am ſure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Rivals, and love Hermia,
And now both Rivals to mock Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To conjure tears up in a poor maids eyes,
With your deriſion! none of noble ſort,
Would ſo offend a Virgin, and extort
A poor ſouls patience, all to make you ſport.
Lyſ. You are unkind Demetrius; be not ſo,
For you love Hermia; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermia's love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waſte more idle breath.
Dem. Lyſander, keep thy Hermia, I will none:
If e're I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her, but as gueſt-wiſe ſojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remain.
Lyſ. It is not ſo.
Dem. Diſparage not the faith thou doſt not know,
Leſt to thy peril thou abide it dear.
Look where thy Love comes, yonder is thy dear.

Scene VIII.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes
The ear more quick of apprehenſion makes.
Wherein it doth impair the ſeeing ſenſe,
It pays the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lyſander found,
Mine ear, (I thank it), brought me to that ſound.
But why unkindly didſt thou leave me ſo? (to go?
Lyſand. Why ſhould he ſtay whom love doth preſs
Her. What love could preſs Lyſander from my ſide?
Lyſ. Lyſander's love, (that would not let him bide,)
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night,
Than all yon fiery o's and eyes of light.
Why ſeek'ſt thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bear thee, made me leave thee ſo?
Her. You ſpeak not as you think: it cannot be.
Hel. Lo, ſhe is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceive they have conjoin'd all three,
To faſhion this falſe ſport in ſpight of me.
Injurious Hermia, moſt ungrateful maid,
Have you conſpired, have you with theſe contriv'd

To

To bait me, with this foul deriſion?
Is all the Counſel that we two have ſhar'd,
The Siſters vows, the hours that we have ſpent,
When we have chid the haſty footed time,
For parting us; O, and is all forgot?
All School-days friendſhip, child-hood Innocence?
We, Hermia, like two Artificial gods,
Have with our Needles, Created both one flower,
Both on one Sampler, ſitting on one Cuſhion;
Both warbling of one Song, both in one Key;
As if our hands, our ſides, voices, and minds
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, ſeeming parted,
But an Union in partition,
Two lovely Berries molded on one Stem;
So with two ſeeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the firſt like, coats in Heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one Creſt.
And will you rent our ancient love aſunder,
To join with men in ſcorning your poor Friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly;
Our ſex as well as I may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the Injury.
Her. I am amazed at your paſſionate words,
I ſcorn you not; it ſeems that you ſcorn me.
Hel. Have you not ſet Lyſander, as in ſcorn
To follow me, and praiſe my Eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did ſpurn me with his foot)
To call me Goddeſs, Nymph, Divine, and rare,
Precious, Celeſtial? Wherefore ſpeaks he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lyſander
Deny your love (ſo rich within his Soul)
And tender me (forſooth) affection;
But by your ſetting on, by your conſent?
What though I be not ſo in grace as you,
So hung upon with Love, ſo fortunate;
But miſerable moſt, to love unlov'd?
This you ſhould pity rather than deſpiſe.
Her. I underſtand not what you mean by this.
Hel. Ay, do, perſever, counterfeit ſad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back,
Wink each at other, hold the ſweet jeſt up:
This ſport well carried, ſhall be Chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me ſuch an Argument:
But fare ye well, 'tis partly mine own fault,
Which death or abſence ſoon ſhall remedy.
Lyſ. Stay gentle Helena, hear my excuſe;
My Love, my Life, my Soul, fair Helena.
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweet, do not ſcorn her ſo.
Dem. If ſhe cannot entreat, I can compel.
Lyſ. Thou canſt compel no more than ſhe entreat.
Thy threats have no more ſtrength than her weak prayers.
Helen. I love thee, by my Life I do;
I ſwear by that which I will loſe for thee,
To prove him falſe that ſays I love thee not.
Dem. I ſay, I love thee more than he can do.
Lyſ. If thou ſay ſo, withdraw and prove it too:
Dem. Quick, come.
Her. Lyſander, whereto tends all this?
Lyſ. Away you Ethiope.
Dem. No, no, Sir, ſeem to break looſe;
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not; you are a tame man, go.
Lyſ. Hang off thou Cat, thou burr; vile thing, let looſe,
Or I will ſhake thee from me like a Serpent.
Her. Why are you grown ſo rude?
What change is this, ſweet Love?
Lyſ. Thy love? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loathed Medicine; O hated poyſon hence.
Her. Do you not jeſt?
Hel. Yes ſooth, and ſo do you.
Lyſ. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond; for I perceive
A weak bond holds you; I'll not truſt your word.
Lyſ. What, ſhould I hurt her, ſtrike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'll not harm her ſo.
Her. What, can you do me greater harm than hate?
Hate me, wherefore? O me, what news my Love?
Am not I Hermia? are not you Lyſander?
I am as fair now, as I was ere while.
Since Night you lov'd me; yet ſince night you left me:
Why then you left me (O the Gods forbid)
In earneſt, ſhall I ſay?
Lyſ. Ay, by my Life;
And never did deſire to ſee thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of queſtion, of doubt,
Be certain, nothing truer; 'tis no jeſt,
That I do hate thee, and love Helena.
Her. O me, you jugler, you canker-bloſſom,
You thief of Love; what have you come by night,
And ſtoln my Loves heart from him?
Hel Fine ifaith:
Have you no modeſty, no maiden ſhame,
No touch of baſhfulneſs? what will you tear
(Impatient anſwers from my gentle tongue)
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet, you.
Her. Puppet? why ſo? Ay, that way goes the game.
Now I perceive that ſhe hath made compare
Between our ſtatures; ſhe hath urg'd her height,
And with her perſonage, her tall perſonage,
Her height (forſooth) ſhe hath prevail'd with him.
And are you grown ſo high in his eſteem,
Becauſe I am ſo dwarfiſh, and ſo low?
How low am I, thou painted Maypole? Speak,
How low am I? I am not yet ſo low,
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you though you mock me, Gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me, I was never curſt;
I have no gift at all in ſhrewiſhneſs;
I am a right Maid for my Cowardize;
Let her not ſtrike me: you perhaps may think,
Becauſe ſhe's ſomething lower than my ſelf,
That I can match her.
Her. Lower? hark again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be ſo bitter with me,
I evermore did love you Hermia,
Did ever keep your Counſels, never wronged you,
Save that, in Love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your ſtealth into this Wood:
He followed you, for love I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me
To ſtrike me, ſpurn me, nay to kill me too;
And now, ſo you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further. Let me go.
You ſee how ſimple, and how fond I am.
Her. Why get you gone; who is't that hinders you?
Hel. A fooliſh heart, that I leave here behind.
Her. What with Lyſander?
Hel. With Demetrius.
Lyſ. Be not afraid, ſhe will not harm thee, Helena.
Dem. No ſir, ſhe ſhall not, though you take her part.
Hel. O, when ſhe's angry, ſhe is keen and ſhrewd;
She was a vixen when ſhe went to School;
And though ſhe be but little, ſhe is fierce.
Her. Little again? nothing but low and little?
Why will you ſuffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.
Lyſ. Get you gone you Dwarf,
You Minimus, of hindring knot-Graſs made,
You Bead, you Acorn.
Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalf that ſcorns your ſervices.
Let her alone, ſpeak not of Helena,
Take not her part: For if thou doſt intend

* A term us'd in blazoning, when two coats of Arms are Quarter'd together & the ſecond is the ſame as the firſt.

Never ſo little ſhew of Love to her,
Thou ſhalt aby it.
Lyſ. Now ſhe holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar'ſt, to try whoſe right,
Of thine or mine is moſt in Helena.
Dem. Follow? Nay, I'll go with thee Cheek by Jowl.
[Exit Lyſander and Demetrius.
Her. You Miſtreſs, all this coyl is long of you,
Nay, go not back.
Hel. I will not truſt you, I,
Nor longer ſtay in your curſt Company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray,
My Legs are longer though to run away. Exeunt.

I.T.H. Her I am amaz'd & know not what to say. Scene IX.

Enter Oberon and Puck.

Ob. This is thy negligence; ſtill thou miſtak'ſt,
Or elſe committ'ſt thy knaveries willingly.
Puck. Believe me, King of ſhadows, I miſtook,
Did not you tell me, I ſhould know the Man,
By the Athenian Garments he hath on?
And ſo far blameleſs proves my enterpriſe,
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's Eyes;
And ſo far am I glad, it ſo did ſort,
As this their jangling I eſteem a ſport.
Ob. Thou ſeeſt theſe Lovers ſeek a place to fight;
Hie therefore, Robin, overcaſt the Night,
The ſtarry Welkin cover thou anon,
With drooping Fogg as black as Acheron,
And lead theſe teſty Rivals ſo aſtray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lyſander, ſometime frame thy Tongue,
Then ſtir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And ſometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o're their brows, death-counterfeiting ſleep
With leaden Legs, and Batty wings doth creep;
Then cruſh this Herb into Lyſanders eye,
Whoſe Liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all errour, with his might,
And make his Eye-balls rowl with wonted ſight.
When they next wake, all this deriſion
Shall ſeem a Dream, and fruitleſs viſion,
And back to Athens ſhall the Lovers wend
With League, whoſe date till death ſhall never end.
Whiles I in this affair do thee imploy,
I'll to my Queen, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed Eye releaſe
From Monſters view, and all things ſhall be Peace.
Puck. My Fairy Lord, this muſt be done with haſte,
For Nights-ſwift Dragons cut the Clouds full faſt,
And yonder ſhines Aurora's harbinger;
At whoſe approach Ghoſts wandring here and there,
Troop home to Church-yards; damned Spirits all,
That in croſs-ways and floods have burial,
Already to their Wormy beds are gone,
For fear left day ſhould look their ſhames upon,
They wilfully exile themſelves from light,
And muſt for aye conſort with black-brow'd Night.
Ob. But we are ſpirits of another ſort:
I with the morning Love have oft made ſport,
And like a Forreſter, the groves may tread,
Even till the Eaſtern Gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune, with fair bleſſed beams,
Turns into yellow Gold, his ſalt green ſtreams.
But notwithſtanding haſte, make no delay:
We may effect this buſineſs yet ere day. [Exit Ober.
Puck. Up and down, up and down, I will lead them up and down: I am fear'd in Field and Town, Goblin, lead them up and down: here comes one.

Enter Lyſander.

Lyſ. Where art thou, proud Demtrius?
Speak thou now.
Rob. Here villain, drawn and ready. Where art thou?
Lyſ. I will be with thee ſtraight.
Rob. Follow me then to plainer Ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lyſander, ſpeak again;
Thou runaway, thou Coward, art thou fled?
Speak in ſome buſh: Where doſt thou hide thy Head?
Rob. Thou Coward art thou bragging to the Stars,
Telling the Buſhes that thou look'ſt for Wars,
And wilt not come? come Recreant, come thou Child,
I'll whip thee with a Rod, he is defil'd
That draws a Sword on thee.
Dem. Yea, art thou there?
Rob. Follow my voice, we'l try no man-hood here. [Exit.
Lyſ. He goes before me, and ſtill dares me on;
When I come where he calls me, then he's gone.
The Villain is much lighter heel'd than I:
I followed faſt, but faſter he did fly;
That falls am I in dark uneven way,
And here will reſt me. Come thou gentle day: lyes down.
For if but once thou ſhew me thy gray light,
I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this ſpight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Rob. Ho, ho, ho, coward why com'ſt thou not?
Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'ſt. For well I wot,
Thou runn'ſt before me, ſhifting every place,
And dar'ſt not ſtand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou?
Rob. Come hither, I am here.
Dem. Nay then thou mock'ſt me; thou ſhalt buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by day-light ſee.
Now go thy way: faintneſs conſtraineth me,
To meaſure out my length on this cold bed,
By days approach look to be viſited. Lyes Down

Scene X

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy hours, ſhine comforts from the Eaſt,
That I may back to Athens by day-light,
From theſe that my poor company deteſt,
And ſleep that ſometimes ſhuts up ſorrows eye,
Steal me a while from mine own company. Sleeps
Rob. Yet but three? come one more,
Two of both kinds makes up four.
Here ſhe comes curſt and ſad,
Cupid is a knaviſh Lad,
Thus to make poor Females mad.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Never ſo weary, never ſo in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with briars,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My Legs can keep no pace with my deſires.
Here will I reſt me till the break of day,
Heavens ſhield Lyſander, if they mean a fray! Lyes Down
Rob. On the ground ſleep ſound,
I'll apply your eye, gentle lover, Remedy. Squeezing Juice on Lyſ. Eye
When thou wak'ſt, thou tak'ſt
True delight in the ſight of thy former Ladies eye,
And the Country Proverb known,
That every man ſhould take his own,
In your waking ſhall be ſhown.
Jack ſhall have Jill, naught ſhall go ill,
The man ſhall have his Mare again, and all ſhall be well.

They ſleep all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queen of Fairies, and Clown, and Fairies, Bottom attending and the King behind them.

Tita. Come, ſit thee down upon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,

And

And ſtick muſk roſes in thy ſleek ſmooth head,
And kiſs thy fair large ears my gentle joy.
Clo. Where's Peaſe Bloſſome!
Peaſe. Ready.
Clo. Scratch my head, Peaſe-Bloſſome. Where's Mounſieur Cobweb?
Cob. Ready.
Clo. Mounſieur Cobweb, good Mounſieur get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red hipt humble-Bee on the top of a thiſtle; and good Mounſieur bring me the hony bag. Do not fret your ſelf too much in the action, Mounſieur; and good Mounſieur have a care the honey bag break not; I would be loth to have you overflown with a honey-bag ſignior. Where's Mounſieur Muſtardſeed?
Muſ. Ready. Hy Neaſe
Clo. Give me your news, Mounſieur Muſtard, Seed
Pray you leave your curteſie good Mounſieur.
Muſ. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing, good Mounſieur, but to help Cavalero Cobweb to ſcratch. I muſt to the Barbers, Mounſieur, for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face. And I am ſuch a tender aſs, if my hair do but tickle me, I muſt ſcratch.
Tita. What, wilt thou hear ſome muſick, my ſweet love?
Clo. I have a reaſonable good ear in muſick. Let us have the tongs and the bones.

Muſick Tongs, Rural Muſick.

Tita. Or ſay, ſweet Love, what thou deſireſt to eat.
Clo. Truly a peck of Provender; I could munch your good dry Oats. Methinks I have a great deſire to a bottle of hay: good hay, ſweet hay hath no fellow.
Tita. I have a venturous Fairy,
That ſhall ſeek the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new nuts. Hence
Clo. I had rather have a handful or two of dried peaſe. But I pray you let none of your people ſtir me, I have an expoſition of ſleep come upon me.
Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms;
Fairies be gone, and be always away. a while
So doth the woodbine, the ſweet Honyſuckle,
Gently entwiſt; the female Ivy ſo
Enrings the barky fingers of the Elm,
O how I love thee! how I dote on thee!

Enter Robin Goodfellow, and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin:
Seeſt thou this ſweet ſight?
Her dotage now I do begin to pity;
For meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking ſweet favors for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her.
For ſhe his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of freſh and fragrant flowers,
And that ſame dew which ſometime on the buds,
Was wont to ſwell like round and orient pearls;
Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes,
Like tears that did their own diſgrace bewail.
When I had at my pleaſure taunted her,
And ſhe in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did aſk of her, her changeling child,
Which ſtraight ſhe gave me, and her Fairy ſent,
To bear him to my Bower in Fairy Land.
And now I have the Boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes;
And gentle Puck, take this transformed ſcalp
From off the head of this Athenian ſwain;
That he awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this nights accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But firſt I will releaſe the Fairy Queen.

Be thou as thou waſt wont to be;
See as thou waſt wont to ſee;
Dians bud, or Cupids flower,
Hath ſuch force and bleſſed power.

Now my Titania wake you, my ſweet Queen.
Tita. My Oberon, what viſions have I ſeen!
Methought I was enamoured of an aſs.
Ob. There lies your love.
Tita. How came theſe things to paſs?
Oh, how mine eyes do loath this viſage now!
Ob. Silence a while; Robin take off his head.
Titania, muſick call, and ſtrike more dead
Than common ſleep: of all theſe five the ſenſe.
Tita. Muſick, ho muſick, ſuch as charmeth ſleep.
Still Muſick ſtill.
Rob. When thou awak'ſt, with thine own fools eyes peep.
Ob. Sound, muſick; come my Queen, take hand with me,
And rock the ground whereon theſe ſleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity;
And will to morrow midnight ſolemnly
Dance in Duke Theſeus houſe triumphantly,
And bleſs it to all fair poſterity.
There ſhall theſe pairs of faithful Lovers be
Wedded with Theſeus all in jollity.
Rob. Fairy King attend, and mark,
I do hear the morning Lark.
Ob. Then my Queen in ſilence ſad,
Trip we after the nights ſhade;
We the Globe can compaſs ſoon,
Swifter than the wandring Moon.
Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I ſleeping here was found,
Sleepers lie ſtill.
With theſe mortals on the ground. Exeunt.
Wind Horns.

Scene II

Enter Theſeus, Egæus, Hippolita and all his train.

Theſ. Go one of you, find out the Forreſter,
For now our obſervation is performed:
And ſince we have the vaward of the day,
My Love ſhall hear the muſick of my hounds.
Uncouple in the Weſtern valley, go;
Diſpatch I ſay, and find the Forreſter.
VVe will fair Queen, up to the Mountains top,
And mark the muſical confuſion
Of hounds, and eccho in conjunction.
Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
VVhen in a wood of Creet they bayed the Bear
VVith hounds of Sparta; never did I hear
Such gallant chiding. For beſides the groves,
The Skies, the Fountains, every Region near,
Seem'd all one mutual cry. I never heard
So muſical a diſcord, ſuch ſweet thunder.
Theſ. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, ſo ſanded, and their heads are hung
VVith ears that ſweep away the morning dew,
Crook-kneed, and dew-lapt, like Theſſalonian Bulls,
Slow in purſuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
VVas never hallowed to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Creet, in Sparta, nor in Theſſaly;
Judge when you hear. But ſoft, what nymphs are theſe?
Eg. My Lord, this is my daughter here aſleep,
And this Lyſander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, old Nedars Helena;
I wonder of their being here together.
Theſ. No doubt they roſe up early, to obſerve
The rite of May, and hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our ſolemnity.
But ſpeak Egæus, is not this the day
That Hermia ſhould give anſwer of her choice?

Ege.

Ege. It is my Lord.

Theſ. Go bid the Huntſmen wake them with their Horns.

Horns, and they wake.
Shout within, they all ſtart up.

Theſ. Good morrow, friends; Saint Valentine is paſt.
Begin theſe wood birds but to couple now?

Lyſ. Pardon, my Lord.

Theſ. I pray you all ſtand up.
I know you two are Rival enemies.
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is ſo far from jealouſie,
To ſleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lyſ. My Lord, I ſhall reply amazedly,
Half ſleep, half waking. But as yet I ſwear,
I cannot truly ſay how I came here.
But as I think (for truly would I ſpeak),
And now I do bethink me, ſo it is;
I came with Hermia hither: Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord; you have enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, upon his head;
They would have ſtol'n away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me;
You of your wife, and me of my conſent;
Of my conſent, that ſhe ſhould be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, fair Helen told me of their ſtealth,
Of this their purpoſe hither, to this wood;
And I in fury hither followed them:
Fair Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power
(But by ſome power it is) my love
To Hermia (melted as the ſnow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gaude,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The object and the pleaſure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I ſaw Hermia;
But like a ſickneſs did I loath this food:
But as in health, come to my natural taſte,
Now do I wiſh it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

Theſ. Fair Lovers, you are fortunately met;
Of this diſcourſe we ſhall hear more anon.
Egeus, I will over-bear your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with us,
Theſe couples ſhall eternally be knit;
And for the morning now is ſomething worn,
Our purpoſ'd hunting ſhall be ſet aſide.
Away, with us to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a Feaſt in great ſolemnity.
Come, Hippolita. Exit Duke and Lords.

Dem. Theſe things ſeem ſmall and undiſtinguiſhable,
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks I ſee theſe things with parted eye,
When every thing ſeems double.

Hel. So methinks;
And I have found Demetrius like a Jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. It ſeems to me,
That yet we ſleep, we dream. Do not you think
The Duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea, and my Father.

Hel. And Hippolita.

Lyſ. And he bid us follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake; let's follow him, and by the way let us recount our dreams.

Bottome wakes. Exit Lovers.

Clo. When my Cue comes, call me, and I will anſwer.
My next is, moſt fair Piramus. Hey ho, Peter Quince? Flute the Bellows-mender? Snout the Tinker? Starveling? God's my Life! Stol'n hence, and left me aſleep. I have had a moſt rare Viſion. I had a dream paſt the wit of man to ſay what dream it was. Man is but an Aſs, if he go about to expound this dream. Methought I was, there is no man can tell what. Methought I was, and methought I had.—But man is but a patch'd fool, if he will offer to ſay what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not ſeen; man's hand is not able to taſte, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a Ballad of this dream; it ſhall be called Bottome's Dream, becauſe it hath no bottom; and I will ſing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke: Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I ſhall ſing it at her death. Exit

Scene IV. Athens.

Enter Quince, Flute, Thisby, Snout, and Starvling.

Qui. Have you ſent to Bottome's houſe? Is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is tranſported.

Flute. Thif. If he come not, then the play is marr'd. It goes forward, doth it?

Qui. It is not poſſible; you have not a man in all Athens able to diſcharge Piramus but he.

Flute. Thi. No, he hath ſimply the beſt wit of any handycraft man in Athens.

Qui. Yea, and the beſt perſon too; and he is a very Paramour for a ſweet voice.

Flute. Thi. You muſt ſay, Paragon, A Paramour is (God bleſs us) a thing of naught.

Enter Snug the Joiner.

Snug. Maſters, the Duke is coming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords and Ladies more married; If our ſport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flute. Thif. O ſweet Bully Bottome! thus hath he loſt ſixpence a day, during his life; he could not have ſcaped ſixpence a day. And the Duke had not given him ſixpence a day for playing Piramus, I'll be hang'd: He would have deſerved it. Six pence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottome.

Bot. Where are theſe lads? Where are theſe hearts?

Qui. Bottome, O moſt couragious day! O moſt happy hour!

Bot. Maſters, I am to diſcourſe wonders; but ask me not what; for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing as it fell out.

Qui. Let us hear, ſweet Bottome.

Bot. Not a word of me: All that I will tell you, is that the Duke hath dined. Get your Apparel together, good Strings to your Beards, new Ribbands to your Pumps, meet preſently at the Palace, every man look o're his Part: for the ſhort and the long is, our Play is preferred: In any caſe let Thisby have clean linnen; and let not him that plays the Lion, pare his Nails; for they ſhall hang out for the Lion's Claws. And moſt dear Actors, eat no Onions, nor Garlick; for we are to utter ſweet breath; and I do not doubt to hear them ſay, it is a ſweet Comedy. No more words: away, go away. Exeunt.

Scene III.

Actus

Actus Quintus. Scene 1

Enter Theſeus, Hippolita, Egæus and his Lords.

Hip. 'Tis ſtrange, my Theſeus, that theſe Lovers ſpeak of.
Theſ. More ſtrange than true. I never may believe
Theſe antick fables, nor theſe Fairy toys;
Lovers and mad men have ſuch ſeething brains,
Such ſhaping phantaſies, that apprehend more
Than cool reaſon ever comprehends.
The Lunatick, the Lover, and the Poet,
Are of imagination all compact:
One ſees more devils than vaſt hell can hold;
The mad man, The Lover, all as frantick,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.
The Poet's eye in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,
And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things
Unknown; the Poet's pen turns them to ſhapes,
And gives to airy nothing, a local habitation,
And a name. Such tricks hath ſtrong imagination,
That if it would but apprehend ſome joy,
It comprehends ſome bringer of that joy.
Or in the night, imagining ſome fear,
How eaſie is a buſh ſuppos'd a Bear?
Hip. But all the ſtory of the night told over,
And all their minds transfigur'd ſo together,
More witneſſeth than fancies images,
And grows to ſomething of great conſtancy;
But howſoever, ſtrange, and admirable.

Enter Lovers, Lyſander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

Theſ. Here come the Lovers, full of joy and mirth.
Joy, gentle friends, joy, and freſh days of Love
Accompany your hearts.
Lyſ. More than to us,
Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed.
Theſ. Come now, what masks, what dances ſhall we have,
To wear away this long age of three hours,
Between our after-ſupper, and bed-time?
Where is our uſual manager of mirth?
What Revels are in hand? Is there no play,
To eaſe the anguiſh of a torturing hour?
Call Egeus. Philoſtrate. [Enter Phil.
Phi. Egeus. Here, mighty Theſeus.
Theſ. Say, what abridgement have you for this evening?
What maſk? What muſick? How ſhall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with ſome delight?
Phi. Eg. There is a brief how many ſports are ripe
Make choice of which your Highneſs will ſee firſt.
Phi. Lyſ. The battel with the Centaure to be ſung
By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harp.
Theſ. We'll none of that. That have I told my love
In glory of my kinſman Hercules.
Lyſ. The riot of the tipſie Bachinals,
Tearing the Thraſian ſinger in their rage.
Theſ. That is an old device, and it was plaid
When I from Thebes came laſt a Conqueror.
Lyſ. The thrice three Muſes, mourning for the death of Learning, late deceaſt in beggary.
Theſ. That is ſome Satyr keen and critical,
Not ſorting with a nuptial ceremony.
Lyſ. A tedious brief Scene of young Piramus,
And his love Thisby; very tragical mirth.
Theſ. Merry and tragical? Tedious and brief? That is, hot ice, and wondrous ſtrange ſnow. How ſhall we find the concord of this diſcord?
Phi. Eg. A Play there is, my Lord, ſome ten words long,
Which is as brief as I have known a Play;
But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious: for in all the Play
There is not one word apt, one Player fitted.
And tragical, my noble Lord, it is:
For Piramus therein doth kill himſelf.
Which when I ſaw rehearſt, I muſt confeſs,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The paſſion of loud laughter never ſhed.
Theſ. What are they that do play it?
Phi. Eg. Hard handed men, that work in Athens here,
Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
And now have toiled their unbreathed memories
With this ſame Play, againſt your Nuptials.
Theſ. And we will hear it.
Phil. No, my noble Lord, it is not for you. I have heard
It over, and it is nothing, nothing in the world,
Unleſs you can find ſport in their intents,
Extreamly ſtretcht, and cond with cruel pain,
To do you ſervice.
Theſ. I will hear that Play: For never any thing
Can be amiſs, when ſimpleneſs and duty tender it.
Go bring them in, and take your places, Ladies. Exit Phi:
Hip, I love not to ſee wretchedneſs o're charged,
And duty in his ſervice periſhing.
Theſ. Why gentle ſweet, you ſhall ſee no ſuch thing.
Hip. He ſays they can do nothing in this kind.
Theſ. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.
Our ſport ſhall be, to take what they miſtake;
And what poor duty cannot do, noble reſpect
Takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great Clerks have purpoſed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have ſeen them ſhiver, and look pale,
Make periods in the midſt of ſentences,
Throttle their practiz'd accent in their fears,
And in concluſion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Truſt me ſweet,
Out of this ſilence yet, I pickt a welcome;
And in the modeſty of fearful duty,
I read as much as from the ratling tongue
Of ſawcy and audacious eloquence.
Love therefore, and tongue-tide ſimplicity,
In leaſt, ſpeak moſt, to my capacity. [Enter Phil.
Phi. Eg. So pleaſe your Grace, the Prologue is addreſt.
Du. Let him approach. Flor. Trum.

Enter Prologue. [illegible] Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you ſhould think we come not to offend,
But with good will. To ſhew our ſimple ſkill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Conſider then, we come but in deſpight.
We do not come as minding to content you,
Our true intent is: All for your delight,
We are not here. That you ſhould here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their ſhow,
You ſhall know all, that you are like to know.
Theſ. This fellow doth not ſtand upon points.
Lyſ. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knows not the ſtop. A good moral, my Lord. It is not enough to ſpeak, but to ſpeak true.
Hip. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a child on the Recorder, a ſound, but not in government.
Theſ. His ſpeech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all diſordered. Who is the next?
Tawyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus, and Thisby, Wall, Moon-ſhine, and Lion.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this ſhow;
But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.
This man is Piramus, if you would know;

This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certain.
This man with lime and rough-caſt, doth preſent
Wall, the vile wall, which did theſe lovers ſunder:
And through wall's chink (poor ſouls) they are content
To whiſper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man with Lanthorn, dog, and buſh of thorn,
Preſenteth Moon-ſhine: For if you will know,
By Moon-ſhine did theſe Lovers think no ſcorn
To meet at Ninus tomb, there, there to woo:
This grizly beaſt (which Lion hight by name)
The truſty Thisby, coming firſt by night,
Did ſcare away, or rather did affright:
And as ſhe fled, her Mantle ſhe did fall;
Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did ſtain.
Anon comes Piramus, ſweet youth and tall,
And finds his gentle Thisbies Mantle ſlain;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breaſt,
And Thisby, tarrying in the Mulberry ſhade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the reſt,
Let Lion, Moon-ſhine, Wall, and Lovers twain,
At large diſcourſe, while here they do remain.

[Exit all but Wall.

Theſ. I wonder if the Lion be to ſpeak.
Dem. No wonder, my Lord; one Lion may, when many Aſſes do.

Exit Lion, Thisby, and Moon ſhine.

Wall. In this ſame interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snowt (by name) preſent a wall:
And ſuch a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a crannied hole or chink;
Through which the Lovers, Piramus and Thisby,
Did whiſper often very ſecretly.
This loam, this rough-caſt, and this ſtone doth ſhew,
That I am that ſame Wall; the truth is ſo.
And this the cranny is, right and ſiniſter,
Through which the fearful Lovers are to whiſper.
Theſ. Would you deſire Lime and Hair to ſpeak better?
Dem. It is the wittieſt partition that ever I heard diſcourſed, my Lord,
Theſ. Piramus draws near the wall: ſilence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr O grim look'd night! O night with hue ſo black!
O night, which ever art, when day is not!
O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,
I fear my Thisbies promiſe is forgot.
And thou, O wall, thou ſweet and lovely wall,
That ſtands between her father's ground and mine,
Thou wall, O wall, O ſweet and lovely wall,
Shew me thy chink, to blink through with mine eyne.
Thanks courteous wall; Jove ſhield thee well for this!
But what ſee I? No Thisby do I ſee.
O wicked wall, through whom I ſee no bliſs,
Curſt be thy ſtones for thus deceiving me!
Theſ. The wall methinks, being ſenſible, ſhould curſe again.
Pyr. No in truth ſir, he ſhould not. Deceiving me,
Is Thisbies cue; ſhe is to enter, and I am to ſpy
Her through the wall. You ſhall ſee it will fall.

Enter Thisby.

Pat as I told you; yonder ſhe comes.
Thiſ. O wall, full often haſt thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me.
My cherry lips have often kiſt thy ſtones;
Thy ſtones with Lime and Hair knit up in thee.
Pyr. I hear a voice; now will I to the chink,
To ſpy and I can ſee my Thisbies face. Thisby?
Thiſ. My love thou art, my love I think.
Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lovers grace,
And like Limander am I truſty ſtill.
Thiſ. And like Helen, till the Fates me kill.
Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus was ſo true.
Thiſ. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.
Pyr. O kiſs me through the hole of this vile wall.
Thiſ. I kiſs the wall's hole, not your lips at all.
Pyr. Wilt thou at Ninnys tomb meet me ſtraightway?
Thiſ. Tide life, tide death, I come without delay.
Wall. Thus have I Wall, my part diſcharged ſo:
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.
Duk. Now is the mure down between the two Neighbours.
Dem. No remedy, my Lord, when walls are ſo wilful, to hear without warning.
Dut. This is the ſilleſt ſtuff that e're I heard.
Duk. The beſt in this kind are but ſhadows, and the worſt are no worſe, if imagination amend them.
Dut. It muſt be your imagination then, and not theirs.
Duk. If we imagine no worſe of them than they of themſelves, they may paſs for excellent men. Here comes two noble beaſts, in a Man and a Lion.

Enter Lion, and Moon-ſhine

Lion. You Ladies, you (whoſe gentle hearts do fear
The ſmalleſt monſtrous Mouſe that creeps on floor)
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When Lion rough in wildeſt rage doth roar.
Then know that I, one Snug the Joiner am
A Lion fell, nor elſe no Lion's dam:
For if I ſhould as Lion come in ſtrife
Into this place, 'twere pity of my life.
Duk. A very gentle beaſt, and of a good conſcience.
Dem. The very beſt at a beaſt, my Lord, that e're I ſaw.
Liſ. This Lion is a very Fox for his valour.
Duk. True, and a Gooſe for his diſcretion.
Dem. Not ſo, my Lord; for his valour cannot carry his diſcretion, and the Fox carries the Gooſe.
Duk. His diſcretion I am ſure cannot carry his valour; for the Gooſe carries not the Fox. It is well: leave it to his diſcretion, and let us hearken to the Moon.
Moon. This Lanthorn doth the horned Moon preſent.
Dem. He ſhould have worn the horns on his head.
Duk. He is no creſcent, and his horns are inviſible, within the circumference.
Moon. This Lanthorn doth the horned Moon preſent:
My ſelf, the man i'th Moon doth ſeem to be.
Duk. This is the greateſt error of all the reſt; the man ſhould be put into the Lanthorn: How is it elſe the man i' th' Moon?
Dem. He dares not come there for the candle;
For you ſee it is already in ſnuff.
Dut. I am weary of this Moon; would he would change.
Duk. It appears by his ſmall light of diſcretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courteſie, in all reaſon, we muſt ſtay the time.
Lyſ. Proceed Moon.
Moon. All that I have to ſay, is to tell you, that the Lanthorn is the Moon; I, the man in the Moon; this thorn buſh, my thorn buſh; and this dog, my dog.
Dem. Why all theſe ſhould be in the Lanthorn: for they are in the Moon. But ſilence; here comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby.

Thiſ. This is old Ninnys tomb: where is my love?
Lion. Oh.

The

The Lion roars, Thisby runs off.

Dem. Well roar'd Lion.
Duk. Well run Thisby.
Dut. Well ſhone Moon.
Truly the Moon ſhines with a good grace.
Duk. Well mouz'd Lion.
Dem. And then came Piramus.
Lyſ. And ſo the Lion vaniſht.

Enter Piramus.

Pir. Sweet Moon, I thank thee for thy ſunny beams;
I thank thee Moon, for ſhining now ſo bright:
For by thy gracious, golden, glittering ſtreams,
I truſt to taſte of trueſt Thisbies ſight.
But ſtay: O ſpight! but mark, poor Knight,
What dreadful dole is here?
Eyes do you ſee! How can it be!
O dainty Duck! O Deer!
Thy Mantle good; what, ſtain'd with blood!
Approach you Furies fell:
O Fates! come, come: Cut thred and thrum,
Quail, cruſh, conclude, and quell.
Duk. This paſſion, and the death of a dear friend,
Would go near to make a man look ſad.
Dut. Beſhrew my heart, but I pity the man.
Pir. O wherefore Nature didſt thou Lions frame?
Since Lion vild hath here deflour'd my Deer:
Which is: no, no, which was the faireſt Dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.
Come tears, confound: Out ſword, and wound
The pap of Piramus:
Ay, that left pap, where heart doth hop:
Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.
Now am I dead, now am I fled, my ſoul is in the ſky:
Tongue loſe thy light, Moon take thy flight,
Now die, die, die, die, die.
Dem. No die, but an ace for him; for he is but one.
Lyſ. Leſs than an ace man; For he is dead; he is nothing.
Duk. With the help of a Surgeon he might yet recover, and prove an Aſs.
Dut. How chance the Moon-ſhine is gone before?
Thisby comes back, and finds her Lover.

Enter Thisby.

Duk. She will find him by ſtar-light.
Here ſhe comes; and her paſſion ends the play.
Dut. Methinks ſhe ſhould not uſe a long one for ſuch a Piramus: I hope ſhe will be brief.
Dem. A moth will turn the ballance, which Piramus, which Thisby is the better.
Lyſ. She hath ſpied him already with thoſe ſweet eyes.
Dem. And thus ſhe means, videlicet.
Thiſ. Aſleep, my Love? What, dead, my Dove?
O Piramus ariſe:
Speak, ſpeak. Quite dumb? Dead, dead? A tomb
Muſt cover thy ſweet eyes.
Theſe lilly lips, this cherry noſe,
Theſe yellow cowſlip cheeks
Are gone, are gone: Lovers make moan!
His eyes were green as Leeks.
O ſiſters three, come, come to me,
With hands as pale as milk;
Lay them in gore, ſince you have ſhore
With ſheers, this thread of ſilk.
Tongue not a word; Come truſty ſword;
Come blade, my breaſt imbrue:
And farewel friends, thus Thisby ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.
Duk. Moon-ſhine and Lion are left to bury the dead.
Dem. Ay, and Wall too.
Bot. No, I aſſure you, the Wall is down that parted their Fathers. Will it pleaſe you to ſee the Epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, between two of our Company?

Duk. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuſe. Never excuſe; for when the Players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had plaid Piramus, and hung himſelf in Thisbies garter, it would have been a fine Tragedy: and ſo it is truly, and very notably diſcharg'd. But come, your Burgomask; let your Epilogue alone. [Here a Dance of Clowns
The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Lovers, to bed; 'tis almoſt Fairy time.
I fear we ſhall out-ſleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have over-watcht.
This palpable groſs play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gate of night. Sweet friends, to bed.
A fortnight hold we this ſolemnity,
In nightly Revels, and new jollity. [Exeunt.

Scene III.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lions roars,
And the Wolf beholds the Moon: howls
Whileſt the heavy Ploughman ſnoars,
All with weary task fore-done.
Now the waſted brands do glow,
Whil'ſt the ſcritch-owl, ſcritching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a ſhrowd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his ſpright,
In the Church-way paths to glide;
And we Fairies, that do run,
By the triple Hecats team,
From the preſence of the Sun,
Following darkneſs like a dream,
Now are frolick; not a Mouſe
Shall diſturb this hallowed houſe.
I am ſent with broom before,
To ſweep the duſt behind the door.

Enter King and Queen of Fairies with their train.

Ob. Through the houſe give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowſie fire,
Every Elf and Fairy ſpright,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, ſing and dance trippingly.
Tita. Firſt rehearſe this ſong by roat,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairy grace,
Will we ſing and bleſs this place.

The Song.

Now until the break of day,
Through this houſe each Fairy ſtray,
To the beſt Bride-bed will we,
Which by us ſhall bleſſed be;
And the iſſue there create,
Ever ſhall be fortunate:
So ſhall all the couples three,
Ever true in loving be:
And the blots in Natures hand,
Shall not in their iſſue ſtand;
Never mole, harelip, nor ſcar,
Nor mark prodigious, ſuch as are
Deſpiſed in Nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field dew conſecrate,
Every Fairy take his gate,
And each ſeveral chamber bleſs,
Through this Palace with ſweet peace,

Ever

Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away, make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

Robin. If we shadows have offended,
Think but (this, and all is mended)
That you have but slumbred here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theam,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend;
If you pardon, we will mend.
And as I am honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck,
Now to scape the Serpent's tongue,
We will make amends e're long:
Else the Puck a liar call.
So good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

[Exeunt. omn.

THE Merchant of Venice.

Scene Partly att Venice, & partly att Belmont, the Seat of Portia on the Continent

Actus Primus. Scene 1.

Enter Anthonio, Solarino, and Salanio.

Anth.

In sooth I know not why I am so sad;
It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came (by it;
What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is (born,
I am to learn: and such a Want-wit sad- (ness makes of me,
That I have much a-do to know my self.

Sal. Your mind is tossing on the Ocean,
There where your Argosies with portly sail,
Like Signiors and rich Burgers on the flood,
Or as it were the Pageants of the sea,
Do over-peer the petty Traffickers
That curtsie to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.
Sola. Believe me, sir, had I such ventures forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still
Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and roads;
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt,
Would make me sad.
Sal. My wind cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows, and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew docks in sand,
Vailing her high top lower than her rib,
To kiss her burial. Should I go to Church,
And see the holy Edifice of stone,
And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Vessel's side,
Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To think on this, and shall I lack the thought,
That such a thing bechanc'd would make me sad?
But tell not me, I know Anthonio
Is sad to think upon his Merchandize.
Anth. Believe me, no, I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore my Merchandize makes me not sad.
Sola. Why then you are in love.
Anth. Fie, fie.
Sola. Not in love neither! then let us say you are sad
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as easie
For you to laugh and leap, and say you are merry,
Because you are not sad. Now by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time;
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrots at a bag-piper;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'l not shew their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestar swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenso, and Gratiano.

Sola. Here comes Bassanio,
Your most noble Kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenso. Fare ye well;
We leave you now with better company.
Sola. I would have staid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.
Anth. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it your own business calls on you,
And you embrace th' occasion to depart.
Sal. Good morrow, my good Lords.
Bass. Good Signiors both, when shall we laugh? say when?
You grow exceeding strange; must it be so?
Sal. We'l make our leisures to attend on yours.
~~Exeunt Solarino, and Solanio.~~

Solar
~~Lord~~ My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Anthonio,
We

We two will leave you, but at dinner-time
I pray you have in mind where we must meet.
Bass. I will not fail you.
Grat. You look not well, signior Anthonio;
You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it, that do buy it with much care.
Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.
Anth. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano,
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.
Grat. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughter: let wrinckles come,
And let my Liver rather heat with Wine,
Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his Grandsire cut in Alabaster?
Sleep when he wakes, and creep into the Jaundice,
By being peevish? I tell thee what, Anthonio,
I love thee, and it is my love that speaks:
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilful stilness entertain,
With purpose to be dress't in an opinion
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit,
As who should say, I am, sir, an Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dog bark.
O my Anthonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing; when I am very sure,
If they should speak, would almost damn those ears,
Which hearing them, would call their brothers fools. *
I'll tell thee more of this another time.
But fish not with this melancholly bait,
For this fool Gudgeon, this opinion.
Come good Lorenzo, fare ye well a while,
I'll end my exhortation after dinner.
Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-time.
I must be one of these same dumb wise men;
For Gratiano never lets me speak.
Gra. Well, keep me company but two years moe,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.
Anth. Fare well; I'll grow a talker for this gear.
Gra. Thanks, i'faith; for silence is only commendable
In a Neats Tongue dri'd, and a maid not vendible.
Anth. Is that any thing now?
Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice: his reasons are two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff; you shall seek all day e're you find them; and when you have them, they are not worth the search.
Anth. Well; tell me now what Lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
That you to day promis'd to tell me of?
Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Anthonio,
How much I have disabled mine estate,
By something shewing a more swelling port
Than my faint means would grant continuance;
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate; but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
Hath left me gag'd: to you, Anthonio,
I owe the most in money, and in love,
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.
Anth. I pray you good Bassanio, let me know it,
And if it stand as you your self still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd
My purse, my person, my extreamest means
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.
Bass. In my school days, when I had lost one shaft,
I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advised watch,
To find the other, forth; and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I urge this child-hood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence.
I owe you much, and like a wilful youth,
That which I owe is lost; but if you please
To shoot another arrow that self way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim, Or to find both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.
Anth. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance;
And out of doubt you do me more wrong,
In making question of my uttermost,
Than if you had made waste of all I have:
Then do but say to me, what should I do,
That in your knowledg may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it: therefore speak.
Bass. In Belmont is a Lady richly left,
And she is fair, and fairer than that word,
Of wondrous vertues; sometimes from her eyes,
I did receive fair speechless messages;
Her name is Portia, nothing undervalu'd
To Cato's daughter, Brutus Portia:
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth;
For the Four winds blow in from every coast
Renowned Suitors; and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont, Colchos strond,
And many Jasons come in quest of her.
O my Anthonio, had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind presages me such thrift, * Thrift for Thrive
That I should questionless be fortunate.
Anth. Thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea,
Neither have I money, nor commodity
To raise a present sum; therefore go forth,
Try what my credit can in Venice do,
That shall be rack'd even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont to fair Portia:
Go presently enquire, and so will I,
Where money is, and I no question make
To have it of my trust, or for my sake. Exeunt

Exeunt 3 Casketts are Set out. 1 Gold, 1 Silver, 1 Lead.
Grat. Lo

Enter Portia with her waiting-woman Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is weary of this great world.
Ner. You would be, sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are; and yet for ought I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing; therefore it is no small happiness to be seated in the mean; superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.
Por. Good sentences, and well pronounc'd.
Ner. They would be better if well followed.
Por. If to do were as easie as to know what were good to do, Chappels had been Churches, and poor mens Cottages Princes Palaces: It is a good Divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o're a cold decree; such a hare is Madness, the Youth, to skip o're the meshes of good counsel, the Cripple: But this reason is not in fashion to chuse me a husband: O me, the word chuse! I may neither chuse whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike, so is the will of a living daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father: is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot chuse one, nor refuse none?
Ner. Your Father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations; therefore the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of Gold, Silver, and Lead; (whereof who chuses his meaning,

Scene II. Belmont

chuſes you, will no doubt never be choſen by any rightly, but one who you ſhall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of theſe Princely ſuters that are already come?

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou nameſt them, I will deſcribe them, and according to my deſcription, level at my affection.

Ner. Firſt there is the Neapolitan Prince.

Por. Ay that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horſe, and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can ſhew himſelf: I am much afraid my Lady his mother plaid falſe with a Smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown, (as who ſhould ſay if you will not have me, chuſe: he hears merry tales and ſmiles not, I fear he will prove the weeping Philoſopher when he grows old, being ſo full of unmannerly ſadneſs in his youth.) I had rather be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of theſe: God defend me from theſe two.

Ner. How ſay you by the French Lord, Mounſieur Le Boun?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him paſs for a man; in truth I know it is a ſin to be a mocker, but he! why he hath a horſe better than the Neapolitans, a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine, he is every man in no man, if a Taffel ſing, he falls ſtraight a capring, he will fence with his own ſhadow; if I ſhould marry him, I ſhould marry twenty husbands; if he would deſpiſe me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madneſs, I ſhould never requite him.

Ner. What ſay you then to Fauconbridge, the young Baron of England?

Por. You know I ſay nothing to him, for he underſtands not me, nor I him; he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian, and you may come into the Court and ſwear that I have a poor penny-worth in the Engliſh: he is a proper mans picture, but alas! who can converſe with a dumb ſhow? how odly he is ſuited, I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hoſe in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Engliſh-man, and ſwore he would pay him again when he was able. I think the Frenchman became his ſurety, and ſealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German the Duke of Saxonies Nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning when he is ſober, and moſt vilely in the afternoon when he is drunk; when he is beſt, he is a little worſe then a man, and when he is worſt, he is little better then a beaſt: and the worſt fall that ever fall, I hope I ſhall make ſhift to go without him.

Ner. If he ſhould offer to chuſe, and chuſe the right Casket, you ſhould refuſe to perform your Fathers will, if you ſhould refuſe to accept him.

Por. Therefore for fear of the worſt, I pray thee ſet a deep Glaſs of Rennish-wine on the contrary Casket, for if the Devil be within, and the temptation without, I know he will chuſe it. I will do any thing Neriſſa ere I will be married to a ſponge.

Ner. You need not fear Lady the having any of theſe Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeed to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more ſuit, unleſs you may be won by ſome other ſort than your Fathers impoſition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibilla, I will die as chaſt as Diana: unleſs I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcel of wooers are ſo reaſonable, for there is not one among them but I doat on his very abſence: and wiſh them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, Lady, in your Fathers time, a Venetian, a Scholar and a Souldier that came hither in company of the Marqueſs of Mountferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Baſſanio, as I think, ſo was he call'd.

Ner. True Madam, he of all the men that ever my fooliſh eyes look'd upon, was the beſt deſerving a fair Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praiſe. How now? what news?

Enter a Serving-man.

Ser. The four ſtrangers ſeek you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fiſt,
The Prince of Morocco, who brings word the Prince his Maſter will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fiſt welcome with ſo good heart as I can bid the other four farewel, I ſhould be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a Saint, and the complexion of a Devil, I had rather he ſhould ſhrive me than wive me. Come Neriſſa, ſirra go before; while we ſhut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. Exeunt.

Scene III Venice.

Enter Baſſanio with Shylock the Jew.

Shy. Three thouſand Ducats, well.

Baſſ. Ay ſir, for three months.

Shy. For three months, well.

Baſſ. For the which, as I told you, Anthonio ſhall be bound.

Shy. Anthonio ſhall become bound, well.

Baſſ. May you ſtead me? Will you pleaſure me? Shall I know your anſwer?

Shy. Three thouſand Ducats for three months, And Anthonio bound.

Baſſ. Your anſwer to that.

Shy. Anthonio is a good man.

Baſſ. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Shy. No, no, no, no; my meaning in ſaying he is a good man, is to have you underſtand me, that he is ſufficient; yet his means are in ſuppoſition: he hath an Argoſie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I underſtand moreover upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath ſquandred abroad, but Ships are but boords. Sailers but men, there be Land Rats, and Water Rats, Water theives and Land Theives, I mean Pyrats; and then there is the peril of Waters, Winds, and Rocks: the man is notwithſtanding ſufficient; three thouſand Ducats, I think I may take his bond.

Baſſ. Be aſſured you may.

Jew. I will be aſſured I may; and that I may be aſſured, I will bethink me, may I ſpeak with Anthonio.

Baſſ. If it pleaſe you to dine with us.

Jew. Yes, to ſmell pork, to eat of the Habitation which your Prophet the Nazarite conjured the Devil into? I will buy with you, ſell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and ſo following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you.

What news on the Rialto; who is he comes here?

Enter Anthonio.

Baſſ. This is Signior Anthonio.

Jew. How like a fawning publican he looks! (Aside)

I hate him, for he is a Chriſtian:
But more for that in low ſimplicity
He lends out money gratis, and brings down
The rate of uſance here with us in Venice.
If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the antient grudge I bear him.
He hates our ſacred Nation, and he rails
Even there where Merchants moſt do Congregate
On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift,
Which he calls intereſt: Curſed be my Tribe
If I forgive him.
Baſſ. Shylock, do you hear?
Shy. I am debating of my preſent ſtore,
And by the near gueſs of my memory
I cannot inſtantly raiſe up the groſs
Of full three thouſand Ducats: what of that?
Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furniſh me; but ſoft, how many Months
Do you deſire? Reſt you fair good Signior, To Ant.
Your worſhip was the laſt man in our mouths.
Anth. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow although
By taking, nor by giving of Exceſs,
Yet to ſupply the ripe wants of my friend,
I'll break a cuſtom: is he yet poſſeſt
How much he would?
Shy. Ay three thouſand Ducats.
Anth. And for three months.
Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me ſo.
Well then, your bond: but let me ſee, but hear you,
Me thoughts you ſaid, you neither lend nor borrow
Upon advantage.
Anth. I do never uſe it
Shy. When Jacob graz'd his Uncle Laban's ſheep, And Baſſ.
This Jacob from our holy Abraham was
(As his wiſe Mother wrought in his behalf)
The third poſſeſſor, Ay, he was the third.
Anth. And what of him, did he take intereſt?
Shy. No, not take intereſt, not as you would ſay
Directly intereſt, mark what Jacob did,
When Laban and himſelf were compromiz'd Yeanling
That all the eanlings which were ſtreak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacobs hire; the Ewes being rank,
In end of Autumn turned to the Rams; Then.
And when the work of generation was,
Between theſe woolly breeders in the Act,
The skilful ſhepherd pil'd me certain wands,
And in the doing of the deed of kind,
He ſtuck them up before the fulſome Ewes,
Who then conceiving, did in yeaning time
Fall party-colour'd Lambs, and thoſe were Jacobs.
This was a way to thrive, and he was bleſt:
And thrift is bleſſing, if men ſteal it not.
Anth. This was a venture, ſir, that Jacob ſerv'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to paſs,
But ſway'd and faſhion'd by the hand of heaven,
Was this inſerted to make intereſt good?
Or is your gold and ſilver Ewes and Rams?
Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breed as faſt,
But note me Signior.
Anth. Mark you this Baſſanio,
The Devil can cite Scripture for his purpoſe.
An evil ſoul producing holy witneſs,
Is like a villain with a ſmiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O what a goodly outſide falſehood hath.
Shy. Three thouſand Ducats, 'tis a good round ſum.
Three months from twelve, then let me ſee the rate.
Anth. Well Shylock, ſhall we be beholding to you?
Shy. Signior Anthonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my moneys and my uſances:
Still have I born it with a patient ſhrug
(For ſufferance is the badge of all our Tribe):
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And ſpit upon my Jewiſh gaberdine,
And all for uſe of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then, you come to me, and you ſay,
Shylock, we would have moneys; you ſay ſo:
You that did void your rheume upon my beard,
And foot me as you ſpurn a ſtranger cur
Over your threſhold, moneys is your ſuit,
What ſhould I ſay to you? Should I not ſay,
Hath a dog money? is it poſſible
A cur ſhould lend three thouſand Ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bondmans key,
With bated breath, and whiſpring humbleneſs,
Say this: Fair ſir, you ſpet on me on Wedneſday laſt;
You ſpurn'd me ſuch a day; another time
You call'd me dog; and for theſe curteſies
I'll lend you thus much moneys.
Anth. I am as like to call thee ſo again,
To ſpet on thee again, to ſpurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friend, for when did friendſhip take
A breed of barren metal of his friend?*
But lend it rather to thine enemy,
Who if he break, thou maiſt with better face
Exact the penalty.
Shy. Why look you how you ſtorm,
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the ſhames that you have ſtain'd me with,
Supply your preſent wants, and take no doit
Of uſance for my moneys, and you'll not hear me;
This is kind I offer.
Baſſ. This were kindneſs. And
Shy. This kindneſs will I ſhow;
Go with me to a Notary, ſeal me there
Your ſingle bond, and in a merry ſport
If you repay me not on ſuch a day,
In ſuch a place, ſuch ſum or ſums as are
Expreſt in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair fleſh, to be cut off and taken ſhall please
In what part of your body it pleaſeth me.
Anth. Content in faith, I'll ſeal to ſuch a bond,
And ſay there is much kindneſs in the Jew.
Baſſ. You ſhall not ſeal to ſuch a bond for me,
I'll rather dwell in my neceſſity.
Anth. Why fear not man, I will not forfeit it;
Within theſe two months, (that's a month before
This bond expires,) I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
Shy. O Father Abraham, what theſe Chriſtians are,
Whoſe own hard dealing teaches them ſuſpect
The thoughts of others! Pray you tell me this,
If he ſhould break his day, what ſhould I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of mans fleſh taken from a man,
Is not ſo eſtimable, profitable neither,
As fleſh of Muttons, Beefs, or Goats. I ſay,
To buy his favour, I extend this friendſhip;
If he will take it, ſo; if not adieu,
And for my love I pray you wrong me not.
Anth. Yes Shylock, I will ſeal unto this bond.
Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the Notaries,
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purſe the Ducats ſtraight,
See to my houſe, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrifty knave: and preſently
I'll be with you. [Exit.
Anth. Hie thee gentle Jew. This Hebrew will turn
Chriſtian, he grows kind.
Baſſ. I like not fair terms, and a villains mind.
Anth. Come on, in this there can be no diſmay,
My Ship's come home a month before the day. [Exeunt.

* Breed of Metal meaning money at usury, money that breeds more — — The Old Editions (two of em) have it A Bribe of barren Metal — —

Actus Secundus. Scene I.

Belmont.

Morochius a tawny Moor all white, and three or four followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerrissa and her train. Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complection,
The shadowed livery of the burnish'd Sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature Northward Born,
Where Phœbus fire scarce thaws the Icicles,
And let us make incision for your Love,
To prove whose Blood is reddest, his or mine:
I tell the Lady this aspect of mine
Hath feard the valiant; (by my love I swear)
The best regarded Virgins of our Clime
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts my gentle Queen.
Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maidens eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary chusing:
But if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit to yield my self
His wife, who wins me by that means I told you,
Your self (renowned Prince,) then stood as fair
As any comer I have look'd on yet,
For my affection.
Mor. Even for that I thank you,
Therefore I pray you lead me to the Caskets
To try my fortune: By this Scimitar
That slew the Sophy, and a Persian Prince,
That won three fields of Sultan Solyman,
I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look:
Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth:
Pluck the young sucking Cubs from the she Bear,
Yea, mock the Lion when he roars for prey,
To win the Lady. But alas the while,
If Hercules and Lychas play at Dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his Page,
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.
Por. You must take your chance,
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose, if you choose wrong,
Never to speak to Lady afterward
In way of Marriage; therefore be advis'd
Mor. Nor will not; come bring me unto my chance.
Por. First forward to the temple, after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
Mor. Good fortune then,
To make me blest or cursed'st among men. Cornets Exeunt.

Scene II Launcelot Venice

Enter Clown alone.

Clo. Certainly, my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew my Master: the fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo good Launcelet, or good Gobbo or good Launcelet Gobbo, use your Legs, take the start, run away; my conscience says no; take heed honest Launcelet, take heed honest Gobbo or as afore-laid honest Launcelet Gobbo, do not run, scorn running with thy heels; well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack, via says the fiend, away says the fiend, for the heavens rose up a brave mind says the fiend, and run; well, my conscience hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me, My honest friend Launcelot, being an honest mans son, or rather an honest womans son; for indeed my Father did something smack, something grow too; he had a kind of taste; well, my conscience says Launcelot budge not, budge says the fiend; budge not says my conscience; conscience say I you counsel well, fiend say I you counsel well, to be rul'd by my conscience I should stay with the Jew my Master, who (God bless the mark) is a kind of Devil; and to run away from the Jew I should be ruled by the fiend, who saying your reverence is the Devil himself: certainly the Jew is the very Devil incarnation, and in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew; the fiend gives the more friendly counsel; I will run, fiend, my heels are at your commandement, I will run.

Enter old Gobbo with a Basket.

Gob. Master young-man, you I pray you, which is the way to Master Jews?
Laun. O heavens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then sand-blind, high gravel blind, knows me not, I will try confusions with him.
Gob. Master young Gentleman, I pray you which is the way to Master Jews.
Laun. Turn upon your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jews house.
Gob. By Gods sonties 'twill be a hard way to hit; can you tell me whether one Launcelet that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?
Laun. Talk you of young Master Launcelot? mark me now, now will I raise the waters; talk you of young Master Launcelot?
Gob. No Master sir, but a poor mans son, his Father tho' I say't is an honest exceeding poor man, and God be thanked well to live.
Laun. Well, let his Father be what he will, we talk of young Master Launcelet.
Gob. Your worships friend and Launcelet.
Laun. But I pray you Ergo, old man Ergo I beseech you, talk you of young Master Launcelet?
Gob. Of Launcelet, an't please your Mastership.
Laun. Ergo Master Launcelet talk not of master Launcelet Father, for the young gentleman, according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of Learning, is indeed deceased, or as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.
Gob. Marry God forbid, the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.
Laun. Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, a staff or a prop? do you know me Father?
Gob. Alack the day, I know you not young Gentleman, but I pray you tell me is my boy, God rest his soul, alive or dead.
Laun. Do you not know me Father?
Gob. Alack sir I am sand blind, I know you not.
Laun. Nay, indeed if you had your eyes you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own Child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your Son, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans son may, but in the end truth will out.
Gob. Pray you sir stand up, I am sure you are not Launcelet my boy.
Laun. Pray you let's have no more fooling about it, but give me Your blessing, I am Launcelet your boy that was your son that is, your child that shall be.
Gob I cannot think you are my son.
Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am

Launcelet

Launcelet the Jews man, and I am ſure Margery your wife is my Mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery indeed, I'll be ſworn if thou be Launcelet, thou art mine own fleſh and blood: Lord worſhip might he be, what a beard haſt thou got; thou haſt got more hair on thy Chin, than Dobbin my Philhorſe, has on his tail

Laun. It ſhould ſeem then that Dobbins tail grows backward. I am ſure he had more hair of his tail than I have on my face when I laſt ſaw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou chang'd! how doſt thou and thy Maſter agree? I have brought him a Preſent; how agree you now?

Laun. Well, well, but for mine own part, as I have ſet up my reſt to run away, ſo I will not reſt till I have run ſome ground; my Maſter's a very Jew, give him a preſent, give him a halter, I am famiſht in his ſervice. You may tell every finger I have with my Ribs: Father, I am glad you are come, give me your preſent to one Maſter Baſſanio, who indeed gives rare new Liveries; if I ſerve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare Fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Jew if I ſerve the Jew any longer.

Enter Baſſanio with a follower or two.

Baſſ. You may do ſo, but let it be ſo haſted, that ſupper be ready at the fartheſt by five of the Clock: ſee theſe Letters delivered, put the Liveries to making, and deſire Gratiano to come anon to my Lodging.

Laun. To him Father.

Gob. God bleſs your worſhip.

Baſſ. Gramercy, would'ſt thou ought with me?

Gob. Here's my ſon Sir, a poor boy.

Laun. Not a poor boy Sir, but the Rich Jews man that would Sir, as my Father ſhall ſpecify.

Gob. He hath a great infection ſir, as one would ſay to ſerve.

Laun. Indeed the ſhort and the long is, I ſerve the Jew, and have a deſire as my Father ſhall ſpecify.

Gob. His maſter and he (ſaving your worſhips reverence) are ſcarce catercoſins.

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cauſe me as my Father being I hope an old man ſhall frutify unto you.

Gob. I have here a diſh of Doves that I would beſtow upon your worſhip, and my ſuit is.

Laun. In very brief, the ſuit is impertinent to my ſelf, as your worſhip ſhall know by this honeſt old man; and though I ſay it, though old man, yet poor man my Father.

Baſſ. One ſpeak for both, what would you?

Laun. Serve you ſir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter ſir.

Baſſ. I know thee well, thou haſt obtain'd thy ſuit,
Shylock, thy Maſter ſpoke with me this day,
And hath prefer'd thee, if it be preferment,
To leave a rich Jews ſervice, to become
The follower of ſo poor a Gentleman.

Clo. The old proverb is very well parted between my Maſter Shylock and you ſir, you have the grace of God ſir, and he hath enough.

Baſſ. Thou ſpeak'ſt it well; go Father with thy ſon,
Take leave of thy old Maſter, and enquire
My Lodging out; give him a livery,
More garded than his fellows: ſee it done.

Clo. Father in, I cannot get a ſervice, no, I have ne're a tongue in my head, well; if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to ſwear upon a book, I ſhall have good fortune; go too, here's a ſimple line of life here's a ſmall triſle of wives, alas fifteen wives is nothing, eleven widdows and nine maids is a ſimple coming in for one man, and then to ſcape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my Life with the edge of a Feather-bed, here are ſimple ſcapes! well if Fortune be a woman, ſhe's a good wench for this gere. Father come, I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling.

Exit Clown.

Baſſ. I pray thee good Leonardo, think on this,
Theſe things being bought and orderly beſtowed,
Return in haſte, for I do feaſt to night
My beſt eſteem'd acquaintance, hie thee, gone.

Leon. My beſt endeavours ſhall be done herein.

Exit. Leonato.

Scene III.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Maſter.

Leon. Yonder ſir he walks.

Gra. Signior Baſſanio.

Baſſ. Gratiano.

Gra. I have a ſuit to you.

Baſſ. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You muſt not deny me, I muſt go with you to Belmont.

Baſſ. Why then you muſt: but hear thee Gratiano,
Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice,
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in ſuch eyes as ours appear not faults;
But where they are not known, why there they ſhow
Something too liberal, pray thee take pain
To allay with ſome cold drops of modeſty
Thy skipping ſpirit, leſt through thy wild behaviour
I be miſconſtru'd in the place I go to,
And loſe my hopes.

Gra. Signior Baſſanio, hear me,
If I do not put on a ſober habit,
Talk with reſpect, and ſwear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,
Nay, more, while Grace is ſaying, hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and ſigh and ſay, Amen;
Uſe all the obſervance of civility,
Like one well ſtudied in a ſad oſtent
To pleaſe his Grandam, never truſt me more.

Baſſ. Well, we ſhall ſee your bearing.

Gra. Nay but I bar to night, you ſhall not gage me
By what we do to night.

Baſſ. No, that were pity.
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldeſt ſuit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpoſe merriment: but fare you well,
I have ſome buſineſs.

Gra. And I muſt to Lorenzo and the reſt:
But we will viſit you at ſupper-time.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.

Enter Jeſſica and the Clown.

Jeſ. I am ſorry thou wilt leave my Father ſo,
Our houſe is hell, and thou a merry Devil
Did'ſt rob it of ſome taſte of tedioufneſs;
But fare thee well, there is a Ducat for thee,
And Lancelot, ſoon at ſupper ſhalt thou ſee
Lorenzo, who is thy Maſters gueſt,
Give him this Letter, do it ſecretly,
And ſo farewel: I would not have my Father
See me talk with thee.

Clo. Adieu, tears exhibit my tongue, moſt beautiful Pagan, moſt ſweet Jew, if a Chriſtian did not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived; but adieu, theſe fooliſh drops do ſomewhat drown my manly ſpirit: adieu.

Exit.

Jeſ. Farewel good Lancelot.
Alack, what hainous ſin is it in me,
To be aſham'd to be my Fathers Child,
But tho I am a Daughter to his Blood,
I am not to his manners; O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promiſe, I ſhall end this ſtriſe,
Become a Chriſtian, and thy Loving Wife.

Scene V

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Solanio.

Lo. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time,
Disguise us at my lodging, and return all in an hour.
Gra. We have not made good preparation.
Sal. We have not spoke as yet of Torch-bearers.
Sol. 'Tis vile unless it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my mind not undertook.
Lor. 'Tis now but four a clock, we have two hours
To furnish us. Friend Lancelot what's the news?

Enter Lancelot with a Letter.

Lan. And it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.
Lo. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a fair hand,
And whiter than the paper it writ on,
Is the fair hand that writ.
Gra. Love-news in faith.
La. By your leave sir.
Lor. Whether goest thou?
La. Marry to bid my old Master the Jew to sup to night with my new Master the Christian.
Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Jessica
I will not fail her, speak it privately.
Go gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Mask to night?
I am provided of a Torch-bearer. Exit Clown.
Sal. Ay marry, I'll be gone about it straight.
Sol. And so will I.
Lor. Meet me and Gratiano at Gratiano's lodging
Some hour hence.
Sal. 'Tis good we do so. Exit.
Gra. Was not that Letter from fair Jessica?
Lo. I must needs tell thee all, she hath directed
How I shall take her from her fathers house,
What Gold and Jewels she is furnisht with.
What Pages suit she hath in readiness.
If e're the Jew her Father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughters sake;
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come go with me, peruse this as thou goest,
Fair Jessica shall be my Torch-bearer. Exit.

Scene VI.

Enter Jew, and his man that was the Clown.

Jew. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio;
What Jessica, thou shalt not gurmandize——
As thou hast done with me——what Jessica?——
And sleep, and snore, rend apparel out.
Why Jessica I say.
Clo. Why Jessica.
Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.
Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me
I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you? what is your will?
Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica,
There are my Keys: but wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love, they flatter me,
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christian. Jessica my girl,
Look to my house, I am right loath to go,
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to night.
Clo. I beseech you sir go, my young master
Doth expect your reproach.
Shy. So do I his.
Clo. And they have conspired together, I will not say you shall see a Mask, but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my Nose fell a bleeding on black Monday last, at six a clock i'th' morning, falling out that year on Ash-wednesday was four year in the afternoon.
Shy. What are these Masks? hear you me, Jessica,
Lock up my doors, and when you hear the Drum
And the vile squealing of the wry-neckt Fife, squeaking
Clamber not you up to the Casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the publick street
To gaze on Christian fools with varnisht faces;
But stop my houses ears, I mean my Casements,
Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house. By Jacobs staff I swear,
I have no mind of Feasting forth to night:
But I will go; go you before me Sirrah.
Say I will come.
Clow. I will go before Sir.
Mistress look out at window for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewes eye. Exit.
Shy. What says that fool of Hagars off-spring? ha.
Jes. His words were fare well Mistress, nothing else.
Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder:
Snail-slow in profit, but he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat, drones hive not with me,
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrowed purse. Well Jessica go in,
Perhaps I will return immediately;
Do as I bid you, shut doors after you, fast bind, fast find,
A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. Exit.
Jes. Farewel, and if my fortune be not crost,
I have a Father, you a Daughter lost. Exit.

Scene VII.

Enter the Maskers, Gratiano and Salino.

Gra. This is the penthouse under which Lorenzo
Desired us to make a stand.
Sal. His hour is almost past.
Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.
Sal. O ten times faster Venus Pigeons flye
To steal loves bonds new made, than they are wont
To keep obliged faith unforfeited.
Gra. That ever holds, who riseth from a feast
With that keen Appetite that he sits down?
Where is the Horse that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? all things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoyed.
How like a younger or a prodigal
The skarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hug'd and embraced by the strumpet wind;
How like a prodigal she doth return
With over-wither'd Ribs and ragged sails,
Lean, rent and beggar'd by the strumpet wind?

Enter Lorenzo.

Salino. Here comes Lorenzo, more of this hereafter.
Loren. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode,
Not I but my affairs have made you wait;
When you shall please to play the thieves for Wives,
I'll watch as long for you then; approach; come
Here dwells my Father Jew. Hoa, who's within?

Jessica above.

Jes. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor.

Lo. Lorenzo, and thy Love.
Jeſ. Lorenzo certain, and my Love indeed;
For who Love I ſo much? and now who knows
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
Lo. Heaven and thy thoughts are witneſs that thou art.
Jeſ. Here, catch this casket, it is worth the pains,
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much aſham'd of my exchange;
But Love is blind, and Lovers cannot ſee
The pretty follies that themſelves commit;
For if they could, Cupid himſelf would bluſh
To ſee me thus transformed to a boy.
Lor. Deſcend, for you muſt be my Torch-bearer.
Jeſ. What, muſt I hold a Candle to my ſhames?
They in themſelves goodſooth are too, too light.
Why, 'tis an office of diſcovery, Love,
And I ſhould be obſcur'd.
Lor. So you are ſweet,
Even in the lovely garniſh of a boy; but come at once,
For the cloſe night doth play the run-away,
And we are ſtaid for at Baſſanio's Feaſt.
Jeſ. I will make faſt the doors, and guild my ſelf
With ſome more Ducats, and be with you ſtraight.
Gra. Now by my Hood, a Gentile, and no Jew.
Lor. Beſhrew me but I love her heartily.
For ſhe is wiſe, If I can judge of her,
And fair ſhe is, If that mine Eyes be true,
And true ſhe is, as ſhe hath prov'd her ſelf;
And therefore like her ſelf, wiſe, fair, and true,
Shall ſhe be placed in my conſtant Soul.

Enter Jeſſica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for us ſtay. Exit.

Enter Anthonio.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Anthonio.
Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the reſt?
'Tis nine a clock, our friends all ſtay for you,
No maſk to night, the wind is come about,
Baſſanio preſently will go aboard,
I have ſent twenty out to ſeek for you.
Gra. I am glad on't, I deſire no more delight
Than to be under Sail, and gone to night. Exeunt.

Scene VIII. Belmont.

Enter Portia with Morrocho, and both their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aſide the Curtains, and diſcover
The ſeveral Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choice. the Caskets diſcovered.
Mor. The firſt of Gold, who this inſcription bears,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall gain what men deſire.
The ſecond Silver, which this promiſe carries,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves.
This third, dull Lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooſeth me, muſt give and hazard all he hath.
How ſhall I know if I do chooſe the right?
Por. The one of them contains my Picture, Prince,
If you chooſe that, then I am yours withall.
Mor. Some God direct my judgment! let me ſee,
I will ſurvey the inſcriptions, back again;
What ſays this Leaden Casket?
Who chooſeth me, muſt give and hazard all he hath.
Muſt give for what? for Lead?
This Casket threatens men that hazard all,
Do it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind ſtoops not to ſhows of Droſs,
I'll then nor give nor hazard ought for Lead.
What ſayes the Silver with her virgin hue?
Who chooſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves.
As much as he deſerves? pauſe there Morrocho, and
And weigh thy value with an even hand;
If thou beeſt rated by the eſtimation,
Thou doſt deſerve enough, and yet enough
May not extend ſo far as to the Lady;
And yet to be aſeard of my deſerving,
Were but a weak diſabling of my ſelf.
As much as I deſerve, why that's the Lady.
I do in birth deſerve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of Breeding:
But more than theſe, in love I do deſerve.
What if I ſtray'd no farther, but chooſe here?
Let's ſee once more this ſaying Grav'd in Gold.
Who chooſeth me, ſhall gain what many men deſire:
Why that's the Lady; all the world deſires her:
From the four corners of the Earth they come
To kiſs the ſhrine, this mortal breathing Saint.
The Hircanian Deſerts and the vaſt Wildes
Of wide Arabia are as through Fares now
For Princes to come view fair Portia.
The Watery Kingdom, whoſe ambitious head
Spets in the face of heaven, is no bar
To ſtop the forrain Spirits, but they come
As o're a Brook to ſee fair Portia.
One of theſe three contains her heavenly picture.
Is't like that Lead contains her? 'twere damnation
To think ſo baſe a thought; it were too groſs
To rib her ſearcloth in the obſcure Grave;
Or ſhall I think in Silver ſhe's immur'd,
Being ten times undervalued to try'd Gold;
O ſinful thought, never ſo rich a Gem
Was ſet in worſe then Gold! They have in England
A Coin that bears the figure of an Angel
Stampt in Gold, but that's inſculpt upon:
But here an Angel in a Golden Bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the Key;
Here do I chooſe, and thrive I as I may.
Por. There take it Prince, and if my form lie there,
Then I am yours. Unlocking the Gold Caskets
Mor. O hell! what have we here, a carrion death,
Within whoſe empty eye there is a written ſcrowl; I'll read the writing.

All that gliſters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told;
Many a man his life hath ſold,
But my outſide to behold.
Guilded timber doe worms infold:
Had you been as wiſe as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgment old,
Your anſwer had not been inſcrold,
Fare you well, your ſuit is cold

Mor. Cold indeed, and labour loſt,
Then farewel heat, and welcome froſt:
Portia adieu, I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus loſers part. Exit.
Por. A gentle riddance: draw the Curtains, go;
Let all of his complection chooſe me ſo. Exeunt.

Scene IX.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.
Flo. Cornets.

Sal. Why, man I ſaw Baſſanio under ſail,
With him is Gratiano gone along,
And in their ſhip I am ſure Lorenzo is not.
Sol. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the Duke,
Who went with him to ſearch Baſſanio's ſhip.
Sal. He came too late, the ſhip was under ſail;
But there the Duke was given to underſtand
That in a Gondola were ſeen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jeſſica:
Beſides, Anthonio certified the Duke
They were not with Baſſanio in his ſhip.
Sol. I never heard a paſſion ſo confus'd,
So ſtrange, outragious, and ſo variable,

As

As the Dog Jew did utter in the ſtreets;
My Daughter, O my Ducats, O my Daughter!
Fled with a Chriſtian, O my Chriſtian Ducats!
Juſtice, the Law, my Ducats, and my Daughter;
A ſealed Bag, two ſealed Bags of Ducats,
Of double Ducats, ſtoln from me by my Daughter,
And Jewels, two rich and precious Stones,
Stoln by my Daughter, Juſtice find the Girl,
She hath the Stones upon her, and the Ducats.
Sal. Why all the Boys in Venice follow him,
Crying his Stones, his Daughter, and his Ducats.
Sol. Let good Anthonio look he keep his day,
Or he ſhall pay for this.
Sal. Marry well remembred,
I reaſon'd with a Frenchman yeſterday,
Who told me, in the narrow ſeas that part,
The French and Engliſh, there miſcarried
A Veſſel of our Country richly fraught:
I thought upon Anthonio when he told me,
And wiſht in ſilence that it were not his.
Sol. You were beſt to tell Anthonio what you hear,
Yet do not ſuddenly, for it may grieve him.
Sal. A kinder Gentleman treads not the Earth,
I ſaw Baſſanio and Anthonio part,
Baſſanio told him he would make ſome ſpeed
Of his return: he anſwered, do not ſo,
Slubber not buſineſs for my ſake, Baſſanio,
But ſtay the very riping of the time;
And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of Love:
Be merry, and employ your chiefeſt thoughts
To Courtſhip, and ſuch fair oſtents of Love
As ſhall conveniently become you there:
And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous ſenſible
He wrung Baſſanio's hand, and ſo they parted.
Sal. I think he only loves the world for him,
I pray thee, let us go and find them out,
And quicken his embraced heavineſs
With ſome delight or other.
Sal. Do we ſo.

Scene X. Belmont.

Exeunt.

Enter Neriſſa and a Servitor.

Ner. Quick, quick I pray thee, draw the curtain ſtraight,
The Prince of Arragon hath tane his oath,
And comes to his election preſently.

Enter Arragon, his Train, Portia, Flor. Cornets. [The caskets ſhewd]

Por. Behold there ſtand the caskets, noble Prince,
If you chooſe that wherein I am contain'd
Straight ſhall our nuptial rights be ſolemniz'd:
But if thou fail, without more ſpeech, my Lord,
You muſt be gone from hence immediately.
Ar. I am enjoyn'd by oath to obſerve three things;
Firſt, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I choſe; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my Life
To woo a Maid in way of Marriage:
Laſtly, if I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.
Por. To theſe injunctions every one doth ſwear
That comes to hazard for my worthleſs ſelf.
Ar. And ſo have I addreſt me; fortune now
To my hearts hope! Gold, Silver, and baſe Lead.
Who chuſeth me, muſt give and hazard all he hath!
You ſhall look fairer ere I give or hazard.
What ſayes the Golden Cheſt, ha, let me ſee:
Who chuſeth me, ſhall gain what many men deſire:
What many men deſire, that many may be meant
By the fool multitude that chuſe by ſhow,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach,
Which pays not to th'interior, but like the Martlet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of caſualty.
I will not chuſe what many men deſire,
Becauſe I will not jump with common ſpirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee thou Silver Treaſure-houſe,
Tell me once more, what title thou doſt bear;
Who chuſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves;
And well ſaid too, for who ſhall go about
To Cozen Fortune, and be honourable
Without the ſtamp of merit, let none preſume
To wear an undeſerved dignity:
O that eſtates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchaſt by the merit of the wearer!
How many then ſhould cover that ſtand bare?
How many be commanded, that command?
How much low peaſantry would then be gleaned
From the true ſeed of honour? And how much honour
Pickt from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varniſht? Well, but to my choice;
Who chuſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves.
I will aſſume deſert; give me a key for this,
And inſtantly unlock my fortunes here.
Por. Too long a pauſe for that which you find there.
Ar. What's here the portrait of a blinking idiot,
Preſenting me a ſchedule? I will read it:
How much unlike art thou to Portia?
How much unlike my hopes and my deſerving?
Who chuſeth me, ſhall have as much as he deſerves.
Did I deſerve no more than a fools head?
Is that my prize? are my deſerts no better?
Po. To offend and judge are diſtinct offices,
And of oppoſed natures.
Ar. What is here?

The fire ſeven times tried this,
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never chuſe amiſs.
Some there be that ſhadows kiſs,
Such have but a ſhadows bliſs:
There be fools alive I wis,
Silver'd o're, and ſo was this:
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone ſir, you are ſped.

Ar. Still more fool I ſhall appear
By the time I linger here.
With one fools head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.
Sweet adieu, I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroath. Exit.
Por. Thus hath the candle ſing'd the moth:
O theſe deliberate fools, when they do chuſe,
They have the wiſdom by their wit to loſe,
Ner. The ancient ſaying is no hereſie,
Hanging and wiving goes by deſtiny.
Por. Come draw the curtain Nerriſſa.

Enter Meſſenger.

Meſ. Where is my Lady?
Por. Here, what would my Lord?
Meſ. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To ſignify th'approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth ſenſible regreets:
To wit (beſides commends and courteous breath)
Gifts of rich value; yet I have not ſeen
So likely an Ambaſſador of love.

A day in April never came ſo ſweet,
To ſhow how coſtly Summer was at hand,
As this fore-ſpurrer comes before his Lord.
Por. No more, I pray thee; I am half afeard
Thou'lt ſay anon, he is ſome kin to thee,
Thou ſpend'ſt ſuch high day wit in praiſing him:
Come, come, Nerriſſa, for I long to ſee
Quick Cupid's Poſt, that comes ſo mannerly.
Ner. Baſſanio Lord, love, if thy will it be. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scene I
Venice.

Enter Solanio and Solarino.

Sol. Now, what news on the Ryalto?

Sal. Why, yet it lives there uncheckt, that Anthonio hath a ſhip of rich lading wrackt on the narrow Seas; the Goodwins, I think, they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcaſſes of many a tall ſhip lie buried, as they ſay, if my goſſip report be an honeſt woman of her word.

Sol. I would ſhe were as lying a Goſſip in that, as ever knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours believe ſhe wept for the death of a third husband: but it is true, without any ſlips of prolixity, or croſſing the plain high-way of talk, that the good Anthonio, the honeſt Antho.—O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!

Sal. Come, the full ſtop.

Sol. Ha, what ſayeſt thou? Why the end is, he hath loſt a ſhip.

Sal. I would it might prove the end of his loſſes.

Sol. Let me ſay Amen betimes, leſt the Devil croſs my prayer; for here he comes in the likeneſs of a Jew. How now Shylocke, what news among the Merchants?

Enter Shylocke.

Shy. You knew, (none ſo well, none ſo well as you,) of my daughters flight.

Sal. That's certain; I for my part knew the Taylor that made the wings ſhe flew withal.

Sol. And Shylocke for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the Dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Sal. That's certain, if the devil may be her Judge.

Shy. My own fleſh and blood to rebel!

Sol. Out upon it, old carrion, rebels it at theſe years?

Shy. I ſay, my daughter is my fleſh and blood.

Sal. There is more difference between thy fleſh and hers, than between Jet and Ivory; more between your bloods, than there is between red wine and rhenniſh: But tell us, do you hear whether Anthonio have had any loſs at ſea, or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match; a bankrout, a prodigal, who dare ſcarce ſhew his head on the Ryalto, a beggar that was us'd to come ſo ſmug upon the Mart! let him look to his bond; he was wont to call me Uſurer; let him look to his bond; he was wont to lend money for a Chriſtian curtſie; let him look to his bond.

Sal. Why, I am ſure if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his fleſh: what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fiſh withal, if it will feed nothing elſe, it will feed my revenge; he hath diſgrac'd me, and hindred me half a million, laught at my loſſes, mockt at my gains, ſcorn'd my Nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's the reaſon? I am a Jew: Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimenſions, ſenſes, affections, paſſions? fed with the ſame food, hurt with the ſame weapons, ſubject to the ſame diſeaſes, healed by the ſame means, warmed and cooled by the ſame Winter and Summer as a Chriſtian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poyſon us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, ſhall we not revenge? If we are like you in the reſt, we will reſemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Chriſtian, what is his humility? revenge? If a Chriſtian wrong a Jew, what ſhould his ſufferance be by Chriſtian example? Why, revenge. The villany you teach me, I will execute, and it ſhall go hard but I will better the inſtruction.

Enter a man from Anthonio.

Gentlemen, my Maſter Anthonio is at his houſe, and deſires to ſpeak with you both.

Sal. We have been up and down to ſeek him.

Enter Tuball.

Sol. Here comes another of the tribe; a third cannot be matcht, unleſs the devil himſelf turn Jew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tuball, what news from Genoa? haſt thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there! a Diamond gone coſt me two thouſand Ducats in Frankford! the curſe never fell upon our Nation till now, I never felt it till now; two thouſand Ducats in that, and other precious, precious Jewels! I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the Jewels in her ear; would ſhe were hearſt at my foot, and the Ducats in her Coffin: no news of them; why ſo? and I know not how much is ſpent in the ſearch! why then loſs upon loſs; the thief gone with ſo much, and ſo much to find the thief; and no ſatisfaction, no revenge, nor no ill luck ſtirring, but what lights o' my ſhoulders, no ſighs but o' my breathing, no tears but o' my ſhedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too; Anthonio, as I heard in Genoua.——

Shy. What, what, what, ill luck, ill luck?

Tub. Hath an Argoſie caſt away, coming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God, I thank God; is it true? is it true?

Tub. I ſpoke with ſome of the Saylors that eſcaped the wreck.

Shy. I thank thee good Tuball; good news, good news; ha, ha, where in Genoua?

Tu. Your daughter ſpent in Genoua, as I heard, one night fourſcore Ducats.

Shy. Thou ſtick'ſt a Dagger in me; I ſhall never ſee my gold again, fourſcore Ducats at a ſitting, fourſcore Ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Anthonio's Creditors in my Company to Venice, that ſwear he cannot chuſe but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it; I'll plague him, I'll torture him; I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them ſhewed me a Ring that he had of your Daughter for a Monky.

Shy. Out upon her, thou tortureſt me, Tuball, it was my Turkis, I had it of Leah when I was a Batchelor; I would not have given it for a wilderneſs of Monkies.

Tub. But Anthonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true; go, Tuball, ſee me an Officer, be-ſpeak him a fortnight before, I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will; go, Tuball, and meet me at our Synagogue; go, good Tuball, at our Synagogue, Tuball. Exeunt

Enter

Scene II. Belmont.

Enter Baſſanio, Portia, Gratiano, and all their train.

The Caskets are set out.

Por. I pray you, tarry, pauſe a day or two
Before you hazard; for in chuſing wrong
I loſe your company; therefore forbear a while,
There's ſomething tells me (but it is not love),
I would not loſe you, and you know your ſelf,
Hate counſels not in ſuch a quality;
But leſt you ſhould not underſtand me well,
And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,
I would detain you here ſome month or two,
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to chuſe right, but then I am forſworn;
So will I never be; ſo may you miſs me;
But if you do, you'll make me wiſh a ſin,
That I had been forſworn. Beſhrew your eyes,
They have o're-look'd me, and divided me;
One half of me is yours, the other half
Mine own, I would ſay; but mine, then yours.
And ſo all yours. O theſe naughty times
Puts bars between the owners and their rights:
And ſo tho' yours, not yours. (Prove it ſo),
Let Fortune go to hell for it, not me.
I ſpeak too long, but 'tis to peize the time,
To eke it, and draw it out in length,
To ſtay you from election.

Baſſ. Let me chuſe;
For as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack, Baſſanio, then confeſs
What treaſon there is mingled with your love.

Baſſ. None but that ugly treaſon of miſtruſt,
Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love:
There may as well be amity and life,
'Tween ſnow and fire, as treaſon and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you ſpeak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do ſpeak any thing.

Baſſ. Promiſe me life, and I'll confeſs the truth.

Por. Well then, confeſs and live.

Baſſ. Confeſs and love
Had been the very ſum of my confeſſion.
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me anſwers for deliverance!
But let me to my Fortune and the Caskets.

Por. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you do love me, you will find me out.
Nerriſſa, and the reſt, ſtand all aloof,
Let muſick ſound while he doth make his choice;
Then if he loſe, he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in muſick. That the compariſon
May ſtand more proper, my eye ſhall be the ſtream
And watry death-bed for him: he may win,
And what is muſick then? Then muſick is
Even as the flouriſh, when true ſubjects bow
To a new crowned Monarch: Such it is,
As are thoſe dulcet ſounds in break of day,
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
And ſummon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no leſs preſence, but with much more love,
Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
The Virgin-tribute, paid by howling Troy
To the Sea-monſter: I ſtand for ſacrifice,
The reſt aloof are the Dardanian wives;
With bleared viſages come forth to view
The iſſue of th' exploit. Go Hercules,
Live thou, I live; with much more diſmay
I view the fight, than thou that mak'ſt the fray.

Here Muſick.

A Song the whilſt Baſſanio commments on the Caskets to himſelf.

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head:
How begot, how nouriſhed. [Reply, reply.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies:
Let us all ring Fancies knell.
I'll begin it.
Ding, dong, Bell.
All. Ding, dong, Bell.

Baſſ. So may the outward ſhows be leaſt themſelves.
The world is ſtill deceiv'd with ornament.
In Law what Plea ſo tainted and corrupt,
But being ſeaſon'd with a gracious voice,
Obſcures the ſhow of evil? In Religion,
What damned error, but ſome ſober brow
Will bleſs it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the groſsneſs with fair ornament?
There is no vice ſo ſimple, but aſſumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
How many cowards, whoſe hearts are all as falſe
As ſtairs of ſand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars?
Who inward ſearcht, have livers white as milk,
And theſe aſſume but Valour's excrement,
To render them re-doubted. Look on beauty,
And you ſhall ſee 'tis purchaſt by the weight,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lighteſt that wear moſt of it:
So are thoſe criſped ſnaky golden locks
Which make ſuch wanton gambols with the wind
Upon ſuppoſed fairneſs, often known
To be the dowry of a ſecond head,
The ſcull that bred them, in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the guilded ſhore
To a moſt dangerous ſea; the beauteous ſcarf
Vailing an Indian beauty: In a word,
The ſeeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wiſeſt. Therefore thou gaudy gold,
Hard Food for Midas, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man; but thou, thou meager lead,
Which rather threatneſt than doſt promiſe ought;
Thy paleneſs moves me more than eloquence,
And here chuſe I, joy be the conſequence!

Por. How all the other paſſions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and raſh embrac'd deſpair,
And ſhuddring fear, and green-ey'd jealouſie.
O love be moderate, allay thy extaſie,
In meaſure rain thy joy, ſcant this exceſs,
I feel too much thy bleſſing, make it leſs,
For fear I ſurfeit.

Baſſ. What find I here? Opening the leaden Caſket.
Fair Portia's counterfeit? What demy-god
Hath come ſo near creation, move theſe eyes?
Or whether riding on the balls of mine
Seem they in motion? Here are ſever'd lips
Parted with ſugar breath; ſo ſweet a bar
Should ſunder ſuch ſweet friends: here in her hairs
The Painter plays the Spider, and hath woven
A golden meſh t' intrap the hearts of men
Faſter than Gnats in Cobwebs: but her eyes,
How could he ſee to do them? Having made one,
Methinks it ſhould have power to ſteal both his,
And leave it ſelf unfurniſht: Yet look how far
The ſubſtance of my praiſe doth wrong this ſhadow
In underpriſing; ſo far this ſhadow
Doth limp behind the ſubſtance. Here's the ſcrowl,
The continent, and ſummary of my Fortune.

You that chuſe not by the view,
Chance as fair, and chuſe as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and ſeek no new.
If you be well pleaſed with this,

And

And hold you fortune for your bliſs,
Turn you where your Lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiſs.

A gentle ſcrowl; Fair Lady, by your leave, [Kiſſing her.
I come by note to give, and to receive,
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in peoples eyes;
Hearing applauſe and univerſal ſhout,
Giddy in ſpirit, ſtill gazing in a doubt,
Whether thoſe peals of praiſe be his or no;
So (thrice fair Lady) ſtand I even ſo,
As doubtful whether what I ſee be true,
Until confirm'd, ſign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You ſee, my Lord Baſſanio, where I ſtand,
Such as I am; tho for my ſelf alone,
I would not be ambitious in my wiſh,
To wiſh my ſelf much better; yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my ſelf,
A thouſand times more fair, ten thouſand times
More rich, that to ſtand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account; but the full ſum of me
Is ſum of nothing; which to term in groſs,
Is an unleſſoned Girl, unſchool'd, unpractiz'd:
Happy is this, ſhe is not yet ſo old
But ſhe may learn; happier then in this, more happy
She is not bred ſo dull but ſhe can learn;
Happieſt of all is, that her gentle ſpirit
Commits it ſelf to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Governour, her King.
My ſelf, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the Lord Lady
Of this fair Manſion, Maſter of my Servants, Miſtreſs
Queen o're my ſelf; and even now; but now,
This Houſe, theſe Servants, and this ſame my ſelf
Are yours, my Lord; I give them with this Ring,
Which when you part from, loſe, or give away,
Let it preſage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Baſſ. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Only my blood ſpeaks to you in my veins;
And there is ſuch confuſion in my powers,
As after ſome oration fairly ſpoke
By a beloved Prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleaſed multitude,
Where every ſomething being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, ſave of joy
Expreſt, and not expreſt; but when this Ring,
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence;
O then be bold to ſay, Baſſanio's dead.

Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time,
That have ſtood by, and ſeen our wiſhes proſper,
To cry good joy, good joy, my Lord and Lady.

Gra. My Lord Baſſanio, and my gentle Lady,
I wiſh you all the joy that you can wiſh;
For I am ſure you can wiſh none from me: * That is Diſwiſh from me my Wiſhes
And when your honors mean to ſolemnize
The bargain of your Faith, I do beſeech you
Even at that time I may be married too.

Baſſ. With all my heart, ſo thou canſt get a Wife.

Gra. I thank your Lordſhip, you have got me one.
My eyes, my Lord, can look as ſwift as yours:
You ſaw the Miſtreſs, I beheld the Maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermiſſion.
No more pertains to me, my Lord, than you.
Your Fortune ſtood upon the caſkets there,
And ſo did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing here, until I ſweat again,
And ſwearing till my very roſh was dry
With Oaths of love, at laſt, if promiſe laſt,
I got a promiſe of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your Fortune
Atchiv'd her Miſtreſs.

Por. Is this true, Nerriſſa?

Ner Madam, it is ſo, ſo you ſtand pleas'd withal.

Baſſ. And do you, Gratiano, mean good Faith?

Gra Yes Faith, my Lord.

Baſſ. Our Feaſt ſhall be much honour'd in your Marriage.

Gra. We'll play with them, the firſt boy for a thouſand Ducats.

Ner. What, and ſtake down?

Gra. No, we ſhall ne're win at that ſport, and ſtake down.
But who comes here? Lorenzo and his Infidel?
What, and my old Venetian Friend, Salerio? anio

Scene III.

Enter Lorenzo, Jeſſica, and Salerio. anio.

Baſ. Lorenzo and Salerio, anio welcome hither,
If that the youth of my new intereſt here
Have power to bid you welcome: by your leave,
I bid my very Friends and Country-men,
(Sweet Portia) welcome.

Por. So do I, my Lord; they are intirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour: For my part, my Lord,
My purpoſe was not to have ſeen you here;
But meeting with Salerio anio by the way,
He did intreat me paſt all ſaying nay,
To come with him along.

Sal. I did, my Lord,
And have reaſon for it, ſignior Anthonio
Commends him to you. [Gives him a Letter.

Baſ. E're I ope his Letter
I pray you tell me how my good Friend doth,

Sal. Not ſick, my Lord, unleſs it be in mind;
Nor well, unleſs in mind: his Letter there
Will ſhew you his eſtate.

Baſſanio. Opens the Letter.

Gra. Nerriſſa, cheer yond ſtranger, bid her welcome.
Your hand, Salerio; what's the news from Venice?
How doth that royal Merchant, good Anthonio?
I know he will be glad of our ſucceſs:
We are the Jaſons, we have won the fleece.

Sal. I would you had won the fleece that he hath loſt.

Por. There are ſome ſhrewd contents in yond ſame Paper,
That ſteals the colour from Baſſanio's cheek:
Some dear Friend dead; elſe nothing in the world
Could turn ſo much the conſtitution
Of any conſtant man. What, worſe and worſe!
With leave, Baſſanio, I am half your ſelf,
And muſt have the half of any thing
That this ſame paper brings you.

Baſ O ſweet Portia!
Here are a few of the unpleaſant'ſt words
That ever blotted paper. Gentle Lady,
When I did firſt impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins, I was a Gentleman;
And then I told you true; and yet dear Lady,
Rating my ſelf at nothing, you ſhall ſee
How much I was a begger, when I told you braggart
My ſtate was nothing, I ſhould then have told you,
That I was worſe than nothing. For indeed
I have engag'd my ſelf to a dear Friend;
Engag'd my Friend to his meer Enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a Letter, Lady;
The paper as the body of my Friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Iſſuing life-blood. But is it true, Salerio?
Hath all his ventures faild? what, not one hit!
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England, from
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one Veſſel ſcape the dreadful touch

Of

* That is a Beard. * Dowdy is us'd in Rom: & Jul: * That is not parneſh'd with an other Eye

Of Merchant-marring Rocks?
Sal. Not one, my Lord.
Beſides, it ſhould appear, that if he had
The preſent money to diſcharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the ſhape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the Freedom of the State,
If they deny him Juſtice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himſelf; and the Magnificoes
Of greateſt port have all perſuaded with him,
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of Forfeiture, of Juſtice, and his Bond.
Jeſ. When I was with him, I have heard him ſwear,
To Tubal and to Chus, his Countrymen,
That he would rather have Anthonio's fleſh
Than twenty times the value of the ſum
That he did owe him; and I know, my Lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Anthonio.
Por. Is it your dear Friend that is thus in trouble?
Baſ. The deareſt Friend to me, the kindeſt man,
The beſt condition'd, and unwearied ſpirit,
In doing courteſies; and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.
Por. What ſum owes he the Jew?
Baſ. For me three thouſand Ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him ſix thouſand, and deface the bond;
Double ſix thouſand, and then treble that,
Before a Friend of this deſcription
Shall loſe a hair through my Baſſanio's Fault.
Firſt go with me to Church, and call me Wife,
And then away to Venice to your Friend:
For never ſhall you lie by Portia's ſide
With an unquiet ſoul. You ſhall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is paid, bring your true Friend along.
My Maid Nerriſſa, and my ſelf mean time,
Will live as Maids and Widows: Come away;
For you ſhall hence upon your Wedding-day:
Bid your Friends welcome; ſhow a merry cheer:
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the Letter of your Friend.

Baſſ: reads.

Sweet Baſſanio, my Ships have all miſcarried, my Creditors grow cruel, my Eſtate is very low, my Bond to the Jew is forfeit; and ſince in paying it, it is impoſſible I ſhould live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might ſee you at my death: Notwithſtanding uſe your pleaſure: if your love do not perſuade you to come, let not my Letter.

Por. O love! diſpatch all buſineſs, and be gone.
Baſ. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haſte; but till I come again,
No bed ſhall e're be guilty of my ſtay,
Nor reſt be interpoſer 'twixt us twain. Exeunt.

Scene IV. Venice.

Enter the Jew. and Salanio, Gratiano, and Anthonio, and the Jaylor.

Jew. Jaylor, look to him: tell not me of mercy;
This is the Fool that lends out money gratis.
Jaylor, look to him.
Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylocke.
Jew. I'll have my bond; ſpeak not againſt my bond:
I have ſworn an Oath that I will have my bond.
Thou call'ſt me dog before thou had'ſt a cauſe;
But ſince I am a dog, beware my fangs:
The Duke ſhall grant me Juſtice. I do wonder,
Thou naughty Jaylor, that thou art ſo fond
To come abroad with him at his requeſt.
Ant. I pray thee, hear me ſpeak.
Jew. I'll have my bond: I will not hear thee ſpeak:
I'll have my bond; and therefore ſpeak no more;
I'll not be made a ſoft and dull-ey'd Fool,
To ſhake the head, relent, and ſigh, and yield
To Chriſtian interceſſors. Follow not;
I'll have no ſpeaking; I will have my bond. Exit Jew
Sol. It is the moſt impenetrable cur
That ever kept with men.
Ant. Let him alone;
I'll follow him no more with bootleſs prayers.
He ſeeks my life; his reaſon well I know;
I oft deliver'd from his Forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me;
Therefore he hates me.
Sal. I am ſure the Duke will never grant this Forfeiture to hold.
Ant. The Duke cannot deny the courſe of law;
For the commodity that ſtrangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the Juſtice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the City
Conſiſteth of all Nations. Therefore go,
Theſe griefs and loſſes have ſo bated me,
That I ſhall hardly ſpare a pound of fleſh
To morrow to my bloody Creditor.
Well, Jaylor, on; pray God Baſſanio come
To ſee me pay his debt, and then I care not. Exeunt.

Scene V. Belmont. Balthaſar

Enter Portia, Nerriſſa, Lorenzo, Jeſſica, ~~a man of Portia's.~~

Lor. Madam, although I ſpeak it in your preſence,
You have a noble and a true conceit,
Of god-like amity, which appears moſt ſtrongly
In bearing thus the abſence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you ſhew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you ſend relief, to,
How dear a lover of my Lord, your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work,
Than cuſtomary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I never did repent of doing good,
Nor ſhall not now; for in companions
That do converſe and waſte the time together,
Whoſe ſouls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There muſt be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of ſpirit;
Which makes me think that this Anthonio,
Being the boſom-lover of my Lord,
Muſt needs be like my Lord. If it be ſo,
How little is the coſt I have beſtowed
In purchaſing the ſemblance of my ſoul
From out the ſtate of helliſh cruelty!
This comes too near the praiſing of my ſelf;
Therefore no more of it: hear other things,
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my houſe,
Until my Lord's return. For mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a ſecret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerriſſa here,
Until her husband and my Lord's return.
There is a Monaſtery two miles off
And there we will abide. I do deſire you
Not to deny this impoſition,
The which my love and ſome neceſſity
Now lays upon you.
Lor. Madam, with all my heart,
I ſhall obey you in all fair commands.
Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jeſſica
In place of Lord Baſſanio and my ſelf.
So fare you well till we ſhall meet again.
Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you.

Jeſ.

Jeſ. I wiſh your Ladyſhip all hearts content.

Por. I thank you for your wiſh, and am well pleas'd To wiſh it back on you: Fare you well Jeſſica. [Jeſ.] [Exeunt.] Now Balthazar, as I have ever found thee honeſt, true, So let me find thee ſtill: take this ſame Letter, And uſe thou all the endeavour of a man In ſpeed to Mantua, ſee thou render this Into my Couſin's hand, Doctor Bellario, And look what notes and garments he doth give thee, Bring them, I pray thee with imagin'd ſpeed Unto the Traject, to the common Ferry Which trades to Venice: waſte no time in words, But get thee gone; I ſhall be there before thee.

Bal. Madam, I go with all convenient ſpeed. [Exit.]

Por. Come on, Nerriſſa, I have work in hand That you yet know not of: we'll ſee our husbands Before they think of us?

Ner. Shall they ſee us?

Por. They ſhall, Nerriſſa; but in ſuch a habit, That they ſhall think we are accompliſhed With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager, When we are both accoutred like young men, I'll prove the prettier Fellow of the two, And wear my Dagger with the braver grace, And ſpeak between the change of man and boy, With a reed voice; and turn two mincing ſteps Into a manly ſtride, and ſpeak of Frays, Like a fine bragging youth; and tell quaint lies, How honourable Ladies ſought my Love, Which I denying, they fell ſick and di'd. I could not do withal: then I'll repent, And wiſh for all that, that I had not kill'd them: And twenty of theſe puny lies I'll tell, That men ſhall ſwear I have diſcontinued ſchool Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind A thouſand raw tricks of theſe bragging Jacks, Which I will practice.

Ner. Why, ſhall we turn to men?

Por. Fie, what a queſtion's that, If thou wert near a lewd interpreter! But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device When I am in my Coach, which ſtays for us At the Park Gate; and therefore haſte away, For we muſt meaſure twenty miles to day. [Exeunt.]

Enter Clown and Jeſſica.

Clown. Yes truly: For look you, the ſins of the Father are to be laid upon the children; therefore I promiſe you, I fear you. I was always plain with you; and ſo now I ſpeak my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheer; for truly I think you are damn'd: there is but one hope in it that can do you any good, and that is but a kind of baſtard-hope neither.

Jeſ. And what hope is that I pray thee?

Clow. Marry you may partly hope that your Father got you not, that you are not the Jew's Daughter.

Jeſ. That were a kind of baſtard-hope indeed; ſo the ſins of my Mother ſhould be viſited upon me.

Clow. Truly then I fear you are damned both by Father and Mother: thus when I ſhun Sylla, your Father, I fall into Charibdis, your Mother: Well, you are gone both ways.

Jeſ. I ſhall be ſaved by my husband; he hath made me a Chriſtian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he; we were Chriſtians enow before, e'ne as many as could well live one by another: this making of Chriſtians will raiſe the price of Hogs, if we grow all to be Pork-eaters, we ſhall not ſhortly have a raſher on the coals for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Jeſ. I'll tell my Husband, Lancelot, what you ſay: here he comes.

Lor. I ſhall grow jealous of you ſhortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my Wife into corners.

Jeſ. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo; Lancelot and I are out; he tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in Heaven, becauſe I am a Jew's daughter; and he ſays, you are no good member of the Commonwealth; for in converting Jews to Chriſtians, you raiſe the price of Pork.

Lor. I ſhall anſwer that better to the Commonwealth than you can the getting up of the Negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Lancelot.

Clow. It is much that the Moor ſhould be more than reaſon: but if ſhe be leſs than an honeſt woman, ſhe is indeed more than I took her for.

Lor. How every Fool can play upon the word! I think the beſt grace of wit will ſhortly turn into ſilence, and diſcourſe grow commendable in none only but Parrats. Go in, ſirrah, bid them prepare for dinner.

Clow. That is done, ſir; they have all ſtomacks.

Lor. Good Lord, what a wit-ſnapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

Clow. That is done too, ſir, only cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover then, ſir?

Clow. Not ſo ſir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occaſion! wilt thou ſhew the whole wealth of thy wit in an inſtant? I pray thee, underſtand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, ſerve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table, ſir, it ſhall be ſerved in; for the meat ſir, it ſhall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, ſir, why let it be as humors and conceits ſhall govern. [Exit Clown.]

Lor. O dear diſcretion, how his words are ſuited! The Fool hath planted in his memory An Army of good words; and I do know A many Fools that ſtand in better place, Garniſh'd like him, that for a trickſie word Defie the matter: how cheer'ſt thou Jeſſica? And now, good ſweet, ſay thy opinion, How doſt thou like the Lord Baſſanio's wife?

Jeſ. Paſt all expreſſing: it is very meet The Lord Baſſanio live an upright life. For having ſuch a bleſſing in his Lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth: And if on earth he do not merit, it In reaſon he ſhould never come to heaven. Why, if two gods ſhould play ſome heavenly match, And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portia one, there muſt be ſomething elſe Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude world Hath not her Fellow.

Lor. Even ſuch a husband Haſt thou of me, as ſhe is for a wife.

Jeſ. Nay, but aſk my opinion too of that.

Lor. I will anon: firſt let us go to dinner.

Jeſ. Nay, let me praiſe you while I have a ſtomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it ſerve for table-talk; Then howſome're thou ſpeak'ſt 'mongſt other things, I ſhall digeſt it.

Jeſ. Well, I'll ſet you forth. [Exeunt.]

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Anthonio, Baſſanio, and Gratiano.

Duk. What, is Anthonio here?

Ant. Ready, ſo pleaſe your Grace.

Duk. I am sorry for thee; thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch,
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.
Ant. I have heard
Your Grace hath ta'ne great pains to qualifie
His rigorous course: but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envies reach, I do oppose
My Patience to his Fury, and am arm'd
To suffer with a quietness of spirit
The very tyranny and rage of his.
Du. Go one, and call the Jew into the Court.
Sal. He is ready at the door: he comes, my Lord.

Enter Shylocke.

Duk. Make room, and let him stand before our Face.
Shylocke, the World thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this Fashion of thy Malice
To the last hour of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt shew thy Mercy and Remorse more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty,
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor Merchant's flesh,
Thou wilt not only loose the Forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so hudled on his back,
Enow to press a royal Merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms, and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks, and Tartars, never train'd
To offices of tender courtesie.
We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.
Jew. I have possest your Grace of what I purpose,
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the Due and Forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your Charter, and your Cities Freedom.
You'll ask me why I rather chuse to have
A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive
Three thousand Ducats? I'll not answer that.
But say it is my humour; is it answered?
What if my house be troubled with a Rat,
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand Ducats
To have it bain'd? What, are you answer'd yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping pig;
Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat;
And others, when the Bag-pipe sings i' th' nose,
Cannot contain their Urine for affection. (That is, they are so affected with it.)
Masters of passion sways it to the mood
Of what it likes or loaths. Now for your answer.
As there is no firm reason to be rendred
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig,
Why he a harmless necessary cat,
Why he a woollen bag-pipe, but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame,
As to offend himself, being offended;
So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodg'd hate, and a certain loathing
I bear Anthonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him. Are you answered?
Bas. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.
Jew. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.
Bas. Do all men kill the thing they do not love?
Jew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Bas. Every offence is not a hate at first.
Jew. What, would'st thou have a Serpent sting thee twice?
Ant. I pray you, think you question with a Jew.
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bate his usual height,
Or even as well use question with the Wolf,
The Ewe bleat for the Lamb: When you behold,
You may as well forbid the Mountain Pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that, (than which what harder,)
His Jewish heart? Therefore I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no farther means,
But with all brief and plain conveniency
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.
Bas. For thy three thousand Ducats here is six.
Jew. If every Ducat in six thousand Ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a Ducat,
I would not draw them, I would have my bond.
Duk How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendring none?
Jew. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong?
You have among you many a purchas'd slave,
Which like your Asses, and your Dogs and Mules,
You use in abject and in slavish part,
Because you bought them. Shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burthens? Let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their ~~pallats~~ palates
Be season'd with such Viands: you will answer,
The slaves are ours. So do I answer you.
The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your Law,
There is no force in the decrees of Venice:
I stand for judgment; answer, shall I have it?
Duk. Upon my power I may dismiss this Court,
Unless Bellario, a learned Doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to day.
Sal. My Lord, here stays without
A Messenger with Letters from the Doctor,
New come from Padua.
Duk. Bring us the Letters, call the Messengers.
Bas. Good cheer, Anthonio; What man, courage yet:
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
E're thou shalt loose for me one drop of blood.
Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flock,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of Fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, so let me.
You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine Epitaph.

Scene II.

Enter Nerissa. Dress'd like a Lawyer's Clerk.

Du. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both,
My Lord Bellario greets your Grace. (Jew whetteth his Knife on the sole of his shoe.)
Bas. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?
Jew. To cut the Forfeiture from that bankrout there.
Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,
Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's Axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?
Jew. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.
Gra. O be thou damn'd inexorable dog,
And for thy life let Justice be accus'd.
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my Faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of Animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men. Thy currish spirit
Govern'd a Woolf, who hang'd for humane slaughter,
Even from the Gallows did his fell soul fleet,
And whil'st thou layest in thy unhallowed Dam,
Infus'd it self in thee; For thy desires
Are wolvish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.
Jew. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond,
Thou but offend'st thy Lungs to speak so loud.

Repair

Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To endless ruine. I ſtand here for Law.
Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and Learned Doctor in our Court.
Where is he?
Ner. He attendeth here hard by
To know your anſwer, whether you'l admit him?
Du. With all my heart. Some Three or Four of you
Go give him courteous conduct to this place;
Mean time the Court ſhall hear Bellario's Letter.

YOUR Grace ſhall underſtand, that at the receit of your Letter, I am very ſick: but at the inſtant that your meſſenger came, in loving viſitation, was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his Name is Balthaſar: I acquainted him with the Caſe in controverſie, between the Jew and Anthonio, the Merchant: We turn'd o're many Books together: He is furniſhed with my Opinion, which, bettered with his own Learning, (the greatneſs whereof I cannot enough commend) comes with him at my importunity, to fill up your Graces Requeſt in my ſtead. I beſeech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend eſtimation: For I never knew ſo young a body with ſo old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whoſe trial ſhall better publiſh his commendation.

Enter Portia for Balthaſar.

Du. You hear the Learn'd Bellario what he writes,
And here, (I take it) is the Doctor come:
Give me your hand. Came you from old Bellario?
Por. I did, my Lord.
Du. You are welcome: take your place.
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this preſent queſtion in the Court?
Por. I am informed throughly of the Caſe.
Which is the Merchant here, and which the Jew?
Du. Anthonio and old Shylocke, both ſtand forth.
Por. Is your name Shylocke?
Jew. Shylocke is my name.
Por. Of a ſtrange Nature is the ſuit you follow,
Yet in ſuch rule, that the Venetian Law
Cannot impugne you, as you do proceed.
You ſtand within his danger, do you not?
Ant. Ay, ſo he ſays.
Por. Do you confeſs the bond?
Ant. I do.
Por. Then muſt the Jew be merciful.
Jew. On what compulſion muſt I? tell me that.
Por. The quality of mercy is not ſtrain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice bleſt,
It bleſſeth him that gives, and him that takes.
'Tis mightieſt in the mightieſt, it becomes
The throned Monarch better than his Crown:
His Scepter ſhews the force of temporal power,
The attribute to Awe and Majeſty,
Wherein doth ſit the dread and fear of Kings;
But Mercy is above this ſceptred ſway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,
It is an Attribute to God himſelf;
And earthly power doth then ſhew likeſt God's,
When Mercy ſeaſons Juſtice. Therefore Jew,
Tho' Juſtice be thy plea, conſider this,
That in the courſe of Juſtice none of us
Should ſee ſalvation. We do pray for mercy,
And that ſame prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have ſpoke thus much
To mitigate the juſtice of thy plea;
Which if thou follow, this ſtrict courſe of Venice
Muſt needs give ſentence againſt the Merchant there.
Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the Law,
The Penalty and Forfeit of my bond.
Por. Is he not able to diſcharge the money?
Baſ. Yes, here I tender it for him in the Court,
Yea, twice the ſum, if that will not ſuffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o're,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.
If this will not ſuffice, it muſt appear
That malice bears down truth. And I beſeech you
Wreſt once the Law to your Authority.
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curb this cruel devil of his will.
Por. It muſt not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree eſtabliſhed.
'Twill be recorded for a Preſident,
And many an error by the ſame example
Will ruſh into the State. It cannot be.
Jew. A Daniel come to judgment, yea, a Daniel.
O wiſe young Judge, how do I honour thee?
Por. I pray you look upon the bond.
Jew. Here 'tis, moſt reverend Doctor, here it is.
Por. Shylocke, there's thrice thy money offered thee.
Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven.
Shall I lay perjury upon my ſoul?
No, not for Venice.
Por. Why, this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim
A pound of fleſh, to be by him cut off
Neareſt the Merchant's heart. Be merciful,
Take thrice thy money, bid me tear the bond.
Jew. When it is paid according to the tenure.
It doth appear you are a worthy Judge,
You know the Law, your expoſition
Hath been moſt ſound. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-deſerving pillar,
Proceed to judgment. By my ſoul I ſwear,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me. I ſtay here on my bond.
Ant. Moſt heartily I do beſeech the Court
To give the judgment.
Por. Why then thus it is:
You muſt prepare your boſom for his knife.
Jew. O noble Judge! O excellent young man!
Por. For the intent and purpoſe of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Jew. 'Tis very true. O wiſe and upright Judge,
How much more elder art thou than thy looks!
Por. Therefore lay bare your boſom.
Jew. Ay his breſt,
So ſays the bond, doth it not noble Judge?
Neareſt his heart, thoſe are the very words.
Por. It is ſo. Are there ~~Ballance here~~ ſcales to weigh the fleſh?
Jew. I have them ready.
Por. Have by ſome Surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To ſtop his wounds, leſt he ſhould bleed to death.
Jew. It is not nominated in the bond.
Por. It is not ſo expreſt, but what of that?
'Twere good you do ſo much for charity.
Jew. I cannot find it, 'tis not in the bond.
Por. Come, Merchant, have you any thing to ſay?
Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.
Give me your hand, Baſſanio; Fare you well.
Grieve not that I am fall'n to this for you:
For herein Fortune ſhews her ſelf more kind
Than is his cuſtom. It is ſtill her uſe
To let the wretched man out-live his wealth,
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty. From which lingring penance
Of ſuch a miſery, doth ſhe cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable Wife;
Tell her the proceſs of Anthonio's end;
Say how I lov'd you; ſpeak me fair in death:
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge
Whether Baſſanio had not once a Love:

Repent not you that you shall lose your Friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;
For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.
Bas. Anthonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as dear to me as life it self;
But life it self, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life.
I would lose all, sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a wife whom I protest I love,
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Intreat some power to change this currish Jew.
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back,
The wish would make else an unquiet house.
Jew. These be the Christian husbands. I have a daughter,
Would any of the stock of Barrabas
Had been her husband, rather than a Christian. Aside
We trifle time, I pray thee pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same Merchant's flesh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the Law doth give it.
Jew. Most rightful Judge!
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast,
The Law allows it, and the Court awards it.
Jew. Most learned Judge, a sentence; come, prepare.
Por. Tarry a little, there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are a pound of flesh.
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;
But in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the Laws of Venice confiscate
Unto the State of Venice.
Gra. O upright Judge,
Mark Jew, O learned Judge.
Shy. Is that the Law?
Por. Thy self shalt see the Act:
For as thou urgest Justice, be assur'd
Thou shalt have justice more than thou desirest.
Gra. O learned Judge, mark Jew, a learned Judge!
Jew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian go.
Bas. Here is the money.
Por. Soft; the Jew shall have all justice; soft, no haste,
He shall have nothing but the penalty.
Gra. O Jew! an upright Judge, a learned Judge!
Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh;
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou less nor more
But just a pound of flesh: If thou tak'st more
Or less than a just pound, be it so much
As makes it light or heavy in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple; nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou dies't, and all thy goods are confiscate.
Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, Infidel, I have thee on the hip.
Por. Why doth the Jew pause? Take thy Forfeiture.
Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.
Bas. I have it ready for thee; here it is.
Por. He hath refus'd it in the open Court;
He shall have meerly justice and his bond.
Gra. A Daniel still say I, a second Daniel!
I thank thee Jew for teaching me that word.
Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?
Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the Forfeiture,
To be taken so at thy peril, Jew.
Shy. Why then the Devil give him good of it;
I'll stay no longer question.
Por. Tarry, Jew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you:
It is enacted in the Laws of Venice,
If it be proved against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts,
He seek the life of any Citizen,
The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive,
Shall seize on half his goods, the other half
Comes to the privy Coffer of the State,
And the Offender's life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke only, 'gainst all other voice;
In which predicament I say thou stand'st:
For it appears by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too,
Thou had contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant; and thou hast incurr'd
The danger formerly by me rehearsed.
Down therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.
Gra. Beg that thou mayst have leave to hang thy self;
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the State,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord;
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the State's charge.
Du. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit, mayst
I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it:
For half thy wealth, it is Anthonio's;
The other half comes to the general State,
Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.
Por. Ay, for the State, not for Anthonio.
Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that:
You take my house when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house: you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live.
Por. What mercy can you render him, Anthonio?
Gra. A Halter gratis, nothing else for God's sake.
Ant. So please my Lord, the Duke, and all the Court,
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content; so he will let me have
The other half in use, to render it until
Upon his death, unto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.
Two things provided more, that for this Favour
He presently become a Christian;
The other, that he do record a gift
Here in the Court of all he dies possess'd
Unto his Son Lorenzo, and his Daughter.
Du. He shall do this, or else I do recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.
Por. Art thou contented, Jew? what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content.
Por. Clark, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence;
I am not well; send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.
Du. Get thee gone, but do it.
Gra. In Christning thou shalt have two Godfathers.
Had I been Judge, thou should'st have had ten more,
To bring thee to the Gallows, not to the Font. Shy Exit.
Du. Sir, I intreat you with me home to dinner.
Por. I humbly do desire your Grace of pardon;
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.
Du. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not:
Anthonio, gratifie this Gentleman;
For in my mind you are much bound to him.
Exit Duke and his train.

Scene III.

Bas. Most worthy Gentleman, I and my Friend,
Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties, in lieu whereof
Three thousand Ducats due unto the Jew,
We freely cope your courteous pains withal.
Ant. And stand indebted over and above
In love and service to you evermore.
Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied;
And I delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account my self well paid;
My mind was never yet more mercenary.
I pray you know me when we meet again.

I wish

I wish you well, and so I take my leave.
Bas. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further.
Take some remembrance of us as a tribute,
Not as a Fee: grant me two things; I pray you,
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.
Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake,
And for your love I'll take this Ring from you,
Do not draw back your hand, I'll take no more,
And you in love shall not deny me this.
Bas. This Ring, good sir, alas it is a trifle;
I will not shame my self to give you this.
Por. I will have nothing else but only this,
And now methinks I have a mind to it.
Bas. There's more depends on this than on the value:
The dearest Ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by Proclamation;
Only for this I pray you pardon me.
Por. I see sir, you are liberal in offers;
You taught me first to beg, and now methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.
Bas. Good sir, this Ring was given me by my wife;
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.
Por. That excuse serves many men to save their gifts;
And if your wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I have deserv'd this Ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever
For giving it to me: Well, peace be with you.
[Por. to Ner. Exeunt.
Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the Ring.
Let his deservings, and my love withal,
Be valued against your wives commandment.
Bas. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the Ring, and bring him if thou canst,
Unto Anthonio's house: away, make haste. [Exit Grati.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Fly toward Belmont; come Anthonio.
[Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. Enquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed,
And let him sign it; we'll away to night,
And be a day before our Husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'retane:
My Lord Bassanio, upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this Ring, and doth intreat
Your company at dinner.
Por. That cannot be.
His Ring I do accept most thankfully,
And so I pray you tell him: Furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylock's house.
Gra. That will I do.
Ner. Sir, I would speak with you: [To Por.
I'll see if I can get my husband's Ring
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.
Por. Thou mayst I warrant. We shall have old swearing,
That they did give the Rings away to men;
But we'll out-face them, and out-swear them too:
Away, make haste, thou know'st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you shew me to this house?
[Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scene 1

Belmont.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The Moon shines bright. In such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
And they did make no noise, in such a night,
Troylus methinks mounted the Trojan wall,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Cressid lay that night.
Jes. In such a night,
Did Thisby fearfully o're-trip the dew,
And saw the Lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismayed away.
Lor. In such a night,
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Upon the wild Sea-banks, and waft her Love
To come again to Carthage.
Jes. In such a night,
Medea gathered the inchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.
Lor. In such a night,
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an unthrift Love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.
Jes. In such a night,
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of Faith,
And ne're a true one.
Lor. In such a night,
Did pretty Jessica (like a little shrow)
Slander her Love, and he forgave it her.
Jes. I would out-night you, did no body come:
But hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Messenger.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Mes. A Friend.
Lor. A Friend! what Friend? your name I pray you Friend?
Mes. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My Mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.
Lor. Who comes with her?
Mes. None but a holy Hermit and her maid.
I pray you is my Master yet return'd?
Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him;
But go we in, I pray thee Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the Mistress of the house.

Enter Clown. Launcelot.

Clow. Sola, sola; wo ha, ho, sola, sola!
Lor. Who calls?
Clow. Sola, did you see M. Lorenzo, and Mrs. Lorenza, sola, sola.
Lor. Leave hollowing, man: here.
Clow. Sola, where? where?
Lor. Here.
Clow. Tell him, there's a Post come from my Master, with his horn full of good news; my Master will be here ere morning, sweet love.
Lor. Let's in, and there expect their coming.
And yet no matter: why should we go in?
My Friend Stephano, signifie, pray you,
Within the house, your Mistress is at hand,
And bring your Musick forth into the air. Exit Mes.

How sweet the Moon-light sleeps upon this bank!
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of Musick
Creep in our ears; soft stilness, and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony:
Sit, Jessica, look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlayed with patterns of bright gold;
There's not the smallest Orb which thou behold'st,
But in his motion like an Angel sings,
Still quiring to the young ey'd Cherubims;
Such harmony is in immortal souls!
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it:
Come ho, and wake Diana with a hymn,
With sweetest touches pierce your Mistress ear,
And draw her home with Musick.

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet Musick.

Play Musick.

Lor. The Reason is, your spirits are attentive;
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of Musick touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand;
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of musick: therefore the Poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods,
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musick for the time doth change his Nature:
The man that hath no musick in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted: mark the Musick.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall:
How far that little candle throws his beams,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
Ner. When the Moon shone, we did not see the candle.
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less;
A substitute shines brightly as a King,
Until a King be by, and then his state
Empties it self, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters: Musick, hark. Musick.
Ner. It is your musick, Madam, of the house.
Por. Nothing is good I see without respect:
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.
Ner. Silence bestows that vertue on it, Madam.
Por. The Crow doth sing as sweetly as the Lark
When neither is attended; and I think
The Nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every Goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a Musician than the Wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!
Peace, how the Moon sleeps with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd!

Musick ceases.

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.
Por. He knows me as the blind man knows the Cuckow, by the bad voice.
Lor. Dear Lady, welcome home.
Por. We have been praying for our husbands welfare, Which speed, we hope, the better for our words:
Are they return'd?
Lor. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signifie their coming.
Por. Go in, Nerrissa,
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you, Lorenzo, Jessica, nor you.

A Tucket sounds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I hear his Trumpet:
We are no tell-tales, Madam, fear you not.
Por. This night methinks is but the day-light sick,
It looks a little paler; 'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the Sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Anthonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bas. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the Sun.
Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light Wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so from me;
But God sort all! you are welcome home, my Lord.
Bas. I thank you, Madam: give welcome to my Friend;
This is the man, this is Anthonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him;
For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.
Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.
Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house;
It must appear in other ways than words;
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesie.
Gra. By yonder Moon I swear you do me wrong;
In Faith I gave it to the Judge's Clerk; To Nerissa
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you do take it, Love, so much at heart.
Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?
Gra. About a Hoop of Gold, a paltry Ring
That she did give me, whose Poesie was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetry
Upon a Knife; Love me, and leave me not.
Ner. What talk you of the Poesie or the value?
You swore to me when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till the hour of death, your
And that it should lie with you in your grave,
Tho not for me, yet for your vehement Oaths,
You should have been respective, and have kept it.
Gave it a Judge's Clerk! but well I know,
The Clerk will ne're wear hair on's Face that had it.
Gra. He will, and if he live to be a man.
Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.
Gra. Now by this hand I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thy self, the Judge's Clerk,
A prating boy that begg'd it as a Fee;
I could not for my heart deny it him.
Por. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your Wives first gift,
A thing stuck on with Oaths upon your finger,
And riveted with Faith unto your flesh;
I gave my Love a Ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it, and here he stands:
I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger for the wealth
That the world masters. Now in Faith, Gratiano,
You give your Wife too unkind a cause of grief:
An 'twere to me I should be mad at it.
Bas. Why I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the Ring defending it.
Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his Ring away
Unto the Judge that begg'd it, and indeed
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy, his Clerk,

That

That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine;
And neither Man nor Master would take ought
But the two Rings.
Por. What Ring gave you, my Lord?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.
Baſ. If I could add a Lie unto a Fault,
I would deny it; but you ſee my finger
Hath not the Ring upon it, it is gone.
Por. And even ſo void is your falſe heart of truth.
By heaven, I will ne're come in your bed
Until I ſee the Ring.
Ner. Nor I in yours, till I again ſee mine.
Baſ. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the Ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the Ring,
And how unwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the ſtrength of your diſpleaſure.
Por. If you had known the vertue of the Ring,
Or half her worthineſs that gave the Ring,
Or your own honour to contain the Ring,
You would not then have parted with the Ring.
What man is there ſo much unreaſonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any terms of Zeal, wanted the modeſty
To urge the thing held as a Ceremony?
Nerriſſa teaches me what to believe,
I'll die for't, but ſome Woman had the Ring.
Baſ. No, by mine honour, Madam, by my ſoul,
No woman had it, but a civil Doctor,
Which did refuſe three thouſand Ducats of me,
And begg'd the Ring; the which I did deny him,
And ſuffer'd him to go diſpleas'd away;
Even he that ~~had held up~~ did uphold the very life
Of my dear Friend. What ſhould I ſay, ſweet Lady?
I was enforc'd to ſend it after him;
I was beſet with ſhame and courteſie;
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much be-ſmear it. Pardon me, good Lady,
And by theſe bleſſed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd
The Ring of me, to give the worthy Doctor.
Por. Let not that Doctor e're come near my houſe,
Since he hath got the Jewel that I loved,
And that which you did ſwear to keep for me:
I will become as liberal as you,
I'll not deny him any thing I have,
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed;
Know him I ſhall, I am well ſure of it.
Lie not a night from home: Watch me like Argus:
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have the Doctor for my bedfellow.
Ner. And I his Clerk: therefore be well advis'd
How you do leave me to mine own protection,
Gra. Well, do you ſo; let not me take him then;
For if I do, I'll mar the young Clerk's pen.
Ant. I am th' unhappy ſubject of theſe quarrels.
Por. Sir, grieve not you,
You are welcome notwithſtanding.
Baſ. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong,
And in the hearing of theſe many Friends,
I ſwear to thee even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I ſee my ſelf——
Por. Mark you but that!
In both mine eyes he doubly ſees himſelf;
In each eye one, ſwear by your double ſelf,
And there's an Oath of credit.
Baſ. Nay, but hear me:
Pardon this Fault, and by my ſoul I ſwear,
I never more will break an Oath with thee.
Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth, To Portia
Which but for him that had your husband's Ring
Had quite miſcarried. I dare be bound again,
My ſoul upon the Forfeit, that your Lord
Will never more break Faith adviſedly.
Por. Then you ſhall be his ſurety; give him this,
And bid him keep it better than the other.
Ant. Here, Lord Baſſanio, ſwear to keep this Ring.
Baſ. By heaven it is the ſame I gave the Doctor.
Por. I had it of him: pardon Baſſanio;
For by this Ring the Doctor lay with me.
Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano,
For that ſame ſcrubbed boy, the Doctor's Clerk,
In lieu of this, laſt night did lie with me.
Gra. Why, this is like the mending of high ways
In Summer, where the ways are fair enough:
What, are we Cuckolds e're we have deſerv'd it?
Por. Speak not ſo groſly; you are all amaz'd;
Here is a Letter, read it at your leiſure;
It comes from Padua from Bellario:
There you ſhall find that Portia was the Doctor,
Nerriſſa there her Clerk. Lorenzo here
Shall witneſs I ſet forth as ſoon as you,
And but even now return'd: I have not yet
Entred my houſe. Antonio, you are welcome,
And I have better news in ſtore for you
Than you expect; unſeal this Letter ſoon,
There you ſhall find three of your Argoſies
Are richly come to harbour ſuddenly.
You ſhall not know by what ſtrange accident
I chanced on this Letter.
Ant. I am dumb.
Baſ. Were you the Doctor, and I knew you not?
Gra. Were you the Clerk that is to make me Cuckold?
Ner. Ay, but the Clerk that never means to do it,
Unleſs he live until he be a man.
Baſ. (Sweet Doctor) you ſhall be my bedfellow;
When I am abſent, then lie with my Wife.
Ant (Sweet Lady) you have given me life and living;
For here I read for certain, that my ſhips
Are ſafely come to ~~Rhodes~~ Road.
Por. How now, Lorenzo?
My Clerk hath ſome good comforts too for you.
Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a Fee.
There do I give to you and Jeſſica,
From the rich Jew, a ſpecial deed of gift,
After his death, of all he dies poſſeſs'd of.
Lor. Fair Ladies, you drop Manna in the way
Of ſtarved people.
Por. It is almoſt morning,
And yet I am ſure you are not ſatisfied
Of theſe events at full. Let us go in,
And charge us there upon interrogatories,
And we will anſwer all things faithfully.
Gra. Let it be ſo: the firſt interrogatory
That my Nerriſſa ſhall be ſworn on, is,
Whether till the next night ſhe had rather ſtay,
Or go to bed, now being two hours to day.
But were the day come, I ſhould wiſh it dark,
Till I were couching with the Doctor's Clerk.
Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing
So ſore, as keeping ſafe Nerriſſa's Ring.
Exeunt. Omnes.

The Scenes lyes first near Oliver's House, afterwards partly in the Dukes Court partly in the forest of Arden.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. Oliver's Orchard.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando.

AS I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but a poor thousand Crowns, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well; and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or (to speak more properly) stays me here at home unkept; for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an Oxe? his horses are bred better; for besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end Riders dearly hir'd: but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam that grieves me, and the spirit of my Father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, tho yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver. Scene II.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orlan. Go apart Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you here?

Orla. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What mar you then Sir?

Orla. Marry, Sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours with idleness.

Oli. Marry Sir, be better employed, and ~~be naught~~ do aught a while.

Orla. Shall I keep your Hogs, and eat Husks with them? what prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are sir?

Orla. O, sir, very well; here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom, Sir?

Orla. Ay, better than him I am before, knows me. I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of Blood you should so know me: the courtesy of Nations allows you my better, in that you are the first born; but the same tradition takes not away my Blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us. I have as much of my Father in me, as you; albeit I confess your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What Boy! (this.

Orla. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villain?

Orla. I am no villain: I am the youngest Son of Sir Rowland de Boys; he was my Father, and he is thrice a villain that says such a Father begot villains: wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pull'd out thy tongue for saying so; thou hast rail'd on thy self.

Adam. Sweet Master be patient; for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go I say.

Orla. I will not till I please: you shall hear me. my father charg'd you in his will to give me good education: you have train'd me up like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities; the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg when that is spent? Well Sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will. I pray you, leave me.

Orla. I will no further offend you, than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? most true I have lost my teeth in your service. God be with my old master, he would not have spoke such a word. Scene III. [Exit Orl. Ad.

Oli. Is it even so, begin you to grow upon me? I will physick your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. holla, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship.

Oli. Was not Charles, the Duke's Wrastler here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in; 'twill be a good way; and to morrow the wrastling is.

Enter Charles.

Char. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Mounsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new Court?

Char. There's no news at the Court, Sir, but the old news; that is, the old Duke, is banished by his younger brother the new Duke, and three or four loving Lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him; whose Lands and Revenues enrich the new Duke, therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind the Dukes daughter be banished with her Father?

Cha. O no; for the Dukes Daughter her Cousin so loves her, being ever from their Cradles bred together, that she would have followed their exile, or have died to stay behind her. she is at the Court, and no less beloved of her Unkle, than his own Daughter, and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old Duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the Forrest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England; they say many young Gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelesly, as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wrastle to morrow before the new Duke?

Charl. Marry do I, sir; and I come to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your your younger brother Orlando hath a diſpoſition to come in diſguis'd againſt me to try a fall; to morrow, ſir, I wraſtle for my credit, and he that eſcapes me without ſome broken limb, ſhall acquit him well; your Brother is but young and tender, and for your love I would be loath to foile him, as I muſt for mine own honour if he come in; therefore out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal, that either you might ſtay him from his intendment, or brook ſuch diſgrace well as he ſhall run into, in that it is a thing of his own ſearch, and altogether againſt my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou ſhalt find I will moſt kindly requite. I had my ſelf notice of my Brothers purpoſe herein, and have by underhand means laboured to diſſwade them from it; but he is reſolute. I tell thee, Charles, It is the ſtubborneſt young fellow of France; full of Ambition, an envious Emulator of every mans good parts, a ſecret and villanous Contriver againſt me his natural Brother; therefore uſe thy Diſcretion, I had as lief thou didſt break his neck as his finger. And thou wert beſt look to't; for if thou doſt him any ſlight diſgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himſelf on thee, he will practice againſt thee by poiſon, to entrap thee by ſome treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath tane thy life by ſome indirect means or other: for I aſſure thee, (and almoſt with tears I ſpeak it) there is not one ſo young, and ſo villanous this day living. I ſpeak but brotherly of him; but ſhould I anatomize him to thee, as he is, I muſt bluſh and weep, and thou muſt look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: if he come to morrow, I'le give him his payment; if ever he go alone again, I'le never wraſtle for prize more; and ſo God keep your Worſhip.

Exit.

Oli. Farewel good Charles. Now will I ſtir this Gamester: I hope I ſhall ſee an end of him, for my ſoul, (yet I know not why) hates nothing more than he; yet he's gentle, never ſchool'd, and yet learned, full of noble device, of all ſorts enchantingly beloved; and indeed ſo much in the heart of the World, and eſpecially of my own people, who beſt know him, that I am altogether miſpriſed; but it ſhall not be ſo long; this Wraſtler ſhall clear all: nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'le go about.

Exit

Scena Secunda. IV.
Before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Roſalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee Roſalind, ſweet my Coz, be merry.

Roſ. Dear Celia; I ſhow more mirth than I am Miſtreſs of; and would you yet, were merrier? unleſs you could teach me to forget a baniſhed Father, you muſt not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleaſure.

Cel. Herein I ſee thou lov'ſt me not with the full weight that I love thee; if my Uncle, thy baniſhed Father, had baniſhed thy Uncle the Duke my Father, ſo thou hadſt been ſtill with me, I could have taught my love to take thy Father for mine; ſo wouldſt thou, if the truth of thy love to me were ſo righteouſly temper'd, as mine is to thee.

Roſ. Well, I will forget the condition of my eſtate, to rejoyce in yours.

Cel. You know my Father hath no Child but I, nor none is like to have, and truly when he dies, thou ſhalt be his heir; for what he hath taken away from thy Father perforce, I will render thee again in Affection; by mine honour I will; and when I break that Oath, let me turn monſter: therefore my ſweet Roſe, my dear Roſe, be merry.

Roſ. From henceforth I will, Coz, and deviſe ſports: let me ſee, what think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry I prithee do, to make ſport withal; but love no man in good earneſt, nor no further in ſport neither, than with ſafety of a pure bluſh, thou may'ſt in honour come off again.

Roſ. What ſhall be our ſport then?

Cel. Let us ſit and mock the good houſewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be beſtowed equally.

Roſ. I would we could do ſo; for her benefits are mightily miſplaced, and the bountiful blind Woman doth moſt miſtake in her gifts to Women.

Cel. 'Tis true; for thoſe that ſhe makes fair, ſhe ſcarce makes honeſt, and thoſe that ſhe makes honeſt, ſhe makes very ill-favouredly.

Roſ. Nay now thou goeſt from Fortunes Office to Natures: Fortune reigns in gifts of the World, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown.

Cel. No? when Nature hath made a fair creature, may ſhe not by Fortune fall into the fire? Tho Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune ſent in this fool to cut off this argument?

Roſ. Indeed Fortune is there too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Natures natural, the cutter off of Natures wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who perceiving our natural wits too dull to reaſon of ſuch goddeſſes, hath ſent this Natural for our whetſtone: for always the dulneſs of the fool, is the whetſtone of the wits. How now Wit, whether wander you?

Clow. Miſtreſs, you muſt come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the Meſſenger?

Clow. No, by mine honour, but I was bid to come for you.

Roſ. Where learned you that Oath, fool?

Clo. Of a certain Knight, that ſwore by his Honour they were good Pancakes, and ſwore by his Honour the Muſtard was naught: Now I'le ſtand to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Muſtard was good, and yet was not the Knight forſworn.

Cel. How prove you that in the great heap of your knowledge?

Roſ. Marry, now unmuzzle your wiſdom.

Clo. Stand you both forth now; ſtroke your chins, and ſwear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knavery, (if I had it) then I were; but if you ſwear by that that is not, you are not forſworn; no more was this Knight ſwearing by his Honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had ſworn it away, before ever he ſaw thoſe Pancakes, or that Muſtard.

Cel. Prithee, who is that thou means't?

Clo. One that old Frederick your Father loves.

Roſ. My Fathers love is enough to honour him enough! ſpeak no more of him; you'l be whipt for taxation, one of theſe days.

Clo. The more pity that fools may not ſpeak wiſely, what wiſe men do fooliſhly.

Cel. By my troth thou ſaiſt true: For, ſince the little wit that fools have was ſilenced, the little foolery that wiſe men have makes a great ſhew: Here comes Mounſieur Le Beu.

Scene V.

Enter Le Beu.

Roſ. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as Pigeons feed their young.

Roſ. Then ſhall we be news-cram'd.

Cel.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable Boon-jour Mounsieur le Beu; what news?

Le Beu. Fair Princess,
You have lost much sport.

Cel. Sport; of what colour?

Le Beu. What colour Madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Cle. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said, that was laid on with a Trowel.

Cle. Nay, if I keep not my rank.——

Ros. Thou losest thy old smell.

Le Beu. You amaze me Ladies: I would have told you of good wrastling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrastling.

Le Beu. I will tell you the beginning; and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to do; and here where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beu. There comes an old Man, and his three Sons.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beu. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bills on their necks: Be it known unto all men by these presents.

Le Beu. The eldest of the three, wrastled with Charles the Dukes Wrastler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his Ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: So he serv'd the second, and so the third: yonder they lie, the poor old man their Father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Cle. But what is the sport Mounsieur, that the Ladies have lost?

Le Beu. Why this is that I speak of.

Cle. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard of breaking of Ribs was sport for Ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musick in his sides? Is there yet another doats upon Rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrastling Cosin?

Le Beu. You must if you stay here, for here is the place appointed for wrastling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are coming: Let us now stay and see it.

Scene VI.

Flourish. Enter Duke, Lords, Orlando, Charles and Attendants.

Duk. Come on, since the youth will not be entreated; His own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le. Even he, Madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young; yet he looks successfully.

Duk. How now, daughter and Cosin;
Are you crept hither to see the wrastling?

Ros. Ay my Liege, so please you give us leave.

Du. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the men: In pity of the challengers youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speek to him Ladies, see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Mounsieur L. Beu.

Duke. Do so; I'll not be by.

Le Beu. Mounsieur the Challenger, the princess calls for you.

Orla. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challeng'd Charles the Wrastler?

Orl. No fair princess; he is the general challenger; I come but as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: you have seen cruel proof of this mans strength, if you saw your self with your eyes, or knew your self with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you for your own sake to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be mispriſed; we will make it our suit to the Duke, that the wrastling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punnish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent Ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes go with me to my trial; wherein if I be foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious; if kil'd, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied, when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine to eek out hers.

Ros. Fare you well: pray heaven I be deceiv'd in you.

Cel. Your hearts desires be with you.

Char. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lye with his mother earth?

Orla. Ready sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duk. You shall try but one fall.

Char. No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily perswaded him from a first.

Orla. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mockt before: but come your ways.

Ros. Now Hercules be thy speed young man.

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [They Wrastle.

Ros. Oh excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. [Shout.

Duk. No more, no more. [Charles is throwne.

Orla. Yes I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breathed.

Duk. How do'st thou Charles?

Le Beu. He cannot speak my Lord.

Duk. Bear him away.
What is thy name young man?

Or. Orlando my Liege, the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boyes.

Duk. I would thou had'st been son to some man else:
The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou should'st have better pleas'd me with this deed,
Had'st thou descended from another house;
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,
I would thou hadst told me of another Father.

Scene VII. [Exit Duk.

Cel. Were I my Father, Coz, would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowlands son,
His youngest son, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heir to Fredrick.

Ros. My Father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my Fathers mind;
Had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle Cosin,
Let us go thank him, and encourage him;
My Fathers rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart. Sir, you have well deserv'd;
If you do keep your promises in love,

But

But justly as you have exceeded ~~all~~ here promise,
Your Mistris shall be happy.
Ros. Gentleman,
Wear this for me; one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means,
Shall we go Coze? (Giving him a Chain from her Neck.
Cel. Ay; fare you well, fair Gentleman.
Orla. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up
Is but a quintine, a meere lifeless block.
Ros. He calls us back: my pride fell with my fortunes.
I'll ask him what he would. Did you call Sir?
Sir, you have wrastled well, and overthrown
More than your enemies.
Cel. Will you go Coze?
Ros. Have with you: fare you well. Ros. & Cel. Exit
Or. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?
I cannot speak to her; yet she urg'd conference.

Enter Le Beu.

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrown;
Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.
Le Beu. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place: Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love;
Yet such is now the Dukes condition,
That he misconsters all that you have done.
The Duke is humorous; what he is indeed
More suits you to conceive, than I to speak of.
Orl. I thank you, Sir; and pray you, tell me this;
Which of the two was Daughter to the Duke,
That here was at the Wrastling?
Le Beu. Neither his Daughter, if we judge by manners;
But yet indeed the ~~taller~~ shorter is his Daughter,
The other is Daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her usurping Uncle
To keep his Daughter company; whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of Sisters.
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke
Hath tane displeasure 'gainst his gentle Neice,
Grounded upon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her vertues,
And pity her for her good Fathers sake;
And on my life, his malice 'gainst the Lady
Will suddenly break forth. Sir, fare you well;
Hereafter in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledg of you. Exit.
Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well!
Thus must I from the smoke into the smother;
From tyrant Duke, unto a tyrant Brother;
But heavenly Rosalind! Exit.

Scena ~~Tertia~~. VIII.

Re-Enter Celia, and Rosalind.

Cel. Why Cosin, why Rosalind; Cupid have mercy, Not a word?
Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.
Cel. No, my words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me; come, lame me with reasons.
Ros. Then there were two Cosins laid up, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.
Cel. But is all this for your Father?
Ros. No, some of it is for my Childs Fathers. Oh how full of briefs is this working day-world!
Cel. They are but Burs, Cosin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery; if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.
Ros. I could shake them off my coat; these Burs are in my heart.
Cel. Hem them away.
Ros. I would try, if I could cry hem, and have him.
Cel. Come, come, wrastle with thy affections.
Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrastler than my self.
Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time in despight of a fall; but turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest; Is it possible on such a sudden you should fall into so strange a liking with old Sir Rowlands youngest son?
Ros. The Duke my Father lov'd his Father dearly.
Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his Son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him; for my Father hated his Father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.
Ros. No faith, hate him not, for my sake.
Cel. Why should I ~~not~~? doth not he deserve well?

Scene IX.

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ros. Let me love him for that; and do you love him, Because I do. Look, here comes the Duke.
Cel. With his eyes full of anger.
Duk. Mistris, dispatch you with your safest hast, And get you from our Court.
Ros. Me Uncle!
Duk. You Cosin, Within these ten days if that thou beest found So near our publick Court as twenty miles, Thou diest for it.
Ros. I do beseech your Grace, Let me the knowledg of my fault bear with me: If with my self I hold intelligence, Or have acquaintance with mine own desires, If that I do not dream, or be not frantick, (As I do trust I am not); then dear Uncle, Never so much as in a thought unborn, Did I offend your Highness.
Duk. Thus do all Traitors; If their purgation did consist in words, They are as innocent as grace it self; Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.
Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a Traytor; Tell me whereon the likelihood depends?
Duk. Thou art thy Fathers daughter, there's enough.
Ros. So was I when your Highness took his Dukedom, So was I when your Highness banish'd him; Treason is not inherited my Lord; Or if we did derive it from our friends, What's that to me, my Father was no Traytor: Then good my Leige, mistake me not so much, To think my poverty is treacherous.
Cel Dear Soveraign hear me speak.
Duk. Ay Celia, we staid her for your sake, Else had she with her Father rang'd along.
Cel. I did not then intreat to have her stay; It was your pleasure, and your own remorse; I was too young that time to value her; But now I know her; if she be a Traytor, Why so am I; we still have slept together, Rose at an instant, learn'd, plaid, eat together, And whereso'ere we went, like Junos Swans, Still we went coupled and inseparable.
Duk. She is too subtile for thee; and her smoothness, Her very silence and her patience, Speak to the people, and they pity her: Thou art a fool; she robs thee of thy name, And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more vertuous When she is gone; then open not thy lips;

Firm

Firm, and irrevocable is my doom,
Which I have past upon her; she is banish'd.
Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my Liege,
I cannot live out of her company.
Duk. You are a fool; you Neice provide your self;
If you out-stany the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.
Exit. Duke &c.
Cel. O my poor Rosalind, whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change father? I will give thee mine:
I charge thee be not thou more griev'd them I am.
Ros. I have more cause.
Cel. Thou hast not Cousin,
Prithee be cheerful; know'st thou not the Duke,
Hath banish'd me his Daughter?
Ros. That he hath not.
Cel. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one;
Shall we be sundred? shall we part sweet girl?
No, let my Father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,
Whither to go, and what to bear with us;
And do not seek to take your charge upon you,
To bear your griefs your self, and leave me out:
For by this heaven, (now as our sorrows pale;)
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.
Ros. Why, whither shall we go?
Cel. To seek my Unkle in the Forrest of Arden.
Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
(Maids as we are,) to travel forth so far?
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.
Cel. I'll put my self in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber smutch my face;
The like do you; so shall we pass along,
And never stir assailants.
Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man,
A gallant curtelax upon my thigh,
A boar-spear in my hand, and (in my heart Lie there what hidden womans fear there will,)
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.
Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?
Ros. I'll have no worse a name then Joves own Page,
And therefore look you call me Ganimed;
But what will you be call'd?
Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Aliena.
Ros. But Cosin, what if we assaid to steal
The clownish Fool out of your Fathers Court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?
Cel. He'll go along o're the wide world with me,
Leave me alone to woo him; Let's away,
And get our Jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight: now go we in content
To liberty and not to banishment.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

A Forest.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and two or three Lords like Foresters.

Duk. Sen. Now my Co-mates, and brother in exile,
Hath not old custome made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious Court?
Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons difference; as the Icie phang
And churlish chiding of the winters wind,
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly perswade me what I am.
Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious Jewel in his head:
And this our life, exempt from publick haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
Amien. I would not change it; happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a stile.
Duk. Sen. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dapled fools
Being native Burghes of this desart City,
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads
Have their round haunches goar'd.
1. Lord. Indeed, my Lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that,
And in that kind swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you:
To day my Lord of Amiens, and my self,
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antick root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood;
To the which place a poor sequestred Stag
That from the hunters aim had tane a hurt,
Did come to Languish; and indeed my Lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his lethern coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Curs'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase; and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on th'extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting in the tears.
Duk. Sen. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
1. Lord. O yes, into a thousand similies.
First, for his weeping into the needless stream;
Poor Deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much: then, being alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friend;
'Tis right, quoth he; thus misery doth part
The Flux of company: anon a careless herd
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him; Ay, quoth Jaques,
Sweep on, you fat and greasy Citizens,
'Tis just the fashion; wherefore do you look
Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The Body of the Country, City, Court,
Yea, and this our life, swearing that we
Are meer usurpers, tyrants, and whats worse,
To fright the Animals, and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dweling place.
Du. Sen. And did you leave him in this contemplation?
2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing Deer.
Du. Sen. Show me the place,
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter
2. Lor. I'll bring you to him straight.
Exeunt.

Scena.

Scena Secunda.

The Palace again

Enter Duke with Lords.

Duk. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be; some Villains of my Court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1. Lord, I cannot hear of any that did see her,
The Ladies, her attendants of her Chamber,
Saw her abed, and in the morning early
They found the Bed untreasur'd of their Mistris.

2. Lord, My Lord, the roynish Clown, at whom so oft
Your Grace was wont to laugh, is also missing:
Hisperia, the Princes Gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your Daughter and her Cosin much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrastler
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes where ever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duk. Send to his Brother, fetch that Gallant hither;
If he be absent, bring his Brother to me,
I'll make him find him; do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia,

Olivers House.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?

Ad. What! my young master? oh my gentle master,
Oh my sweet master, O you memory
Of old Sir Rowland! Why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny priser of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, Master, to some kind of men,
Their graces serve them but as enemies,
No more do yours; your vertues gentle Master,
Are sanctified and holy Traytors to you.
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Ad. O unhappy Youth,
Come not within these doors; within this roof,
The enemy of all your graces lives:
Your Brother, (no, no Brother, yet the Son
(Yet not the Son, I will not call him Son)
Of him I was about to call his Father,)
Hath heard your praises, and this night he means
To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
And you within it; if he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off;
I overheard him, and his Practices:
This is no place, this house is but a butchery;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. VVhy, whither, Adam, would'st thou have me go?

Ada. No matter whither, so you come not here.

Orl. What, would'st thou have me go and beg my food,
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce
A thievish living on the common rode?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can:
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood, and bloody Brother.

Ada. But do not so; I have five hundred Crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under you Father,
Which I did store to be my foster Nurse,
When service should in my old limbs lie lame;
And unregarded age in corners thrown;
Take that; and he that doth the Ravens feed,
Yea providently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age! here is the gold,
All this I give you, let me be your servant;
Tho I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my Youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forhead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter;
Frosty, but kindly; let me go with you,
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.

Orl. Oh good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed?
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat, but for promotion,
And having that, do choak their service up,
Even with the having; it is not so with thee;
But poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry;
But come thy ways, we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some setled low content.

Ada. Master, go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty.
From seventy Years, till now almost fourscore
Here liv'd I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen Years, many their fortunes seek,
But at fourscore, it is too late a week,
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Than to die well, and not my Masters debter. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. The Forest.

Enter Rosalind for Ganimed, Celia for Aliena, and Clown, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter, how merry are my spirits!

Clo. I care not for my Spirits, if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my mans apparel, and to cry like a Woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as Doublet and Hose ought to show it self courageous to a Petticoat; therefore courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you bear with me, I can go no further.

Clo. For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you; yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the Forest of Arden.

Clo. Ay, now am I in Arden, the more fool I; when I was at home I was in a better place; but Travellers must be content.

Enter Corin, and Silvius.

Ros. Ay be so good Touchstone; look you who comes here, a young man and an old, in solemn talk.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No Corin, being old, thou can'st not guess,
Tho' in thy Youth thou wast as true a Lover,
As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow;

But if thy love were ever like to mine,
As sure I think did never man love so;
How many actions most ridiculous,
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasie?
Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Sil. Oh, thou didst then never love so heartily;
If thou remembrest not the slightest folly,
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not sate as I do now,
Wearying thy hearer in thy Mistris praise,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lov'd.
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe. Exit.

Ros. Alas poor Shepherd! searching of their wound, I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Clo. And I mine; I remember when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a nights to Jane Smile; and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the Cows dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milk'd; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said with weeping tears, wear these for my sake; we that are true Lovers run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love, mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art ware of.

Clo. Nay, I shall ne're be ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove, Jove, this Shepherds passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Clo. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yon'd man,
If he for gold will give us any food;
I faint almost to death.

Clo. Holla; you Clown.

Ros. Peace fool, he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Clo. Your betters Sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace I say; good even to you friend.

Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.

Ros. I prythee, Shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this Desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest our selves, and feed;
Here's a young Maid with travel much oppressed,
And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her;
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not sheer the Fleeces that I graze;
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality:
Besides his Coat, his flocks, and bounds of feed
Are now on sale, and at our sheep-cote now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young Swain that you saw here but erewhile,
That little cares for buying any thing,

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the Cottage, and the pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages;
I like this place, and willingly could
Waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold;
Go with me, if you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful Feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta

Enter Amyens, Jaques, and others.

Song.

Under the greenwood tree,
who loves to lye with me,
And turn his merry Note,
unto the sweet Birds throat;
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see no enemy,
But winter and rough Weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prythee more.

Amy. It will make you melancholy, Mounsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it; More, I prythee more;
I can suck melancholly out of a song.
As a Weazel sucks eggs; More, I prythee more.

Amy. My voice is ragged, I know I cannot please you.

Ja. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to sing;
Come, more, another stanzo: Call you'em stanzo's?

Amy. What you will, Mounsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe me nothing. Will you sing.

Amy. More at your request, than to please my self.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'le thank you; but that they call complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggerly thanks. Come sing, and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Amy. Well, I'le end the song. Sirs, cover the while; the Duke will drink under this tree; he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him.
He is too disputable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he, but I give
Heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

Song. Altogether here.

Who doth ambition shun,
and loves to lye i'th Sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets;
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see, no enemy,
But Winter and rough Weather.

Jaq. I'le give you a verse to this note,
That I made yesterday in despight of my invention.

Amy. And I'le sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes.

If it do come to pass,
That any man turn Ass;
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame;
Here shall he see, gross fools as he,
And if he will come to me.

Amy. What's that Ducdame?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'le go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'le rail against all the first born of Egypt.

Amy. And I'le go seek the Duke;
His banket is prepar'd. Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Adam. Dear Master, I can go no further;
O I die for food! Here lie I down,
And measure out my grave. Farewel kind master.
Orl. Why how now, Adam! No greater heart in thee?
Live a little, comfort a little, cheer thy self a little.
If this uncouth Forrest yield any thing savage,
I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee:
Thy conceit is nearer death, than thy powers.
For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while
At the arms end: I will here be with thee presently,
And if I bring thee not something to eat,
I will give thee leave to die; but if thou dieſt
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.
Well said, thou look'ſt cheerly,
And I'll be with thee quickly; yet thou liest
In the bleak air. Come I will bear thee
To some shelter, and thou shalt not die
For lack of a dinner;
If there live any thing in this Desart.
Cheerly good Adam. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

A Table set out.

Enter Duke Sen. and Lords like out-laws.

Du. Sen. I think he be transform'd into a beast,
For I can no where find him, like a man.
1. Lord. My Lord, he is but even now gone hence,
Here was he merry, hearing of a Song.
Du. Sen. If he, compact of jars, grow Musical,
We shall have shortly discord in the Spheres:
Go seek him, tell him I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques

1. Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.
Du. Sen. Why how now, Monsieur, what a life is this,
That your poor friends must woo your company?
What, you look merrily.
Jaq. A fool, a fool; I met a fool i'th Forrest,
A motley fool, (a miserable world:)
As I do live by food, I met a fool,
Who laid him down, and bask'd him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms, and yet a motley fool.
Good morrow, fool, (quoth I:) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune;
And then he drew a Dial from his poak,
And looking on it, with lack-lustre eye,
Says, very wisely, it is ten a clock:
Thus we may see, quoth he, how the world wags:
'Tis but but an hour ago since it was nine,
And after one hour more, 'twill be eleven;
And so from hour to hour, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear
The motley fool, thus moral on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chanticleer,
That fools should be so deep contemplative:
And I did laugh, sans intermission
An hour by his Dial. Oh noble fool,
A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.
Du. Sen. What fool is this?
Jaq. O worthy fool! one that hath been a Courtier,
And says, if Ladies be but young, and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder bisket
After a voiage: He hath strange places cram'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms. O that I were a fool!
I am ambitious for a motley coat.
Du. Sen. Thou shalt have one.
Jaq It is my only suit,
Provided that you weed your better judgments
Of all opinion that grows rank in them,
That I am wise. I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please, for so fools have;
And they that are most gauled with my folly,
They most must Laugh: And why sir, must they so?
The why is plain, as way to Parish Church;
He, that a fool doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, altho' he smart
Seem senseless of the bob. If not,
The wise-man's folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the squandring glances of a fool.
Invest me in my motley; Give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through & Through
Cleanse the foul body of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.
Du. Sen. Fie on thee, I can tell what thou wouldst do.
Jaq. What, for a Counter, would I do, but good?
Du. Sen. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin:
For thou thy self hast been a Libertine,
As sensual as the brutish sting it self;
And all th'embossed sores, and headed evils,
That thou with license of free foot hast caught,
Would'st thou disgorge into the general world.
Jaq. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb.
What woman in the City do I name,
When that I say the City woman bears
The cost of Princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says his bravery is not on my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech,
There then; how then, what then, let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him; if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-Goose flies
Unclaim'd of any man. But who comes here? Scene VIII.
Enter Orlando. with his Sword drawn.
Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.
Jaq. Why I have eat none yet.
Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.
Jaq. Of what kind should this Cock come of?
Du. Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy distress?
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty?
Orl. You touch'd my vein at first, the thorny point
Of bare distress, hath tane from me the shew
Of smooth civility; yet am I in land bred,
And know some nurture; But forbear, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruit,
Till I, and my affairs are answered.
Jaq. And you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must die.
Du. Sen. What would you have?
Your gentleness shall force, more than your force
Move us to gentleness.
Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.
Du. Sen. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table
Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you,
I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern command'ment. But what e're you are

That in this desart inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose, and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look'd on better days;
If ever been where Bells have knoll'd to Church;
If ever sate at any good mans feast;
If ever from your eye-lids wip'd a tear,
And know what 'tis to pity, and be pitied;
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be,
In the which hope I blush and hide my Sword.

Du. Sen. True is it that we have seen better dayes,
And have with holy bell been knoll'd to Church,
And sate at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eyes
Of drops, that sacred pity hath engendred:
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command, what help we have,
That to your wanting may be ministred.

Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles like a Doe, I go to find my Fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limpt in pure love; till he be first suffic'd,
Oppress with two weak evils, age and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.

Du. Sen. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye; and be blest for your good comfort. Exit.

Scene IX.

Du Sen. Thou seest we are not all alone unhappy:
This wide and universal Theatre
Presents more woful Pageants than the Scene
Wherein we play in.

Jaq. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women, meerly Players;
They have their Exits and their Entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts;
His Acts being seven ages. At first the Infant,
Mewling, and puking in the Nurses arms:
Then, the whining School boy with his Satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like Snail
Unwillingly to School. And then the Lover,
Sighing like Furnace, with a woful Ballad
Made to his Mistress eye-brow. Then a Soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the Pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden, and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble Reputation,
Even in the Canons mouth. And then the Justice
In fair round belly, with good Capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and Beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws, and modern instances,
And so he plays his part. The sixt age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd Pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes,
And whistles in his sound. Last Scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and meer oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Scene X.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Du. Sen. Welcome: set down your venerable burthen, and let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Ad. So had you need,
I scarce can speak to thank you for my self.

Du. Sen. Welcome, fall too: I will not trouble you,
As yet to question you about your fortunes:
Give us some musick, and good Cousin, sing.

Song.

Blow, blow, thou winter winde,
Thou art not so unkind, as mans ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen, because thou art not seen,
Altho thy breath be rude.
Heigh ho, sing heigh ho, unto the green holly;
Most friendship is feigning; most Loving meer folly:
Then heigh ho, the holly,
This Life is most jolly,

Frieze, frieze, thou bitter skie, that dost not bite so nigh
as benefits forgot:
Tho thou the waters warp, thy sting is not so sharp,
as friend remembred not,
Heigh ho, sing &c.

Du. Sen. If that you were the good sir Rowlands son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness,
Most truly limn'd, and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither: I am the Duke
That lov'd your father: the Residue of your fortune,
Go to my Cave and tell me. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy Master is;
Support him by the arm; give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand Exeunt.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

The Palace.

Enter Duke, Lords, and Oliver.

Du. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not see an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present: but look to it,
Find out thy brother wheresoere he is,
Seek him with Candle: bring him dead, or living,
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our Territory.
Thy Lands and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brothers mouth,
Of what we think against thee.

Ol. Oh that your Highness knew my heart in this:
I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke. More villain thou. Well, push him out of doors,
And let my Officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his House and Lands:
Do this expediently, and turn him going. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda. The Forest.

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love;
And thou, thrice Crowned Queen of night, survey
With thy chast eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy Huntress name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, these Trees shall be my Books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
That every eye, which in this Forrest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness every where.
Run, run Orlando, carve on every Tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. Exit.

Enter Coren and Clown.

Co. And how like you this Shepherds life, M. Touchstone?

Clow. Truly, shepherd, in respect of it self, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a Shepherds life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, life (look you), it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my ſtomack. Has't any Philoſophy in thee, Shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know the more one ſickens, the worſe at eaſe he is: and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends. That the property of Rain is to wet, and fire to burn: That good paſture makes fat ſheep; and that a great cauſe of the night, is lack of the Sun: That he that hath learned no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a natural Philoſopher. Was't ever in Court, Shepherd?

Cor. No truly.

Clo. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope. ——————

Clo. Truly thou art damn'd, like an ill roaſted Egg, all on one ſide.

Cor. For not being at Court? your reaſon.

Clo. Why, if thou never was't at Court, thou never ſaw'ſt good manners; If thou never ſaw'ſt good manners, then thy manners muſt be wicked: and wickedneſs is ſin, and ſin is damnation: Thou art in a parlous ſtate, Shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchſtone: thoſe that have good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Countrey, as the behaviour of the Countrey is moſt mockable at the Court. You told me, you ſalute not at the Court, but you kiſs your hands; that courteſy would be uncleanly, if Courtiers were Shepherds.

Clo. Inſtance, briefly; come inſtance.

Cor. Why we are ſtill handling our Ewes; and their Fels, you know, are greaſy.

Clo. Why, do not your Courtiers hands ſweat? and is not the greaſe of Mutton as wholſome as the ſweat of a man? Shallow, ſhallow; a better inſtance, I ſay: Come.

Cor. Beſides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips will feel them the ſooner. Shallow again: a more ſounder inſtance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd overwith the ſurgery of our ſheep; and would you have us kiſs Tar? The Courtiers hands are perfumed with Civet.

Clo. Moſt ſhallow man: Thou worms meat, in reſpect of a good piece of fleſh, indeed, learn of the wiſe and perpend; Civet is of a baſer birth than Tar; the very uncleanly flux of a Cat. Mend the inſtance, Shepherd.

Cor. You have too Courtly a wit for me; I'll reſt.

Clo. Wilt thou reſt damn'd? God help thee, ſhallow man; God make inciſion in thee, thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true Labourer, I earn that I eat; get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no mans happineſs; glad of other mens good, content with my harm; and the greateſt of my pride, is to ſee my Ewes graze, and my Lambs ſuck.

Clo. That is another ſimple ſin in you, to bring the Ewes and the Rams together, and to offer to get your living, by the copulation of Cattel; to be a Bawd to a Bell-wether, and to betray a ſhe-Lamb of a twelvemonth, to a crooked pated old Cuckoldly Ram, out of all reaſonable match. If thou be'ſt not damned for this, the Devil himſelf will have no Shepherds; I cannot ſee how thou ſhould'ſt ſcape.

Cor. Here comes Mr. Ganimed, my new Miſtreſſes Brother.

Scene IV.

Enter Roſalinde, with a Paper.

Roſ. From the Eaſt to Weſtern Inde,
no jewel is like Roſalinde,
Her worth being mounted on the wind,
through all the World beards Roſalind.
All the Pictures faireſt Lin'd,
are but black to Roſalind;
Let no face be kept in mind,
but the moſt fair Roſalind.

Clo. I'll rime you ſo, eight years together; dinners, and ſuppers, and ſleeping hours excepted: it is the right Butter-womens rank to Market.

Roſ. Out Fool!

Clo. For a taſte.

If a Hart do lack a Hind,
Let him ſeek out Roſalind.
If the Cat will after kind,
ſo be ſure will Roſalind.
Winter Garments muſt be lin'd,
ſo muſt ſlender Roſalind;
They that reap muſt ſheaf and bind,
then to Cart with Roſalind.

Sweeteſt nut hath ſowreſt rind,
ſuch a nut is Roſalind.
He that ſweeteſt roſe will find,
muſt find Loves prick, and Roſalind.

This is the very falſe gallop of Verſes; why do you infect your ſelf with them?

Roſ. Peace, you dull fool, I found them on a tree.

Clo. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Roſ. I'll graff it with you, and then I ſhall graff it with a Medler: then it will be the earlieſt fruit i'th' countrey; for you'll be rotten e're you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the Medler.

Clo. You have ſaid; but whether wiſely or no, let the Forreſt judge.

Scene V.

Enter Celia with a Writing.

Roſ. Peace, here comes my ſiſter reading.

Cel. Why ſhould this a deſart be,
for it is unpeopled? No;
Tongs I'll hang on every tree,
that ſhall civil ſayings ſhow.
Some, how brief the life of man
runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the ſtretching of a ſpan,
buckles in his ſum of age;
Some of violated vows,
'twixt the ſouls of friend and friend;
But upon the faireſt boughs
or at every ſentence end;
Will I Roſalinda write;
teaching all that read, to know
This quinteſſence of every ſprite, heaven would in little ſhow.
Therefore heaven Nature charg'd,
that one body ſhould be fill'd
With all Graces wide enlarg'd,
Nature preſently diſtill'd
Helen's cheeks, but not his heart,
Cleopatra's Majeſty;
Atalanta's better part;
ſad Lucretia's Modeſty.
Thus Roſalind of many parts,
by Heavenly Synod was deviſ'd,
Of many faces, eyes and hearts,
to have the touches deareſt priz'd.
Heaven would that ſhe theſe gifts ſhould have,
and I to live and die her ſlave.

Roſ. O moſt gentle Jupiter! what tedious homily of Love have you wearied your Pariſhioners withal, and never cri'd, Have patience good people.

Cel. How now! back friends; Shepherd go off a little: go with him, ſirrah.

Clo. Come Shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat, tho not with bag and baggage, yet with ſcrip and ſcrippage, ſcrippage.

Cel. Didſt thou hear theſe Verſes?

Roſ. O yes, I heard them all, and more too; for ſome of them had in them more feet than the Verſes would bear.

Cel. That's no matter; the feet might bear the Verſes.

Roſ. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themſelves without the verſe, and therefore ſtood lamely in the verſe.

Cel. But didſt thou hear without wondring, how thy name ſhould be hang'd and carved upon theſe trees?

Roſ. I was ſeven of the nine days out of wonder, before you came: for look here what I found on a Palm tree; I was never ſo berim'd ſince Pythagoras's time that I was an Iriſh Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you, who hath done this?

Roſ. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck: change your colour?

Roſ. I prythee who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but Mountains may be remov'd with Earthquakes, and ſo encounter.

Roſ. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it poſſible?

Roſ. Nay, I prythee now, with moſt petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and moſt wonderful wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all hooping.

Roſ. Good my complexion, doſt thou think though I am capariſon'd like a man, I have a doublet and hoſe in my diſpoſition? One inch of delay more, is a ſouth-ſea of diſcovery. I prythee tell me, who is it quickly, and ſpeak apace: I would thou couldſt ſtammer, that thou might'ſt pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow mouth'd bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I prythee take the Cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Roſ. Is he of Gods making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Roſ. Why, God will ſend more, if the man will be thankful; let me ſtay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tript up the Wraſtlers heels, and your heart, both in an inſtant.

Roſ. Nay, but the Devil take mocking: ſpeak ſad brow, and true maid.

Cel. I'faith (Coz) 'tis he.

Roſ. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Roſ. Alas the day, what ſhall I do with my doublet and hoſe? What did he, when thou ſaw'ſt him? What ſaid he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when ſhalt thou ſee him again? Anſwer me in one word.

Cel. You muſt borrow me Gargantuas mouth firſt: 'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages ſize: to ſay Ay and no, to theſe particulars, is more than to anſwer in a Catechiſm.

Roſ. But doth he know that I am in this Forreſt, and in mans apparel? Looks he as freſhly as he did the day he Wraſtled?

Cel. It is as eaſie to count Atomes as to reſolve the propoſitions of a Lover: but take a taſte of my finding him, and reliſh it with good obſervance. I found him under a tree like a dropp'd Acorn.

Roſ. It may well be call'd Joves tree, when it drops forth ſuch fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good Madam.

Roſ. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he ſtretch'd along like a Wounded knight.

Roſ. Tho it be pity to ſee ſuch a ſight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry halla, to thy tongue, I prythee: it curvets unſeaſonably. He was furniſh'd like a hunter.

Roſ. O, ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would ſing my ſong without a burthen; thou bring'ſt me out of tune.

Roſ. Do you not know I am a woman, when I think I muſt ſpeak: ſweet, ſay on.

Scene VII.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not near?

Roſ. 'Tis he, ſling by, and note him.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but good faith, I had as lief have been my ſelf alone.

Orl. And ſo had I; but yet for faſhion ſake, I thank you too, for your ſociety.

Jaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do deſire we may be better ſtrangers.

Jaq. I pray you, marre no more trees with Writing Love-ſongs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, marre no more of my verſes with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Roſalinde is your loves name?

Orl. Yes, Juſt.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleaſing you when ſhe was chriſten'd.

Jaq. What ſtature is ſhe of?

Orl. Juſt as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty anſwers; have you not been acquainted with goldſmiths wives, & cozen'd them out of rings.

Orl. Not ſo: but I anſwer you right, painted cloath, from whence you have ſtudied your queſtions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you ſit down with me, and we two will rail againſt our Miſtreſs the world, and all our miſery.

Orl. I will chide no brether in the world but my ſelf, againſt whom I know no faults.

Jaq The worſt fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your beſt virtue; I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was ſeeking for a Fool, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook; look but in, and you ſhall ſee him.

Jaq. There I ſhall ſee mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a Fool, or a Cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you, farewel good ſignior Love.

Scene VIII.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monſieur Melancholy.

Roſ. I will ſpeak to him like a ſawcy Lacky, and under that habit play the knave with him: do you hear, Forreſter.

Orl. Very well; what would you?

Roſ. I pray you, what is't a clock?

Orl. You ſhould ask me what time o' day; there's no clock in the Forreſt.

Roſ. Then there is no true Lover in the Forreſt; elſe ſighing every minute, and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of time, as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the ſwift foot of time? Had not that been as proper?

Roſ. By no means ſir; Time travels in divers places, with divers perſons; I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who time trots withal, who time gallops withal, and who he ſtands ſtill withal.

Orl. I prythee, whom doth he trot withall?

Roſ. Marry he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is ſolemniz'd:

if the interim be but a ſennight; Times pace is ſo hard that it ſeems the length of ſeven years.

Orl. Who ambles time withal?

Roſ. With a Prieſt that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Gout; for the one ſleeps eaſily becauſe he cannot ſtudy, and the other lives merrily, becauſe he feels no pain: the one lacking the burthen of lean and waſteful Learning; the other knowing no burthen of heavy tedious penury. Theſe time ambles withal.

Orl. Whom doth he gallop withal?

Roſ. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go as ſoftly as foot can fall, he thinks himſelf too ſoon there.

Orl. VVhom ſtays it ſtill withal?

Roſ. VVith Lawyers in the vacation; for they ſleep between Term and Term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. VVhere dwell you, pretty youth?

Roſ. VVith this ſhepherdeſs my ſiſter; here in the skirts of the Forreſt, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Roſ. As the Cony that you ſee dwell where ſhe is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is ſomething finer, than you could purchaſe in ſo removed a dwelling.

Roſ. I have been told ſo of many; but indeed, an old religious Unkle of mine taught me to ſpeak, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtſhip too well; for there he fell in love, I have heard him read many Lectures againſt it, I thank God, I am not a VVoman, to be touch'd with ſo many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole ſex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Roſ. There were none principal, they were all like one another, as half-pence are; every ones fault ſeeming monſtrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I prythee recount ſome of them.

Roſ. No; I will not caſt away my phyſick, but on thoſe that are ſick. There is a man haunts the Forreſt, that abuſes our young plants with carving Roſalind on their barks; hangs Odes upon Hawthorns, and Elegies on brambles; all, forſooth, deifying the name of Roſalind. If I could meet that Fancy-monger, I would give him ſome good counſel, for he ſeems to have the Quotidian of Love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is ſo Love-ſhak'd; I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Roſ. There is none of my Unkles marks upon you; he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of ruſhes, I am ſure you are not priſoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Roſ. A lean cheek, which you have not; a blew eye and ſunken, which you have not; an unqueſtionable ſpirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not; (but I pardon you for that, for ſimply your having no beard, is a younger brothers revenue;) then your hoſe ſhould be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your ſleeve unbutton'd, your ſhoe unti'd, and every thing about you demonſtrating a careleſs deſolation; but you are no ſuch man, you are rather a point device in your accouſtrements, as loving your ſelf, than ſeeming the Lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I Love.

Roſ. Me believe it? You may as ſoon make her that you Love believe it, which I warrant ſhe is apter to do, than to confeſs ſhe does; that is one of the points, in the which women ſtill give the lye to their conſciences. But in good ſooth, are you he that hangs the verſes on the trees, wherein Roſalind is ſo admired?

Orl. I ſwear to thee youth, by the white hand of Roſalind I am he, that unfortunate he.

Roſ. But are you ſo much in love as your rimes ſpeak?

Orl. Neither rime nor reaſon can expreſs how much.

Roſ. Love is meerly a madneſs, and I tell you, deſerves as well a dark houſe, and a whip, as mad men do: and the reaſon why they are not ſo puniſh'd and cured, is that the Lunacy is ſo ordinary, that the whippers are in love too: yet I profeſs curing it by counſel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any ſo?

Roſ. Yes one, and in this manner. He was to imagine me his Love, his Miſtreſs: and I ſet him every day to woo me. At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantaſtical, apiſh, ſhallow, inconſtant, full of tears, full of ſmiles; for every paſſion ſomething, and for no paſſion truly any thing, as boys and women are for the moſt part cattle of this colour; would now like him, now loath him; then entertain him, then forſwear him; now weep for him, then ſpit at him; that I drave this ſuitor from me to a living humour of madneſs, which was to forſwear the full ſtream of the world, and to live in a nook meerly Monaſtick; and thus I cur'd him, and this way will I take upon me to waſh your Liver as clear as a ſound ſheeps heart, that there ſhall not be one ſpot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cur'd, youth.

Roſ. I would cure you, if you would but call me Roſalind, and come every day to my Cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now by the faith of my love, I will; Tell me where it is.

Roſ. Go with me to it, and I'll ſhew it you; and by the way, you ſhall tell me where in the Forreſt you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Roſ. Nay, Nay, you muſt call me Roſalind: Come ſiſter, will you go? Exeunt.

Scena Tertia. IX.

Enter Clown, Audrey, and Jaques.

Clo. Come apace, good Audrey, I will fetch up your Goats, Audrey; and now Audrey, am I the man yet? Doth my ſimple feature content you?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant us! what features?

Clo. I am here with thee, and thy Goats, as the moſt capricious Poet honeſt Ovid was among the Goths.

Jaq. O knowledge ill inhabited, worſe than Jove in a thatch't houſe.

Clo. When a mans verſes cannot be underſtood, nor a mans good wit ſeconded with the forward child, underſtanding; it ſtrikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room; truly, I would the Gods had made thee Poetical.

Aud. I do not know what Poeticis is; is it honeſt in deed and word? is is a true thing?

Clo. No truly; for the trueſt Poetry is the moſt faining, and Lovers are given to Poetry, and what they ſwear in Poetry, may be ſaid as Lovers, they doe feign.

Aud. Do you wiſh then that the Gods had made me Poetical?

Clo. I do truly; for thou ſwear'ſt to me thou art honeſt; Now if thou wert a Poet, I might have ſome hope thou didſt feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honeſt?

Clo. No truly, unleſs thou wert hard-favour'd: for honeſty coupled to beauty, is to have Honey a ſawce to Sugar.

Jaq. A material fool!

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honeſt.

Clo. Truly, and to caſt away honeſty upon a foul ſlut, were to put good meat into an unclean diſh.

Aud. I am not a ſlut, though I thank the Gods I am foul.

Clo. Well, praiſed be the Gods for thy foulneſs! ſluttiſhneſs sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it, as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the Vicar of the next Village, who hath promis'd to meet me in this place of the Forrest, and to couple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the Gods give us joy.

Clo. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no Temple but the Wood; no assembly but Horn-beasts. But what tho? Courage. As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said, many a man knows no end of his goods; right: many a man has good Horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife, 'tis none of his own getting; horns, even so poor men alone. No, no, the noblest Deer hath them as huge as the Rascal: Is the single man therefore blessed? No, as a wall'd Town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a Batchellor; and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver: Sir Olsver Mar-text, you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your Chappel?

Ol. Is there none here to give the woman?

Clo. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Ol. Truly she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. Proceed, proceed! I'll give her.

Clo. Good even, good M. What ye call't: how do you, Sir, you are very well met: god'ild you for your last company, I am very glad to see you; even a toy in hand here Sir: Nay, pray be covered.

Jaq. Will you be married, Motley?

Clo. As the Ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the Falcon his bells, so man hath his desire, and as Pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibling.

Jaq. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush like a beggar? Get you to Church, and have a good Priest that can tell you what marriage is; this fellow will but joyn you together as they joyn Wainscot; then one of you will prove a shrunk pannel, and like green timber, warp, warp.

Clo. I am not in the mind, but I were better to be married of him than of another; for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaq. Go thou with me,
And let me counsel thee.

Clo. Come sweet Audrey,
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry:
Farewel good M. Oliver: Not O sweet Oliver, O brave Oliver, leave me not behind thee; But wind away, be gone I say, I will not to wedding with thee.

Ol. 'Tis no matter; ne're a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. X.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me, I will weep,

Cel. Do I prethee, but yet have the Grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire,
Therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair
Is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's:
Marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I'faith his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour:
Your Chesnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity,
As the touch of holy bread. †

Cel. He hath bought a pair of chast lips of Diana; a nun of winters sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes, I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not, is: besides, the oath of a Lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmer of false reckonings; he attends here in the forrest on the Duke, your Father

Ros. I met the Duke yesterday, and had much question with him: he askt me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he; so he laugh'd, and let me go. But what talk we of Fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O that's a brave man, he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite travers athwart the heart of his lover, as a puisny Tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose; but all's brave that youth mounts, and folly guides: who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Mistress and Master, you have enquired
After the Shepherd that complain'd of love,
Whom you saw sitting by me on the Turf,
Praising the proud disdainful Shepherdess
That was his Mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly plaid
Between the pale complexion of true Love,
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain;
Go hence a little and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Ros. O come, let us remove,
The sight of Lovers feedeth those in love:
Bring us to this sight, and you shall say
I'll prove a busy actor in their play. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta. XI.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe do not scorn me, do not, Phebe,
Say that you love me not, but say not so
In bitterness; the common executioner,
Whose heart th' accustom'd sight of death makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But first begs pardon? will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner,
I flie thee, for I would not injure thee;
Thou tell'st me there is murther in mine eye;
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,
That eyes that are the frail'st and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers.
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:
Now counterfeit to swoon, why now fall down;
Or if thou can'st not, oh for shame, for shame,
Lye not, to say mine eyes are murtherers.
Now shew the wound mine eye hath made in thee;
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains

Some

† Meaning the kiss of Charity from Hermits & holy men.

So me fear of it: Lean but upon a ruth,
The Cicatrice and capable impreſſure
Thy Palm ſome moment keeps: but now mine eyes,
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not;
Nor, I am ſure there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.
Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever (as that ever may be near)
You met in ſome freſh check the power of fancy,
Then ſhall you know the wounds inviſible
That loves keen arrows make.
Phe. But till that time
Come not thou near me; and when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not,
As till that time I ſhall not pity thee.
Roſ. And why I pray you, who might be your mother,
That you inſult, exult, and all at once
Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty
As by my faith, I ſee no more in you
Than without Candle may go dark to bed:
Muſt you be therefore proud and pitileſs?
Why what means this? why do you look on me?
I ſee no more in you than in the ordinary
Of natures ſale-work? 'odds my little life,
I think ſhe means to tangle mine eyes too:
No, faith, proud Miſtreſs, hope not after it;
'Tis not your inky brows, your black ſilk hair,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your check of cream
That can entame my ſpirits to your worſhip.
You fooliſh Shepherd, wherefore do you follow her
Like foggy South, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thouſand times a properer man
Than ſhe a woman. 'Tis ſuch fools as you
That makes the world full of ill-favour'd children;
'Tis not her glaſs, but you that flatters her,
And out of you ſhe ſees her ſelf more proper
Than any of her lineaments can ſhow her:
But, Miſtreſs, know your ſelf, down on your knees,
And thank Heaven, faſting, for a good mans love;
For I muſt tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can, you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer,
Foul is moſt foul, being foul to be a ſcoffer.
So take her to thee, Shepherd; fare you well.
Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together;
I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.
Roſ. He's fall'n in love with her foulneſs, and ſhe'll
Fall in love with my anger. If it be ſo, as faſt
As ſhe anſwers thee with frowning looks, I'll ſauce
Her with bitter words: Why look you ſo upon me?
Phe. For no ill will I bear you.
Roſ. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falſer than vows made in wine;
Beſides, I like you not: if you will know my houſe,
'Tis at the tuft of Olives, here hard by:
Will you go Siſter? Shepherd ply her hard:
Come ſiſter, Shepherdeſs, look on him better
And be not proud; tho all the world could ſee,
None could be ſo abuſed in ſight as he.
Come to our flock. [Roſ. Cel: Cor. Exeunt.
Phe. Deed Shepherd, now I find thy ſaw of might,
Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at firſt ſight?
Sil. Sweet Phebe!
Phe. Hah: what ſayeſt thou Silvius?
Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.
Phe. Why, I am ſorry for thee, gentle Silvius.
Sil. Where ever ſorrow is, relief would be;
If you do ſorrow at my griet in love,
By giving love, your ſorrow and my grief
Were both extermin'd.
Phe. Thou haſt my love, is not that neighbourly?
Sil. I would have you.
Phe. Why that were covetouſneſs.
Silvius; the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not that I bear thee love,
But ſince that thou canſt talk of love ſo well,
Thy company, which erſt was irkſome to me,
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompence.
Than thine own gladneſs, that thou art employed.
Sil. So holy, and ſo perfect is my love,
And ſuch a poverty of grace, attends it,
That I ſhall think it a moſt plentious crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harveſt reaps: loſe now and then
A ſcattered ſmile, and that I'll live upon.
Phe. Know'ſt thou the youth that ſpoke to me ere-while?
Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds,
That the old Carlot once was Maſter of.
Phe. Think not I love him, tho I ask for him;
'Tis but a peeviſh boy, yet he talks well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that ſpeaks them pleaſes thoſe that hear:
It is a pretty youth, not very pretty;
But ſure he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him;
He'll make a proper man; the beſt thing in him.
Is his complexion; and faſter than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up:
He is not very tall, yet for his years he's tall;
His leg is but ſo ſo, and yet 'tis well;
There was a pretty redneſs in his lip,
A little riper, and more luſty red
Than that mix'd in his check; 'twas juſt the difference
Betwixt the conſtant red, and mingled Damask.
There be ſome women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him; but for my part
I love him not, nor hate him not; and yet
I have more cauſe to hate him than to love him;
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He ſaid mine eyes were black, and my hair black,
And now I am remembred, ſcorn'd at me;
I marvel why I anſwered not again,
But that's all one; omittance is no quittance.
I'll write to him a very taunting Letter,
And thou ſhalt bear it; wilt thou, Silvius?
Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phe. I'll write it ſtraight;
The matters in my head, and in my heart,
I will be bitter with him, and paſſing ſhort:
Go with me, Silvius. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Roſalinde, and Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prithee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.
Roſ. They ſay you are a melancholly fellow.
Jaq. I am ſo; I do love it better than laughing.
Roſ. Thoſe that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows, and betray themſelves to every modern cenſure, worſe than drunkards.
Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be ſad, and ſay nothing.
Roſ. Why then 'tis good to be a poſt.
Jaq. I have neither the Scholars melancholly, which is emulation; nor the Muſicians, which is fantaſtical; nor the Courtiers, which is proud; nor the Souldiers, which is ambitious; nor the Lawyers, which is politick; nor the Ladies, which is nice; nor the Lovers, which is all theſe; but it is a melancholly of mine own, compounded of many ſimples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the ſundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a moſt humorous ſadneſs.
Roſ. A Traveller! by my faith you have great reaſon to

* By the word foul here, is meant frowning, lowring.

to be ſad: I fear you have ſold your own Lands, to ſee other mens; then, to have ſeen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Roſ. And your experience makes you ſad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me ſad, and to travel for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happineſs, dear Roſalinde.

Jaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talk in blank verſe. Exit.

Scene II.

Roſ. Farewel Mounſieur Traveller; look you liſp, and wear ſtrange ſuits; diſable all the benefits of your own Country; be out of love with your nativity, and almoſt chide God for making you that countenance you are, or I will ſcarce think you have ſwam in a Gondello. Why, how now, Orlando, where have you been all this while? you a lover? and you ſerve me ſuch another trick, never come in my ſight more.

Orl. My fair Roſalinde, I come within an hour of my promiſe.

Roſ. Break an hours promiſe in love! he that will divide a minute into a thouſand parts, and break but a part of the thouſaud part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be ſaid of him, that Cupid hath clapt him oth' ſhoulder, but I'le warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me dear Roſalinde.

Roſ. Nay, and you be ſo tardy, come no more in my ſight, I had as lief be Woo'd of a Snail.

Orl. Of a Snail?

Roſ. Ay, of a Snail; for tho he comes ſlowly, he carries his houſe on his head: a better jointure, I think than you can make a woman: beſides, he brings his deſtiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Roſ. Why horns; which ſuch as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the ſlander of his wife.

Orl. Vertue is no horn-maker; and my Roſalinde is vertuous.

Roſ. And I am your Roſalinde.

Cel. It pleaſes him to call you ſo; but he hath a Roſalinde of a better leer than you.

Roſ. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holy-day humour, and like enough to conſent: What would you ſay to me now, and I were your very, very Roſalinde?

Orl I would kiſs before I ſpoke.

Roſ. Nay, you wete better ſpeak firſt, and when you were gravell'd for lack of matter, you might take occaſion to kiſs: very good Orators, when they are out, they will ſpit; and for lovers, lacking, (God warn us) matter, the cleanlieſt ſhift is to kiſs.

Orl. How if the kiſs be denied?

Roſ. Then ſhe puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his Beloved Miſtreſs?

Roſ. Marry that ſhould you if I were your Miſtreſs, or I ſhould think my honeſty ranker than my wit.

Orl. What, of my ſuit?

Roſ. Not out of your apparrel, and yet out of your ſuit.
Am not I your Roſalinde?

Orl. I take ſome joy to ſay you are, becauſe I would be talking of her.

Roſ. Well, in her perſon, I ſay I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine own perſon, I die.

Roſ. No faith, die by Attorney; the poor world is almoſt ſix thouſand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own perſon, (videlicet,) in a love cauſe: Troilus had his brain daſh'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have liv'd many a fair year, tho Hero had turn'd Nun, if it had not been for a hot Midſummer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to waſh in the Helleſpont, and being taken with the cramp, was drown'd; and the foolish Chronicles of that age, found it was Hero of Seſtos. But theſe are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Roſalinde of this mind; for I proteſt her frown might kill me.

Roſ. By this hand, it will not kill a flie; but come, now I will be your Roſalinde in a more coming-on diſpoſition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Roſalinde.

Roſ. Yes faith will I, Fridays and Saturdays, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Roſ. Ay, and twenty ſuch.

Orl. What ſaiſt thou?

Roſ. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope ſo.

Roſalinde. Why then, can one deſire too much of a good thing? Come ſiſter, you ſhall be the Prieſt, and marry us: give me your hand Orlando: What do you ſay ſiſter?

Orl. Pray thee marry us.

Cel. I cannot ſay the words.

Roſ. You muſt begin, will you Orlando.— — —

Cel. Go to; will you Orlando have to wife this Roſalinde?

Orl. I will.

Roſ. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now, as faſt as ſhe can marry us.

Roſ. Then you muſt ſay, I take thee Roſalinde for wife.

Orl. I take thee Roſalinde for wife.

Roſ. I might ask you for your commiſſion,
But I do take thee Orlando for my husband: there's a girl goes before the Prieſt, and certainly a womans thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are wing'd.

Roſ. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have poſſeſt her?

Orl. For ever and a day.

Roſ. Say a day, without the ever: No, no Orlando, men are April when they woo, December when they wed: Maids are May when they are maids, but the ſky changes when they are wives; I will be more jealous of thee, than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous than a Parrot againſt rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my deſires than a monkey; I will weep for nothing like Diana in the Fountain, and I will do that when you are diſpos'd to be merry; I will laugh like a Hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to ſleep.

Orl. But will my Roſalinde do ſo?

Roſ. By my life, ſhe will do as I do.

Orl. O but ſhe is wiſe.

Roſ. Or elſe ſhe could not have the wit to do this; the wiſer, the waywarder: make the doors upon a womans wit and it will out at the caſement; ſhut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; ſtop that, it will fly with the ſmoak out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with ſuch a wit, he might ſay, wit whither wilt?

Roſ. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wives wit going to your neighbours bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuſe that?

Roſ. Marry to ſay, ſhe came to ſeek you there: you ſhall never take her without her anſwer, unleſs you take her without her tongue. O that woman that cannot make her fault her husbands occaſion, let her never nurſe her child her ſelf, for ſhe will breed it like a fool.

Orl.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalinde. I will leave thee.
Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.
Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee again.
Ros. Ay go your ways, go your ways; I knew what you would prove, my friends told me as much, and I thought no less; that flattering tongue of yours won me; 'tis but one cast away, and so come death: two o' clock is your hour.
Orl. Ay sweet Rosalinde.
Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalinde, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful; therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.
Orl. With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalinde; so adieu.
Ros. Well, Time is the old Justice that examines all such offenders, and let time try: adieu. Exit.

Scene III.

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doublet and hose pluckt over your head, and shew the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.
Ros. O coz, coz, coz; my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love; but it cannot be sounded: my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the Bay of Portugal.
Cel. Or rather bottomless, that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.
Ros. No, that same wicked Bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceiv'd of spleen, and born of madness, that blind rascally boy, that abuses every ones eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love; I'll tell thee Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.
Cel. And I'll sleep. Exeunt.

Scena ~~Secunda~~. IV.

Enter Jaques and Lords, Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the Deer?
Lord. Sir, it was I.
Jaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Roman Conqueror, and it would do well to set the Deers horns upon his head, for a branch of Victory; have you no song, Forester for this purpose?
Lord. Yes, Sir.
Jaque. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

Musick, Song.

What shall he have that killed the Deer?
His Leather skin and horns to wear;
Then sing him home, the rest shall bear this burthen;
Take thou no scorn to wear the horn, the horn, the horn,
It was a crest ere thou wast born,
Thy fathers father wore it,
And thy father bore it,
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. Exeunt.

Scena ~~Tertia~~. V.

Enter Rosalinde and Celia.

Ros. How say you now, is it not past two a clock? And here much Orlando.
Cel. I warrant you with pure love and troubled brain.

~~Enter Silvius.~~

He hath ta'ne his bow and arrows, and is gone forth To sleep: look who comes here. Enter Sylvius
Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth,
My gentle Phebe, bid me give you this:
I know not the contents, but as I guess
By the stern brow, and waspish action
Which she did use as she was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenure; pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger.
Ros. Patience her self would startle at this letter, After reads it.
And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all:
She says I am not fair, that I lack manners,
She calls me proud, and that she could not love me
Were man as rare as Phenix: o'dd's my will,
Her love is not the Hare that I do hunt,
Why writes she so to me? Well, Shepherd, well,
This is a letter of your own device.
Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents,
Phebe did write it.
Ros. Come, come, you are a fool,
And turn'd into the extremity of love.
I saw her hand, she has a leathern hand,
A free-stone coloured hand; I verily did think
That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands;
She has a huswifes hand, but that's no matter;
I say she never did invent this letter,
This is a mans invention, and his hand.
Sil. Sure it is hers.
Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterous and a cruel stile,
A stile for challengers; why, she defies me,
Like Turk to Christian; womens gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant rude invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their Effect
Than in their countenance; will you hear the letter?
Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phebes cruelty.
Ros. She Phebes me; mark how the tyrant writes.
Read. Art thou god to shepherd turn'd?
That a maidens heart hath burn'd?
Can a woman rail thus?
Sil. Call you this railing?
Ros. Read. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warst thou with a womans heart?
Did you ever hear such railing?
Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.
Meaning me a beast.
If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me, what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move?
He that brings this love to thee,
Little knows this love in me;
And by him seal up thy mind,
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.

Sil.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas poor shepherd.

Ros. Do you pity him? No, he deserves no pity: wilt thou love such a woman? What to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee? not to be endured! Well, go your way to her, for I see love hath made thee a tame snake, and say this to her, That if she love me, I charge her to love thee: if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her: if you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company. Exit. Sil.

Scene VI.

Enter Oliver.

Oliv. Good morrow, fair ones: pray you, if you know, Where in the Purlews of this Forrest stands A sheep-cote, fenced about with Olive-trees?

Cel. West of this place down in the neighbour bottom, The rank of Osiers, by the murmuring stream Left on your right hand, brings you to the place; But at this hour the house doth keep it self, There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue, Then should I know you by description, Such garments, and such years: the boy is fair, Of female favour, and bestows himself Like a ripe Sister: But the woman low, And browner than her brother. are not you The owner of the house I did enquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both, And to that youth he calls his Rosalinde, He sends this bloody Napkin, are you he?

Ros. I am; what must we understand by this?

Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me What man I am, and how, and why, and where This handkercher was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you, He left a promise to return again Within an hour, and pacing through the Forest, Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy, Lo what befel! he threw his eye aside, And mark what object did present it self. Under an old Oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age, And high top bald with dry antiquity; A wretched ragged man, ore-grown with hair, Lay sleeping on his back; about his neck A green and guilded snake had wreath'd it self, Who with her head, nimble in threats approach'd The opening of his mouth; but suddenly Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd it self, And with indented glides did slip away Into a bush, under whose bushes shade A Lioness, with udders all drawn dry, Lay couching head on ground, with catlike watch When that the sleeping man shou'd stir; for 'tis The royal disposition of that beast To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead: This seen, Orlando did approach the man, And found, it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother, And he did render him the most unnatural That liv'd amongst men.

Oli. And well he might so do; For well I know he was unnatural.

Ros. But to Orlando; did he leave him there Food to the suck'd and hungry Lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so: But Kindness nobler ever than revenge, And nature stronger than his just occasion, Made him give battel to the Lioness; Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling From miserable slumber I awaked.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was't you he rescu'd?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I; I do not shame To tell you what I was, since my conversion So sweetly tasts, being the thing I am.

Ros. But for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by. When from the first to last, betwixt us two, Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd, As how I came into that desert place. In brief, he led me to the gentle Duke, Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment, Committing me unto my brothers love, Who led me instantly unto his Cave, There stript himself, and here upon his arm The Lioness had torn some flesh away, Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted, And cri'd in fainting upon Rosalinde. Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound, And after some small space, being strong at heart, He sent me hither, stranger as I am, To tell this, that you might excuse His broken promise, and to give this napkin, Died in his blood, unto the Shepherd youth, That he in sport doth call his Rosalinde. Ros. faints

Cel. Why how now Ganimed, sweet Ganimed?

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.

Cel. There is no more in it; Cosin Ganimed.

Oli. Look he recovers.

Ros. I would I were at home.

Cel. Well lead you thither. I pray you take him by the arm.

Oli. Be of good cheer, youth; you a man? You lack a mans heart.

Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah sirra, a body would think this was well counterfeited, I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: heigh-ho.

Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.

Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Ros. So I do: but i'faith, I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler; pray you draw homewards; good sir, go with us.

Oli. That will I; for I must bear answer back How you excuse my brother, Rosalinde.

Ros. I shall devise something; but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him; will you go?

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

The Forest.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Clo. We shall find a time, Audrey; patience gentle Audrey.

Aud. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the old gentlemans saying.

Clo. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Martext. But Audrey there is a youth here in the Forrest lays claim to you.

Aud. Ay, I know who 'tis; he hath no interest in me in the world; here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Clo. It is meat and drink to me to see a Clown; by my troth troth, we that have good Wits have much to answer for: we shall be flouting: we cannot hold.

Will. Good ev'n, Audrey.

Aud. God ye good ev'n, William.

Will. And good ev'n to you, sir.

Clo. Good ev'n, gentle Friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head; Nay, prithee be cover'd. How old are you, Friend?

Will. Five and twenty, sir.

Clo. A ripe age: is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Clo. A fair name. Was't born i' th' Forrest here?

Will. Ay, sir, I thank God.

Clo. Thank God: a good answer: Art rich?

Will. 'Faith, sir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good; and yet it is not; it is but so, so. Art thou wise?

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty Wit.

Clo. Why, thou sayest well: I do now remember a saying; The Fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a Fool. The Heathen Philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eat, and Lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do, sir.

Clo. Give me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Will. No, sir.

Clo. Then learn this of me, To have, is to have. For it is a Figure in Rhetorick, that drink being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do consent, that ipse is he: now you are not ipse; for I am he.

Will. Which he, sir?

Clo. He, sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore you Clown, abandon: which is in the vulgar, leave the society: which in the boorish, is company, of this Female; which in the common, is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this Female; or, Clown, thou perishest: or to thy better understanding, diest; or (to wit) I kill thee; make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage; I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel: I will bandy with thee in faction, I will o're-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways; therefore tremble and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, sir. Exit.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Master and Mistris seeks you: come away, away.

Clo. Trip Audrey, trip Audrey, I attend, I attend. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Or. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? And loving woo? and wooing, she should grant? And will you persevere to enjoy her?

Ol. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; For my Father's House, and all the Revenue, that was old Sir Rowland's, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a Shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your Wedding be to morrow; thither will I Invite the Duke, and all's contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena; for look you, Here comes my Rosalinde.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Orl. And you, fair sister.

Ros. Oh my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought my heart had been wounded with the claws of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swound, when he shew'd me your handkerchief?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are: Nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the fight of two Rams, and Cæsar's Thrasonical brag, of, I came, saw, and overcame: For your brother, and my sister, no sooner met, but they look'd; no sooner look'd, but they lov'd; no sooner lov'd, but they sigh'd; no sooner sigh'd, but they ask'd one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy; and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage; they are in the very wrath of Love, and they will together. Clubs cannot part them.

Or. They shall be married to morrow; and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptial. But O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! by so much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then to morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalinde?

Or. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch (I say) I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do your self good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things; I have since I was three years old, conversed with a Magician, most profound in his Art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalinde so near the heart, as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, you shall marry her. I know into what straights of Fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to morrow; human as she is, and without any danger.

Or. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my Life, I do; which I tender dearly, tho I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your best array, bid your Friends: For if you will be married to morrow, you shall, and to Rosalinde, if you will.

Scene IIII

Enter Sylvius, and Phebe.

Look, here comes a Lover of mine, and a Lover of hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness, To shew the Letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have: it is my study To seem dispiteful and ungentle to you:

You are there followed by a faithful Shepherd;
Look upon him, love him; he worships you.
Phe. Good Shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.
Sil. It is to be made all of sighs and tears,
And so am I for Phebe.
Phe. And I for Ganimed.
Or. And I for Rosalind.
Ros. And I for no woman.
Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service;
And so am I for Phebe.
Phe. And I for Ganimed.
Or. And I for Rosalind.
Ros. And I for no woman.
Sil. It is to be all made of fantasie,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes,
All adoration, duty and observance,
All humblenes, all patience, and impatience,
All purity, all trial, all observance;
And so am I for Phebe.
Phe. And so am I for Ganimed.
Or. And so am I for Rosalind.
Ros. And so am I for no woman.
Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you? To Ros.
Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you? To Phe.
Or If this be so, why blame you me to love you?
Ros. Why do you speak too? Why blame you me to love you?
Or. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.
Ros Pray you no more of this; 'tis like the howling of Irish Wolves against the Moon; I will help you if I can; I would love you if I could: To morrow meet me all together; I will marry you, if ever I marry Woman, and I'll be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if ever I satisfi'd man, and you shall be married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to morrow. As you love Rosalind meet, as you love Phebe meet, and as I love no woman, I'll meet. So fare you well; I have left you commands.
Sil. I'le not fail, if I live.
Phe. Nor I.
Or. Nor I. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia. IV.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Clo. To morrow is the joyful day; Audrey, to morrow will we be married.
An. I do desire it with all my heart; and I hope it is no dishoneſt desire, to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banish'd Duke's Pages.

Enter two Pages.

1. Pa. Well met honest Gentleman.
Clo By my troth well met: come, sit, sit, and a song.
2 Pa. We are for you, sit i'th' middle.
1. Pa. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice.
2. Pa. I'faith i'faith, and both in tune, like two Gypsies on a horse.

Song.

It was a Lover and his Lass,
With a hey and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o're the green corn field did pass
In the spring time; the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet Lovers love the spring.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
For love is crowned with the prime,
In spring-time, &c.

Between the acres of the Rie,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
These pretty Country-folks would lie,
In the spring-time, &c.

The Carrol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
How that a Life was but a Flower,
In the spring-time, &c.

Clo. Truly young Gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untunable.
1. Pa. You are deceiv'd sir, we kept time, we lost not our time.
Clo. By my troth, yes: I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voices. Come Audrey. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. V.

Enter Duke Senior, Amyens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, Celia.

Du. Sen. Doſt thou believe, Orlando, that the boy
Can do all this that he hath promised?
Or. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not;
As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalinde, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd:
You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde, To the Duke.
You will bestow her on Orlando here?
Du. Sen. That would I, had I Kingdoms to give with her.
Ros. And you say you will have her when I bring her? To Orl.
Or. That would I, were I of all Kingdoms King.
Ros. You say you'll marry me, if I be willing. To Phebe
Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.
Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me,
You'll give your self to this most faithful Shepherd.
Phe. So is the bargain.
Ros. You say, that you'l have Phebe, if she will? To Sylv.
Sil. Tho to have her and death were both one thing.
Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even:
Keep you your word, O Duke, to give your Daughter;
You yours, Orlando, to receive his Daughter:
Keep you your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me;
Or else refusing me, to wed this shepherd;
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
If she refuse me; and from hence I go
To make these doubts all even.
Exit Ros and Celia.
Du. Sen. I do remember in this shepherds boy,
Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.
Or. My Lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Methought he was a brother to your daughter;
But my good Lord, this boy is Forest born,
And hath been tutor'd in the Rudiments
Of many desperate studies by his Uncle,
Who he reports to be a great Magician,

Enter Clown and Audrey. Scene VI. Enter Clown & Audrey

Obscured in the circle of this Forrest.
Jaq. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples

ples are coming to the Ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are call'd Fools.

Clo. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaq. Good my Lord bid him welcome. This is the Motley-minded Gentleman that I have so often met in the Forrest: he hath been a Courtier he swears.

Clo. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation; I have trod a measure, I have flattred a Lady, I have been politick with my friend, smooth with mine enemy, I have undone three Tailors, I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that tane up?

Clo. Faith we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How the seventh cause? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Du. Sen. I like him very well.

Clo. God'ild you sir, I desire you of the like: I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the Country copulatives, to swear, and to forswear, according as Marriage binds, and blood breaks: a poor virgin, sir, an ill-favour'd thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your Pearl in your Oyster.

Du. Sen. By my Faith he is very swift and sententious.

Clo. According to the Fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But for the seventh cause; How did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Clo. Upon a Lie seven times removed; (bear your body more seeming Audrey): as thus, sir; I did dislike the cut of a certain Courtier's beard; he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is call'd the retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is call'd the quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment: this is call'd the reply churlish. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: this is call'd the reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lied: this is call'd the countercheck quarrelsome: and so to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Clo. I durst go no further than the Lie circumstantial; nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measur'd swords, and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the Lie?

Clo. O sir, we quarrel in Print, by the book; as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the Lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven Justices could not take up a Quarrel, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If; as, If you said so, then I said so: and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my Lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a Fool.

Du. Sen. He uses his Folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his Wit.

Scene VII.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.

Still Musick.

Hymen: Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even
Atone together.
Good Duke receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea, brought her hither,
That thou might'st joyn her hand with his,
Whose heart within his bosom is.

Ros. To you I give my self; for I am yours.
Or. To you I give my self; for I am yours.
Du. Se. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.
Or. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.
Phe. If sight and shape be true, why then my Love adieu.
Ros. I'll have no Father, if you be not he;
I'll have no Husband, if you be not he;
Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not she,
Hy. Peace hoa! I bar confusion;
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To joyn in Hymens bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you no cross shall part;
You and you are heart in heart;
You to his Love must accord,
Or have a Woman to your Lord.
You and you are sure together,
As the Winter to foul weather:
Whiles a Wedlock Hymn we sing,
Feed your selves with questioning:
That reason, wonder may diminish
How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Juno's crown,
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town,
High wedlock then be honoured:
Honour, high honour and renown
To Hymen, God of every Town!

Du. Sen. O my dear Neece, welcome thou art to me,
Even daughter, welcome, in no less degree.
Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou art mine,
Thy Faith, my Fancy to thee doth combine.

Scene VIII.

Enter Second Brother.

2. Bro Let me have audience for a word or two:
I am the second Son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair Assembly.
Duke Frederick hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this Forrest,
Addrest a mighty power which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wild Wood he came;
Where meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world;
His Crown bequeathing to his banish'd Brother,
And all their Lands restor'd to them again
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I do engage my life.
Du. Sen. Welcome, young man:
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brother's wedding;
To one, his Lands with-held, and to the other,
A Land it self at large, a potent Dukedome.
First, in this Forrest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returned Fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Mean time, forget this new-fal'n dignity,

And fall into our Ruſtick Revelry:
Play Muſick; and you Brides and Bridegrooms all,
With meaſure heap'd in joy, to th' Meaſures fall.
Jaq. Sir, by your patience: If I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a religious Life,
And thtown into neglect the pompous Court.
2. Bro. He hath.
Jaq. To him will I: out of theſe convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd:
You to your former Honour, I bequeath To the Duke
Your patience, and your vertue well deſerves it:
You to a Love that your true Faith doth merit; To Orla.
You to your Land, and Love, and great Allies; To Oli.
You to a long and well-deſerved bed; To Syl.
And you to wrangling; for thy loving Voyage To Clown
Is but for two months victuall'd: So to your pleaſures;
I am for other than for dancing meaſures.
Du. Sen. Stay, Jaques, ſtay.
Jaq. To ſee no paſtime, I: what you would have,
I'll ſtay to know at your abandon'd cave. Exit.
Du. Sen. Proceed, proceed, we will begin theſe rights,
As we do truſt, they'll end, in true delights.

Ros. It is not the faſhion to ſee the Lady the Epilogue: but it is no more unhandſome than to ſee the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good Wine needs no Buſh, 'tis true, that a good Play needs no Epilogue. Yet to good Wine they do uſe good Buſhes; and good Plays prove the better by the help of good Epilogues. What a caſe am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot inſinuate with you in the behalf of a good Play? I am not furniſh'd like a Beggar; therefore to beg will not become me. My way is to conjure you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, (O women) for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this Play as pleaſes you: And I charge you (O men), for the love you bear to women, (as I perceive by your ſimpring, none of you hate them), that between you and the women, the Play may pleaſe. If I were a woman, I would kiſs as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexious that lik'd me, and breaths that I deſi'd not: And I am ſure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or ſweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make curtſie, bid me farewel. Omnes. Exeunt.

To like as much as pleases them.

× Note in this Authors time The parts of women were always performed by men or Boys.

THE
Taming of the Shrew.

Scene sometimes in Padua, & sometimes in Petruchio's House in the Country.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter ~~Beggar and Hoſtes~~, Chriſtophero Sly.

~~Beggar.~~ Sly

I'Le pheeze you in Faith.
Hoſt. A pair of Stocks, you Rogue.
Beg. Y'are a baggage; the Slies are no Rogues. Look in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueroux; therefore Paucas pallabris×, let the world ſlide: Seſſa.
Hoſt. You will not pay for the glaſſes you have burſt?
Beg. No, not a deniere: go by S. Jeronimy×, go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.
Hoſt. I know my Remedy; I muſt go fetch the ~~Head~~Third-borough.
Beg. Third, or fourth, or fifth Borough, I'll anſwer him by Law; I'll not budg an inch, boy; Let him come, and kindly. Falls aſleep.

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his train.

Lo. Huntſman, I charge thee tender well my hounds;
~~Brach~~ Merriman, the poor Cur is imboſt;
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.
Saw'ſt thou not, boy, how Silver made it good
At the hedgecorner, in the coldeſt fault,
I would not loſe the dog for twenty pound.

Scene II.

Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my Lord;
He cried upon it at the meereſt loſs,
And twice to day pick'd out the dulleſt ſcent:
Truſt me, I take him for the better dog.
Lord. Thou art a Fool; if Eccho were as fleet,
I would eſteem him worth a dozen ſuch.
But ſup them well, and look unto them all,
To morrow I intend to hunt again.
Hun. I will, my Lord.
Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?
2. Hun. He breathes, my Lord. Were he not warm'd with Ale, this were a bed but cold to ſleep ſo ſoundly.
Lord. O monſtrous beaſt! how like a Swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathſom is thine image!
Sirs, I will practiſe on this drunken man.
What think you if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrap'd in ſweet cloaths; Rings put upon his fingers;
A moſt delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the Beggar then forget himſelf?
1. Hun. Believe me, Lord, I think he cannot chuſe.
2. Hun. It would ſeem ſtrange unto him when he wak'd.
Lord. Even as a flatt'ring dream, or worthleſs fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jeſt:
Carry him gently to my faireſt Chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures;
Balm his foul head in warm diſtilled waters,
And burn ſweet wood to make the Lodging ſweet:
Procure me Muſick ready when he wakes,

To

leech

× He means to say pocas palabras.

× Go by, Jeronymo, was a kind of byword in the Authors Days, as appears by its being uſed in the ſame manner by Ben. Johnſon, Beaumont & Fletcher, & other Writers near that time. It was taken from a paſſage in an Old Play called Hieronymo or the Spaniſh Tragedy.

To make a dulcet and a Heavenly ſound:
And if he chance to ſpeak, be ready ſtraight.
And with a low ſubmiſſive reverence,
Say, what is it your Honour will command?
Let one attend him with a ſilver Baſon
Full of Roſe-water, and beſtrew'd with Flowers,
Another bear the Ewer; the third a Diaper,
And ſay, will't pleaſe your Lordſhip cool your hands?
Some one be ready with a coſtly ſuit,
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horſe,
And that his Lady mourns at his diſeaſe;
Perſuade him that he hath been Lunatick.
And when he ſays he is, ſay that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty Lord:
This do, and do it kindly, gentle ſirs;
It will be paſtime paſſing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modeſty.

1. Hun. My Lord, I warrant you we will play our part,
As he ſhall think by our true diligence,
He is no leſs than what we ſay he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.

Sound Trumpets.

Sirrah, go ſee what Trumpet 'tis that ſounds,
Belike ſome noble Gentleman that means
(Travelling ſome journey) to repoſe him here.

Scene III.

Enter Servingman.

How now? (who is it?)

Ser. An't pleaſe your honour, Playrs
That offer ſervice to your Lordſhip.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come near:
Now fellows, you are welcome.

Pla. We thank your honour.

Lor. Do you intend to ſtay with me to night?

2. Pla. So pleaſe your Lordſhip to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember,
Since once he plaid a Farmer's eldeſt ſon;
'Twas where you woo'd the Gentlewoman ſo well:
I have forgot your name; but ſure that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd

Sim. I think 'twas Soto that your honour means.

Lord. 'Tis very true, thou didſt it excellent:
Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have ſome ſport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can aſſiſt me much.
There is a Lord will hear you play to night;
But I am doubtful of your modeſties,
Leſt over eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a Play,)
You break into ſome merry paſſion,
And ſo offend him: for I tell you ſirs,
If you ſhould ſmile, he grows impatient.

Pla. Fear not my Lord; we can contain our ſelves,
Were he the veriеſt antick in the world.

Lord. Go ſirra, take them to the Buttery,
~~And give them friendly welcome every one;~~
Let them want nothing that my houſe affords.

Exit one with the Players.

Sirra go you to Bartholmew my page,
And ſee him dreſt in all ſuits like a Lady:
That done, conduct him to the Drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, do him obeiſance.
Tell him from me, (as he will win my love)
He bear himſelf with honourable action,
Such as he hath obſerv'd in noble Ladies,
Unto their Lords, by them accompliſhed;
Such duty to the Drunkard let him do,
With ſoft low tongue, and lowly courteſy;
And ſay: What is't your Honour will command,
Wherein your Lady, and your humble Wife,
May ſhew her duty, and make known her love?
And then with kind embracements, tempting kiſſes,
And with declining head into his boſome,
Bid him ſhed tears, as being overjoy'd
To ſee her noble Lord reſtor'd to health,
Who for this ſeven years hath eſteemed him
No better than a poor and loathſom beggar:
And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a ſhower of commanded tears,
An Onion will do well for ſuch a ſhift,
Which in a Napkin (being cloſe convey'd)
Shall in deſpight enforce a watry eye.
See this diſpatch'd with all the haſte thou canſt,
Anon I'll give thee more inſtructions.

Exit a Servingman.

I know the boy will well uſurp the grace,
Voice, gate, and action of a Gentlewoman.
I long to hear him call the Drunkard, husband,
And how my men will ſtay themſelves from laughter,
When they do homage to this ſimple peaſant;
I'll in to counſel them: haply my preſence
May well abate the over merry ſpleen,
Which otherwiſe would grow into extreams.

Scene IV. A Bedchamber at the Lord's.

Enter aloft the Drunkard with attendants, ſome with apparel, Baſon and Ewer, and other appurtenances, and Lord.

Beg. For Gods ſake a pot of ſmall Ale.

1. Ser. Will't pleaſe your Lordſhip drink a cup of ſack?

2. Ser. Wil't pleaſe your Honour taſte of theſe Conſerves?

3. Ser. What raiment will your Honour wear to day?

Beg. I am Chriſtophero Sly, call not me honour, nor Lordſhip: I ne're drank ſack in my life: and if you give me any Conſerves, give me Conſerves of Beef: ne're aſk me what raiment I'll wear, for I have no more Doublets than Backs, no more Stockings than Leggs, nor no more Shoes than Feet, nay ſometimes more Feet than Shoes, or ſuch Shoes as my Toes look through the overleather.

Lor. Heaven ceaſe this idle humour in your Honour.
Oh that a mighty man of ſuch deſcent,
Of ſuch poſſeſſions, and ſo high eſteem,
Should be infuſed with ſo foul a ſpirit.

Beg. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Chriſtophero Sly, old Sly's ſon of Burton-heath, by birth a Pedler, by education a Card-maker, by tranſmutation a bear-herd, and now by preſent profeſſion a Tinker? Aſk Marrian Hacket the fat Ale-wife of Wincot, if ſhe know me not; if ſhe ſay I am not xiv.d. on the ſcore for ſheer Ale, ſcore me up for the lyingſt knave in Chriſtendome. What I am not beſtraught: here's——

1. Man. Oh, this it is that makes your Lady mourn.

2. Man. Oh, this is it that makes your ſervants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred ſhuns your houſe,
As beaten hence by your ſtrange Lunacy.
Oh Noble Lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from baniſhment,
And baniſh hence theſe abject lowly dreams.
Look how thy ſervants do attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have Muſick? Hearк, Apollo plays, Muſick.
And twenty caged Nightingales do ſing.
Or wilt thou ſleep? We'll have thee to a Couch,
Softer and ſweeter than the luſtful bed
On purpoſe trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk, we will beſtrow the ground:
Or wilt thou ride? thy horſes ſhall be trapp'd,
Their harneſs ſtudded all with Gold and Pearl.
Doſt thou love hawking? thou haſt Hawks will ſoar
Above the morning Lark. Or wilt thou hunt?

2 Play. (To the Other) Go get a Dish clout to make clean your Shoes, And I'll speak for the properties. My Lord, we must have a Shoulder of Mutton and some Vinegar to make our Devil roar. Mr. T. H.

Thy Hounds shall make the Welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill ecchoes from the hollow earth.
1. Man. Say thou wilt course, thy Grayhounds are as
As breathed Stags: Ay, fleeter than the Roe. swift
2. M. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brook,
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move, and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.
Lord. We'll shew thee Io, as she was a maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpriz'd,
As lively painted, as the deed was done.
3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her Legs, that one shall swear she bleeds;
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep;
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.
Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou hast a Lady far more beautiful,
Than any woman in this waining age.
1. Man. And till the tears that she hath shed for thee,
Like envious floods, o'rerun her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet she is inferior to none.
Beg. Am I a Lord, and have I such a Lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things:
Upon my life, I am a Lord indeed,
And not a Tinker, nor Christopher Sly.
Well, bring our Lady hither to our sight,
And once again, a pot o'th' smallest Ale.
2. Man. Will't please your Mightiness to wash your hands?
Oh, how we joy to see your wits restor'd,
Oh that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in a dream,
Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.
Beg. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap;
But did I never speak of all that time?
1. Man. Oh yes, my Lord, but very idle words,
For tho you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door,
And rail upon the Hostess of the house,
And say you would present her at the Leet,
Because she brought Stone Jugs, and no seal'd quarts:
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.
Beg. Ay, the womans maid of the house.
3. Ma. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,
Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up,
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece, Green.
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.
Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends!
All. Amen.
Sly. By th' Mass, I think I am a Lord indeed.
What is thy name, Man. Simon, an't please yr Hon^r
Enter Lady with Attendants.
Sly: Sim? I shall be as much as to say Simeon or Simon, put forth my hand & fill the pot.
Beg. I thank thee, thou shalt not lose by it.
Lady. How fares my noble Lord?
Beg. Marry I fare well, for here is cheer enough.
Where is my Wife?
La. Here, noble Lord, what is thy will with her?
Beg. Are you my Wife, and will not call me Husband?
My men should call me Lord, I am your good man.
La. My Husband and my Lord, my Lord and Husband,
I am your Wife in all obedience.
Beg. I know it well; what must I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Beg. Alice Madam, or Joan Madam?
Lord. Madam, and nothing else, so Lords call Ladies:
Beg. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd,
And slept about some fifteen year and more.
Lady. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.
Beg. 'Tis much, servants leave me and her alone;
Madam undress you, and come now to bed. Sim. Inuch to her
La. Thrice noble Lord, let me entreat of you,
To pardon me yet for a night or two:
Or if not so, until the Sun be set;
For your physicians have expressly charg'd,
In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed;
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.
Beg. Ay it stands so that I may hardly tarry so long;
But I would be loth to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry in despight of the flesh and the blood.

Scene VI.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Your honours Players, hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant Comedy;
For so your Doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing so much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholly is the Nurse of frenzy,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a Play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms, and lengthens life.
Beg. Marry, I will; let them play; is it not a Comonty? a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling trick?
Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleasing stuff.
Beg. What, household stuff?
Lady. It is a kind of history.
Beg. Well, we'll see't:
Come Madam Wife, sit by my side,
And let the world slip, we shall ne're be younger.

The Taming of the Shrew Act I. Scene I

Flourish. Enter Lucentio, and his man Tranio.

Padua.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of Arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lumbardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And by my fathers love and leave am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave Citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first
A Merchant of great Traffick through the world,
Vincentio's come of the Bentivolii;
Lucentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue and that part of Philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness,
By virtue specially to be atchiev'd.
Tell me thy mind, for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.
Tra. Mi Pardonato, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as your self;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet Philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no Stoicks, nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotles checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Talk Logick with acquaintance that you have,
And practice Rhetorick in your common talk;
Musick and Poesy use to quicken you,
The Mathematicks, and the Metaphysicks,
Fall to them as your stomack serves you:
No profit grows, where is no pleasure tane:

In

In brief sir, study what you most affect.
Luc. Gramercies Tranio, well dost thou advise;
If Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness,
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends, as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay a while, what company is this?
Tra. Master, some shew to welcome us to Town.

Scene II.

Enter Baptista with his two daughters, Katherina and Bianca, Gremio a Pantaloon, Hortensio a Suitor to Bianca, Lucen. Tranio, stand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katherina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gre. To cart her rather. She's too rough for me,
There, there, Hortensio, will you any Wife?
Kat. I pray you sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst those mates?
Hor. Mates, maid, how mean you that?
No mates for you;
Unless you were of gentler milder mould.
Kat. I'faith sir, you shall never need to fear,
I wis it is not half way to her heart:
But if it were, doubt not, her care shall be,
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.
Hor. From all such Devils, good Lord, deliver us.
Gre. And me too, good Lord.
Tra. Husht master, here's some good pastime toward,
That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.
Luc. But in the others silence do I see,
Maids mild behaviour and sobriety.
Peace, Tranio.
Tra. Well said, Master; mum, and gaze your fill.
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said, Bianca get you in,
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne're the less, my girl.
Kat. A pretty peat, it is best put finger in the eye, and she knew why.
Bian. Sister content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look and practice by my self.
Luc. Hark, Tranio, thou may'st hear Minerva speak.
Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange,
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.
Gre. Why will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?
Bap. Gentlemen content ye; I am resolv'd:
Go in Bianca. Exit Bianca.
And for I know she taketh most delight
In Musick, Instruments, and Poetry,
School-masters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio, you know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men,
I will be very kind, and liberal,
To mine own children, in good bringing up,
And so farewel: Katherina, you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca. Exit.
Kat. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What, shall I be appointed hours, as though,
(Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leave? Ha! Exit.

Scene III.

Gre. You may go to the devils dam: your gifts are so good, here is none will hold you. our love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out. Our cake's dow on both sides. Farewel; yet for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.
Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio: but a word, I pray; tho' the nature of our quarrel yet never brook'd parle, know now upon advice, it toucheth us both; that we may yet again have access to our fair Mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, to labour and effect one thing specially.
Gre. What's that, I pray?
Hor. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.
Gre. A husband! a Devil.
Hor. I say, a husband.
Gre. I say a devil. Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?
Hor. Tush, Gremio; tho it pass your patience and mine to endure her lewd alarums, why man, there be good fellows in the world, and a man could light on them, would take her with all her faults, and money enough.
Gre I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition, to be whipt at the high cross every morning.
Hor. Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples: come, since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so forth friendly maintain'd, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh. Sweet Bianca! happy man be his dole! he that runs fastest gets the Ring; How say you, Signior Gremio?
Grem. I am agreed, and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would throughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.

Exeunt ambo. Manet Tranio and Lucentio

Scene IV.

Tra. I pray, sir tell me, is it possible
That love should on a sudden take such hold?
Luc. Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely.
But see, while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of Love in idleness;
And now in plainness do confess to thee,
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,
Tranio I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I atchieve not this young modest girl:
Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;
Assist me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now,
Affection is not rated from the heart.
If love hath touch'd you, nought remains but so,
Redime te captum quam queas minimo.
Luc. Gramercies, Lad; go forward, this contents,
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.
Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the Maid,
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.
Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kist the Cretan strand.
Tra. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister
Began to scold, and raise up such a storm,
That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?
Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air;
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.
Tra. Nay, then 'tis time to stir him from his trance:
I pray, awake, sir; if you love the Maid,
Bend thoughts and wits to atchieve her. Thus it stands:
Her eldest sister is so curst and shrewd,

That

That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home,
And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,
Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.
Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel Father he!
But art thou not advis'd, he took some care
To get her cunning School-masters to instruct her?
Tra. Ay, marry am I, sir, and now 'tis plotted.
Luc. I have it Tranio.
Tra. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.
Luc. Tell me thine first.
Tra. You will be school-master,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.
Luc. It is: May it be done?
Tra. Not possible: for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio's son,
Keep house, and ply his book, welcome his friends,
Visit his Countreymen, and banquet them?
Luc. Basta, content thee; for I have it full.
We have not yet been seen in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,
For man or master: then it follows thus;
Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead;
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should,
I will some other be, some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so; Tranio, at once
Uncase thee: take my colour'd hat and cloak,
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee,
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.
Tra. So had you need:
In brief, Sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tied to be obedient,
For so your father charg'd me at our parting;
Be serviceable to my son, (quoth he),
(Altho I think 'twas in another sense)
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves;
And let me be a slave, t'atchieve that maid,
Whose sudden sight hath thral'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue. Sirra, where have you been?
Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now, where are you? Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes, or you stol'n his, or both? Pray, what's the news?
Luc. Sirra, come hither; 'tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my count'nance on,
And I for my escape have put on his:
For in a quarrel since I came ashore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I am descried:
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes;
While I make way from hence to save my life,
You understand me?
Bion. Ay, sir, ne're a whit.
Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.
Bion. The better for him, would I were so too.
Tra. So would I, 'faith boy, to have the next wish after, that Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter. But sirra, not for my sake, but your masters, I advise you use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio; but in all places else, your Master Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio, let's go:
One thing more rests, that thy self execute,
To make one 'mong these wooers; if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty,

[Exeunt

~~Exeunt The Presenters above speak.~~

Scene V. Before Hortensio's House.

1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not mind the play.
Beg. Yes by Saint Ann do I, a good matter surely: Comes there any more of it?
Lad. My Lord 'tis but b gun.
Beg. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, Madam Lady: would 'twere done. They sit and mark.

Omitted

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio.

Pet. Verona for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and I trow this is the house;
Here sirra, Grumio, knock I say.
Gru. Knock sir? whom should I knock? Is there any man has rebus'd your worship?
Pet. Villian I say, knock me here soundly.
Gru. Knock you here sir? Why sir, what am I sir, That I should knock you here sir?
Pet. Villian I say knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I'le knock your knaves pate.
Gru. My Master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first,
And then I know after, who comes by the worst.
Pet. Will it not be?
Faith sirra, and you'll not knock, I'le ring it,
I'le try how you can Sol, Fa, and sing it.
He rings him by the Ears.
Gru. Help mistris help, my master is mad.
Pet. Now knock when I bid you: sirra villain.

Omitted. Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now what's the matter? My old friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Verona?
Pet. Signior Hortentio, come you to part the fray? Contutti le core bene trovatto, may I say.
Hor. Alla nostra casa ben venuto multo honorato signior mio Petruchio.
Rise Grumio, we will compound this quarrel.
Gru. Nay 'tis no matter sir, what he leges in Latine. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, look you sir: He bid me knock him, and rap him soundly sir. Well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so, being perhaps (for ought I see) two and thirty, a peep out? Whom would to God I had well knock't at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst.
Pet. A senceless villain: good Hortentio, I bad the rascal knock upon your gate, Omitted
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
Gru. Knock at the gate? O heavens: speak you not these words plain? Sirra, Knock me here: rap me here: knock me well, and knock me soundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?
Pet. Sirra, be gon, or talk not I advise you.
Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio's pledg: Why this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you, Your ancient trusty pleasant servant Grumio;
And tell me now (sweet friend) what happy gale Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?
Pet Such wind as scatters young men through the world, To seek their Fortunes farther than at home, Where small experience grows, but in a few, Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me, Antonio my father is deceast, And I have thrust my self into this maze, Happily to wive and thrive, as best I may: Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home, And so am come abroad to see the world.
Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,

And

And wish thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife?
Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsel;
And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but thou art too much my friend,
And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife;
(As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance)
Be she as foul as was Florentius Love,*
As old as Sibil, as curst and shrew'd
As Socrates Zantippe, or a worse,
She moves me not, or not removes, at least,
Affections edge in me. Were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatick seas,
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua:
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why give him Gold enough, and marry him to a Puppet, or an Aglet baby, or an old trot with ne're a tooth in her head, tho she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses; Why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withall.

Hor. Petruchio, since we are stept thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest,
I can Petruchio, help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and youug and beauteous,
Brought up as best becomes a Gentlewoman.
Her only fault, and that is fault enough,
Is, that she is intolerable curst,
And shrew'd, and froward, so beyond all measure,
That were my state far worser than it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.

Pet. Hortensio peace; thou knowst not golds effect;
Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough:
For I will board her, tho she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in Autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman;
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her Father, tho I know not her,
And he knew my deceased Father well;
I will not sleep Hortensio till I see her,
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter,
Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. A my word, and she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score Knaves, or so: Why, that's nothing; and he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, sir, and she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a Cat: you know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee,
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:
He hath the Jewel of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca,
And her with-holds he from me, and Other more
Suitors to her, and rivals in my Love:
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I have before rehearst,
That ever Katherina will be woo'd;
Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'ne,
That none shall have access unto Bianca,
Till Katherine the Curst have got a husband.

Gru. Katherine the curst!
A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace,
And offer me disguis'd in sober robes,
To old Baptista as a school-master.
Well seen in Musick, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may, by this device, at least
Have leave and leisure to make love to her,
And unsuspected court her by her self.

Enter Gremio and Lucentio disguised.

Gru. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together. Master, master, look about you: Who goes there? ha.

Hor. Peace, Grumio, it is the Rival of my Love. Petruchio, stand by a while.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous.

Gre. O, very well; I have perus'd the note.
Hark you sir, I'll have them very fairly bound,
All books of Love, see that at any hand;
And see you read no other Lectures to her:
You understand me, over and beside
Signior Baptista's Liberality,
I'll mend it with a Largess. Take your paper too;
And let me have them very well perfum'd,
For she is sweeter than perfume it self
To whom they go to: what will you read to her?

Luc. What ere I read to her, I'll plead for you,
As for my Patron, stand you so assured;
As firmly as your self were still in place,
Yea, and perhaps with more successful words
Than you; unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gre. Oh this learning, what a thing it is!

Gru. Oh this Woodcock, what an ass it is!

Pet. Peace sirrah.

Hor. Gru, mum! God save you, signior Gremio.

Gre. And you are well met, Signior Hortensio.
Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola,
I promis'd to enquire carefully
About a School-master for the fair Bianca,
And by good fortune I have lighted well
On this yonng man: For learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn, well read in Poetry,
And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Tis well; and I have met a Gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help one to another,
A fine Musician to instruct our Mistress;
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Beloved of me, and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love.
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either,
Here is a Gentleman whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo curst Katharine,
Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gre. So said, so done, is well;
Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold;
If that be all, Masters, I hear no harm.

Gre. No, say'st me so, friend? What Countreyman?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Butonio's son;
My Father dead, my fortune lives for me,
And I do hope, good days and long, to see.

Gre. Oh sir, such a life with such a wife were strange;
But if you have a stomach, to't a Gods name,
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you woo this Wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gru. Will he woo her? Ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard Lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puft up with winds,
Rage like an angry Boar, chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And Heavens Artillery thunder in the skies?

Have

* This probably alludes to some story in an Italian Novel, & shd: be written Florentio

Have I not in a pitched battel heard
Loud Larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue?
That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
As will a Chesnut in a Farmers fire?
Tush, tush, fear boys with bugs.
Gru. For he fears none.
Gre. Hortensio hark:
This Gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My mind presumes for his own good, and yours.
Hor. I promis'd we would be Contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoever.
Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.
Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Scene VII.

Enter Tranio brave, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you. If I may be bold,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?
Bio. He that has the two fair daughters? is't he you mean?
Tra. Even he, Biondello.
Gre. Hark you, sir, you mean not her to ——
Tra. Perhaps him and her, what have you to do?
Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.
Tra. I love no chiders, sir: Biondello, let's away.
Luc. Well begun Tranio: [Aside.
Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a Suitor to the Maid you talk of, yea or no?
Tra. And if I be, Sir, is it any offence?
Gre. No; if without more words you will get you hence.
Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
For me, as for you?
Gre. But so is not she.
Tra. For what reason, I beseech you?
Gre. For this reason, if you'll know,
~~That~~ she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.
Hor. That she's the chosen of ~~Signior~~ Hortensio.
Tra. Softly, my Masters; If you be Gentlemen,
Do me this right; hear me with patience.
Baptista is a noble Gentleman,
To whom my Father is not all unknown,
And were his daughter fairer than she is,
She may more sutors have, and me for one.
Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
Then well may one more fair, Bianca have,
And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one,
Tho' Paris came, in hope to speed alone.
Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talk us all.
Lu. Sir, give him head, I know he'll prove a Jade.
Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?
Hor. Sir, let me be so bold, as to ask you,
Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?
Tra. No sir; but hear I do that he hath two:
The one as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other for beauteous modesty.
Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me, let her go by.
Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more than Alcides twelve.
Pet. Sir, understand you this of me, insooth?
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all access of suitors,
And will not promise her to any man,
Until the elder sister first be wed:
The younger then is free, and not before.
Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man,
Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest;
And if you break the ice, and do this feat,
Atchieve the elder; set the younger free,
For our access; whose hap shall be to have her,
Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.
Hor. Sir you say well, and well you do conceive;
And since you do profess to be a suitor,
You must, as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholding.
Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack; in sign whereof,
Please ye, we may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carouses to our Mistress health,
And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Gru. Bion. O excellent motion! fellows let's be gone.
Hor. The motions good indeed, and be it so,
Petruchio, I shall be your Ben venuto. [Exeunt.

* Act II. Scene I. Baptista's House in Padua.

Enter Katharina and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong your self,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
That I disdain: but for these other goods,
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off my self,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat,
Or what you will command me will I do;
So well I know my duty to my elders.
Kat. Of all thy suitors here I charge thee tell
Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bian. Believe me, sister, of all ~~the~~ men alive,
I never yet beheld that special face,
Which I could fancy more than any other.
Kat. Minion, thou lyest, is it not Hortensio?
Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear
I'll plead for you my self, but you shall have him.
Kat. Oh then belike you fancy riches more,
You will have Gremio, to keep you fair.
Bian. Is it for him you envy me so?
Nay, then you jest, and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while;
I prithee sister Kate, untie my hands,
Kat. If that be jest, then all the rest was so. [Strikes her.

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now Dame, whence grows this insolence?
Bianca stand aside, poor girl she weeps;
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her.
For shame thou Hilding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her, that did ne're wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
Kat. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd. [Flies after Bianca.
Bap. What, in my sight? Bianca get thee in. [Exit.
Kat. ~~What~~ will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband,
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her lead apes in hell;
Talk not to me, I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge. Exit Cath.
Bap. Was ever Gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here?

Scene II.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a mean man, Petruchio with ~~Tranio~~, with his boy bearing a Lute and Books.

Gre. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio: God save you, Gentlemen.
Pet. And you good sir; pray have you not a daughter, call'd Katherina, fair and vertuous?
Bap. I have a daughter sir, call'd Katherina.
Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.
Pet. You wrong me, signior Gremio, give me leave.
I am a Gentleman of Verona, sir,
That hearing of her beauty and her wit,
Her affability and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to shew my self a forward guest

Within

* 1st Man] My Lord you nod, you do not mind the Play. Ly] Yea by St Ann, do I: a good matter surely! comes there any more of it? [Lady] My Lord, 'tis but begun. [Ly] 'Tis a very excellent piece of work Madam Lady, would 'twere done!

within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report, which I so oft have heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment, [presenting Hor.
I do present you with a man of mine,
Cunning in Musick, and the Mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant:
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong,
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. Y'are welcome, sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katherine, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more's my grief.

Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but what I find,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name?

Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.

Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray let us that are poor petitioners speak too? Baccare, you are marvailous forward.

Pet. Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would fain be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not, sir, But you will curse
Your wooing neighbour! this is a gift
Very grateful, I am sure of it, to express
The like kindness my self, that have been
More kindly beholding to you than any,
Free leave give unto this young Scholar, that hath
Been long studying at Rheims, as cunning [Presenting Luc.
In Greek, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Musick and Mathematicks;
His name is Cambio; pray accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks, signior Gremio:
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Methinks you walk like a stranger, [To Tranio
May I be so bold, to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own,
That, being a stranger in this City here,
Do make my self a suitor to your Daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair and vertuous:
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mong st the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest.
And toward the education of your Daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latine books,
If you accept them, then their worth is great. They great privately

Bap. Lucentio is your name? of whence I pray?

Tra. Of Pisa sir, son to Vincentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Pisa, by report,
I know him well; you are very welcome, sir.
Take you the Lute, and you the set of books, [To Hor. & Luc.
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Servant.

Sirra, lead these Gentlemen
To my two Daughters, and then tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them use them well, [Exit Serv. with Hor. & Luc.
We will go walk a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner. you are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think your selves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to woo,
You know my Father well, and in him me,
Left sole heir to all his Lands and Goods,
Which I have bettered rather then decreased;
Then tell me, if I get your Daughters love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death, the one half of my Lands;
And in possession, twenty thousand Crowns.

Pet. And for that dowry, I'll assure her of for
Her widow-hood, be it that she survive me,
In all my Lands and Leases whatsoever,
Let specialities be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why that is nothing: for I tell you Father,
I am as peremptory as she proud minded.
And where two raging fires meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury.
Tho little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extream gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed!
But be thou arm'd for some unhapy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof, as Mountains are for winds,
That shake not, tho they blow perpetually.

Scene III.

Enter Hortensio with his head broke.

Bap. How now, my friend, why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my Daughter prove a good Musician?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a souldier;
Iron may hold with her, but never Lutes.

Bap. Why then thou can'st not break her to the Lute?

Hor. Why, no, for she hath broke the Lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When (with a most impatient devilish spirit)
Frets call you these? (quoth she:) I'll fume with them:
And with that word she struck me on the head,
And through my instrument my pate made way,
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a Pillory, looking through the Lute;
While she did call me Rascal, Fidler,
And twangling Jack, with twenty such vile terms,
As had she studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty Wench;
I love her ten times more then ere I did;
Oh, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bap. Well go with me, and be not so discomfited.
Proceed in practise with my younger Daughter,
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns;
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you.

Exit. Manet Petruchio.

Pet. I pray you do. I will attend her here,
And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she rail, why then I'll tell her plain
She sings as sweetly as a Nightingale:
Say that she frown, I'll say she looks as clear
As morning Roses newly wash'd with Dew;
Say she be mute, and will not speak a word,
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say, she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As tho she bid me stay by her a week;
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banes, and when be married.
But here she comes, and now, Petruchio speak.

Scene IV.

Enter Katerina.

Good morrow Kate, for that's your name I hear.

Kat. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing.
They call me Katerine, that do talk of me,

Pet.

Pet. You lie, in faith, for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst:
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom,
Kate of Kate-hall, my supper dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates, and therefore Kate;
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation,
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every Town,
Thy vertues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs:
My self am moy'd to woo thee for my wife.
Kat. Mov'd! in good time; let him that mov'd you hither,
Remove you hence; I knew you at the first
You were a movable.
Pet. Why, what's a movable?
Kat. A joyn'd stool.
Pet. Thou hast hit it; come sit on me.
Kat. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.
Kat. No such Jade, sir as you, if me you mean.
Pet. Alas, good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but young and light.
Kat. Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my weight shall be.
Pet. Should be, should: buz.
Kat. Well tane, and like a buzzard.
Pet. Oh slow-wing'd Turtle, shall a Buzzard take thee?
Kat. I, for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come you Wasp, I'faith you are too angry.
Kat. If I be waspish, 'best beware my sting.
Pet. My remedy is then to pluck it out.
Kat. I, If the fool could find it where it lies.
Pet. Who knows not where a Wasp does wear his sting? in his tail.
Kat. In his tongue?
Pet. Whose tongue?
Kat. Yours if you talk of tales, and so fare well.
Pet. What with my tongue in your tail.
Nay, come again, good Kate, I am a gentleman.
Kat. That I'le try. she strikes him.
Pet. I swear I'le cuff you, if you strike again.
Kat. So may you lose your arms.
If you strike me you are no gentleman,
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.
Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy books.
Kat. What is your Crest, a Coxcomb?
Pet. A combless Cock, so Kate will be my Hen.
Kat. No Cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.
Pet. Nay come Kate; come; you must not look so sower.
Kat. It is my fashion when I see a Crab.
Pet. Why here's no Crab, and therefore look not sower.
Kat. There is, there is.
Pet. Then shew it me.
Kat. Had I a glass, I would.
Pet. What, you mean my face.
Kat. Well aim'd of such a young one.
Pet. Now by S. George I am too young for you.
Kat. Yet you are wither'd.
Pet. 'Tis with cares.
Kat. I care not.
Pet. Nay hear you Kate. Insooth you scape not so.
Kat. I chase you if I tarry; Let me go.
Pet. No, not a whit, I find you passing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers.
Thou can'st not frown, thou can'st not look a-scance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
Oh slanderous world: Kate, like the Hazle twig,
Is straight, and slender, and as brown in hue
As Hazle Nuts, and sweeter than the Kernels.
Oh, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.
Kat. Go fool, and whom thou keep'st command.
Pet. Did ever Dian so become a Grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate?
O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,
And then let Kate be chast, and Dian sportful.
Kate. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Pet. It is extempore, from my mother wit.
Kate. A witty mother, witless else her son.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kate. Yes, keep you warm.
Pet. Marry so I mean, sweet Katherine in thy bed:
And therefore setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plain terms: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turn,
For by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Trayno.

For I am he am born to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kat to a Kate,
Conformable as other houshold Kates;
Here comes your father, never make denial,
I must, and will have Katherine to my wife. [Enter Bap. Gre. &c.
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?
Pet. How but well sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed a miss.
Bap. Why, how now Daughter Katherine, in your dumps?
Kat. Call you me daughter? now I promise you
You have shew'd a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half Lunatick,
A madcap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus; your self and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her;
If she be curst, it is for policy,
For she's not froward, but modest as the Dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;
For patience she will prove a second Grissel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity.
And to conclude, we have 'greed so well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding day.
Kat. I'le see thee hang'd on Sunday first.
Gre. Hark, Petruchio, she says she'l see thee hang'd first.
Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then good night our part!
Pet. Be patient, gentlemen, I choose her for my self;
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me; oh the kindest Kate!
She hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss
She vy'd so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
Oh you are novices! 'tis a world to see,
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest Shrew.
Give me thy hand, Kate, I will unto Venice
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding day;
Provide the feast Father, and bid the guests.
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.
Bap. I know not what to say, but give me your hands.
God send you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen say we, we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and Wife, and Gentlemen, adieu.

I

I will to Venice, Sunday comes apace,
We will have rings, and things, and fine array,
And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.
Exit Petruchio, and Katherine.

Scene VI.

Gre. Was ever match clapt up so suddenly?
Bap. Faith, Gentleman, now I play a Merchant's part,
And venture madly on a desperate Mart.
Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you;
'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
Bap. The gain I seek, is quiet in the match.
Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch:
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter;
Now is the day we long have looked for;
I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.
Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more
Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.
Gre. Youngling! thou canst not love so dear as I.
Tra. Grey-beard, thy love doth freeze.
Gre. But thine doth fry:
Skipper, stand back; 'tis age that nourisheth.
Tra. But Youth in Ladies eyes that flourisheth.
Bap. Content you, Gentlemen; I will compound this strife;
'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he of both
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,
Shall have Bianca's Love.
Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
Gre. First, as you know, my house within the City
Is richly furnished with plate and gold,
Basons and Ewers to lave her dainty hands:
My Hangings all of Tyrian Tapestry;
In ivory Coffers I have stuft my Crowns;
In Cypress Chests my Arras, Counterpoints;
Costly Apparel, Tents and Canopies,
Fine Linnen, Turky Cushions bost with Pearl;
Valance of Venice gold, in needle-work;
Pewter and Brass, and all things that belongs
To house, or house keeping: then at my Farm
I have a hundred milch-kine to the Pail,
Six score fat Oxen standing in my Stalls;
And all things answerable to this portion.
My self am struck in years, I must confess;
And if I die to morrow, this is hers,
If whil'st I live she will be only mine.
Tra. That only came well in. Sir, list to me;
I am my Father's Heir, and only Son;
If I may have your Daughter to my Wife,
I'll leave her Houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa Walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua;
Besides two thousand Ducats by the year
Of fruitful Land; all which shall be her Jointure.
What, have I pincht you, signior Gremio?
Gre. Two thousand Ducats by the year of Land!
My Land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have, besides an Argosie
That now is lying in Marsellis Road.
What, have I choakt you with an Argosie?
Tra. Gremio, 'tis known my Father hath no less
Than three great Argosies, besides two Galliasses
And twelve tite Gallies; these I will assure her,
And twice as much, what e're thou offer'st next.
Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all; I have no more;
And she can have no more than all I have;
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tra. Why then the Maid is mine from all the World,
By your firm promise; Gremio is out-vied.
Bap. I must confess your Offer is the best;
And let your Father make her the assurance,
She is your own, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tra. That's but a cavil; he is old, I young.
Gre. And may not young men die as well as old?
Bap. Well, Gentlemen, then I am thus resolv'd,
On Sunday next, you know,
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now on the Sunday following shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both. Exit.
Gre. Adieu, good neighbour. Now I fear thee not:
Sirrah, young Gamester, your Father were a fool
To give thee all; and in his waining age
Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy!
An old Italian Fox is not so kind, my boy. Exit.
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide!
Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten:
'Tis in my head to do my master good:
I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a Father, call'd suppos'd Vincentio;
And that's a wonder: Fathers commonly
Do get their children; but in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. Exit.

*

Actus Tertius. Scene I
Continues in Padua.

Enter Lucentio, Hortentio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fidler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir:
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withal?
Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is know this Lady is
The patroness of heavenly harmony;
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in Musick we have spent an hour,
Your Lecture shall have leisure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous Ass that never read so far,
To know the cause why Musick was ordain'd:
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read Philosophy;
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.
Hort. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.
Bian. Why, Gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
I am no breeching scholar in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours, nor pointed times,
But learn my Lessons as I please my self;
And to cut off all strife, here sit we down,
Take you your instrument, play you the while,
His Lecture will be done e're you have tun'd.
Hort. You'll leave his Lecture when I am in tune? [Hortensio retires.
Luc. That will be never: tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?
Luc. Here, Madam: Hic ibat Simois, hic est Sigeia tellus, hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.
Bian. Construe them.
Luc Hic ibat, as I told you before, Simois, I am Lucentio, hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your Love, hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing, Priami, is my Man Tranio, regia, bearing my Port, celsa senis, that we might beguile the old Pantaloon.
Hort. Madam, my instrument's in tune. (Returning
Bian. Let's hear. O fie, the treble jars.
Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.
Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it: Hic that Simois, I know you not, hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not, hic steterat Priami, take heed he hear us not, regia, presume not, celsa senis, despair not.
Hort. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
Luc. All but the Base.

* (Sly speaks to one of the Servants) Sirra, When will the fool come again? (Ser.) Anon, my Lord. (Sly) Gives some more drink here — where's the tapster? here Sirra, eat some of these things. (Ser.) So I do my Lord. (Sly) Here, Sirra, I drink to thee.

Hort. The base is right; 'tis the base knave that jars.
Luc. How fiery and froward our Pedant is!
Now for my Life that knave doth court my Love;
Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet:
In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Bian. Mistrust it not; for sure Æacides
Was Ajax, call'd so from his Grandfather.
Hort. I must believe my Master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt;
But let it rest. now Litio to you:
Good master, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
Bian. You may go walk, and give me leave a while;
My Lessons make no Musick in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formal, sir? well, I must wait,
And watch withal; for but I be deceiv'd,
Our fine Musician groweth amorous.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with Rudiments of Art,
To teach you Gamouth in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade;
And there it is in writing fairly drawn.
Bian. Why, I am past my Gamouth long ago.
Hor. Yet read the Gamouth of Hortensio.
Bian. Gamouth I am, the ground of all accord,
Are, to please Hortensio's passion:
Beme, Bianca take him for thy Lord,
Cfaut, that loves me with all affection,
D solre, one Cliff, two Notes have I,
Elami, show pity, or I die.
Call you this Gamouth? tut, I like it not;
Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice
To change true rules for old inventions.

Enter a Messenger.

Nick. Mistress your Father prays you leave your books,
And help to dress your sisters chamber up;
You know to morrow is the Wedding-day.
Bian. Farewel sweet Masters both; I must be gone.
Luc. Faith Mistress then I have no cause to stay.
Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant;
Methinks he looks as tho he were in Love:
Yet if thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,
To cast thy wandring eyes on every stale;
Seize thee that List; if once I find thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. Exit.

Scene II.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others, attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married;
And yet we hear not of our son in Law.
What will be said? what mockery will it be,
To want the Bridegroom when the Priest attends
To speak the ceremonial Rites of Marriage?
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?
Kate. No shame but mine; I must forsooth be forc'd
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart,
Unto a mad-brain Rudesby, full of spleen,
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.
I told you, I, he was a frantick Fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;
And to be noted for a merry man,
He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of Marriage,
Make Friends, invite; yes, and proclaim the Banes;
Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.
Now must the World point at poor Katherine,
And say, lo, there is mad Petruchio's Wife,
If it would please him come and marry her:
Tra. Patience, good Katherine and Baptista too;
Upon my Life Petruchio means but well,
Whatever Fortune stays him from his word,
Tho he be blunt, I know him passing wise;
Tho he be merry, yet withal he's honest.
Kate. Would Katherine had never seen him tho! (Exit weeping.
Bap. Go Girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep;
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Scene III.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Master, Master; news, and such news as you never heard of.
Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?
Bio. Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?
Bap. Is he come?
Bio. Why, no sir.
Bap. What then?
Bio. He is coming.
Bap. When will he be here?
Bio. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.
Tra. But say, what to thine old news?
Bio. Why Petruchio is coming in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another lac'd; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the Town-Armory, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points; his horse hip'd with an old mothy saddle, the stirrups of no kindred: beside possest with the Glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the Lampasse, infected with the Fashions, full of Windgalls, sped with Spavins, raied with the Yellows, past cure of the Fives, stark spoil'd with the Staggers, begnawn with the Bots, Waid in the back, and shoulder-shotten, near leg'd before, and with a half cheek'd Bit, and a headstall of sheep's Leather, which being restrain'd to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots; one Girth six times piec'd, and a Womans Crupper of Velure, which hath two Letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there piec'd with packthred.
Bap. Who comes with him?
Bio. Oh sir, his Lackey, for all the World caparison'd like the Horse; with a Linnen stock on one Leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, garter'd with a red and blew List; an old hat, and the humour of forty fancies prickt up in't for a feather: a Monster, a very Monster in apparel, and not like a Christian Foot-boy, or Gentleman's Lackey.
Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;
Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparell'd.
Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoever he comes.
Bio. Why, sir, he comes not.
Bap. Didst thou not say he comes?
Bio. Who? that that Petruchio came?
Bap. Ay, that Petruchio came.
Bio. No, sir; I say his horse comes with him on his back.
Bap. Why, that's all one.
Bio. Nay, by S^t^ Jamy I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more than one; and yet not many.

Scene IV.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio. fantastically habited
Pet. Come, where be these Gallants? who's at home?
Bap. You are welcome sir.
Pet. And yet I come not well.
Bap. And yet you halt not.
Tra. Not so well apparell'd as I wish you were.
Pet. Were it better, I should rush in thus.
But where is Kate? where is my lovely Bride?
How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown;
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous Monument,

Some

Some Comet, or ſome unuſual prodigy?
Bap. VVhy, ſir, you know this is your VVedding-day:
Firſt were we ſad, fearing you would not come;
Now ſadder, that you come ſo unprovided.
Fie, doff this habit; ſhame to your Eſtate,
An eye-ſore to our ſolemn feſtival.
Tra. And tell us what occaſion of import
Hath all ſo long detain'd you from your wife,
And ſent you hither ſo unlike your ſelf?
Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harſh to hear;
Sufficeth I am come to keep my word,
Tho' in ſome part enforced to digreſs,
VVhich at more leiſure I will ſo excuſe,
As you ſhall well be ſatisfied withal.
But where is Kate? I ſtay too long from her,
The morning wears; 'tis time we were at Church.
Tra. See not your Bride in theſe unreverent Robes;
Go to my chamber, put on cloaths of mine.
Pet. Not I; believe me, thus I'll viſit her.
Bap. But thus, I truſt, you will not marry her.
Pet. Good ſooth, even thus; Therefore ha' done with words;
To me ſhe's married, not unto my clothes:
Could I repair what ſhe will wear in me,
As I could change theſe poor accoutrements,
'Twere well for Kate, and better for my ſelf.
But what a fool am I to chat with you,
When I ſhould bid good morrow to my Bride,
And ſeal the title with a lovely kiſs? Exit.
Tra. He hath ſome meaning in his mad attire:
We will perſuade him, be it poſſible,
To put on better e're he go to Church.
Bap. I'll after him, and ſee the event of this. Exit.
Tra. But, ſir, Love concerneth us to add
Her father's liking; which to bring to paſs,
As before I imparted to your Worſhip;
I am to get a man; (what e're he be
It ſkills not much; we'l fit him to our turn;
And he ſhall be Vincentio of Piſa,
And make aſſurance here in Padua
Of greater ſums than I have promiſed:
So ſhall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry ſweet Bianca with conſent.
Luc. VVere it not that my fellow ſchool-maſter
Doth watch Bianca's ſteps ſo narrowly,
'Twere good, methinks, to ſteal our Marriage;
VVhich once perform'd, let all the world ſay no,
I'll keep mine own, deſpight of all the world.
Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this buſineſs:
VVe'll over-reach the gray-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Muſician amorous Licio;
All for my Maſter's ſake Lucentio. Scene VI.

Enter Gremio.

Now
Signior Gremio, came you from the Church?
Gre. As willingly as e're I came from ſchool.
Tra. And is the Bride and Bridegroom coming home?
Gre. A Bridegroom ſay you? 'tis a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom; and that the girl ſhall find.
Tra. Curſter than ſhe? why 'tis impoſſible.
Gre. VVhy he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.
Tra. VVhy ſhe's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.
Gre. Tut, ſhe's a Lamb, a Dove, a Fool to him:
I'll tell you ſir Lucentio, when the Prieſt
Should aſk if Katherine ſhould be his wife?
I by gogs woons, quoth he; and ſwore ſo loud,
That all amaz'd the Prieſt let fall the book;
And as he ſtoop'd again to take it up,
This mad-brain'd bridegroom took him ſuch a cuff,
That down fell Prieſt and book, and book and Prieſt.
Now take them up, (quoth he) if any liſt.

Tra. What ſaid the Wench, when he roſe up again?
Gre. Trembled and ſhook; for why, he ſtamp'd and ſwore,
As if the Vicar meant to cozen him.
But after many Ceremonies done,
He calls for Wine: a health quoth he; as if
He had been aboard carowſing to his Mates
After a ſtorm; quaſt off the Muſcadel,
And threw the Sops all in the Sexton's face;
Having no other cauſe, but that his beard
Grew thin and hungerly, and ſeem'd to ask
His ſops as he was drinking. This done, he took
The Bride about the neck, and kiſt her lips
With ſuch a clamorous ſmack, that at the parting
All the Church did eccho: and I ſeeing this,
Came thence for very ſhame; and after me
I know the Rout is coming: Such a mad Marriage
Never was before. Hark, hark, I hear the Minſtrels play.

Scene VII. (Muſick plays.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortenſio, Baptiſta.

Pet. Gentlemen and Friends, I thank you for your pains:
I know you think to dine with me to day,
And have prepar'd great ſtore of Wedding-cheer;
But ſo it is, my haſte doth call me hence;
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.
Bap. Is't poſſible you will away to night?
Pet. I muſt away to day, before night come:
Make it no wonder; if you knew my buſineſs,
You would intreat me rather go than ſtay.
And honeſt company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away my ſelf
To this moſt patient, ſweet and vertuous Wife:
Dine with my father, drink a health to me;
For I muſt hence, and farewel to you all.
Tra. Let us intreat you ſtay till after dinner.
Pet. It may not be.
Gre. Let me intreat you.
Pet. It cannot be.
Kat. Let me intreat you.
Pet. I am content.
Kat. Are you content to ſtay?
Pet. I am content you ſhall intreat me ſtay;
But yet not ſtay, intreat me how you can.
Kat. Now if you love me ſtay.
Pet. Grumio, my horſes,
Gru. Ay, ſir, they be ready; the Oats have eaten the horſes.
Kat. Nay then
Do what thou canſt, I will not go to day;
No, nor to morrow, nor till I pleaſe my ſelf:
The door is open ſir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;
For me, I'll not be gone till I pleaſe my ſelf:
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly ſurly groom,
That take it on you at the firſt ſo roundly.
Pet. O Kate content thee; prythee, be not angry.
Kat. I will be angry; What haſt thou to do?
Father, be quiet; he ſhall ſtay my leiſure.
Gre. Ay marry ſir, now it begins to work.
Kat. Gentlemen, forward to the Bridal-dinner.
I ſee a woman may be made a fool,
If ſhe had not a ſpirit to reſiſt.
Pet. They ſhall go forward, Kate, at thy command.
Obey the Bride, you that attend on her:
Go to the feaſt, revel and domineer;
Carowſe full meaſure to her Maiden-head;
Be mad and merry, or go hang your ſelves;
But for my bonny Kate, ſhe muſt with me.
Nay, look not big, nor ſtamp, nor ſtare, nor fret,
I will be Maſter of what is mine own;
She is my goods, my chattels, ſhe is my houſe,
My houſhold-ſtuff, my field, my barn,

My horſe, my ox, my aſs, my any thing;
And here ſhe ſtands, touch her who ever dare;
I'll bring mine action on the proudeſt he,
That ſtops my way in Padua: Grumio,
Draw forth thy Weapon; we are beſet with thieves;
Reſcue thy Miſtreſs if thou be a man:
Fear not, ſweet Wench, they ſhall not touch thee Kate;
I'll buckler thee againſt a Million. (Exeunt P. Ka.

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I ſhould die with laughing.

Tra. Of all mad matches, never was the like.

Luc. Miſtreſs, what's your opinion of your ſiſter?

Bian That being mad her ſelf, ſhe's madly mated.

Gre. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and Friends, tho Bride and Bridegroom wante
For to ſupply the places at the table;
You know there wants no junkets at the feaſt: Lucentio,
You ſhall ſupply the Bridegroom's place,
And let Bianca take her ſiſters room.

Tra. Shall ſweet Bianca practice how to bride it?

Bap. She ſhall, Lucentio: Come gentlemen, let's go. (Exeunt.

Act IV. Scene I. Petruchio's Country House.

Enter Grumio.

Gru. Fie, fie on all tired Jades, on all mad Maſters, and all foul ways! Was ever man ſo beaten? Was ever man ſo raide? Was ever man ſo weary? I am ſent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them: now were I not a little pot, and ſoon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, e're I ſhould come by a fire to thaw me; but I with blowing the fire ſhall warm my ſelf; for conſidering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Holla, hoa Curtis!

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is it that calls ſo coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou maiſt ſlide from my ſhoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis.

Cur. Is my Maſter and his Wife coming, Grumio?

Gru. O, Ay, Curtis, Ay, and therefore fire, fire, caſt on no water.

Cur. Is ſhe ſo hot a ſhrew as ſhe's reported?

Gru. She was, good Curtis, before this Froſt; but thou know'ſt Winter tames Man, Woman and Beaſt, for it hath tam'd my old Maſter, and my new Miſtreſs and my ſelf, fellow Curtis.

Cur. Away you three-inch fool; I am no beaſt.

Gru. Am I but three inches? Why thy horn is a foot, and ſo long am I at the leaſt. But wilt thou make a fire, or ſhall I complain on thee to our Miſtreſs, whoſe hand, (ſhe being now at hand) thou ſhalt ſoon feel to thy cold comfort, for being ſlow in thy hot office.

Cur. I prethee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the World?

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and therefore fire: do thy duty, and have thy duty; for my Maſter and Miſtreſs are almoſt froſen to death.

Cur. There's fire ready; and therefore good Grumio the news.

Gru. VVhy, Jack boy, ho boy, and as much news as thou wilt.

Cur. Come, you are ſo full of conicatching.

Gru. VVhy therefore fire; for I have caught extream cold. VVhere's the Cook? is ſupper ready, the houſe trimm'd, rushes ſtrew'd, cobwebs ſwept, the ſerving-men in their new Fuſtian, their white ſtockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, Carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Cur. All ready: and therefore I pray thee, what news?

Gru. Firſt, know my horſe is tired, my Maſter and Miſtreſs fal'n out.

Cur. How?

Gru. Out of their ſaddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Cur. Let's hear good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Cur. Here.

Gru. There. [Strikes him

Cur. This 'tis to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Gru. And therefore 'tis call'd a ſenſible tale: and this Cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beſeech liſtning: now I begin: Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my maſter riding behind my Miſtreſs.

Cur. Both on one horſe?

Gru. VVhat's that to thee?

Cur. VVhy, a horſe.

Gru. Tell thou the tale: but had'ſt thou not croſt me, thou ſhould'ſt have heard how her horſe fell, and ſhe under her horſe: thou ſhould'ſt have heard in how miery a place, how ſhe was bemoil'd, how he left her with the horſe upon her, how he beat me becauſe her horſe ſtumbled, how ſhe vvaded through the dirt to pluck him off me; hovv he ſwore, hovv ſhe pray'd that never pray'd before; hovv I cry'd, hovv the horſes ran avvay, how her bridle vvas burſt, hovv I loſt my crupper; vvith many things of vvorthy memory, vvhich novv ſhall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienc'd to thy grave.

Cur. By this reckoning he is more ſhrew than ſhe.

Gru. Ay, and that thou and the proudeſt of you all ſhall find vvhen he comes home. But vvhat talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joſeph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarſop, and the reſt: let their heads be ſlickly comb'd, their blue coats bruſh'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit; let them curtſie vvith their left legs, and not preſume to touch a hair of my maſter's horſe tail, till they kiſs their hands. Are they all ready?

Cur. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Cur. Do you hear ho? You muſt meet my maſter to countenance my miſtreſs.

Gru. VVhy ſhe hath a face of her ovvn.

Cur. VVho knovvs not that?

Gru. Thou it ſeems, that calls for company to countenance her.

Cur. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter four or five Serving men.

Gru. VVhy ſhe comes to borrovv nothing of them.

Nat. VVelcome home Grumio.

Phil Hovv novv Grumio?

Joſ. What Grumio.

Nick. Fellow Grumio.

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gru. Welcome you; how now you; what you; fellow you; and thus much for greeting. Now my ſpruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nat. All things are ready; how near is our maſter?

Gru. E'ne at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not ——— Cocks paſſion, ſilence, I hear my Maſter.

Scene II.

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Pet. Where be theſe knaves? What no man at door to hold my ſtirrup, nor to take my horſe? Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?

All Ser. Here, here, ſir, here, ſir.

Pet. Here ſir, here ſir, here ſir, here, ſir,
You loggerheaded and unpoliſht grooms:
What? no attendance? no regard? no duty?
Where is the fooliſh knave I ſent before?

Gru.

Gru Here ſir, as fooliſh as I was before.
Pet. You peſant, ſwain, you whoreſon malt-horſe drudge,
Did I not bid thee meet me in the Park,
And bring along the raſcal knaves with thee?
Gru. Nathaniel's coat, ſir, was not fully made;
And Gabriels pumps were all unpink't i'th' heel:
There was no Link to colour Peters hat,
And Walters dagger was not come from ſheathing:
There were none fine, but Adam, Raſe, and Gregory,
The reſt were ragged, old, and beggarly,
Yet as they are, they come to meet you.
Pet. Go raſcals, go and fetch my ſupper in. [Ex. Ser.
Where is the life that late I led?
Where are thoſe? Sit down Kate.
And welcome. Soud, ſoud, ſoud, ſoud. [Humming.

Enter Servants with ſupper.

Why when I ſay? Nay good ſweet Kate, be merry.
Off with my boots, you rogues: you villians, when?

It was the Friar of Orders gray,
As he forth walked on his way. (Sings.

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry,
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other. (Strikes him.
Be merry Kate: Some water here; what hoa!

Enter one with water.

Where's my Spaniel Troilus? Sirrah, get you hence,
And bid my Couſin Ferdinand come hither:
One, Kate, that you muſt kiſs, and be acquainted with.
Where are my ſlippers? ſhall I have ſome water?
Come Kate, and waſh, and welcome heartily:
You whoreſon villain, will you let it fall?
Kat. Patience, I pray you, 'twas a fault unwilling.
Pet. A whoreſon, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave:
Come Kate ſit down, I know you have a ſtomack,
Will you give thanks, ſweet Kate, or elſe ſhall I?
What's this, Mutton?
1. Ser. Yes.
Pet. Who brought it?
Ser. I.
Pet. 'Tis burnt, and ſo is all the meat:
What dogs are theſe? where is the raſcal Cook?
How durſt you villains bring it from the dreſſer,
And ſerve it thus to me that love it not?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups and all: (throws them about the Stage)
You heedleſs jolt-heads, and unmanner'd ſlaves!
What, do you grumble? I'll be with you ſtraight.
Kat. I pray you, husband, be not ſo diſquiet,
The meat was well, if you were ſo contented.
Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and drid away,
And I expreſly am forbid to touch it:
For it engenders choller, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of us did faſt,
Since of our ſelves, our ſelves are choleric,
Than feed it with ſuch over-roſted fleſh:
Be patient, to morrow't ſhall be mended,
And for this night we'll faſt for company.
Come I will bring thee to thy Bridal Chamber. [Exeunt.

Enter Servants ſeverally.

Nath. Peter, didſt ever ſee the like?
Peter He kills her in her own humour.
Gru. Where is he?

Enter Curtis, a Servant.

Cur. In her Chamber, making a ſermon of continency to her, and rails, and ſwears, and rates, that ſhe poor ſoul knows not which way to ſtand, to look, to ſpeak, and ſits as one new riſen from a dream. Away, away, for he is coming hither.

Scene III.

Enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus have I politickly begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end ſucceſsfully:
My faulcon now is ſharp, and paſſing empty,
And till ſhe ſtoop, ſhe muſt not be full gorg'd,
For then ſhe never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my haggard,
To make her come, and know her Keepers call:
That is, to watch her, as we watch theſe Kites,
That bait and beat, and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat to day, nor none ſhall eat.
Laſt night ſhe ſlept not, nor to night ſhall not:
As with the meat, ſome undeſerved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed.
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolſter,
This way the Coverlet, another way the Sheets;
Ay, and amid this hurly I intend, that all is done in reverend care of her,
And in concluſion, ſhe ſhall watch all night:
And if ſhe chance to nod, I'll rail and brawl,
And with the clamour keep her ſtill awake.
This is a way to kill a Wife with kindneſs,
And thus I'll curb her mad and head-ſtrong humour.
He that knows better how to tame a ſhrew,
Now let him ſpeak, 'tis charity to ſhew.

Scene IV. Padua.

Enter Tranio and Hortenſio.

Tra. Is't poſſible friend Liſio, that Miſtreſs Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?
I tell you ſir, ſhe bears me fair in hand.
Hor. Sir, to ſatisfie you in what I have ſaid,
Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

Enter Bianca and Lucentio.

Luc. Now Miſtreſs, profit you in what you read?
Bian. What Maſter read you firſt, reſolve me that?
Luc. I read that I profeſs, the art to love.
Bian. And may you prove, ſir, maſter of your art?
Luc. While you, ſweet dear, prove miſtreſs of my heart.
Hor. Quick proceeders! marry! now tell me I pray, you that durſt ſwear that your miſtreſs Bianca lov'd me in the World ſo well as Lucentio.
Tra. Oh deſpightful Love, unconſtant woman kind! I tell thee, Liſio, this is wonderful.
Hor. Miſtake no more, I am not Liſio,
Nor a Muſician, as I ſeem to be,
But one that ſcorn to live in this diſguiſe,
For ſuch a one as leaves a Gentleman,
And makes a God of ſuch a Cullion;
Know ſir, that I am call'd Hortenſio.
Tra. Signior Hortenſio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And ſince mine eyes are witneſs of her lightneſs,
I will with you, if you be ſo contented,
Forſwear Bianca and her love for ever.
Hor. See how they kiſs and court. Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more, but do forſwear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.
Tra. And here I take the like unfained oath,
Never to marry with her, tho ſhe would intreat.
Fie on her, ſee how beaſtly ſhe doth court him.
Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forſworn her!
For me, that I may ſurely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy Widow,
E're three days paſs, which has as long lov'd me,

As I have lov'd this proud disdainful Haggard.
And so farewel Signior Lucentio:
Kindness in Women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my Love: and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before. [Exit Hor.
Tra. Mistres Bianca, bless you with such grace,
As longeth to a Lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have tane you napping, gentle Love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.
Bian. Tranio, you jest: but have you both forsworn me?
Tra. Mistres we have.
Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.
Tra. I' faith he'l have a lusty Widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.
Bian. God give him joy!
Tra. Ay, and he'l tame her.
Bian. He says so, Tranio.
Tra. Faith he is gone unto the taming school.
Bian. The taming school? what is there such a place?
Tra. Ay, Mistres, and Petruchio is the Master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Scene V.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Oh Master, Master, I have watcht so long,
That I am dog-weary; but at last I spied
An ancient Angel coming down the hill
Will serve the turn.
Tra. What is he, Biondello?
Bio. Master, a Marcantant, or a pedant;
I know not what; but formal in apparel;
In gate and countenance surly, like a father.
Luc. And what of him, Tranio?
Tra If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'l make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio:
Take me your Love, and then let me alone. [Exe Luc & Bian.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, sir.
Tra. And you sir; you are welcome:
Travel you far on, or are you at the fartheſt?
Ped. Sir, at the fartheſt for a Week or two;
But then up farther, and as far as Rome;
And so to Tripoly, if God lend me life.
Tra. What Countreyman I pray?
Ped. Of Mantua.
Tra. Of Mantua, sir; marry God forbid;
And come to Padua; careless of your life?
Ped. My life, sir! how I pray? for that goes hard.
Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua; know you not the cause?
Your Ships are staid at Venice, and the Duke
For private quarrel 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.
Ped. Alas sir, it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.
Tra. Well sir, to do you courtesie,
This will I do, and this I will advise you;
First tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?
Ped. Ay sir, in Pisa have I often been;
Pisa renowned for grave Citizens.
Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?
Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him;
A Merchant of incomparable Wealth.
Tra. He is my father, sir; and sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth resemble you.
Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one. [Asid.
Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake;
And think it not the worst of all your Fortunes
That you are like to sir Vincentio:
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd:
Look that you take upon you as you should;
You understand me, sir: so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the City:
If this be court'sie, sir, accept of it.
Ped. Oh, sir, I do, and will repute you ever
The patron of my Life and Liberty.
Tra. Then go with me to make the matter good:
This by the way I let you understand,
My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dowre in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'l instruct you:
Go with me, sir, to cloath you as becomes you.
*

(Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Petruchio's Country House.

Enter Katherina and Grumio.

Gru. No, no, forsooth, I dare not for my life.
Kat. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears:
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars that come unto my father's door,
Upon intreaty have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I, who never knew how to intreat,
Nor never needed that I should intreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
With Oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed;
And that which spights me more than all these Wants,
He does it under name of perfect Love;
As who would say, if I should sleep or eat
'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death:
I prithee go and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholsome food.
Gru. What say you to a Neats-foot?
Kat. 'Tis passing good; I prithee let me have it.
Gru. I fear it is too phlegmatick a meat:
How say you to a fat Tripe finely broil'd?
Kat. I like it well; good Grumio fetch it me.
Gru. I cannot tell; I fear 'tis cholerick:
What say you to a piece of Beef and Mustard?
Kat. A dish that I do love to feed upon.
Gru. Ay, but the Mustard is too hot a little.
Kat. Why then the Beef, and let the Mustard rest.
Gru. Nay then I will not; you shall have the Mustard,
Or else you get no Beef of Grumio.
Kat. Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.
Gru. Why then the Mustard without the Beef.
Kat. Go get thee gone, thou false deluding slave, [Beats him.
That feed'st me with the very name of meat:
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go get thee gone, I say.

Scene II

Enter Petruchio and Hortensio with meat.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amort?
Hor. Mistres, what cheer?
Kat. Faith, as cold as can be.
Pet. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me:
Here Love, thou seest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat my self, and bring it thee:

I am

* [Sly sleeps] Lord. Who's within there? [Enter Servants] A sleeps again! go take him easily up & put him in his own apparel again. But see you wake him not in any case. [Serv] It shall be done, my Lord: come help to bear him hence. [They bear off Sly.]

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not:
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here take away the dish.
Kat. I pray, you let it stand.
Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine before you touch the meat.
Kat. I thank you, sir.
Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie, you are too blame:
Come, Mistris Kate, I'll bear you company.
Pet. Eat it up all, Hortentio, if thou lovest me;
Much good do it unto thy gentle heart;
Kate eat apace: and now my honey love,
Will we return unto thy Fathers house,
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats, and caps, and golden Rings,
With Ruffs and Cuffs, and Fardingals, and things:
With Scarfs, and Fanns, and double change of brav'ry,
With Amber Bracelets, Beads and all this knav'ry.
What, hast thou din'd? The Tailor stays thy leasure,
To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Scene III.

Enter Tailor.

Come Tailor, let us see these ornaments,

Enter Habberdasher.

Lay forth the gown. What news with you sir?
Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.
Pet. Why this was moulded on a porringer,
A Velvet dish; Fie, fie, 'tis lewd and filthy;
Why 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:
Away with it, come, let me have a bigger.
Kat. I'll have no bigger, this doth fit the time,
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.
Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,
And not till then.
Hor. That will not be in haste. (Aside
Kat. Why sir, I trust I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will. I am no child, no babe,
Your betters have endur'd me say my mind,
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart concealing it will break;
And rather than it shall, I will be free,
Even to the uttermost as I please in words.
Pet. Why, thou say'st true, it is a paltry cap,
A custard coffin, a bauble, silken pie;
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not.
Kat. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap,
And it I will have, or I will have none.
Pet. Thy gown? why ay: come Tailor let us see't.
O mercy, God, what masking stuff is here?
What? this a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon;
What, up and down carv'd like an apple-tart?
Here snip, and nip, and cut, and slish, and slash,
Like to a Censer in a barbers shop:
Why, what a Devils name Tailor call'st thou this?
Hor. I see she's like to have neither cap nor gown. (Aside
Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.
Pet. Marry, and did: but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir:
I'll none of it; hence, make your best of it.
Kat. I never saw a better fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.
Pet. Why, true, he means to make a puppet of thee.
Tai. She says your Worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. Oh, most monstrous arrogance!
Thou liest, thou thred, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three quarters, half yard, quarter, nail;
Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter-cricket thou!
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thred!
Away thou Rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
Or I shall so be met thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whil'st thou liv'st:
I tell thee I, that thou hast mar'd her gown.
Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd, the gown is made
Just as my Master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.
Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.
Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?
Gru. Marry, sir with needle and thred.
Tai. But did you not request to have it Cut?
Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.
Tai. I have.
Gru. Face not me: thou hast brav'd many men, brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brav'd. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown, but I did not bid him cut it to pieces. Ergo thou liest.
Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.
Pet. Read it.
Gru. The note lies in's throat if he say I said so.
Tai. Imprimis, a loose bodied gown.
Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sow me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottome of brown thred: I said a gown.
Pet. Proceed.
Tai. With a small compast cape.
Gru. I confess the cape.
Tai. With a trunk sleeve.
Gru. I confess two sleeves.
Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.
Pet. Ay there's the villany.
Gru. Error i'th bill sir, error i'th bill: I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sow'd up again, and that I'll prove upon thee, tho' thy little finger be armed in a thimble.
Tai. This is true that I say, and I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it:
Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.
Hor. God-a-mercy Grumio, then he shall have no odd's.
Pet. Well, sir in brief the gown is not for me.
Gru. You are i'th right sir, 'tis for my mistris.
Pet. Go take it up unto thy masters use.
Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my Mistres gown for thy masters use!
Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?
Gru. Oh, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for; Take up my Mistris gown unto his masters use?
Oh fie, fie, fie!
Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the Tailor paid. (Aside
Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.
Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to morrow,
Take no unkindness of his hasty words:
Away I say, commend me to thy Master. (Exit. Tai.
Pet. Well, come, my Kate, we will unto your fathers;
Even in these honest mean habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor;
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich.
And as the Sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What, is the Jay more precious than the Lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the Adder better than the Eel,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?
Oh no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture, and mean array.
If thou accounted'st it shame, lay it on me;
And therefore frolick, we will hence forthwith;

To

To feast and sport us at thy fathers house,
Go call my men, and let us straight to him,
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.
Let's see, I think 'tis now some seven a clock,
And well we may come there by dinner time.
Kat. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost two;
And 'twill be supper time ere you come there.
Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:
Look what I speak, or do, or think to do,
You are still crossing it; sirs let't alone,
I will not go to day, and ere I do,
It shall be what a clock I say it is.
Hor. Why so: this gallant will command the sun.

Scene IV. Exe Pet: Cath: & Hor

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant drest like Vincentio.

Padua

Tra. Sir, this is the house, please it you that I call.
Ped. Ay, what else, and but I be deceived,
Signior Baptista may remember me
Near twenty years ago in Genoa.
Tra. Where we were Lodgers, at the Pegasus:
Tra. 'Tis well, and hold your own in any case
With such austerity as longeth to a Father.

Enter Biondello.

Ped. I warrant you: but sir, here comes your boy,
'Twere good he were school'd.
Tra. Fear you not him; sirrah Biondello,
Now do your duty throughly, I advise you:
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.
Bion. Tut, fear not me.
Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?
Bion. I told him that your Father was in Venice,
And that you look't for him in Padua.
Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow, hold thee that to drink;
Here comes Baptista: set your countenance, sir.

Scene V.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio; and Pedant booted and bare-headed.

Tra. Signior Baptista, you are happily met:
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of;
I pray you stand, good Father, to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.
Ped. Soft son, sir by your leave, having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him; to stay him not too long,
I am content in a good fathers care
To have him matcht, and if you please to like
No worse than I, sir upon some agreement,
Me shall you find most ready and most willing
With one consent to have her so bestowed:
For curious I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.
Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say,
Your plainness and your shortness please me well:
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections;
And therefore if you say no more than this,
That like a Father you will deal with him,
And pass my daughter a sufficient dowre,
The match is made and all is done,
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.
Tra. I thank you sir, where then do you know best
We be affied, and such assurance take,
As shall with either parts agreement stand?
Bap. Not in my house Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants,
Besides old Gremio is harkning still,
And happly we might be interrupted.
Tra. Then at my lodging, an it like you sir;
There doth my father lie; and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well:
Send for your daughter by your servant here,
My Boy shall fetch the Scrivener presently.
The worst is this, that at so slender warning,
You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.
Bap. It likes me well. Go
Cambio hie you home, and bid Bianca make her ready straight:
And if you will, tell what hath happ'ned, here;
Lucentio's Father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.
Bion. I pray the gods she may with all my heart.

Exit

Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.

Enter Peter.

Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome, one mess is like to be your cheer.
Come sir, we will better it in Pisa.
Bap. I follow you.

Exeunt

Scene VI.

Enter Lucentio, and Biondello.

Bion. Cambio.
Luc. What saist thou Biondello?
Biond. You saw my Master wink and laugh upon you.
Luc. Biondello, what of that?
Biond. 'Faith, nothing; but has left me here behind to expound the meaning, or moral of his signs and tokens.
Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.
Biond. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving Father of a deceitful Son.
Luc. And what of him?
Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper:
Luc. And then?
Bion. The old Priest at St. Luke's Church is at your command at all hours.
Luc. And what of all this?
Bion. I cannot tell, except they are busied about a counterfeit assurance; take you assurance of her, Cum privilegio ad Imprimendum solum; to th' Church take the Priest, Clark, and some sufficient honest witnesses:
If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say,
But bid Bianca farewel for ever and a day.
Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello?
Bion. I cannot tarry; I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the Garden for Parsley to stuff a Rabbit, and so may you, sir; and so adieu, sir, my Master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the Priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix.

Exit.

Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented:
She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt?
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her:
It shall go hard if Cambio go without her.

Exit.

Scene VII. The Road to Padua.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortensio.

Pet. Come on a Gods name, once more towards our Fathers.
Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the Moon!
Kate. The Moon! the Sun; it is not Moon-light now.
Pet. I say it is the Moon that shines so bright.
Kat. I know it is the Sun that shines so bright.

Pet.

Pet. Now by my Mothers Son, and that's my self,
It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your fathers house:
Go on, and fetch our horses back again,
Ever more croft and croft, nothing but croft,
Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.
Kat. Forward I pray, since we have come so far,
And be it moon, or sun, or what you please:
And if you please to call it a rush Candle,
Hence forth I vow it shall be so for me.
Pet. I say it is the moon.
Kat. I know it is the moon.
Pet. Nay then you lie; it is the blessed Sun.
Kat. Then God be blest, it is the blessed Sun,
But Sun it is not, when you say it is not,
And the Moon changes even as your mind.
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is,
And so it shall be so for Katherine.
Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways, the field is won.
Pet. Well, forward, forward, thus the bowl should run;
And not unluckily against the Bias:
But soft, Company is comming here.

Scene VIII.

Enter Vincentio.

Good morrow gentle Mistris (To Vin.
Tell me sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher Gentlewoman?
Such war of white and red within her cheeks!
What Stars do spangle Heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?
Fair lovely Maid, once more good day to thee:
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauties sake.
Hor. A will make the man mad to make a woman of him.
Kat. Young budding Virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet,
Whither away, or where is thy aboad?
Happy the Parents of so fair a child;
Happier the man whom favourable Stars
Allots thee for his lovely bedfellow!
Pet. Why how now Kate, I hope thou art not mad,
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered,
And not a Maiden, as thou saist he is.
Kat. Pardon old father my mistaking eyes,
That have been so bedazled with the sun,
That every thing I look on seemeth green.
Now I perceive thou art a reverend Father:
Pardon, I pray thee for my mad mistaking.
Pet. Do, good old grandsir, and withall make known
Which way thou travelleſt; if along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.
Vin. Fair Sir, and you my merry Mistris too,
That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me,
My name is call'd Vincentio, my dwelling Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.
Pet. What is his name?
Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir.
Pet. Happily met, the happier for thy son;
And now by Law, as well as reverend age,
I may entitle thee my loving father:
The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy Son by this hath married: wonder not,
Nor be not grieved, she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;
Beside, so qualified, as may beseem
The Spouse of any noble gentleman.
Let me embrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.
Vin. But is this true, or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant travellers to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?
Hor. I do assure thee father so it is.
Pet. Come go along and see the truth hereof.
For our first merriment hath made thee jealous. (Exeunt.
Hor. Well Petruchio, this has put me in heart.
Have to my Widow, if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. (Exit.

Scene IX. Padua. before Lucentio's House

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca, Gremio is out before.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir, for the Priest is ready.
Luc. I fly Biondello; but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us. Exit
Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the Church a your back, and then come back to my master as soon as I can.
Gre. I marvael Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, Grumio with Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house,
My Fathers bears more toward the Market-place,
Thither must I, and here I leave you sir.
Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go,
I think I shall command your welcome here;
And by all likelihood some cheer is toward. (Knocks.
Gre. They're busie within, you were best knock louder.

Pedant looks out of the window.

Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?
Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within, sir?
Ped. He's within sir, but not to be spoken withal.
Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?
Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to your self, he shall need none as long as I live.
Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua. do you hear, sir? to leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you tell signior Lucentio that his Father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.
Ped. Thou liest, his father is come from Padua, and here looking out at the window.
Vin. Art thou his father?
Ped. Ay sir, so his mother says, if I may believe her.
Pet. Why, how now Gentleman! why this is flat knavery to take upon you another mans name.
Ped. Lay hands on the villain, I believe he means to cozen some body in this City under my countenance.

Scene X.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the Church together, God send 'em good shipping! but who is here? mine old Master Vincentio? now we are undone and brought to nothing.
Vin. Come hither, Crackhemp. (Seeing Biondello.
Bion. I hope I may choose Sir.
Vin. Come hither you rogue, what have you forgot me?
Bion. Forgot you? no sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.
Vin. What, you notorious villain, did'st thou never see thy Masters Father Vincentio?
Bion. What, my old worshipful old master? yes marry sir, see where he looks out of the window.
Vin. Is't so indeed? (He beats Biondello.
Bion. Help, help, help, here's a mad man will murther me.
Peda. Help, son; help Signior Baptista.
Pet. Prethee Kate, let's stand aside and see the end of this controversie.

Enter Pedant with servants, Baptista, Tranio.

Tra.

† In the first sketch of this play, printed in 1607, we find two speeches in this place worth preserving, seeming to be of the hand of Shakespear, tho the rest of that Play is far inferior.

Cath: Fair lovely Lady bright & chrystalline
Beauteous & stately as the eye-training bird;
As glorious as the morning washd with dew,
within whose eyes the Fakes her dawning beams,
& Golden Summers clears upon thy cheeks.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I sir; nay what are you sir? oh immortal God's: oh fine villain, a silken doublet, a velvet hose, a scarlet cloak, and a copatain hat: oh I am undone, I am undone: while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the University.

Tra. How now, what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatick?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient Gentleman by your habit, but your words shew you a mad man; why, sir, what concerns it you, if I wear Pearl and Gold? I thank my good Father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! oh villain, he is a Sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir, you mistake sir; pray what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name? as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass, his name is Lucentio, and he is mine only son, and heir to the Lands of me Signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! oh he hath murthered his Master; lay hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name; oh my son, my son; tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer; Carry this mad knave to the Goal; father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forth coming.

Vin. Carry me to ~~the~~ Goal?

Gre. Stay officer, he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, Signior Gremio; I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be conicatch'd in this business; I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou dar'st.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard, to the Goal with him.

Enter ~~Biondello,~~ Lucentio, and Bianca.

Vin. Thus strangers may be hal'd and abus'd; oh monstrous villain.

Bion. Oh, we are spoil'd, and yonder he is, deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Exit Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant as fast as may be.

Scene XI.

Luc. Pardon sweet father.

Vin. Lives my sweet son?

Bian. Pardon dear ~~Father~~.

Bap. How hast thou offended, where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right son to the right Vincentio,
That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit supposes bleer'd thine eie.

Gre. Here's packing with a witness to deceive us ~~all~~.

Vin. Where is that damned villain Tranio,
That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. VVhy, tell me is not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my state with Tranio,
VVhile he did bear my countenance in the town;
And happily I have arriv'd at last
Unto the wished haven of my bliss;
VVhat Tranio did, my self enforc'd him to;
Then pardon him sweet Father, for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villains nose that would have sent me to the Goal.

Bap. But do you hear sir, have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vin. Fear not Baptista, we will content you, go to; but I will in, to be revenged on this villain. Exit.

Bap. And I to sound the depth of this knavery. Exit.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca, thy father will not frown Exeunt.

Gre. My cake is dough, but I'll in among the rest,
Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast. Exit.

Kat. Husband let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Kat. What in the midst of the street?

Pet. What art thou asham'd of me?

Kat. No, sir, God forbid; but asham'd to kiss.

Pet. Why then let's home again: Come sirrah, let's away.

Kat. Nay, I will give thee a kiss; now pray thee, Love stay.

Pet. Is not this well? come my sweet Kate,
Better once then never, for never too late. Exeunt

Scena ~~Quarta.~~ XII.
Lucentio's House in Padua.

Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, and Bianca, Tranio, Biondello, Grumio, and Widdow: The Serving-men with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

Luc. At last tho long, our jarring notes agree,
And time it is when raging war is come,
To smile at scapes and perils over blown:
My fair Bianca bid my father welcome,
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, sister Katherina,
And thou Hortentio with thy loving Widdow:
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house,
My Banquet is to close our stomachs up
After our great good cheer: pray you sit down,
For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat.

Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now for my life Hortentio fears his widdow.

Hor. Then never trust me if I be afeard.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sence:
I mean Hortentio is afeard of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Pet. Roundly replied.

Kat. Mistris, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me, how likes Hortentio that?

Hor. My Widdow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended, kiss him for that, good Widdow.

Kat. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. I pray you tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your Husband being troubled with a shrew,
Measurs my husbands sorrow by his wo;
And now you know my meaning.

Kat. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kat. And I am mean indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her Kate.

Hor. To her Widdew.

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate do put her down.

Hor. That's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer; ha' to thee lad.
Drinks to Hortentio.

Bap.

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick witted folks?
Gre. Believe me sir, they But together well:
Bian. Head, and but an hasty witty body,
Would say your Head and But were head and horn.
Vin. I Mistress Bride, hath that awakened you?
Bian. I, but not frighted me, therefore I'le sleep again.
Pet. Nay that you shall not since you have begun:
Have at you for a better jest or two.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I mean to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your Bow.
You are welcome all. Exit Bianca.
Pet. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio.
This bird you aim'd at, tho you hit her not,
Therefore a health to all that shot and mist.
Tra. Oh sir, Lucentio slipt me like his Gray-hound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his Master.
Pet. A good swift simile, but something currish.
Tra. 'Tis well sir, that you hunted for your self:
'Tis thought your Deer does hold you at a bay.
Bap. Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thank thee for that gird good Tranio.
Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?
Pet. A has a little gall'd me I confess:
And as the Jest did glance away from me, (omitted
'Tis ten to one it maim'd you too outright.
Bap. Now in good sadness son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.
Pet. Well, I say no; and therefore for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager ~~which we will propose~~.
Hor. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twenty Crowns.
Pet. Twenty Crowns!
I'll venture so much of my Hawk or Hound,
But twenty times so much upon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Pet. A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will I.
Go Biondello, bid your Mistress come to me.
Bion. I go. Exit.
Bap. Son, I'll be your half, Bianca comes.
Luc. I'll have no halves: I'll bear it all my self.

Re-Enter Biondello.

How now, what news?
Bion. Sir, my Mistress sends you word
That she is busie, and cannot come.
Pet. How? she's busie, and cannot come: is that an answer?
Gre. Ay and a kind one too:
Pray God Sir, your wife send you not a worse.
Pet. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biondello, go and intreat my wife to come to me forthwith. Exit Biondello.
Pet. Oh ho! intreat her! nay then, she must needs come.
Hor. I am afraid, Sir, do what you can,

Enter Biondello.

Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?
Bion. She says you have some goodly Jest in hand,
She will not come: she bids you come to her.
Pet. Worse and worse, she will not come!
Oh vile, intolerable, not to be indur'd:
Sirra Grumio, go to your Mistress,
Say I command her to come to me. Exit.
Hor. I know her answer.
Pet. What?
Hor. She will not.
Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Scene XIII.

Enter Katherina.

Bap. Now by my hollidam, here comes Katherina.
Kat. What is your will, Sir that you send for me?
Pet. Where is your Sister, and Hortensio's wife?
Kat. They sit conferring by the Parlor fire.
Pet. Go, fetch them hither, if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:
Away I say, and bring them hither straight. Exit Catha.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boads.
Pet. Marry, peace it boads, and love, and quiet life,
An awful rule, and right supremacy:
And to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy?
Bap. Now fair befal thee good Petruchio!
The wager thou hast won, and I will add
Unto their losses twenty thousand Crowns,
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd as she had never been.
Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new built vertue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.

See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives
As prisoners to her womanly perswasion:
Katherine, that cap of yours becomes you not;
Off with that bable, and throw it underfoot. (She pulls off her cap
Wid. Lord let me never have a cause to sigh, & throws it down.
Till I be brought to such a silly pass.
Bian. Fie what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost me five hundred Crowns since supper time.
Bian. The more fool you for laying on my duty.
Pet. Katherine, I charge thee tell these headstrong women, what duty they owe to their Lords and husbands.
Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.
Pet. Come on, I say, and first begin with her.
Wid. She shall not.
Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.
Kate, Fie, fie, unknit that threatning unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy Governour.
It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame, whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sence is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will dain to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy Husband is thy Lord, thy Life, thy keeper,
Thy Head, thy Sovereign: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painful labour, both by sea and land;
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whil'st thou lyst warm at home, secure and safe,
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the Subject owes the Prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sower,
And not obedient to his honest will;
What is she but a foul contending Rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving Lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,
To offer war where they should kneel for peace;

Or

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you froward unable worms,
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart is great, my reason haply more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;
But now I see our Launces are but straws,
Our strength is weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.
Then vale your stomacks, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husbands foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kiss me Kate.

Luc. Well go thy ways old Lad, for thou shalt ha't.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Pet. Come Kate, we'l to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager tho you hit the white,
And being a winner, God give you good night.

Exit Petruchio.

Hortens. Now go thy ways, thou hast tam'd a curst Shrow.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

(Enter two Servants bearing Sly in his own apparel, & leave him on the Stage. Then Enter a Tapster.) Sly awaking) Sim gives some more wine ——— what, all the Players gone? am not I a Lord?

Tap: A Lord with a murrain! come, art thou drunk still? (Sly) Who's this? Tapster! O, I have had the Graves dream, that ever thou heardst in all thy life. (Tap) Yea marry, but thou hadst best get thee home for your wife will course you for dreaming here all night. (Sly) Will she? I know how to tame a Shrew. I dreamt upon it all this night, & thou hast wak'd me out of the best dream that ever I had. But I'll to my wife, & tame her too, if she anger me.

All's well that ends well.

Scene lyes partly in France, & partly in Tuscany. The Plot taken from Boccace Decam. 3.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. Rousillon in France.

Enter young Bertram Count of Rossilion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in black.

Mother.

IN delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ros. And in going, Madam, I weep o're my Father's death anew; but I must attend his Majesties command, to whom I am now in Ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband, Madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up were it wanted, rather than slack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Majesties amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Physitians, Madam, under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process, but only the losing of hope by time.

Mo. This young Gentlewoman had a Father, (O that had! how sad a passage 'tis!) whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretch'd so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the Kings sake he were living! I think it would be the death of the Kings disease.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speak of, Madam?

Mo. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, Madam; the King very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly; he was skilful enough to have liv'd still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ros. What is it, (my good Lord), the King languishes of?

Laf. A Fistula, my Lord.

Ros. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His sole child, my Lord, and bequeathed to my over-looking. I have those hopes of her good, that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pity, they are vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and atchieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, Madam, get from her tears.

Mo. 'Tis the best brine a Maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her Father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena, go to, no more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have ——

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Mo. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ros. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Mo. Be thou blest Bertram, and succeed thy Father
In manners as in shape! thy blood and virtue
Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodness
Share with thy birth-right! Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power than use; and keep thy friend
Under thy own lifes key: Be checkt for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will,
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down,
Fall on thy head! Farewel my Lord,
'Tis an unseason'd Courtier, good my Lord,
Advise him.

Laf.

His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls
In our hearts table: heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his sweet favour.
But now he is gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his Relicks. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake,
And yet I know him a notorious Liar;
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward,
Yet these fixt evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when Virtues steely bones
Looke bleak i'the cold wind; full oft we see
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you fair Queen.

Hel. And you, Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on Virginity?

Hel. Ay: you have some stain of souldier in you: Let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity, how may we barrocado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity though valiant, in the defence yet is weak: unfold us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: Man setting down before you will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor Virginity from underminers, and blowers up. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, Man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach your selves made, you lose your City. It is not politick, in the common-wealth of nature, to preserve virginity. Loss of Virginity, is national encrease, and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost. That you were made of, is metal to make Virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion; away with't.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in't; 'tis against the rule of Nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your Mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a Virgin: Virginity murthers it self, and should be buried in high-ways out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate Offendress against Nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a Cheese; consumes it self to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, Virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhabited sin in the Canon. Keep it not, you cannnot choose but lose by't. Out with't; within ten years it will make it self two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal it self not much the worse. Away with't.

Hel. How might one do sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see. Marry, ill, to like him that ne're it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying. The longer kept, the less worth: Off with't while 'tis vendible. Answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old Courtier, wears her cap out of fashion, richly suted, but unsutable, just like the brooch and the toothpick, which were not now: your Date is better in your Pye and your Porredg, then in your cheek; and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd Pears; it looks ill, it eats drily; marry 'tis a wither'd Pear: it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a wither'd Pear. Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.
There shall your Master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A Phœnix, Captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a soveraign,
A Counsellor, a Traitress, and a Dear:
His humblest ambition, proud humility:
His jarring concord; and his discord dulcet:
His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious christendoms
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he ——
I know not what he shall, God send him well. ——
The Courts a learning place, and he is one. ——

Par. What one i'faith?

Hel. That I wish well, 'tis pity. ——

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut them up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And shew what we alone must think, which never
Returns us thanks.

Enter Page.

Page. Monsieur Parolles,
My Lord calls for you.

Par. Little Hellen, farewel, if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at Court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars hath so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away,
When fear proposes safety:
But the composition that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Paroll. I am so full of busines, I cannot answer thee acutely: I will return perfect Courtier, in the which my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of the Courtiers counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou dieſt in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away; farewel. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy Friends; get thee a good husband, and use, him as he uses thee: So farewel.

Exit.

Scene IV.

Hel. Our remedies oft in our selves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope, only doth backward pull
Our slow designs, when we our selves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my love so high,
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune, Nature brings
To joyn like likes; and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sence, and do suppose
What hath been, cannot be. Who ever strove
To shew her merit, that did miss her love?
The Kings disease, my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leave me.

Exit.

Scene V. The Court of France.

Flourish Cornets.

Enter the King of France with letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th' ears,
Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.

1. Lo. G. So 'tis reported sir.

Kin. Nay, 'tis most credible, we here receive it,
A certainty vouch'd from our Cousin Austria,
With Caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.

1. L. G. His love and wisdom
Approv'd so to your Majesty may plead
For amplest credence.

Kin. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denyd before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2. Lo. E. It may well serve
A nursery to our Gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

Kin. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafew and Parolles.

1. Lo. G. It is the Count Rossillion, my good Lord,
Young Bertram.

Kin. Youth, thou bear'st thy fathers face,
Frank Nature, rather curious than in hast,
Hath well compos'd thee: Thy Fathers moral parts
Mayst thou inherit too? welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your Majesties.

Kin. I would I had that corporal soundness now
As when thy father and my self in friendship
First tri'd our souldiership: he did look far
Into the service of the time, and was
Discipled of the bravest. He lasted long,
But on us both did haggish Age steal on,
And wore us out of act; it much repairs me
To talk of your good Father; in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To day in our young Lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour:
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride, or sharpness, if they were,
His equal had awak'd them, and his honour
Clock to it self, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speak; and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled: such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, Sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb:
So in approof lives not his Epitaph,
As in your royal speech.

King. Would I were with him! he would always say,
(Methinks I hear him now) his plausive words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them
To grow there and to bear; let me not live,
This his good melancholly oft began
On the Catastrophe and heel of pastime
When it was out; let me not live, (quoth he),
After my flame lacks oyl, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are
Meer fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions: this he wish'd.
I, after him, do after him wish too,
(Since I, nor wax, nor honey can bring home,)
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some Labourers room.

2 L. E. You're loved Sir;
They that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

Kin. I fill a place I know't; how long is't, Count,
Since the Physician at your fathers died,
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my Lord.

Kin. If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arm; the rest have worn me out
With several applications; Nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure! Welcome, Count,
My sons no dearer.

Ber. Thank your Majesty.

Exit.

Flourish.

Scene VI. Rousillon.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Coun. I will now hear; what say you of this Gentlewoman?

St. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the Kalender of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of our selves we publish them.

Cou. What do's this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah; the complaints I have heard of you, I do not all believe; 'tis my slowness that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, Madam, I am a poor fellow.

Cou. Well, sir.

Clo. No Madam,
'Tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damn'd; but if I have your Ladiships good will to go the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Coun. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Cou. What case?

Clo. In Isbels case and mine own; service is no heritage, and I think I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue o' my body, for they say Barns are blessings.

Cou. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry?

Clo. My poor body, Madam requires it, I am driven on by the flesh, and he must needs go that the devil drives.

Cou. Is this all your worships reason?

Clo. Faith, Madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Cou. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, (Madam), a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are, and indeed I do marry that I may repent.

Cou. Thy marriage sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out of friends, Madam, and I hope to have friends for my wives sake.

Cou. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. Y'are shallow, Madam, in great friends, for the knaves come to do that for me which I am a weary of; he that ears my Land, spares my team, and gives me leave to in the crop; if I be his Cuckold, he's my drudg; he that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherisheth my flesh and blood, loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: Ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the

Puritan

Puritan, and old Poysam the Papist, howsoere their hearts are sever'd in Religon, their heads are both one, they may joul horns together like any Deer i'th Herd.

Cou. Thou wilt ever be a foul mouth'd and calumnious knave.

Clo. A prophet, I Madam, and I speak the truth the next way, for I the Ballad will repeat, which men full true shall find, your marriage comes by destiny, your Cuckow sings by kind.

Cou. Get you gone, sir, I'le talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, Madam, that he bid Hellen come to you, of her I am to speak.

Cou. Sirrah tell my Gentlewoman I would speak with her, Hellen I mean.

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she, (singing)
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond, was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood, ~~sic~~
And gave this sentence then, among nine bad if one be good, ~~among nine bad~~ if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Cou. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, Madam, which is ~~the~~ purifying a'th song: would God would serve the world so all the year, we'd find no fault with the tithe woman if I were the Parson; one in ten quoth a'! and we might have a good woman born but ~~one~~ every blazing Star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the Lottery well, a man may draw his heart out ere a pluck one.

Cou. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you?

Clo. That man that should be at a womans command, and ~~do~~ no hurt done! tho honesty be no Puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the Surplice of humility over the black Gown of a big heart: I am going, forsooth, the business is for Hellen to come hither. [Exit.

Cou. Well, now.

Stew. I know, (Madam), you love your Gentlewoman intirely.

Cou. Faith, I do; her Father bequeath'd her to me; and she her self, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds; there is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than I think she wish'd me; alone she was, and did communicate to her self her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touch'd not any stranger sense; her matter was, she loved your Son; Fortune, she said was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love no God, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level: Queen of Virgins, that would suffer her poor Knight surpris'd without rescue in the first assault, or ransome afterward. This she deliver'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e're I heard Virgin exclaim in, which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Coun. You have discharg'd this honesty, keep it to your self; many likelihoods inform'd me of this before, which hung so tottering in the ballance, that I could never believe nor misdoubt: pray you, leave me, stall this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care; I will speak with you further anon. [Exit Steward.

Scene VII.

Enter Hellen.

~~Old Cou.~~ Even so it was with me when I was young;
If ever we are natures, these are ours; this thorn
Doth to our Rose of youth rightly belong,
Our blood to us, this to our blood is born;
It is the show and seal of natures truth,
Where loves strong passion is impress't in youth,
By our remembrances of days forgone,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none.
Her eye is sick on't, I observe her now.

Hel. what is your pleasure, Madam?

~~Ol. Cou.~~ You know, Hellen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable Mistress.

~~Ol.~~ Cou. Nay, a Mother; why not a Mother? when I said Mother,
Methought you saw a serpent; what's in Mother,
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother,
And put you in the Catalogue of those
That were enwombed mine; 'tis often seen
Adoption strives with nature, and choice breeds
A native slip to us from forrain seeds:
You ne're oppress me with a mothers groan,
Yet I express to you a mothers care:
(Gods mercy, Maiden), do's it curd thy blood
To say I am thy mother? what's the matter,
That this distempered messenger of wet,
The many colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?
——Why, that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Ol. Cou. I say I am your Mother.

Hel. Pardon, Madam.
The Count Rossillion cannot be my brother;
I am from humble, he from honoured name;
No note upon my Parents, his all noble,
My Master, my dear Lord he is, and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not be my brother.

Ol. Cou. Nor I your Mother.

Hel. You are my Mother, Madam, would you were (So that my Lord your Son were not my brother,
Indeed my Mother, or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister, can't no other,
But I Your Daughter, he must be my Brother.)

~~Ol. Cou.~~ Yes, Hellen, you might be my Daughter in law,
God shield you mean it not, Daughter and Mother
So strive upon your pulse; what pale agen?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness! now I see
The Mistry of your loveliness, and find
Your salt tears head; now to all sense 'tis gross:
You love my Son; invention is asham'd,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not; therefore tell me true,
But tell me then 'tis so, for look, thy cheeks
Confess it 'tone to th'other, and thine eyes
See it is so grossly shown in thy behaviour,
That in their kind they speak it; only sin
And hellish obstinancy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected; speak, is't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew:
If it be not, forswear't: how ere I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good Madam, pardon me.

Cou. Do you love my Son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble Mistress.

Cou. Love you my Son?

Hel. Do not you love him, Madam?

Cou. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond,
Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then I confess
Here on my knee, before high heavens and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven, I love your Son;
My friends were poor but honest; so's my love;
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is lov'd of me; I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit,

Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him;
Yet never know how that desert should be:
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet in this captious, and intenible Sive
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still; thus Indian like
Religious in mine error, I adore
The Sun that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest Madam,
Let not your hate incounter with my love
For loving where you do; but if your self,
Whose aged honour cites a vertuous youth,
Did ever in so true a flame of ~~loving~~ liking
Wish chastly, and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both her self and love: O then give pity
To her whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that, search implies,
But riddle like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Cou. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam I had.

Cou. Wherefore? tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth, by grace it self I swear;
You know my Father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general soveraignty; and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,
More than they were in note: Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approv'd, set down,
To cure the desperate languishings, whereof
The King is render'd lost.

Cou. This was your motive for Paris, was it, speak?

Hel. My Lord, your son, made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the King,
Had from the conversation of my thoughts,
Happily been absent then.

Cou. But think you Hellen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of ~~one~~ mind; He, that ~~they cannot help him~~ he can't be helped:
They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit
A poor unlearned Virgin, when the Schools
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to it self.

Hel. There's something ~~in't~~ hints
More than my Fathers skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt,
Shall for my legacy be sanctified
By th'luckiest Stars in heaven, and would your honour
But give me leave, to success I'd venture
The well lost life of mine, on his Graces cure,
By such a day and hour.

Cou. Do'st thou believ't?

Hel. Madam knowingly.

Cou. Why, Hellen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
Means and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in Court, I'll stay at home,
And pray Gods blessing ~~into~~ thy attempt:
Be gone to morrow, and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scene 1.

The Court of France.

Enter the King with ~~divers~~ young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine war: Count Ross, and Parolles. Flourish Cornets.

Kin. Farewel, young Lords; these warlike principles
Do not throw from you; ~~and~~ you my Lords farewel;
Share the advice betwixt you, if both gain, ~~all~~ well?
The gift doth stretch it self as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

Lord. G. 'Tis our hope, sir,
After well entered Souldiers, to return
And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege; farewel young Lords,
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy French men; let higher Italy *
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last Monarchy) see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when
The braveſt question shrinks; find what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud! I say, farewel.

L. G. Health at your bidding serve your Majesty.

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them;
They say our French lack language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captives
Before you serve.

Bo. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewel, ~~come hither to me~~. (Exit

1. Lo. G. Oh my sweet Lord, that you will stay behind us.

Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.——

2. Lo. E. Oh, 'tis brave wars.

Par. Most admirable; I have seen those wars.

Rossill. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with,
Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early.

Par. And thy mind stand to it, boy,
Steal away bravely.

Rossil. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
Creeking my shooes on the plain Masonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn
But one to dance with? by heaven, I'll steal away.

1. Lo. G. There's honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, Count.

2. Lo E. I am your accessary, and so farewel.

Ros. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortur'd body.

1. Lo. G. Farewel Captain.

2. Lo. E. Sweet Monsieur Parolles. worthy——

Par. Noble Heroes, my sword and yours are kin, good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals. You shall find in the Regiment of Spinii, one Captain Spurio his Cicatrice, ~~with~~ an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek; it was this very sword entrench'd it; say to him, I live, and observe his reports of me.

L. G. We shall, noble Captain.

Par. Mars doat on you for his novices! what will ye do?

Ross. Stay; the King—— Exe. Lords

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble Lords, you have restrain'd your self within the List of too cold an adieu; be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gate, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most receiv'd star, and tho the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewel.

Ross. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewie sword-men.

Exeunt.

Scene II. King &

Enter Lafeu.

L. Laf. Pardon my Lord for me, and for my tidings.

King. I'll fee thee to ſtand up. (pardon,

L. Laf. Then here's a man ſtands that hath brought his I would you had kneel'd, my Lord, to ask me mercy, And that at my bidding you could ſo ſtand up.

King. I would I had, ſo I had broke thy pate, And ask't thee mercy for't.

Laf. Goodfaith, a croſs, but my good Lord, 'tis thus, Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat no grapes my royal Fox? Yes, but you will, ~~my noble Grapes, and~~ if My royal Fox could reach them: I have ſeen a Medicine That's able to breath life into a ſtone, Quicken a Rock, and make you dance Canary With ſprightly fire and motion; whoſe ſimple touch Is powerful to raiſe King Pippen, nay To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand, And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why, doctor ſhe: my Lord, there's one arriv'd, If you will ſee her: now, by my faith and honour, If ſeriouſly I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have ſpoke With one, that in her ſex, her years, profeſſion, Wiſdom and Conſtancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakneſs: will you ſee her? For that is her demand, and know her buſineſs? That done, laugh well at me.

Kin. Now good Lafeu, Bring in the admiration, that we with thee May ſpend our wonder too, or take off thine By wondring how thou took'ſt it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you, (Exit Laf And not be all day neither.

Kin. Thus he his ſpecial nothing ever prologues.

Laf. Nay, come your ways. (Returns bringing in Helen.

Enter Helen.

Kin. This haſt hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways, This is his Majeſty, ſay your mind to him; A traitor you do look like, but ſuch traitors His Majeſty ſeldom fears, I am Creſſeds Uncle, That dare leave two together; fare you well. (Exit.

Kin. Now fair one, do's your buſineſs follow us?

Hel. Ay my good Lord. Gerard de Narbon was my father, In what he did profeſs, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I ſpare my praiſes towards him; Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death, Many receits he gave me, ~~namely~~ chiefly one, Which has the deareſt iſſue of his practiſe, And of his old experience, th' only darling, He bad me ſtore up, as a triple eye, Safer then mine own two: more dear I have ſo; And hearing your high Majeſty is touch'd With that malignant cauſe, wherein the honour Of my dear fathers gift, ſtands chief in power, I come to tender it, and my appliance, With all bound humbleneſs.

King. We thank you, Maiden, But may not be ſo credulous of cure, When our moſt learned Doctors leave us, and The Congregated College have concluded, That labouring art can never ranſome nature From her unaydable eſtate: ~~I ſay~~ me muſt not So ſtain our judgment, or corrupt our hope, To proſtitute our paſt cure malady To empericks, or to diſſever ſo Our great ſelf and our credit, to eſteem A ſenſeleſs help, when help paſt ſenſe we deem.

Hel. My duty then ſhall pay me for my pains; I will no more enforce my office on you, Humbly intreating from your royal thoughts A modeſt one to bear me back again.

Kin. I cannot give thee leſs to be call'd grateful; Thou thought'ſt to help me, and ſuch thanks I give, As one near death to thoſe that wiſh him live; But what at full I know, thou know'ſt no part, I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hell. What I can do, can do no hurt to try, Since you ſet up your reſt 'gainſt remedy; He that of greateſt works is finiſher, Oft does them by the weakeſt Miniſter; So holy Writ, in babes, hath judgment ſhown, When Judges have been babes; great floods have flown From ſimple ſources; and great Seas have dried, When Miracles have by the great'ſt been denied. Oft expectation fails, and moſt oft there Where moſt it promiſes: and oft it hits, Where hope is coldeſt, and deſpair, moſt ſhifes.

Kin. I muſt not hear thee; fare thee well kind Maid; Thy pains not us'd, muſt by thy ſelf be paid, Proffers not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hell. Inſpired Merit ſo by breath is barr'd: It is not ſo with him that all things knows As 'tis with us, that ſquare our gueſs by ſhows: But moſt it is preſumption in us, when The help of heaven we count the act of men. Dear ſir, to my ende, vours give conſent, Of Heaven, not me, make an experiment. I am not an Impoſtor, that proclaim My ſelf againſt the level of mine aim, But know, I think, and think I know moſt ſure, My art is not paſt power, nor you paſt cure.

King. Art thou ſo confident? within what ſpace Hop'ſt thou my cure?

Hel. The greateſt ~~grace~~ lending grace, Ere twice the horſes of the ſun ſhall bring Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring; Ere twice in murk and occidental damp, Moiſt Heſperus hath quench'd his ſleepy Lamp; Or four and twenty times the Pilots glaſs Hath told the thieviſh minutes, how they paſs; What is infirm, from your ſound parts ſhall fly, Health ſhall live free, and ſickneſs freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence, What dar'ſt thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence, A ſtrumpets boldneſs, a divulged ſhame Traduc'd by odious ballads: my Maidens name Seard otherwiſe, ~~no~~ worſe of worſt extended With vileſt torture, let my life be ended.

Kin. Me thinks in thee ſome bleſſed ſpirit doth ſpeak, ~~His~~ powerful ſounds, wherein an Organ weak; And what impoſſibility would ſlay In common ſenſe, ſenſe faves another way: Thy life is dear; for all that life can rate Worth name of life, in thee hath eſtimate: Youth, Beauty, Wiſdom, Courage, all virtue. That happineſs and prime, can happy call; Thou this to hazard, needs muſt intimate Skill infinite, or monſtrous deſperate; Sweet practiſer, thy Phyſick I will try, That miniſters thine own death if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property Of what I ſpoke, unpitied let me die, And well deſerv'd: not helping, death's my fee; But if I help, what do you promiſe me?

Kin Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

Kin. Ay by my Scepter, and my hopes of help. ~~eav'n~~

*Medecine is here put for a The Phyſician.

Hel. Then ſhalt thou give me, with thy kingly hand,
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To chooſe from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy ſtate:
But ſuch a one, thy vaſſal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to beſtow.

Kin. Here is my hand; the premiſes obſerv'd,
Thy will by my performance ſhall be ſerv'd;
So make the choice of thine own time; for I
Thy reſolv'd Patient, on thee ſtill rely;
More ſhould I queſtion thee, and more I muſt,
Though more to know, could not be more to truſt:
From whence thou cam'ſt, how tended on, but reſt
Unqueſtion'd welcome, and undoubted bleſt.
Give me ſome help here, hoa, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed ſhall match thy deed.

Exeunt.

Scene IV. Rousillon

Enter Counteſs, and Clown.

Lady. Come on, ſir, I ſhall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clown. I will ſhew my ſelf highly fed, and lowly taught; I know my buſineſs is but to the Court.

Lady. To the Court; why what place make you ſpecial, when you put off that with ſuch contempt; but to the Court?

Clo. Truly, Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may eaſily put it off at Court: he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiſs his hand, and ſay nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and indeed ſuch a fellow, to ſay preciſely, were not for the Court; but for me, I have an anſwer will ſerve all men.

Lady. Marry, that's a bountiful anſwer that fits all queſtions.

Clo. It is like a Barbers Chair, that fits all buttocks, the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.

Lady. Will your anſwer ſerve fit to all queſtions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an Attorney, as your French Crown for your Taffaty Punk, as Tibs Ruſh for Tom's fore-finger, as a Pancake for Shrovetueſday, a Morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the Cuckold to his Horn, as a ſcolding Quean to a wrangling Knave, as the Nuns lip to the Friar's mouth, nay, as the Pudding to his skin.

Lady. Have you, I ſay, an anſwer of ſuch fitneſs for all queſtions?

Clo. From below your Duke, to beneath your Conſtable, it will fit any queſtion.

Lady. It muſt be an anſwer of moſt monſtrous ſize, that muſt fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned ſhould ſpeak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't. Ask me if I am a Courtier, it ſhall do you no harm to learn.

Lady. To be young again, if we could: I will be a fool in queſtion, hoping to be the wiſer by your anſwer.

~~Lady.~~ I pray you ſir, are you a Courtier?

Clo O Lord ſir there's a ſimple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.

La. Sir I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord ſir, thick, thick, ſpare not me.

La. I think ſir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord ſir, nay put me to't, I warrant you.

La. You were lately whipt, ſir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, ſir, ſpare not me.

La. Do you cry, O Lord ſir, at your whipping, and ſpare not me? Indeed your, O Lord ſir, is very ſequent to your whipping: you would anſwer very well to a whipping if you were but bound to't.

Clo. I ne're had worſe luck in my life, in my, O Lord ſir: I ſee things may ſerve long, but not ſerve ever:

La. I play the noble huſwife with the time, to entertain it ſo merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord ſir, why there't ſerves well agen.

La. And end; ſir to your buſineſs: give Helen this, And urge her to a preſent anſwer back.
Commend me to my kinſmen, and my ſon,
This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

La. Not much employment for you, you underſtand me.

Clo. Moſt fruitfully, I am there, before my legs.

La. Haſte you agen. Exeunt.

Scene V. The Court of France.

Enter Count, Laſeu, and Parolles.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. They ſay miracles are paſt, and we have our Philoſophical perſons, to make modern and familiar things ſupernatural and cauſeleſs. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors, enſconſing our ſelves into ſeeming knowledge, when we ſhould ſubmit our ſelves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rareſt argument of wonder, that hath ſhot out in our latter times.

Roſ. And ſo 'tis.

Ol. Laf. to be relinquiſh'd of the Artiſts.

Par. So I ſay both of Galen and Paracelſus.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. Of all the learned and authentick fellows.

Par. Right, ſo I ſay.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. That gave him out incurable.

Par. Why, there 'tis, ſo ſay I too.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. Not to be help'd.

Par. Right, as 'twere a man aſſur'd of a———

Ol. Laf. Uncertain life; and ſure death.

Par. Juſt, you ſay well: ſo would I have ſaid.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. I may truly ſay, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is indeed, if you will have it in ~~the~~ ſhewing, you ſhall read it in what do you call there———

~~Ol.~~ Laf. A ſhewing of a heavenly effect in an earthly Actor.

Par. That's it, I would have ſaid the very ſame.

Ol. Laf. Why your Dolphin is not luſtier: for me I ſpeak in reſpect———

Par. Nay 'tis ſtrange, 'tis very ſtrange, that is the brief and the tedious of it, and he's of a moſt facinerious ſpirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the——— ~~Ol.~~ Laf. Very hand of heaven.

Par. Ay, ſo I ſay.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. In a moſt weak———

Par. And debile Miniſter, great power, great tranſcendence, which ſhould indeed give us a further uſe to be made, than only the recov'ry of the King, as to be——

~~Ol.~~ Laf. Generally thankful.

Scene VI.

Enter King, Helen, and Attendants.

Par. I would have ſaid it, you ſaid well: here comes the King.

~~Ol.~~ Laf. Luſtick, as the Dutchman ſays: I'll like a Maid the better while I have a tooth in my head: why he's able to lead her to a Carranto.

Par. Mort du vinaigre, is not this Helen?

~~Ol.~~ Laf. 'Fore God I think ſo.

King. Go call before me all the Lords in Court,
Sit, my preſerver, by thy patients ſide,
And with this healthful hand whoſe baniſh'd ſenſe
Thou haſt repeald, a ſecond time receive
The confirmation of my promis'd gift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter three or four Lords.

Fair Maid, ſend forth thine eye, this youthful parcel
Of Noble Batchellors, ſtand at my beſtowing,
Ore whom both Soverſign power, and fathers voice have to uſe; thy frank election make,

Thou

Thou haſt power to chuſe, and they none to forſake.
Hel. To each of you, one fair and vertuous Miſtreſs
Fall, when love pleaſe! marry to each, but one.
Old Laf. I'de give bay curtal, and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken than theſe boys,
And writ as little beard.
King. Peruſe them well:
Not one of thoſe, but had a noble father.
She addreſſes her to a Lord.
Hel. Gentlemen, heaven hath through me, reſtor'd the King to health.
All. We underſtand it, and thank heaven for you.
Hel. I am a ſimple Maid, and therein wealthieſt,
That I protеſt; I ſimply am a Maid:——
Pleaſe it your Majeſty, I have done already:
The [illegible] my cheeks thus whiſper me.
King [illegible] that thou ſhouldſt chuſe but be refuſed;
Let [illegible] ath ſit on thy cheeks for ever,
We'll ne're [illegible] there again.
Make choice [illegible] ſee,
Who ſhuns thy [illegible]ve, ſhuns all his love in me.
Hel. Now Dian, from thy Altar do I fly,
And to impartial Love, that God moſt high
Do my ſighs ſtream. Sir, will you hear my ſuit?
1. Lo. And grant it.
Hel. Thanks ſir, all the reſt is mute.
Old Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw
A deſtiny-ace for my life.
Hel. The honour, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I ſpeak too threatningly replies: (To the 2d Lord
Love make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that ſo wiſhes, and her humble love!
2. Lo. No better, if you pleaſe.
Hel. My wiſh receive,
Which great Love grant, and ſo I take my leave.
Old Laf. Do all they deny her? And they were ſons of mine, I'de have them whip'd, or I would ſend them to'th Turk to make Eunuchs of.
Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand ſhould take,
I'll never do you wrong for your own ſake: (To the 3d Lord
Bleſſing upon your vows, and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed.
Old Laf. Theſe boys are boys of Ice, they'll none have her: ſure they are baſtards to the Engliſh, the French ne're got 'em.
Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good
To make your ſon out of my blood. (To the 4th L.
4. Lo. Fair one, I think not ſo.
Old Lor. There's one grape yet, I am ſure my father drunk wine. But if thou be'ſt not an aſs, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.
Hel. I dare not ſay I take, but I give Me and my ſervice, ever whil'ſt I live
Into your guiding power: This is the man. (To Bertram
King. Why then, young Bertram, take her, ſhe's thy wife.
Ber. My wife, my Liege? I ſhall beſeech your highneſs,
In ſuch a buſineſs, give me leave to uſe
The help of mine own eyes.
Kin. Know'ſt thou not, Bertram, what ſhe hath done for me?
Ber. Yes, my good Lord, but never hope to know why I ſhould marry her.
Kin. Thou know'ſt ſhe has rais'd me from my ſickly bed.
Ber. But follows it my Lord to bring me down
Muſt anſwer for your raiſing? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my Fathers charge:
A poor Phyſicians daughter my wife? Diſdain
Rather corrupt me ever!
Kin. 'Tis only Title thou diſdainſt in her, the which
I can build up: ſtrange is it that our bloods
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound diſtinction, yet ſtands off
In differences ſo mighty. If ſhe be
All that is virtuous (ſave what thou diſlik'ſt),
A poor Phyſicians daughter, thou diſlik'ſt
Of Vertue for the name: but do not ſo:
From loweſt place, whence vertuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doers deed.
Where great addition ſwells, and vertue none,
It is a dropſied honour; Good alone,
Is good without a name. Vileneſs is ſo: unto itſelf is
The property by what it is, ſhould go,
Not by the title. She is young, wiſe, fair,
In theſe, to nature ſhe's immediate heir;
And theſe breed honour: that is honours ſcorn,
Which challenges it ſelf as honours born,
And is not like the fire: Honours beſt thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our fore-goers: the meer word's a ſlave
Deboſh'd on every tomb, on every grave;
A lying Trophee, and as oft is dumb,
Where duſt, and damn'd oblivion is the Tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed; what ſhould be ſaid?
If thou canſt like this creature as a Maid,
I can create the reſt: Vertue and ſhe
Is her own dower; Honour and wealth from me.
Ber. I cannot love her, nor will ſtrive to do't.
Kin. Thou wrong'ſt thy ſelf, if thou ſhouldſt ſtrive to chuſe.
Hel. That you are well reſtor'd my Lord, I'me glad:
Let the reſt go.
Kin. My Honour's at the ſtake, which to defeat
I muſt produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud ſcornful boy, unworthy this good gift,
That doſt in vile miſpriſion ſhackle up
My love, and her deſert; that canſt not dream,
We poizing us in her defective ſcale,
Shall weigh thee to the beam; That wilt not know,
It is in Us to plant thine Honour, where
We pleaſe to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey our will, which travels in thy good;
Believe not thy diſdain, but preſently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;
Or I will throw thee from my cares for ever
Into the ſtaggers and careleſs lapſe
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate
Looſing upon thee in the name of juſtice,
Without all terms of pity. Speak thine anſwer.
Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord; for I ſubmit
My fancy to your eyes, when I conſider
What great creation, and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it: I find that ſhe which late
Was in my nobler thoughts moſt baſe, is now
The praiſed of the King; who ſo enobled,
Is as 'twere born ſo.
King. Take her by the hand.
And tell her ſhe is thine: to whom I promiſe
A counterpoize; if not in thy eſtate,
A ballance more replear.
Ber. I take her hand.
Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile upon the contract! whoſe Ceremony
Shall ſeem expedient on the now born brief,
And be perform'd to night; the ſolemn Feaſt
Shall more attend upon the coming ſpace,
Expecting abſent friends. As thou lov'ſt her,
Thy love's to me religious; elſe do'ſt erre. Exeunt.

Scene VII.

Parolles and Laſeu ſtay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you hear Mounſieur? a word with you.
Par. Your pleaſure ſir.
Laf. Your Lord and Maſter did well to make his Recantation.

Par. Recantation? my Lord? my Master?

Laf. Ay is it not a Language I ſpeak?

Par. A moſt harſh one, and not to be underſtood without bloody ſucceeding. My Maſter?

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Roſſillion?

Par. To any Count; to all Counts; to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man; Counts maſter is of another ſtile.

Par. You are too old, ſir; Let it ſatisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I muſt tell thee, ſirrah, I write Man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee for two ordinaries to be a pretty wiſe fellow; If thou didſt make tolerable vent of thy travel, it might paſs; yet the ſcarfs and the bannerets about thee, did manifoldly diſſwade me from believing thee a veſſel of too great a burthen. I have now found thee; when I loſe thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou'rt ſcarce worth.

Par. Hadſt thou not the priviledge of Antiquity upon thee.

Laf. Do not plunge thy ſelf too far in anger, leſt thou haſten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! ſo my good window of Lattice, fare thee well; thy caſement I need not open, I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you give me moſt egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay with all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my Lord, deſerv'd it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, ev'ry dram of it; and I will not bate thee a ſcruple.

Par. Well, I ſhall be wiſer.——

Laf. Ev'n as ſoon as thou can'ſt, for thou haſt to pull at a ſmack a'th contrary. If ever thou beeſt bound in thy ſkarf and beaten, thou ſhalt find what it is to be proud of thy Bondage. I have a deſire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge that I may ſay in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord, you do me moſt inſupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell pains for thy ſake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am paſt, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. Exit.

Par. Well, thou haſt a ſon ſhall take this diſgrace off me; ſcurvy, old, filthy, ſcurvy Lord: Well, I muſt be patient, there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, and he were double and double a Lord. I'll have no more pity of his age than I would have of——I'll beat him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Laſew.

Laf. Sirrah, your Lord and Maſter's married, there's news for you: you have a new Miſtreſs.

Par. I moſt unfainedly beſeech your Lordſhip to make ſome reſervation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I ſerve above is my Maſter.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay ſir.

Laf. The Devil it is, that's my Maſter. Why doeſt thou garter up thy arms a this faſhion? Doſt make hoſe of thy ſleeves? Do other ſervants ſo? Thou wert beſt ſet thy lower part where thy noſe ſtands. By mine Honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'de beat thee: methink'ſt thou art a general offence and every man ſhould beat thee. I think thou waſt created for men to breath themſelves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeſerved meaſure, my Lord.

Laf. Go to, ſir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a Pomgranat; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more ſawcy with Lords and honorable perſonages, than the commiſſion of your birth and vertue gives you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, elſe I'de call you knave. I leave you. Exit

Scene VIII.

Enter Count Roſſillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is ſo then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd a while.

Roſ. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Par. What is the matter, ſweet heart?

Roſ. Although before the ſolemn Prieſt I have ſworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what, ſweet heart?

Roſ. O my Parrolles, they have married me:
I'le to the Tuſcan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits,
The tread of a mans foot: to'th wars.

Roſ. There's letters from my mother; What th'import is, I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known: to'th wars my boy, to'th wars!
He wears his honour in a box unſeen,
That hugs his kickſy wickſy here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which ſhould ſuſtain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery ſteed: to other Regions,
France is a ſtable, we that dwell in't Jades,
Therefore to th' war.

Roſ. It ſhall be ſo, I'le ſend her to my houſe,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the King
That which I durſt not ſpeak. His preſent gift
Shall furniſh me to thoſe Italian fields
Where noble fellows ſtrike, war is no ſtrife
To the dark houſe, and the detected wife.

Par. Will this Capriche hold in thee, art ſure?

Roſ. Go with me to my chamber, and adviſe me.
I'le ſend her ſtraight away: To morrow
I'le to the wars, ſhe to her ſingle ſorrow.

Par. Why, theſe balls bound, there's noiſe in it. 'Tis hard;
A young man married, is a man that's mar'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go,
The King ha's done you wrong: but hush, 'tis ſo. Exit.

Scene IX.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My Mother greets me kindly, is ſhe well?

Clo. She is not well, but yet ſhe ha's her health; ſhe's very merry, but yet ſhe is not well: but thanks be given ſhe's very well, and want's nothing i'th world; but yet ſhe is not well.

Hel. If ſhe be very well, what do's ſhe ayl, that ſhe's not very well?

Clo. Truly ſhe's very well, indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One that ſhe is not in heaven, whither God ſend her quickly! the other that ſhe's on earth, from whence God ſend her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bleſs you, my fortunate Lady,

Hel. I hope ſir I have your good will to have mine own good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them ſtill. O my knave, how do's my old Lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles and I her money, I would ſhe did as you ſay.

Par. Why, I ſay nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiſer man; for many a mans tongue ſhakes out his maſters undoing: to ſay nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a very little of nothing.

Par.

Par. Away, th'art a knave.

Clo. You ſhould have ſaid, ſir, before a knave, th'art a knave; that's before th'art a knave: this had been truth ſir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool, I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in your ſelf ſir? or were you taught to find me?

Par. The ſearch ſir was profitable, and much Fool may you find in you, even to the worlds pleaſure, and the encreaſe of laughter.

Par. A good knave, 'faith, and well fed,
Madam, my Lord will go away to night,
A very ſerious buſineſs calls on him.
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due, time claims, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off by a compell'd reſtraint:
Whoſe want, and whoſe delay, is ſtrew'd with ſweets
VVhich they diſtil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'reflow with joy,
And pleaſure drown the brim.

Hel. VVhat's his will elſe?

Par. That you will take your inſtant leave o'th King.
And make this haſt as your own good proceeding,
Strengthned with what Apology you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. VVhat more commands he?

Par. That having this obtain'd, you preſently
Attend his further pleaſure.

Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.

Par. I ſhall report it ſo. Exit Par.

Hel. I pray you come, ſirrah. (To the Clown) Exit.

Scene X.

Enter Lafew and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordſhip thinks not him a ſouldier.

Ber. Yes, my Lord, and of very valiant approof.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted teſtimony.

Laf. Then my Dial goes not true; I took this Lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do aſſure you, my Lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then ſinned againſt his experience, and tranſgreſt againſt his valour; and my ſtate that way is dangerous, ſince I cannot yet find in my heart to repent: Here he comes; I pray you make us friends, I will purſue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Theſe things ſhall be done, ſir.

Laf. Pray you ſir who's his Tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well, I ſir; he ſit's a good workman, a very good Tailor. (To Parolles.)

Ber. Is ſhe gone to the King?

Par. She is.

Ber. VVill ſhe away to night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treaſure,
Given order for our horſes; and to night,
VVhen I ſhould take poſſeſſion of the Bride, ——
And ere I do begin. ——

Laf. A good traveller is ſomething at the latter end of a dinner; but on that lies three thirds, and uſes a known truth to paſs a thouſand nothings with, ſhould be once heard, and thrice beaten. —God ſave you Captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindneſs between my Lord and you, Mounſieur?

Par. I know not how I have deſerved to run into my Lords diſpleaſure.

Laf. You have made ſhift to run into't, boots and ſpurs and all, like him that leaps into the cuſtard; and out of it, you'll run again, rather than ſuffer queſtion for your reſidence.

Ber. It may be you have miſtaken him my Lord.

Laf. And ſhall do ſo ever, tho I took him at's prayers. Fare you well my Lord, and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light Nut: the ſoul of this man is his cloaths: Truſt him not in matter of heavy conſequence: I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewel, Mounſieur, I have ſpoken better of you, than you have or will deſerve at my hands, but we muſt do good againſt evil. Exit.

Par. An idle Lord, I ſwear.

Ber. I think ſo.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and common ſpeech
Gives him a worthy paſs. Here comes my clog.

Scene XI.

Enter Hellena.

Hel. I have, ſir, as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and have procured his leave
For preſent parting; only he deſires
Some private ſpeech with you.

Ber. I ſhall obey his will.
You muſt not marvel, Helen at my courſe,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The miniſtration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For ſuch a buſineſs; therefore am I found
So much unſetled: This drives me to entreat you,
That preſently you take your way for home,
And rather muſe than aſk why, I entreat you;
For my reſpects are better than they ſeem,
And my appointments have in them a need
Greater than ſhews it ſelf at the firſt view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother, (Giving a letter)
'Twill be two days, ere I ſhall ſee you, ſo
I leave you to your wiſdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing ſay,
But that I am your moſt obedient ſervant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever ſhall
With true obſervance ſeek to eke out that
Wherein toward me my homely ſtars have fail'd
To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go: my haſte is very great. Farewel; Hie home.

Hel Pray, ſir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you ſay?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I ſay 'tis mine, and yet it is,
But like a timerous thief, moſt fain would ſteal
What law do's vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something, and ſcarce ſo much; —nothing indeed, —
I would not tell you what I would — my Lord: Faith yes, —
Strangers and foes do ſunder, and not kiſs.

Ber. I pray you ſtay not, but in haſte to horſe.

Hel. I ſhall not break your bidding, good my Lord.
Where are my other men? Mounſieur, farewel. Exit Hel.

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will never come,
Whil'ſt I can ſhake my ſword, or hear the drum:
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, Coragio! (Exeunt)

Actus

Actus Tertius. Scene I.

Florence.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troop of Souldiers.

Du. So that from point to point, now have you heard,
The fundamental reasons of this war,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.
1. Lord Holy seems the quarrel
Upon your Graces part; black and fearful
On the opposers.
Duke Therefore we marvel much, our Cousin France
Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom
Against our borrowing prayers.
French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Council frames,
By self-unable motion, therefore dare not
Say what I think of it, since I have found
My self in my incertain grounds to fail
As often as I guest.
Du. Be it his pleasure.
Fre. G. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will day by day
Come here for Physick.
Du. Welcome shall they be:
And all the honours that can flye from us,
Shall on them settle. you know your places well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell:
To morrow to the field. Exeunt

Scene II. Rousillon.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happen'd all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.
Clo. By my troth, I take my young Lord to be a very melancholly man.
Cou. By what observance, I pray you?
Clo. Why he will look upon his boot, and sing; mend the ruff and sing; ask questions, and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man that had this trick of melancholy, sold a goodly Manour for a song.
Lad. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.
Clo. I have no mind to Isbel since I was at Court. Our old Ling, and our Isbels o'th Countrey, are nothing like your old Ling, and your Isbels o'th Court: the brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomack.
Lad. What have we here?
Clo. In that you have there. Exit.

Countess reads A Letter.

I have sent you a daughter-in-Law: she hath recovered the King, and undone me. I have wedded her, Not bedded her; and sworn to make the Not eternal. You shall hear I am run away; know it before the report come, if there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate Son,
Bertram.

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a King,
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a Maid too virtuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonder is heavy news within between two soulditers, and my young Lady.
La. What is the matter?
Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort, your son will not be kill'd so soon as I thought he would.
La. Why should he be kill'd?
Clo. So say I, Madam, if he run away, as I hear he does; the danger is in standing to't; that's the loss of men, tho it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part, I only hear your son was run away.

Scene III.

Enter Helen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Save you, good Madam.
Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for ever gone.
French G. Do not say so.
La. Think upon patience: pray you Gentlemen,
I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither on the start
Can woman me unto't. Where is my son, I pray you?
French G. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence.
We met him thitherward, for thence we came;
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend again.
Hel. Look on his Letter, Madam, here's my Passport.

When thou canst get the Ring from my finger, which never shall come off, and shew me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a { Then } I write a { Never. }

This is a dreadful sentence.
La. Brought you this Letter, Gentlemen?
1. Gen. Ay, Madam, and for the Contents sake, are sorry for our pains.
Old. La. I prythee Lady, hve a better cheer,
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moity: He was my son,
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my child. Towards Florence is he?
Fren. G. Ay, Madam.
La. And to be a soldier?
Fren G. Such is his noble purpose; and believ't
The Duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.
La Return you thither?
Frenc. E. Ay, Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.
Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France, (Read)
'Tis better.
La. Find you that there?
Hel. Ay, Madam.
French. E. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand happily, which his heart was not consenting to.
La. Nothing in France until he have no wife?
There's nothing here that is too good for him
But only she, and she deserves a Lord
That twenty such rude boys might tend upon,
And call her hourly Mistress. Who was with him?
Fren. E. A servant only, and a Gentleman: which I have sometimes known.
La. Parolles, was it not?
French. E. Ay, my good Lady, he.
La. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness;
My son corrupts a well derived nature,
With his inducement.
Fren. E. Indeed good Lady, the fellow has a deal of that,

that, too much, which holds him much to have.

La. Y'are welcome, Gentlemen, I will entreat you when you see my son, to tell him that his sword can never win the honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you written to bear along.

Fren, G. We serve you, Madam, in that, and all your worthiest affairs.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesies, Will you draw near? Exit. Count & Gent.

Hel. 'Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.
Nothing in France until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none Rossillion, none in France,
Then hast thou all again. poor Lord! is't I
That chase thee from thy Country, and expose
Those tender limbs of thine, to the event
Of the none sparing war? And is it I,
That drive thee from the sportive Court, where thou
Was't shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoaky Muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim, move the still piercing air pierce
That sings with piercing, do not touch my Lord: sings
Who ever shoots at him, I set him there:
Who ever charges on his forward breast,
I am the Caitiff that do hold him to it,
And tho I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected. Better 'twere
I met the raving Lyon when he roar'd
With sharp constraint of hunger: better 'twere,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rossillion,
Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
As oft it loses all. I will be gone:
My being here it is, that holds thee hence,
Shall I stay here to do't? No, no, although
The air of Paradise did fan the house,
And Angels offic'd all; I will be gone,
That pitiful rumour may report my flight
To consolate thine ear. Come night; and day,
For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away. Exit.

Scene V. Florence.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rossillion, Drum and Trumpets, Soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The General of our horse thou art, and we,
Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.
Ross. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength; but yet
We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake,
To th'extream edge of hazard.
Du. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious Mistress!
Ross. This very day,
Great Mars, I put my self into thy file;
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy Drum; hater of love. Exeunt omnes.

Scene VI. Rousillon

Enter Countess and Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know she would do, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter? Read it again.

Letter.

I am St. Jaques Pilgrim, thither gone,
Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon,
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that from the course of war,
My dearest Master, your dear son, may hie;
Bless him at home in peace, whil'st I from far,
His name with zealous fervour sanctify;
His taken labours bid him me forgive;
I his despightful Juno sent him forth
From Courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth.
He is too good and fair for death, and me,
Whom I my self embrace, to set him free.

Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words?
Rynaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
As letting her pass so; had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.
Ste. Pardon, me, Madam,
If I had given you this at over night,
She might have been o'retane: and yet she writes
Pursuit would be but vain.
La. What Angel shall
Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath
Of greatest Justice. Write, write, Rynaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife;
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Tho' little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Dispatch the most convenient messenger;
When haply he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return, and hope I may that she,
Hearing so much will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction: provide this Messenger;
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak,
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.
Exeunt.

Scene VII. Florence.

A Tucket afar off.

Enter an old Widow of Florence, her Daughter, Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Widow. Nay, come,
For if they do approach the City,
We shall lose all the sight.
Dia. They say, the French Count has done
Most honourable service.
Wid. It is reported,
That he has taken their great'st Commander,
And that with his own hand he slew
The Dukes brother: we have lost our labour,
They are gone a contrary way: hark,
You may know by their Trumpets.
Maria. Come let's return again,
And suffice our selves with report of it.
Well Diana, take heed of this French Earl;
The honour of a Maid is in her name,
And no legacy is so rich
As honesty.
Wid. I have told my neighbour
How you have been solilicited by a Gentleman
His companion.
Mar. I know that knave, hang him, one Parolles, a filthy Officer he is in those Suggestions for the young Earl; beware of them Diana; their Promises, Enticements, Oaths, and Tokens, and all the Engines of Lust, are not the things they go under; many a Maid hath been seduced by them, and the Misery is, Example, that so terrible shews in the wrack of Maiden-hood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further, but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, tho there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter Hellen. disguis'd like a Pilgrim.

Wid. I hope so; look here comes a Pilgrim; I know she will lie at my house; thither they send one another; I'll question her, God save you Pilgrim, whither are you bound?

Hel. To S. Jaques le grand.
Where do the Palmers lodge I do beseech you?

Wid. At the S. Frances here beside the Port.

Hel. Is this the way? A march a far off.

Wid. Ay marry is't. Hark you, they come this way.
If you will tarry, holy Pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
The rather for I think I know your hostess
As ample as my self.

Hel. Is it your self?

Wid. If you shall please so, Pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a Countreyman of yours.
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name I pray you?

Dia. The Count Rossillion: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear that hears most nobly of him,
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsomere he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 'tis reported; for the King had married him
Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. Assurely, meer the truth, I know his Lady.

Dia. There is a Gentleman that serves the Count,
Reports but coursely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. Oh, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great Count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated; all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that
I have not heard examin'd.

Dia Alas poor Lady!
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting Lord.

Wid. A right good creature, wheresoe're she is,
Her heart weighs sadly; this young Maid might do her
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?
May be, the amorous Count sollicites her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does indeed,
And brokes with all that can in such a suit,
Corrupt the tender honour of a Maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Scene VIII.

Drum and Colours.

Enter Count Rossillion, Parolles, officers & Soldiers attending. ~~and the whole Army.~~

Ma. The Gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come:
That is Antonio, the Dukes eldest son;
That Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He,
That with the plume; 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lov'd his wife; if he were honester,
He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsome Gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest: yonds that same knave
That leads him to these places, were I his Lady,
I would poison that vile Rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That Jack-an-apes with scarfs. Why is he melancholly?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'th battel.

Par. Lose our drum? Well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vext at something. Look he has spied us.

Wid. Marry hang you. Exe. Ber. Par &c.

Mar. And your curtesy, for a ring-carrier! Exit

Wid. The troop is past: Come Pilgrim, I will bring
You, where you shall host: Of injoyn'd penitents
There's four or five, to great S. Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
Please it this Matron, and this Gentle Maid
To eat with us to night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me; and to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts on this Virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Scene IX.

Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen, as at first.

Cap. E. Nay good my Lord, put him to't: let him have his way.

Cap. G. If your Lordship find him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Cap. E. On my life, my Lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far
Deceived in him?

Cap. E. Believe it, my Lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my Kinsman; he's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endless Liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap. G. It were fit you knew him, lest reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better than to let him fetch off his Drum; which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

Cap E. I, with a troop of Florentines will suddenly surprise him; such I will have whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hood-wink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the Leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents; be but your Lordship present at his examination, if he do not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit upon his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in any thing.

Cap. G. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum; he says he has a stratagem for't; when your Lordship sees the bottom of this success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Scene X.

Enter Parolles.

Cap. E. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design, let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Ber. How now Mounsieur? This drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

Cap. G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drum.

Par.

* Holinshed in his description of Ireland mentions a Lord Mayor of Dublin so hospitable that his Porter durst not give the meanest man that resorted to his house Tom Drum's entertainment which is, (says he) to hale a man in by the head & thrust him out by the shoulders.

Par. But a drum! Is't but a drum? A drum ſo loſt. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horſe upon our own wings, and to rend our own ſouldiers.

Cap. G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the ſervice; it was a diſaſter of war, that Cæſar himſelf could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our ſucceſs: ſome diſhonour we had in the loſs of that drum, but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered, but that the merit of ſervice is ſeldome attributed to the true exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have a ſtomack to't, Monſieur; if you think your myſtery in ſtratagem can bring this inſtrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprize and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you ſpeed well in it, the Duke ſhall both ſpeak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatneſs, even to the utmoſt ſyllable of your worthineſs.

Par. By the hand of a ſouldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you muſt not now ſlumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening, and I will preſently pen down my dilemmaes, encourage my ſelf in my certainty, put my ſelf into my mortal preparation; and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the ſucceſs will be, my Lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th'art valiant,
And to the poſſibility of thy ſouldierſhip,
Will ſubſcribe for thee; Farwell. Exit.

Par. I love not many words. Scene XI

Cap. E. No more than a fiſh loves water. Is not this a ſtrange fellow, my Lord, that ſo confidently ſeems to undertake this buſineſs, which he knows is not to be done; damns himſelf to do't, and dares better be damn'd than to do't?

Cap. G. You do not know him, my Lord, as we do; certain it is, that he will ſteal himſelf into a mans favour, and for a week eſcape a great deal of diſcoveries; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Ber. Why, do you think he will make no deed at all of this, that ſo ſeriouſly he do's addreſs himſelf unto?

Cap. E. None in the world, but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies; but we have almoſt imboſt him, you ſhall ſee his fall to night; for indeed he is not for your Lordſhips reſpect.

Cap. G. We'll make you ſome ſport with the Fox ere we caſe him. He was firſt ſmoak'd by the old Lord Lafeu; when his diſguiſe and he is parted, tell me what a ſprat you ſhall find him, which you ſhall ſee this very night.

Cap. E. I muſt go look my twigs;
He ſhall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he ſhall go along with me.

Cap. G. As't pleaſe your Lordſhip, I'll leave you. (Exit

Ber. Now will I lead you to the houſe, and ſhew you the Laſs I ſpoke of.

Cap. E. But you ſay ſhe's honeſt.

Ber. That's all the fault: I ſpoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold; but I ſent to her,
By this ſame Coxcomb that we have i'th' wind,
Tokens and Letters, which ſhe did reſend;
And this is all I have done: She's a fair creature,
Will you go ſee her?

Cap. E. With all my heart, my Lord. Exeunt.

Scene XII.

Enter Hellen, and Widow.

Hel. If you miſdoubt me that I am not ſhe;
I know not how I ſhall aſſure you further,
But I ſhall loſe the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Tho my eſtate be fallen, I was well born,
Nothing acquainted with theſe buſineſſes,
And would not put my reputation now
In any ſtaining act.

Hel Nor would I wiſh you.
Firſt give me truſt, the Count he is my husband,
And what to your ſworn counſel I have ſpoken,
Is ſo from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you ſhall borrow,
Err in beſtowing it.

Wid. I ſhould believe you,
For you have ſhew'd me that which well approves
Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purſe of Gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will over-pay, and pay again
When I have found it; the Count he wooes your daughter,
Lays down his wanton ſiege before her beauty,
Reſolves to carry her; let her in fine conſent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis beſt to bear it.
Now his important blood will naught deny,
That ſhe'll demand: a ring the Count weares
That downward hath ſucceeded in his houſe
From ſon to ſon, ſome four or five deſcents,
Since the firſt father wore it. This Ring he holds
In moſt rich choice: yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not ſeem too dear,
How e're repented after.

Wid. Now I ſee the bottom of your purpoſe.

Hel. You ſee it lawful then, it is no more,
But that your daughter, ere ſhe ſeems as won,
Deſires this Ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Her ſelf moſt chaſtly abſent: after this
To marry her, I'll add three thouſand Crowns
To what is paſt already.

Wid. I have yielded:
Inſtruct my daughter how ſhe ſhall perſever,
That time and place, with this deceit ſo lawful,
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With Muſick of all ſorts, and ſongs compoſ'd
To her unworthineſs: It nothing ſteads us
To chide him from our eaves, for he perſiſts
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to night
Let us aſſay our plot, which if it ſpeed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed;
And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
Where both not ſin, and yet a ſinful fact:
But let's about it. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scene I continues in Florence

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with five or ſix other ſouldiers in ambuſh.

1. Lord. E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner, when you ſally upon him, ſpeak what terrible Language you will, though you underſtand it not your ſelves, no matter; for we muſt not ſeem to underſtand him, unleſs ſome one among us, whom we muſt produce for an Interpreter.

P. Sol. Good Captain, let me be th' Interpreter.

Lor E. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1. Sol. No, sir, I warrant you.

Lo. E. But what linsie-woolsie hast thou to speak to us again?

1. Sol. E'n such as you speak to me,

Lo. E. He must think us some band of strangers, i'th adversaries entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring Languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another: so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: Chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you Interpreter, you must seem very politick. But couch hoa, here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten a clock; Within these three hours 'twil be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausive invention that carries it. They begin to smoak me, and disgraces have of late knock'd too often at my door; I find my tongue is too fool-hardy, but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lo. E. This is the first that e're thine own tongue was guilty of (Aside

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give my self some hurts, and say I got them in exploit; yet slight ones will not carry it. They will say, came you off with so little? And great ones I dare not give; wherefore what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my self another of Bajazets Mutes, if you prattle me into these perils.

Lo. E. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is? [Aside

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lo. E. We cannot afford you so. (Aside

Par. Or the paring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Lo. E. 'Twould not do. (Aside

Par. Or to drown my cloathes, and say I was stript:

Lo. E. Hardly serve. (Aside

Par. Though I swore I leap from the window of the Cittadel. ——

Lo. E. How deep? (Aside

Par. Thirty fathom.

Lo. E. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed. (Aside

Pa. I would I had any drum of the enemies, I would swear I recover'd it.

Lo. E You shall hear one anon. Aside

Par. A drum now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo. E. Throco movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, villiando par corbo, cargo.

Par O ransome, ransome, They seize & blindfold him.
Do not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Baskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos Regiment,
And I shall lose my life for want of language.
If there be here German or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me,
I'll discover that which shall undo the Florentine.

Inter. Baskos vauvado, I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue Kerelybonto sir, betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen ponyards are at thy bosome.

Par. Oh.

Int. Oh pray, pray, pray,
Manca revancha dulche.

Lo. E. Oscorbidulchos volivorco.

Int. The General is content to spare thee yet,
And hood-winkt as thou art, will lead thee on
To gather from thee. Haply thou mayst inform
Something to save thy life.

Par. O let me live,
And all the secrets of our camp I'll shew;
Their force, their purposes: Nay, I'll speak that,
Which you will wonder at.

Int. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

Int. Acordo linta.
Come on, thou art granted space. Exit.

A short Alarum within.

Lo. E. Go, tell the Count Rossillion and my brother,
We have caught the Woodcock, and will keep him muf-
Till we do hear from them (feld

Sol. Captain I will.

L. E. A will betray us all unto our selves,
Inform on that.

Sol. So I will, sir.

L. E. Till then I'll keep him dark and safely lockt. [Exit

Scene II.

Enter Bertram, and the Maid called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good Lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled Goddess,
And worth it with addition! but fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality?
If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no Maiden but a monument:
When you are dead you shall be such a one
As you are now, for you are cold and stern;
And now you should be as your Mother was
When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No.
My Mother did but duty; such (my Lord)
As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o'that!
I prithee do not strive against my vows:
I was compel'd to her, but I love thee
By loves own sweet constraint, and will for ever
Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us
Till we serve you: But when you have our Roses,
You barely leave our Thorns to prick our selves,
And mock us with our barenness.

Ber. How have I sworn?

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth,
But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true;
What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the High'st to witness: then pray you tell me,
If I should swear by Joves great Attributes
I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
When I did love you ill? This has no holding
To swear by him whom I protest to love,
That I will work against him. Therefore your oaths
Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd
At least in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it:
Be not so holy cruel. Love is holy,

And

And my integrity ne're knew the crafts
That you do charge men with: Stand no more off,
But give thy self unto my sick desires,
Who then recovers. Say thou art mine, and ever
My love, as it begins, shall so persever.
Dia. I see that men make ropes in such a scarre,
That we'll forsake our selves. Give me that Ring.
Ber. I'll lend it thee my dear, but have no power
To give it from me.
Dia. Will you not, my Lord?
Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th world,
In me to lose.
Dia. Mine Honour's such a Ring;
My Chastitie's the Jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i'th world,
In me to lose Thus your own proper wisdom
Brings in the Champion honour on my part,
Against your vain assault.
Ber. Here, take my Ring,
My house, my honour, yea my life be thine,
And I'll be bid by thee.
Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window;
I'll order take, my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me:
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them,
When back again this Ring shall be deliver'd;
And on your finger in the night, I'll put
Another Ring, that which in time proceeds,
May token to the future, our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then fail not: you have won
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Ber. A heav'n on earth I've won by wooing thee. Exit.
Dia. For which, live long to thank both heav'n and me!
You may so in the end.
My mother told me just how he would woo,
As if she sat in's heart; She says, all men
Have the like oaths: He had sworn to marry me
When his wife's dead: therefore I'll lie with him
When I am buried. Since French-men are so braid,
Marry that will, I'll live and die a Maid;
Only in this disguise, I think't no sin,
To cozen him that would unjustly win. Exit.

Scene III.

Enter the two French Captains, and some two or three Souldiers.

Cap. G. You have not given him his mothers letter?
Cap. E. I have deliver'd it an hour since; there is something in't that stings his nature; for on the reading it, he chang'd almost into another man.
Cap. G. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a Lady.
Cap. E. Especially, he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the King, who had even turn'd his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
Cap. G. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
Cap. E. He hath perverted a young Gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chast renown, and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour; he hath given her his monumental Ring, and thinks himself made in the unchast composition.
Cap. G. Now God delay our rebellion! as we are our selves, what things are we!
Cap. E. Meerly our own traitors; And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorr'd ends: so he that in this action contrives against his own Nobility in his proper stream, o'reflows himself.
Cap. G. Is it not most damnable in us, to be Trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to night?
Cap. E. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to his hour.
Cap. G. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company anathomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so seriously he had set this counterfeit.
Cap. E. We will not meddle with him till he come; For his presence must be the whip of the other.
Cap. G. In the mean time, what hear you of these Wars?
Cap. E. I hear there is an overture of peace.
Cap. G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.
Cap. E. What will Count Rossillion do then? Will he travel higher, or return again into France?
Cap. G. I perceive by this demand, you are not altogether of his counsel.
Cap. E. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a great deal of his act.
Cap. G. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austeer sanctimony she accomplish'd; and there residing, the tenderness of her Nature, became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.
Cap. E. How is this justified?
Cap. G. The stronger part of it by her own Letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death; her death it self, which could not be her office to say, is come, was faithfully confirm'd by the Rector of the place.
Cap. E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?
Cap. G. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.
Cap. E. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.
Cap. G. How mightily sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!
Cap. E. And how mightily some other times, we drown our gain in tears, the great dignity that his valour hath here acquir'd for him, shall at home be encountred with a shame as ample.
Cap. G. The web of our life, is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our vertues would be proud, if our faults whipt them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your master?
Ser. He met the Duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his Lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.
Cap. E. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Scene IV.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Cap. G. They cannot be too sweet for the Kings tartness; here's his Lordship now. How now, my Lord, is't not after midnight?
Ber. I have to night dispatch'd sixteen businesses, a months length a piece, by an abstract of success; I have congied with the Duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife; mourn'd for her; writ to my Lady mother, I am returning; entertain'd my Convoy, and between these main parcels of dispatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Cap. E. If the buſineſs be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haſte of your Lordſhip.

Ber. I mean the buſineſs is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter; but ſhall we have this Dialogue between the Fool and the Soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit module; 'has deceived me, like a doublemeaning Propheſier.

Cap. E. Bring him forth; h'as ſate i'th Stocks all night, poor gallant Knave.

Ber. No matter, his heels have deſerv'd it, in uſurping his Spurs ſo long. How does he carry himſelf?

Cap. G. I have told your Lordſhip already: The Stocks carry him. But to anſwer you as you would be underſtood, he weeps like a Wench that had ſhed her Milk, he hath confeſt himſelf to Morgan, whom he ſuppoſes to be a Friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very inſtant Diſaſter of his ſetting i'th Stocks; and what think you he hath confeſt?

Ber. Nothing of me, has a?

Cap. E. His confeſſion is taken, and it ſhall be read to his Face; if your Lordſhip be in't, as I believe you are, you muſt have the patience to hear it.

Scene V.

Enter Parolles, with his Interpreter.

Ber. A plague upon him, muffled! he can ſay nothing of me; huſh.

Cap. G. Hoodman comes: Portotartaroſſa.

Int. He calls for the Tortures; what will you ſay without 'em?

Par. I will confeſs what I know without conſtraint; If ye pinch me like a Paſty, I can ſay no more.

Int. Boſko Chimurcho.

Cap. Biblibindo Chicurmurco.

Int. You are a merciful General: Our Generel bids you anſwer to what I ſhall ask you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Int. Firſt demand of him, how many Horſe the Duke is ſtrong. What ſay you to that?

Par. Five or ſix thouſand, but very weak and unſervice able; the Troops are all ſcattered, and the Commanders very poor Rogues, upon my Reputation and Credit, and as I hope to live.

Int. Shall I ſet down your anſwer ſo?

Par. Do, I'll take the Sacrament on't, how and which way you will: all's one to him.

Ber. What a paſt-ſaving ſlave is this?

Cap. G. Y'are deceiv'd, my Lord, this Monſieur Parolles, the gallant Militariſt, that was his own phraſe, that had the whole Theorick of War in the knot of his Scarf, and the practice in the Chape of his Dagger.

Cap. E. I will never truſt a man again, for keeping his Sword clean, nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his Apparel neatly.

Int. Well, that's ſet down.

Par. Five or ſix thouſand horſe I ſaid, I will ſay true, or thereabouts ſet down, for I'll ſpeak truth.

Cap. G. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor Rogues, I pray you ſay.

Int. Well, that's ſet down.

Par. I humbly thank you, ſir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marvellous poor.

Int. Demand of him of what ſtrength they are a foot. What ſay you to that?

Par. By my troth, ſir, if I were to live this preſent hour, I will tell true. Let me ſee, Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebaſtian ſo many, Corambus ſo many, Jaques ſo many; Guiltian, Coſmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred each: Mine own Company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each; ſo that the Muſter-file, rotten and ſound, upon my life amounts not to fifteen thouſand pole, half of the which dare not ſhake the Snow from off their Caſſocks, leſt they ſhake themſelves to pieces.

Ber. What ſhall be done to him?

Cap. G. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my conditions; and what Credit I have with the Duke.

Int. Well that's ſet down: you ſhall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i'th Camp, a Frenchman; what his Reputation is with the Duke, what his Valour, Honeſty, and Expertneſs in War; or whether he thinks it were not poſſible with well weighing ſums of Gold to corrupt him to a revolt. What ſay you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I beſeech you, let me anſwer to the particular of the interrogatories. Demand them ſingly.

Int. Do you know Captain Dumain?

Par. I know him, a was a Botchers Prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipt for getting the Shrieves fool with Child, dumb innocent, that could not ſay him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; tho I know his Brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

Inter. Well, is this Captain in the Duke of Florence's Camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lowſie.

Cap. G. Nay, look not ſo upon me; we ſhall hear of your Lordſhip anon.

Int. What is his Reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knows him for no other, but a poor Officer of mine, and writ to me the other day, to turn him out o'th Band. I think I have his Letter in my Pocket.

Int. Marry we'll ſearch.

Par. In good ſadneſs I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Here 'tis, here's a Paper, ſhall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Cap. G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Count's a fool, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letter, ſir; that is an Advertiſement to a proper Maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the Allurement of one Count Roſſillon, a fooliſh idle Boy; but for all that very ruttiſh. I pray you, ſir, put it up again.

Int. Nay, I'll read it firſt by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't, I proteſt was very honeſt in the behalf of the Maid; for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and laſcivious Boy, who is a Whale to Virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable! both-ſides Rogue.

Int. Let. When he ſwears Oaths, bid him drop Gold, and take it:
After he ſcores, he never pays the ſcore:
Half won is match well made, match and well make it.
He ne're pays after-debts, take it before,
And ſay a Soldier (Dian) told thee this:
Men are to mell with, Boys are not to kiſs.
For count of this, the Count's a Fool I know it,
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,
Parolles.

Ber. He ſhall be whipt through the Army with this rime in's forehead.

Cap. E. This is your devoted friend, ſir, the manifold Linguiſt, and the Army-potent Soldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before, but a Cat, and he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceive, ſir, by the Generals looks, we ſhall be fain to hang you.

Par.

Par. My life, sir, in any case; Not that I am afraid to die, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'th stocks, any where, so I may live.

Int. we'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore once more to this Captain Dumain: you have answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour. What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an Egge out of a Cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lye, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best vertue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-cloathes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty, he ha's every thing that an honest man should not have: what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

Cap. G. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith sir, ha's led the drum before the English Tragedians: to belie him I will not, and more of his souldiership I know not, except in that Country, he had the honour to be the Offi[illegible] at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

Cap. G. He hath out-villain'd villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat still.

Int. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you, if Gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, For a quart d'ecue he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it, and cut th'intail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other captain Dumain?

Cap. E. Why do's he ask him of me?

Int What's he?

Par. E'n a Crow o'th same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil: He excels his Brother for a Coward, yet his Brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry in coming on, he ha's the Cramp.

Int. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. And the Captain of his horse, Count Rossillion,

Int. I'll whisper with the General, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming, a plague of all drums, only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the Count, have I run into this danger; yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken? (Aside.

Int. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die; the General says, you that have so traiterously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come heads man off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends: Unbinding him

So look about you, know you any here?

Coun. Good morrow, noble Captain.

Lo. E. God blesse you, Captin Parolles.

Cap G. God save you, noble Captain.

Lo. E. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafeu? I am for France.

Cap. G. Good Captain, will you give me a Copy of the same sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rossillion, and I were not a very Coward, I'de compel it of you; but fare you well (Exeunt.

Int. You are undone, Captain, all but your scarf; that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

Int. If you could find out a Country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare ye well, sir, I am for France too, we shall speak of you there. Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great,
'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more,
But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As Captain shall. Simply the thing I am
Shall make me live: who knows himself a braggart,
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass,
That every braggart shall be found an Ass.
Rust sword, cool blushes, and Parolles live
Safest in shame; being fool'd, by fool'ry thrive;
There's place and means for every man alive.
I'll after them.

Scene VII. The Widows House at Florence.

Enter Hellan, Widow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 'tis needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel.
Time was I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which, gratitude
Through flinty Tartars bosome would peep forth,
And answer thanks. I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marseilles, to which place.
We have convenient convoy; you must know
I am supposed dead; the Army breaking,
My husband hies him home, where heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good Lord the King,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you mistress,
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompence your love: Doubt not but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughters dowre,
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night; so lust doth play
With what it loaths, for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter. you Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you,
But with the word: the time will bring on summer,
When Briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp: we must away,
Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time revives us,
All's well that ends well, still, that fines the Crown;
What ere the course, the end is the renown. (Exeunt.

Scene VIII.

Enter Clown, old Lady, and Lafeu.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt taffata fellow there, whose villanous saffron would have made all the unbak'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour; your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanc'd by the King, than by that red-tail'd humble-Bee I speak of.

2 Alluding to two fashions then in vogue; one of using yellow Starch for their ruffs & Bands, the other of colouring Paste with saffron.

Lad. I would he had not known him, it was the death of the moſt vertuous Gentlewoman, that ever Nature had praiſe for creating; if ſhe had partaken of my fleſh, and coſt me the deareſt groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. We may pick a thouſand ſallets ere we light on ſuch another herb.

Clo. Indeed, ſir, ſhe was the ſweet Margerom of the ſallet, or rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not ſalet herbs, you knave, they are noſe-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, ſir, I have not much ſkill in graſs.

La. Whether doeſt thou profeſs thy ſelf, a knave or a fool?

Clo. A fool, ſir, at a womans ſervice, and a knave at a mans.

La. Your diſtinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his ſervice.

La. So you were a knave at his ſervice indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, ſir, to do her ſervice.

La. I will ſubſcribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your ſervice.

La. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, ſir, if I cannot ſerve you, I can ſerve as great a Prince as you are.

La. Who's that, a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, ſir, a has an Engliſh name, but his fiſnomy is more hotter in France than here.

La. What Prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, ſir, alias the prince of darkneſs, alias the devil.

La. Hold thee, there's my purſe; I give thee not this to ſuggeſt thee from thy Maſter thou talk'ſt of, ſerve him ſtill.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, ſir, that always loved a great fire, and the maſter I ſpeak of ever keeps a good fire; but ſure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobility remain in's Court. I am for the houſe with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: ſome that humble themſelves may, but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'l be for the flowry way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

La. Go thy ways, I begin to be aweary of thee, and I tell thee ſo before, becauſe I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways, let my horſes be well look'd to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, ſir, they ſhall be Jades tricks, which are their own right by the law of Nature. (Exit.)

Laf. A ſhrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Lad. So he is. My Lord that's gone, made himſelf much ſport out of him; by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his ſaucineſs, and indeed he has no pace, but he runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well, 'tis not amiſs; and I was about to tell you, ſince I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your ſon was upon his return home, I moved the King my maſter to ſpeak in the behalf of my daughter; which in the minority of them both, his Majeſty, out of a ſelf gracious remembrance, did firſt propoſe; his Highneſs hath promis'd me to do it; and to ſtop up the diſpleaſure he hath conceived againſt your ſon, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladiſhip like it?

La. With very much content, my Lord, and I wiſh it happily effected.

Laf. His Highneſs comes poſt from Marſeilles, of as able a body as when he numbred thirty; he will be here to morrow, or I am deceiv'd by him that in ſuch intelligence hath ſeldom fail'd.

La. It rejoices me that I hope I ſhall ſee him ere I die. I have letters that my ſon will be here to night: I ſhall beſeech your Lordſhip to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam', I was thinking with what Manners I might ſafely be admitted.

Lad. You need but plead your honourable priviledge.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but I thank my God it holds yet.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonders my Lord your ſon with a patch of velvet on's face; whether there be a ſcar under't or no, the Velvet knows, but 'tis a goodly patch of Velvet; his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

La. A ſcar nobly got,
Or a noble ſcar, is a good livery of honour.
So belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbinado'd face.

Laf. Let us go ſee
Your ſon, I pray you, I long to talk
With the young noble ſoldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and moſt courteous Feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. (Exeunt.)

Actus Quintus. Scene 1.

Marſeilles.

Enter Helen, Widow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding poſting day and night
Muſt wear your ſpirits low; we cannot help it.
But ſince you have made the days and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Behold you do ſo grow in my requital
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,

Enter a Gentleman a ſtranger.

This man may help me to his Majeſties ear,
If he would ſpend his power. God ſave you, ſir:

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have ſeen you in the Court of France.

Gent. I have been ſometimes there.

Hel. I do preſume, ſir, that you are not fallen
From the report that goes upon your goodneſs;
And therefore goaded with moſt ſharp occaſions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The uſe of your own vertues, for the which
I ſhall continue thankful.

Gen. What's your will?

Hel. That it will pleaſe you
To give this poor petition to the King,
And aid me with that ſtore of power you have,
To come into his preſence.

Gent. The Kings not here.

Hel. Not here, ſir?

Gent. Not indeed,
He hence remov'd laſt night, and with more haſte
Than is his uſe.

Wid. Lord, how we loſe our pains.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Tho' time ſeem ſo adverſe, and means unfit:
I do beſeech you, whither is he gone?

Gent.

A. A quibble is here intended from a wound given with a Carabine.

Gent. Marry, as I take it to Roſſillion,
Whither I am going.
Hel. I do beſeech you ſir,
Since you are like to ſee the King before me,
Commend the Paper to his gracious hand,
Which I preſume ſhall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you with what good ſpeed
Our means will make us means.
Gent. This I'll do for you.
Hel. And you ſhall find your ſelf to be well thanked,
what e're falls more. We muſt to horſe again. Go, go, provide. Exeunt.

Scene II. Rousillon.

Enter Clown and Parolles.

Par. Good M. Levatch, give my Lord Lafeu this Letter; I have ere now, ſir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with freſher Cloaths; but I am now, ſir, muddied in fortunes mood, and ſmell ſomewhat ſtrong of her ſtrong diſpleaſure.
Clo. Truly, Fortunes diſpleaſure is but ſluttiſh, if it ſmell ſo ſtrongly as thou ſpeak'ſt of: I will henceforth eat no Fiſh of Fortunes butt'ring. Prithee, allow the Wind.
Par. Nay, you need not to ſtop your Noſe, ſir: I ſpake but by Metaphor.
Clo. Indeed, ſir, if your Metaphor ſtink, I will ſtop my Noſe, or againſt any mans Metaphor. Prithee get thee further.
Par. Pray you, ſir, deliver me this Paper.
Clo. Foh, prithee ſtand away; a Paper from Fourtunes Cloſe-ſtool, to give to a Nobleman. Look here he comes himſelf.

Enter Lafeu.

Clo. Here is a pur of Fortunes, ſir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Muſkat, that hath fall'n into the unclean Fiſh-pond of her diſpleaſure, and as he ſays, muddied withall. Pray you, ſir, uſe the Carp as you may, for he looks like a poor decayed, Ingenious, Fooliſh, Raſcally Knave. I do pity his diſtreſs in my Smiles of comfort, and leave him to your Lordſhip.
Par. My Lord, I am a man whom Fortune hath cruelly ſcratch'd.
Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'Tis too late to pare her Nails now. Wherein have you play'd the Knave with Fortune, that ſhe ſhould Scratch you, who of her ſelf is a good Lady, and would not have Knaves thrive long under her? There's a Cardecue for you: Let the Juſtices make you and Fortune friends; I am for other buſineſs.
Par. I beſeech your honour, to hear me one ſingle word.
Laf. You beg a ſingle penny more: Come you ſhall ha't, ſave your word.
Par. My name, my good Lord, is Parolles.
Laf. You beg more than one word then. Cox my paſſion, give me your hand: How does your Drum?
Par. O my good Lord, you were the firſt that found me.
Laf. Was I inſooth? And I was the firſt that loſt thee.
Par. It lies in you, my Lord, to bring me in ſome grace, for you did bring me out.
Laf. Out upon thee Knave, doeſt thou put upon me at once, both the Office of God and Devil? one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The King's coming, I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, enquire further after me, I had talk of you laſt Night; tho you are a Fool and a Knave, you ſhall eat, go to, follow.
Par. I praiſe God for you. Exeunt

Scene III.

Flouriſh. Enter King, old Lady, Lafeu, the two French Lords, with Attendants.

Kin. We loſt a Jewel, of her eſteem
Was made much poorer by it; but your Son,
As mad in folly, lack'd the ſenſe to know
Her eſtimation home.
Old La. 'Tis paſt, my Liege;
And I beſeech your Majeſty to make it
Natural Rebellion, done i'th blaſte of Youth,
When Oyl and Fire, too ſtrong for reaſons force,
Ore bear it and burn on.
Kin. My honour'd Lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all;
Tho my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to ſhoot.
Laf. This I muſt ſay,
But firſt I beg my pardon; the young Lord
Did to his Majeſty, his Mother, and his Lady,
Offence of mighty note; but to himſelf
The greateſt wrong of all. He loſt a Wife,
Whoſe beauty did aſtoniſh the ſurvey
Of richeſt eyes; whoſe words all ears took captive;
Whoſe deep perfection, hearts that ſcorn'd to ſerve,
Humbly call'd Miſtreſs.
Kin. Praiſing what is loſt,
Makes the remembrance dear. Well—call him hither;
We are reconcil'd, and the firſt view ſhall kill
All repetition: Let him not ask our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than Oblivion, we do bury
Th'incenſing relicks of it. Let him approach
A ſtranger, no Offender; and inform him
So 'tis our will he ſhould.
Gent. I ſhall my Liege. [Exit
Kin. What ſays he to your Daughter?
Have you ſpoke?
Laf. All that he is, hath reference to your Highneſs.
Kin. Then ſhall we have a match. I have Letters ſent me, that ſet him high in fame.

Scene IV.

Enter Count Bertram.

Laf. He looks well on't.
Kin. I am not a day of ſeaſon,
For thou maſt ſee a Sun-ſhine, and a Hail
In me at once; But to the brighteſt Beams
Diſtracted Clouds give way; ſo ſtand thou forth,
The time is fair again.
Ber. My high repented blames,
Dear Sovereign, pardon me.
Kin. All is whole,
Not one word more of the conſumed time,
Let's take the inſtant by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quickeſt decrees
Th'inaudible, and noiſeleſs foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them. You remember
The Daughter of this Lord?
Ber. Admiringly, my Liege, at firſt
I ſtuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durſt make too bold a herald of my Tongue:
Where the Impreſſion of mine Eye enfixing,
Contempt his ſcornful Perſpective did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour,
Scor'd a fair colour, or expreſſ'd it ſtoln,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a moſt hideous Object. Then it came,
That ſhe whom all men prais'd, and whom my ſelf,
Since I have loſt, have lov'd, was in mine Eye
The duſt that did offend it.
Kin. Well excus'd:
That thou didſt love her, ſtrikes ſome ſcores away
From the great compt; but love that comes too late,
Like a remorſeful pardon ſlowly carried
To the great ſender, turns a ſowre offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone: our raſh faults
Make trial price of ſerious things we have,

Not

Not knowing them, until we know their grave.
Oft our displeasures, to our selves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love waking, cries to see what's done,
While shapeful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Hellens knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin,
The main consents are had, and here we'll stay
To see our widowers second marriage day:
Which better than the first, O dear heaven bless,
Or, ere they meet, in me, O Nature cease!
Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my houses name
Must be digested: give a savour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And ev'ry hair that's on't, Hellen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a Ring as this,
The last that ere I took her leave at Court,
I saw upon her finger.
Ber. Here it was not.
Kin. Now, pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to't:
This Ring was mine, and when I gave it Hellen,
I bad her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessited to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to reave her
Of what should stead her most?
Ber. My gracious Sovereign,
How ere it pleases you to take it so,
The Ring was never hers.
Old La. Son, on my life
I have seen her wear it, and she reckon'd it
At her lives rate.
Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd, my Lord, she never saw it;
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I stood ingag'd, but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture; she ceast
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the Ring again.
Kin. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in natures mystery more science,
Than I have in this Ring. 'Twas mine, 'twas Hellens,
Who ever gave it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your self,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to your self in bed,
(Where you have never come) or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.
Ber. She never saw it.
Kin. Thou speak'st it falsly: as I love mine honour;
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out; if it should prove
That thou art so inhuman, 'twill not prove so.
And yet I know not, thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead; which nothing but to close
Her eyes my self, could win me to believe,
More than to see this Ring. Take him away.
My fore-past proofs, how ere the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him,
We'll sift this matter further.
Ber. If you shall prove
This Ring was ever hers, you shall as easie
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. Exit Ber. gaurded

Scene V.

Enter a Gentleman.

Kin. I am wrap'd in dismal thinkings.
Gent. Gracious Sovereign.
Whether I have been too blame or no, I know not;
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who have for four or five removes come short,
To tender it her self. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage, and she told me
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your Highness with her self.

The King reads A Letter.

Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rossillion Widower, his vows are forfeited to me, and my honours paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to this Countrey for Justice: Grant it me, O King, in you it best lies, otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor Maid is undone.

Diana Capulet.

Laf. I will buy me a son in Law in a fair, and toul him for this. I'll none of him.
Kin. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu,
To bring forth this discov'ry, seek these suitors:
Go speedily, and bring again the Count.

Enter Bertram.

I am afear'd the life of Hellen (Lady)
Was foully snatch'd.
Old La. Now justice on the doers!
Kin. I wonder, sir, wives are so monstrous to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them Lordship,
Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widow, Diana, and Parolles.

Dia. I am, my Lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capulet;
My suit, as I understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.
Wid. I am her Mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.
Kin. Come hither, Count, do you know these Women?
Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will deny,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?
Ber. She's none of mine, my Lord.
Dia. If you shall marry
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heavens vows, and those are mine;
You give away my faith, which is known mine:
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marry me,
Either both or none.
Laf. Your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her. (To Bert.
Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I have Laugh'd with: Let your Highness
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Than for to think that I would sink it here.
Kin. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them fairer: prove your honour,
Then in my thought it lies.
Dian. Good my Lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he do's think
He had not my virginity.

King.

Kin. What saist thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent, my Lord,
And was a common gamester to the Camp.
Dia. He do's me wrong, my Lord; If I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price.
Do not believe him. O, behold this Ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a parallel: yet for all that
He gave it to a Commoner o'th Camp
If I be one.
Old La. He blushes, and 'tis his:
Of six preceding Ancestors, that gem
Conferr'd by testament to th' sequent issue
Hath it been owed and worn. This is his wife,
That Ring's a thousand proofs.
King. Me thought you said
You saw one here in Court could witness it.
Dia. I did, my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument; his name's Parolles.
Laf. I saw the man to day, if man he be.
Kin. Find him, and bring him hither.
Ros. What of him?
He's quoted for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots o'th world, taxd and deboish'd,
Whose nature sickens: but to speak a truth;
Am I, or that or this, for what he'll utter,
That will speak any thing?
Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.
Ros. I think she has; certain it is I lik'd her,
And boorded her i'th wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint;
As all impediments in fancys course
Are motives of more fancy; and in fine,
Her insuit coming with her modern grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate; she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferior might
At Market price have bought.
Dia. I must be patient:
You that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.
Ros. I have it not.
King. What Ring was yours, I pray you?
Dian. Sir, much like the same upon your finger.
Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.
Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a bed.
King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a Casement.

Scene VI.

Dia. I have spoke the truth. Enter Parolles.
Ros. My Lord, I do confess the Ring was hers.
Kin. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you:
Is this the man you speak of?
Dia. Ay, my Lord.
Kin. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your Master:
(Which on your just proceeding, I'll keep off);
By him, and by this woman here, what know you?
Par. So please your Majesty, my Master hath been an honourable Gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which Gentlemen have.
Kin. Come, come, to th' purpose; Did he love this woman?
Par. Faith sir, he did love her, but how!
Kin. How, I pray you?
Par. He did love her, sir, as a Gent. loves a Woman.
Kin. How is that?
Par. He lov'd her, sir, and lov'd her not.
Kin. As thou art a Knave and no Knave, what an equivocal Companion is this?
Par. I am a poor man, and at your Majesties command.
Laf. He't a good drum, my Lord, but a naughty Orator.
Dia. Do you know he promis'd me marriage?
Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.
Kin. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?
Par. Yes, so please your Majesty, I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her: for indeed he was mad for her, and talkt of Sathan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what; yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill well to speak on; therefore I will not speak what I know.
Kin. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married; but thou art too fine in thy evidence; Therefore stand aside. This Ring you say was yours.
Dia. Ay, my good Lord.
Kin. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?
Dia. It was not given me, nor did not buy it.
Kin. Who lent it you?
Dia. It was not lent me neither.
Kin. Where did you find it then?
Dia. I found it not.
Kin. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?
Dia. I never gave it him.
Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.
Kin. This Ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.
Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for ought I know.
Kin. Take her away, I do not like her now;
To prison with her: and away with him,
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this Ring,
Thou dieſt within this hour.
Dia. I'll never tell you.
Kin. Take her away.
Dia. I'll put in bail my Liege.
Kin. I think thee now some common Customer.
Dia. By Jove if ever I knew man, 'twas you.
Kin. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?
Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty;
He knows I am no Maid, and he'll swear to't;
I'll swear I am a Maid, and he knows not.
Great King, I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.
Kin. She do's abuse our ears; to prison with her.
Dia. Good mother fetch my bayl. Stay, Royal sir,
The Jeweller that owes the Ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
Tho yet he never heard me, here I quit him.
He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with child;
Dead tho she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick,
And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hellen and Widow.

Kin. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the true Office of mine eyes?
Is't real that I see?
Hel. No, my good Lord,
'Tis but the shadow of a Wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.
Ros. Both, both, O pardon.
Hel. Oh, my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kind; there is your Ring,
And look you, here's your Letter: this it says,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with child, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ros.

Ros. If ſhe, my Liege, can make me know this clearly,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.
Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce ſtep between me and you!
O, my dear mother, do I ſee you living? (To the Counteſs.
Laf. Mine eyes ſmell Onions, I ſhall weep anon:
Now. Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkercher. (To Parolles.
So, I thank thee, wait on me home, I'll make ſport with thee: Let thy curtſies alone, they are ſcurvy ones.
King. Let us from point to point this ſtory know,
To make the even truth in pleaſure flow:
If thou beeſt yet a freſh uncropped flower,
Chooſe thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dower,
For I can gueſs, that by thy honeſt aid,
Thou keepeſt a Wife her ſelf, thy ſelf a Maid.
Of that and all the progreſs more and leſs,
Reſolvedly more leiſure ſhall expreſs:
All yet ſeems well, and if it end ſo meet,
The bitter paſt, more welcome is the ſweet. (Exeunt
Flouriſh.

Spoken by the King.

THe King's a Beggar, now the Play is done:
All is well ended, if his ſuit be won,
That you expreſs content; which we will pay,
With ſtrife to pleaſe you, day exceeding day;
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

Ex: Om.

Twelf-Night, Or what you will.

Scene. A City on the Coaſt of Illyria.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. The Palace.

Enter Orſino Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.

IF Muſick be the food of Love, play on,
Give me exceſs of it; that ſurfeiting,
The appetite may ſicken, and ſo die.
That ſtrain again, it had a dying fall:
O, it come o're my ear, like the ſweet ſounds
That breathes upon a bank of Violets,
Stealing, and giving Odour. Enough, Muſh
no more,
Tis not ſo ſweet now, as it was before.
O ſpirit of Love, how quick and freſh art thou!
That notwithſtanding thy capacity,
Receiveth as the Sea, Nought enters there,
Of what validity, and pitch ſo e're,
But falls into abatement, and low price,
Even in a minute; ſo full of ſhapes is fancy,
That it alone is high fantaſtical.
Cur. Will you go hunt, my Lord?
Du. What, Curio?
Cur. The Hart.
Du. Why, ſo I do, the nobleſt that I have:
O, when mine eyes did ſee Olivia firſt,
Me thought ſhe purg'd the air of peſtilence;
That inſtant was I turn'd into a Hart,
And my deſires, like fell and cruel hounds,
Ere ſince purſue me. How now, what news from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So pleaſe my Lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her hand-maid do return this anſwer:
The Element it ſelf, till ſeven years heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view;
But like a Cloyſtreſs ſhe will veiled walk,
And water once a day her Chambers round
With eye-offending brine: all this to ſeaſon
A brothers dead love, which ſhe would keep freſh
And laſting in her ſad remembrance. ſtill?
Du. O that ſhe hath a heart of this fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will ſhe love, when the rich Golden ſhaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections elſe
That live in her! When Liver, Brain, and Heart,
Theſe ſovereign thrones are all ſuppli'd and fill'd,
Her ſweet preſections with one ſelf-ſame king!
Away before me, to ſweet beds of Flowers,
Love thoughts lie rich, when canopy'd with bowers.
(Exeunt.

Scena Secunda. The Street.

Enter Viola, a Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What countrey (Friends) is this?
Cap. This is Illyria, Lady.
Vio. And what ſhould I do in Illyria?
My Brother he is in Elyſium,
Perchance he is not drown'd; What think you, Sailors?
Cap. It is perchance that you your ſelf were ſav'd.
Vio. O my poor brother, and ſo perchance may he be.
Cap. True Madam; and to comfort you with chance,
Aſſure your ſelf, after our ſhip did ſplit,
When you, and thoſe poor number ſaved with you,
Hung on our driving boat: I ſaw your brother,
Moſt provident in peril, bind himſelf,
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practiſe)
To a ſtrong Maſt, that liv'd upon the Sea;
Where like Orion on the Dolphins back,
I ſaw him hold acquaintance with the Waves,

So

So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's Gold.
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this Countrey?

Cap. Ay Madam, well; for I was bred and born
Not three hours travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?

Cap. A Noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino! I have heard my Father name him:
He was a Batchellor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmur (as you know
What great ones do, the less will prattle of)
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous Maid, the daughter of a Count,
That dy'd some twelvemonths since, then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also dy'd: for whose dear love,
(They say) she hath abjur'd the sight
And company of men.

Vio. O that I serv'd that Lady,
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the Dukes.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, Captain;
And tho' that nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution; yet of thee,
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward Character.
I prythee, (and I'll pay thee bounteously,)
Conceal me what I am, and be my aid.
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this Duke,
Thou shalt present me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of Musick,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit,
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute I'll be,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Vio. I thank thee; Lead me on (Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague means my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights; your Cousin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

To. Why let her except, before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine your self within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'll confine my self no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; and they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you; I heard my Lady talk of it yester-day, and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer?

To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Ma. Ay, he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Ma. What's that to th' purpose?

To. Why, he has three thousand Ducats a year.

Ma. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these Ducats: He's a very fool, and a prodigal.

To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o'th Viol-de-gambo, and speaks three or four Languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath indeed, almost natural; for besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Tob. By this hand they are scoundrels and subtractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

To. With drinking healths to my Neece: I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: he's a Coward and a Coystrill that will not drink to my Neece, till his brains turn o'th' toe, like a parish top. What wench? Castiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Scene IV.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. Sir Toby Belch! How now, Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

And. Bless you fair Shrew.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Tob. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

And. What's that?

To. My Neeces Chamber-maid.

An. Good Mistris Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Ma. My name is Mary, sir.

And. Good Mistress Mary, Accost.

To. You mistake Knight: Accost is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of Accost?

Mar. Fare you well, Gentlemen.

To. And thou let her part so, Sir Andrew, would thou might'st never draw sword agen.

And. And you part so Mistress, I would I might never draw sword agen. Fair Lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Ma. Sir, I have not you by th' hand.

And. Marry but you shall have, and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you, bring your hand to th' Buttery bar, and let it drink.

An. Wherefore, (sweet heart?) what's your Metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

An. Why, I think so: I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Ma. A dry jest, sir.

And. Are you full of them?

Ma. Ay, Sir, I have them at my finger ends: marry now I let go your hand, I am barren. (Exit Maria.

Tob. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of Canary: when did I see thee so put down?

And. Never in your life, I think, unless you see Canary put down: me thinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of Beef, and I believe that do's harm to my wit.

To. No question.

An. And I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to morrow, sir Toby.

To. Pur-quoy, my dear knight?

An.

---

2 By Castilian countenance here he means her best, her most civil, & courtly looks, which he bids her put on because Sr Andrew is coming.

An. VVhat is pur quoy? Do, or not do? I would I had beſtowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O had I but followed the Arts!

To. Then hadſt thou had an excellent head of hair.

An. VVhy, would that have mended my hair?

To. Paſt queſtion, for thou ſeeſt it will not curle by nature.

An. But it becomes me well enough, doſt not?

To. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a diſtaff; and I hope to ſee a houſwife take thee between her legs, and ſpin it off.

An. Faith I'le home to morrow, ſir Toby; your Neece will not be ſeen, or if ſhe be, it's four to one, ſhe'll none of me: the Count himſelf here hard by, wooes her.

To. She'll none o'th Count, ſhe'll not match above her degree, neither in eſtate, years, nor wit; I have heard her ſwear. Tut, there's life in't, man.

An. I'le ſtay a month longer. I am a fellow o'th ſtrangeſt mind i'the world: I delight in Masks and Revels ſometimes altogether.

To. Art thou good at theſe kick-ſhaws, Knight?

And. As any man in Illyria, whatſoever he be, under the degree of my betters, and yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. VVhat is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

To. And I can cut the Mutton to't.

And. And I think I have the back-trick, ſimply as ſtrong as any man in Illyria.

To. VVherefore are theſe things hid? wherefore have theſe gifts a Curtain before 'em? are they like to take duſt, like Miſtris Mals picture? why doſt thou not go to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Coranto? My very walk ſhould be a Jig! I would not ſo much as make water but in a ſink-a-pace; VVhat doſt thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think by the excellent conſtitution of thy leg, it was form'd under the ſtar of a Galliard.

And. Ay, 'tis ſtrong, and it does indifferent well in a flame colour'd ſtocken. Shall we ſet about ſome Revels?

To. What ſhall we do elſe: were we not born under Taurus?

And. Taurus? That's ſides and heart.

To. No, ſir, it is legs and thighs: let me ſee thee caper; Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. V

The Palace.

Enter Valentine, and Viola, in mans attire.

Val. If the Duke continue theſe favours towards you, Ceſario, you are like to be much advanc'd; he hath known you but three days, and already you are no ſtranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in queſtion the continuance of his love. Is he inconſtant, ſir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and attendants.

Vio. I thank you: here comes the Count. Duke.

Duke. Who ſaw Ceſario, hoa?

Vio. On your attendance, my Lord, here.

Du. Stand you a while aloof. Ceſario,
Thou knowſt no leſs, but all: I have unclaſp'd
To thee the Book even of my ſecret ſoul.
Therefore, good youth, addreſs thy gate unto her,
Be not deni'd acceſs, ſtand at her doors;
And tell them, there thy fixed foot ſhall grow
Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my Noble Lord,
If ſhe be ſo abandon'd to her ſorrow
As it is ſpoke, ſhe never will admit me.

Du. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds,
Rather than make unprofited return.

Vio. Say I do ſpeak with her, my Lord, what then?

Duk. O then, unfold the paſſion of my love,
Surprize her with diſcourſe of my dear faith;
It ſhall become thee well to act my woes;
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Than in a Nuncio's of more grave aſpect.

Vio. I think not ſo, my Lord.

Duk. Dear Lad, believe it;
For they ſhall yet be-ly thy happy years,
That ſay thou art a man: Dianaes lip
Is not more ſmooth, and rubious; thy ſmall pipe
Is as the Maidens Organ, ſhrill, and ſound,
And all is ſemblative a womans part.
I know thy conſtellation is right apt
For this affair: ſome four or five attend him,
All if you will; for I my ſelf am beſt
When leaſt in company; proſper well in this,
And thou ſhalt live as freely as thy Lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'le do my beſt
To woo your Lady; yet a barful ſtrife,
Who e're I woo, my ſelf would be his wife. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta. VI.

Olivia's House

Enter Maria, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou haſt been, or I will not open my lips ſo wide as a briſtle may enter in way of thy excuſe; my Lady will hang thee for thy abſence.

Clo. Let her hang me; he that is well hang'd in this world, needs fear no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He ſhall ſee none to fear.

Mar. A good Lenten anſwer; I can tell thee where that ſaying was born, of I fear no colours.

Clo. Where, good Miſtreſs Mary?

Mar. In the wars, and that may you be bold to ſay in your foolery.

Clo. VVell, God give them wiſdom that have it; and thoſe that are fools, let them uſe their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hang'd for being ſo long abſent, or be turn'd away; is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging, prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let ſummer bear it out.

Mar. You are reſolute then?

Clo. Not ſo neither, but I am reſolv'd on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold; or if both break, your gaskings fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith, very apt: well, go thy way, if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eves fleſh, as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace you rogue, no more o'that; here comes my Lady; make your excuſe wiſely, you were beſt.

Scene VII.

Enter Lady Oliva, with Malvolio.

Clo. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling; thoſe wits that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I that am ſure I lack thee, may paſs for a wiſe man. For what ſays Quinapalus? Better a witty fool, than a fooliſh wit. God bleſs thee, Lady.

Ol. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? take away the Lady.

Ol. Go to, y'are a dry fool; I'll no more of you; besides, you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, Madona, that drink and good counsel will amend; for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him; any thing that's mended, is but patch'd: virtue that transgresses, is but patcht with sin, and sin that amends, is but patcht with virtue. If that this simple Syllogisme will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true Cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower; The Lady bad take away the fool, therefore I say again, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree. Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much to say, as I were not motley in my brain: good Madona, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Ol. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechize you for it, Madona; Good my Mouse of virtue answer.

Ol. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.

Clo. Good Madona, why mourn'st thou?

Ol. Good fool, for my brothers death.

Clo. I think his soul is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool you, Madona, to mourn for your Brothers soul, being in heaven; Take away the fool, Gentlemen.

Ol. What think you of this fool, Malvolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him; Infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy Infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no Fox, but he will not pass his word for two pence that you are no fool.

Ol. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your Ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal; I saw him put down the other day, with an ordinary fool, that has no more brains than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gag'd. I protest I take these Wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools Zanies.

Ol. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for Bird-bolts, that you deem Cannon bullets: There is no slander in an allow'd fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury indue thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fools.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young Gentleman, much desires to speak with you.

Ol. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Ma. I know not, Madam, 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Ma. Sir Toby, Madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he speaks nothing but madman: Fie on him! Go you, Malvolio; if it be a suit from the Count, I am sick, or not at home. What you will, to dismiss it.

Exit Malvo.

Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, (Madona) as if thy eldest son should be a fool: whose scull, Jove cram with brains, for here he comes.

Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a most weak Pia mater.

Ol. By mine honour, half drunk. What is he at the gate, Cousin? Uncle?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman here—A plague o'these pickle Herring: How now, Sot?

Clo. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Cousin, Cousin, how have you come so early by this Lethargy?

Tob. Letchery! I defie Letchery: there's one at the gate.

Ol. Ay, marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the devil and he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. Exit.

Ol. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a mad man: One draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Ol. Go thou and seek the Crowner, and let him sit o' my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drink; he's drown'd; go look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, Madona, and the fool shall look to the mad man.

Exit Clown.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick, he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep, he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, Lady, he's fortified against any denial.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. Has been told so: and he says he'll stand at your door like a Sheriffs post, and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Ol. What kind o'man is he?

Mal. Why, of man-kind.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manners: he'll speak with you, will you or no.

Ol. Of what personage and years is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a pescod, or a Codling when 'tis almost an Apple: 'Tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favour'd, and he speaks very shrewishly; One would think his mothers milk were scarce out of him.

Old. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady calls. Exit.

Scene IX.

Enter Maria.

Ol. Give me my vail: come throw it o're my face, We'll once more hear Orsino's Embassy.

Enter Viola.

Vio. The honourable Lady of the house, which is she?

Ol. Speak to me, I shall answer for her: your will?

Vio. Most radiant, Exquisite, and unmatchable beauty, I pray you tell me if this be the Lady of the House, for I never saw her. I would be loath to cast away my speech; for besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good Beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

Scene VIII.

(Belche 9

A Heretofore All proclamations &c. were sent to the Sheriff of Each County to publish & posts were Erected in Each Town for the putting them upon called Sheriffs Pos

Ol. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the Lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart; and yet (by the very pangs of malice, I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the Lady of the house?

Ol. If I do not usurp my self, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp your self; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve; But this is from my Commission; I will on with my Speech in your praise, and then shew you the heart of my message.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis Poetical.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned. I pray you keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates, and allow'd your approach rather to wonder at you, than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief; 'tis not that time of Moon with me, to make one in so skipping a Dialogue.

Ma. Will you hoist Sail, sir, here lies your way.

Vio. No, good Swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, sweet Lady: tell me your mind, I am a messenger.

Ol. Sure you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the curtesie of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of War, no Taxation of Homage; I hold the Olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as a Maiden-head; to your ears, Divinity; to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Give us the place alone. (Exit Mar.) We will hear this Divinity. Now sir, what is your Text?

Vio. Most sweet Lady.

Ol. A comfortable Doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your Text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosome.

Ol. In his bosome? In what Chapter of his Bosome?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his Heart.

Ol. O, I have read it; it is Heresie. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Have you any Commission from your Lord, to negotiate with my Face? you are now out of your Text; but we will draw the Curtain, and shew you the Picture. Look you, sir, such a one I was this present: Is't not well done? (Unveiling)

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in grain, sir, 'twill endure Wind and Weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white,
Natures own sweet, and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,
If you will lead these Graces to the Grave,
And leave the World no Copy.

Ol. O sir, I will not be so hard-hearted: I will give out divers schedules of my beauty. It shall be Inventoried, and every particle and utensil labell'd to my will: As, Item, two Lips indifferent red. Item, two grey Eyes, with lids to them: Item, one Neck, one Chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are, you are too proud;
But if you were the Devil, you are fair;
My Lord and Master loves you: O, such love
Could be but recompenc'd, tho you were crown'd
The non-parell of beauty.

Ol. How does he love me?

Vio. With Adorations, fertile Tears,
With Groans that thunder Love, with Sighs of Fire.

Ol. Your Lord do's know my mind, I cannot love him;
Yet I suppose him vertuous, know him noble,
Of great Estate, of fresh and stainless Youth;
In voices well divulg'd, Free, Learn'd and Valiant,
And in dimension, and shape of nature,
A gracious person; But yet I cannot love him:
He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my Masters flame,
With such a suffring, such a deadly life:
In your denial, I would find no sence,
I would not understand it.

Ol. Why, what would you do?

Vio. Make me a willow Cabin at your gate,
And call upon my Soul within the house;
Write loyal Cantons of contemned love,
And sing them loud even in the dead of night:
Hollow your name to reverberate Hills,
And make the babling Gossip of the Air,
Cry out, Olivia: O you should not rest
Between the Elements of Air and Earth,
But you should pity me.

Ol. You might do much:
What is your Parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a Gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your Lord;
I cannot love him: let him send no more,
Unless, (perchance) you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it; Fare you well:
I thank you for you pains: spend this for me.

Vio. I am no fee'd-post, Lady; keep you purse,
My Master, not my self, lacks recompence.
Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love;
And let your fervour, like my Masters, be,
Plac'd in contempt! Farwel fair cruelty. (Exit.)

Ol. What is your Parentage?
Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a Gentleman. I'le be sworn thou art,
Thy Tongue, thy Face, thy Limbs, Actions, and Spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon; not too fast: soft, soft,
Unless the Master were the man. How now?
Even so quickly may one catch the Plague?
Methinks I feel this Youth's perfections,
With an invisible and subtle stealth
To creep in at mine Eyes. Well, let it be.——
What hoa, Malvolio.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here, Madam, at your service.

Ol. Run after that same peevish Messenger,
The Counts man; he left this Ring behind him,
Would I, or not: tell him, I'le none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his Lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him:
If that the Youth will come this way to morrow,
I'le give him reason for't: hie thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. (Exit.)

Ol. I do, I know not what, and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind:
Fate, shew thy force, our selves we do not owe;
What is decreed, must be; and be this so.

(Finis, Actus primi.)

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

The Street.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

An. Will you ſtay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my Stars ſhine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate, might perhaps diſtemper yours; therefore I ſhall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompence for your love, to lay any of them on you.

An. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No ſooth, ſir; my determinate Voyage is meer extravagancy. But I perceive in you ſo excellent a touch of modeſty, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to expreſs my ſelf: you muſt know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebaſtian (which I call'd Rodorigo), my Father was that Sebaſtian of Meſſaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him, my ſelf, and a Siſter, both born in one hour; if the Heavens had been pleas'd, would we had ſo ended! But you ſir, alter'd that, for ſome hours before you took me from the breach of the Sea, was my Siſter drown'd.

An. Alas the day!

Seb. A Lady, ſir, tho it was ſaid ſhe much reſembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful; but tho I could not with ſuch eſtimable wonder over-far believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publiſh her, ſhe bore a mind that envy could not but call fair: She is drown'd already, ſir, with ſalt water, tho I ſeem to drown her remembrance again with more.

An. Pardon me, ſir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

An. If you will not murther me for my love, let me be your Servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him, whom you have recover'd, deſire it not. Fare ye well at once; my Boſom is full of kindneſs, and I am yet ſo near the manners of my Mother, that upon the leaſt occaſion more, mine Eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orſino's Court; farwel. Exit.

An. The gentleneſs of all the gods go with thee!
I have made Enemies in Orſino's Court,
Elſe would I very ſhortly ſee thee there:
But come what may, I do adore thee ſo,
That danger ſhall ſeem ſport, and I will go. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola, and Malvolio, at ſeveral Doors.

Mal. Were not you ev'n now, with the Counteſs Olivia?

Vio. Even now ſir, on a moderate pace, I have ſince arriv'd but hither.

Mal. She returns this Ring to you, (ſir); you might have ſaved me my pains, to have taken it away your ſelf. She adds moreover, that you ſhould put your Lord in a deſperate aſſurance, ſhe will none of him. And one thing more, that you be never ſo hardy to come again in his affairs, unleſs it be to report your Lords taking of this: receive it ſo.

Vio. She took the Ring of me, I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, ſir, you peeviſhly threw it to her, and her will is, it ſhould be ſo return'd; If it be worth ſtooping for, there it lies in your Eye; if not, be it his that finds it. Exit.

Vio. I left no Ring with her; what means this Lady?
Fortune forbid my out-ſide have not charm'd her!
She made good view of me, indeed ſo much,
That ſure me thought her Eyes had loſt her Tongue,
For ſhe did ſpeak in ſtarts diſtractedly.
She loves me ſure, the cunning of her paſſion
Invites me in this churliſh meſſenger.
None of my Lords Ring? Why, he ſent her none?
I am the man, if it be ſo as 'tis,
Poor Lady, ſhe were better love a dream.
Diſguiſe, I ſee thou art a wickedneſs,
Wherein the pregnant Enemy does much.
How eaſie is it, for the proper falſe
In Womens waxen hearts to ſet their forms!
Alas, our frailty is the cauſe, not we,
For ſuch as we are made, if ſuch we be.
How will this fadge? My Maſter loves her dearly,
And I, (poor monſter) fond as much on him;
And ſhe, (miſtaken), ſeems to dote on me:
What will become of this? As I am a man,
My ſtate is deſperate for my maſters love;
As I am Woman, (now alas the day)!
What thriftleſs ſighs ſhall poor Olivia breathe?
O time, thou muſt untangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me t'unty. (Exit

Scena Tertia.

Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a bed after midnight, is to be up betimes, and Diluculo ſurgere, thou know'ſt.

And. Nay by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

To. A falſe concluſion: I hate it as an unfill'd Can; to be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; ſo that to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our life conſiſt of the four Elements?

And. Faith, ſo they ſay, but I think it rather conſiſts of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a ſcholar, let us therefore eat and drink, Marian. I ſay, a ſtoop of wine.

Enter Clown.

And. Here comes the fool, i'faith.

Clo. How now my hearts? did you never ſee the Picture of we three?

To. Welcome aſs, now let's have a catch.

And. By my troth the fool has an excellent breaſt. I had rather than forty ſhillings I had ſuch a leg, and ſo ſweet a Breath to Sing, as the Fool has. Inſooth thou waſt in very gracious fooling laſt Night, when thou ſpok'ſt of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians paſſing the Equinoctial of Quenbus; 'twas very good i'faith: I ſent thee ſix pence for thy Leman, hadſt it?

Clo. I did impetticos thy gratillity; for Malvolio's Noſe is no Whip-ſtock. My Lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no Bottle-Ale-houſes.

An. Excellent: Why, this is the beſt fooling, when all is done. Now a Song.

To. Come on, there is ſix pence for you. Let's have a Song.

An. There's a teſtril of me too; if one Knight give a—

Clo. Would you have a Love-ſong, or a Song of good Life?

To. A Love-ſong, a Love-ſong.

An. AyAy, I care not for good life.

Clown sings.

O Mistris mine, where are you roming?
O stay and hear, your true Loves coming,
That can sing both high and low.
Trip no further, pretty sweeting.
Journeys end in Lovers meeting,
Every wise mans son doth know.

An. Excellent good, i'faith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love, 'tis not hereafter;
Present mirth, hath present laughter:
What's to come, is still unsure,
In delay there lyes no plenty,
Then come kiss me sweet, and twenty:
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

An. A mellifluous voice, as I am a true Knight.

To. A contagious breath.

An. Very sweet and contagious, i'faith.

To. To hear by the Nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the Welkin dance indeed? shall we rouse the night-Owl in a Catch, that will draw three souls out of one Weaver? Shall we do that?

An. And you love me, let's do't: I am a dog at a Catch.

Clo. Byrlady sir, and some dogs will catch well.

An. Most certain: Let our Catch be, Thou Knave.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knave, knight. I shall be constrain'd in't, to call thee Knave, Knight.

An. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin fool; it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. Shall I never begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good i'faith: Come begin. Catch sing'd

Scene IV.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a catterwalling do you keep here? If my Lady have not call'd up her Steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

To. My Lady's a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-ramsy, and Three merry men be we. Am not I consanguinious? Am not I of her blood? tilly vally. Lady! There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady. (Singing

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

An. Ay he do's well enough if he be dispos'd, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

To. O twelfth day of December. (Singing.)

Mar. For the love o'God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My Masters, are you mad? Or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like Tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an Alehouse of my Ladies house, that ye squeak out your Cosiers Catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

To. We did keep time sir, in our Catches. Sneck up.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bade me tell you, that she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing ally'd to your disorders. If you can separate your self and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house: if not, and it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewel.

To. Farewel dear heart, since I must needs be gone. (Singing)

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do shew his days are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

To. But I will never die. (Singing)

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lye.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

To. Shall I bid him go?

Clo. What and if you do?

To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, you dare not.

To. Out o'tune sir, ye lie: Art any more than a Steward? Dost thou think because thou art vertuous, there shall be no more Cakes and Ale?

Clo. Yes by S. Anne and Ginger shall be hot i'th mouth too.

To. Th'art i'th right. Go sir, rub your chain with crums. A stope of Wine, Maria.

Mal. Mistris Mary, if you priz'd my Ladies favour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand. Exit.

Mar. Go shake your ears.

An. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a mans a hungry, to challenge him the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

To. Do't, knight, I'le write thee a Challenge: or I'le deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to night; Since the youth of the Count's was to day with my Lady, she is much out of quiet. For Mounsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lye straight in my bed: I know I can do it.

To. possess us, possess us, tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry sir, sometimes he is a kind of a Puritan,

An. O, if I thought that, I'de beat him like a dog.

To. What for being a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight.

An. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The Dev'l a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser, an affectioned Ass, that Cons State without book, and utters it by great swarths. The best persuaded of himself: so cram'd (as he thinks) with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him, love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure Epistles of love, wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gate, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my Lady your Neece, on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

To. Excellent, I smell a device.

An. I hav't in my nose too.

To. He shall think by the Letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my Neece, and that she is in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

An. O, 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know my Physick will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the Fool make a third, where he shall find the Letter: observe this construction of it: For this night to bed, and dream on the event. Farewel. Exit.

To. Good night Penthisilea.

An. Before me, she's a good wench.

To. She's a beagle, true bred, and one that adores me; what o'that?

An. I was ador'd once too.

To. Let's to bed knight: Thou hadst need send for more money.

An. If I cannot recover your Neece, I am a foul way out.

To. Send for money knight, if thou hast her not i'th end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

To.

To. Come, come, I'le go burn some Sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: Come, knight, come knight. (Exeunt.

Scena ~~Quarta.~~ V.

The Palace.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Du. Give me some musick; Now good morrow friends;
Now, good Cesario, but that piece of Song,
That old and Antique Song we heard last night;
Me thought it did relieve my passion much,
More then light airs, and recollected terms
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times.
Come, but one verse.

Cu. He is not here, (so please your Lordship) that should sing it.

Du. Who was it?

Cur. Feste the Jester, my Lord, a fool that the Lady Olivia's Father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Du. Seek him out, and play the tune the while. Exit Cur. Musick plays.
Come hither Boy; if ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me;
For such as I am, all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belov'd. How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very eccho to the seat
Where love is thron'd.

Du. Thou dost speak masterly,
My life upon't, young tho thou art, thine eye
Hath staid upon some favour that it loves:
Hath it not, boy?

Vio. A little by your favour.

Du. What kind of woman is't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Du. She is not worth thee then. What years, ifaith?

Vio. About your years, my Lord.

Du. Too old by heaven; Let still the woman take
An elder than her self, so wears she to him;
So sways she level in her husbands heart;
For boy, however we do praise our selves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than womens are.

Vio. I think it well, my Lord.

Du. Then let thy love be younger than thy self,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:
For women are as Roses, whose fair flower
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so;
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Enter Curio, and Clown.

Du. O fellow, come, the song we had last night.
Mark it Cesario, it is old and plain;
The Spinsters and the Knitters in the Sun,
And the free maids that weave their thred with bones,
Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, Sir?

Du. I prythee sing. (Musick.

The Song.

Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away breath,
I am slain by a fair cruel maid. (pare it.
My shrowd of white, stuck all with ~~Yew, O~~ pre-
My part of death no one so true did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet
On my black coffin, let there be strewn:
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corps, where my bones shall be thrown.
A thousand thousand sighs to save, lay me ~~O~~ where ~~Sad~~ true lover never find my grave, to weep there.

Du. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains sir, I take pleasure in singing, sir.

Du. I'le pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leave thee.

Clo. Now the melancholly God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffata, for thy mind is a very Opal! I would have men of such constancy put to Sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where, for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewel. Scene VI. Exit.

Du. Let all the rest give place. once more Cesario,
Get thee to yond same sovereign cruelty:
Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands;
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her I hold as giddily as fortune:
But 'tis that miracle, and Queen of Gems
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.

Vio. But if she cannot love you, sir.

Du. It cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you must.
Say that some Lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; Must she not then be answer'd?

Du. There is no womans sides
Can abide the beating of so strong a passion,
As love doth give my heart: no womans heart
So big, to hold so much; they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be call'd appetite:
No motion of the Liver, but the Palat,
That suffer surfet, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much; make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know.

Du. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men owe;
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My Father had a Daughter lov'd a man,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship.

Du. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my Lord: she never told her love,
But let concealment like a worm i'th bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholly,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more, but indeed
Our shews are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Du. But dy'd thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And ~~all the brothers too,~~ and yet I know not. I am all the Sons
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Du. Ay, that's the Theam.
To her in haste; give her this Jewel: say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay. (Exeunt.

Scena Quinta. VII.

Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'le come; if I loſe a ſcruple of this ſport, let me be boyl'd to death with Melancholly.

To. Would'ſt thou not be glad to have the niggardly Raſcally ſheep-biter, come by ſome notable ſhame?

Fa. I would exult man; you know he brought me out of favour with my Lady, about a Bear-baiting here.

To. To anger him we'll have the Bear again, and we will fool him black and blew, ſhall we not, Sir Andrew?

An. And we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter Maria.

To. Here comes the little villain: how now, my Nettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree; Malvolio's coming down this walk, he ha's been yonder i'th Sun practiſing behaviour to his own ſhadow this half houre; obſerve him, for the love of Mockery; for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Ideot of him. Cloſe in the name of jeſting, lye thou there: for here comes the Trout that muſt be caught with tickling. (Exit.

Scene VIII.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me ſhe did affect me; and I have heard her ſelf come thus near, that ſhould ſhe fancy, it ſhould be one of my complexion. Beſides, ſhe uſes me with a more exalted reſpect, than any one elſe that follows her. What ſhould I think on't?

To. Here's an over-weening rogue.

Fa. Oh peace: Contemplation makes a rare Turkey-Cock of him, how he jets under his advanc'd plumes.

And. 'Slight, I could ſo beat the Rogue.

To. Peace, I ſay.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio.

To. Ah, Rogue.

An. Piſtol him, piſtol him.

To. Peace, peace.

Mal There is example for't: The Lady of the Strachy, married the yeoman of the Wardrobe.

An. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fa. O, peace, now he's deeply in; look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, ſitting in my ſtate——

To. O for a ſtone-bow to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branch'd Velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia ſleeping.

To. Fire and Brimſtone!

Fa. O peace, peace.

Mal. And then to have the humour of ſtate; and after a demure travel of regard; telling them I know my place, as I would they ſhould do theirs——to ask for my kinſman Toby.——

To. Bolts and ſhackles!

Fa. Oh peace, peace, peace, now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people with an obedient ſtart, make out for him: I frown the while, and perchance wind up my watch, or play with ſome rich Jewel. Toby approaches; curtſies there to me.

To. Shall this fellow live?

Fa. Tho our ſilence be drawn from us with eares, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus; quenching my familiar ſmile with an auſtere regard of controul.

To. And does not Toby take you a blow o'the lips then?

Mal. Saying, Coſin Toby, my fortunes having caſt me on your Neece, give me this prerogative of ſpeech——

To. What, what?

Mal. You muſt amend your drunkenneſs.

To. Out, ſcab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the ſinews of our plot?

Mal. Beſides, you waſte the treaſure of your time, with a fooliſh Knight.

And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. One Sir Andrew.

And. I knew 'twas I, for many do call me fool.

Mal. What employment have we here? (Taking up the Letter.

Fa. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

To. Oh, peace, and the ſpirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my Ladies hand: theſe be her very C's, her U's, and her T's, and thus makes ſhe her great P's. It is in contempt of queſtion her hand.

And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's; why that?

Mal. To the unknown belov'd, this, and my good wiſhes: Her very Phraſes: by your leave wax. Soft, and the impreſſure her Lucrece, with which ſhe uſes to ſeal; 'tis my Lady: To whom ſhould this be?

Fab. This wins him, Liver and all.

Mal. Jove knows I love, but who, Lips do not move, no man muſt know. No man muſt know.——What follows? The numbers alter'd: No man muſt know,——

If this ſhould be thee, Malvolio?

To. Marry hang thee, brock!

Mal. I may command where I adore, but ſilence like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodleſs ſtroke my heart doth gore, M. O. A. I. doth ſway my life.

Fa. A Fuſtian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, ſay I.

Mal. M. O. A. I. doth ſway my life.——Nay but firſt let me ſee, let me ſee.——

Fab. What diſh of poiſon has ſhe dreſt him?

To. And with what wing the ſtallion checks at it?

Mal. I may command, where I adore. Why ſhe may command me: I ſerve her, ſhe is my Lady. Why this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obſtruction in this, and the end——what ſhould that Alphabetical poſition portend, if I could make that reſemble ſomething in me? Softly——M. O. A. I.

To. O, ay make up that, he is now at a cold ſent.

Fab Sowter will cry upon't for all this, tho it be as rank as a Fox.

Mal. M——Malvolio, M——Why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I ſay he would work it out, the Cur is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no conſonancy in the ſequel; that ſuffers under probation: A. ſhould follow, but O. does.

Fab And O. ſhall end, I hope.

To. Ay, or I'le cudgel him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then I. comes behind.

Fab. Ay, and you had any eye behind you, you might ſee more detraction at your heels, than Fortunes before you.

Mal. M. O. A. I. This ſimulation is not as the former: and yet to cruſh this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of theſe Letters are in my name. Soft, here follows proſe——If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my Stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatneſs; ſome are become great, ſome atchieve greatneſs, and ſome have greatneſs put upon them. Thy fates open their hands, let thy blood and ſpirit embrace them; and to inure thy ſelf to what thou art like to be, caſt thy humble ſlough, and appear appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of State; put thy self into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee ever cross garter'd: I say remember; go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to be so: If not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortunes fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee, the fortunate unhappy. Daylight and champion discovers not more: This is open. I will be proud, I will read politick Authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point devise, the very man. I do now fool my self, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my Lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-garter'd, and in this she manifests her self to my love, and with a kind of conjunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy: I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings and cross garter'd, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose but know who I am; if thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling, thy smiles become thee well, Therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pray thee. Jove I thank thee; I will smile, I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. Exit.

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this device.

An. So could I too.

To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Scene IX.

Enter Maria.

An. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

To. Wilt thou set thy foot o'my neck?

An. Or o'mine either?

To. shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

An. I'faith, or either?

Tob. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Ma. Nay, but say true, does it work upon him?

To. Like Aqua-vitæ with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my Lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross garter'd, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to melancholy, as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit.

And. I'll make one too. Exeunt.

Finis Actus Secundi.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Olivia's Garden.

Enter Viola, and Clown.

Vio. Save thee Friend, and thy Musick: dost thou live by the Tabor?

Clo. No, sir, I live by the Church.

Vio. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir, I do live by the Church: for, I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the Church.

Vio. So thou mayest say the King lyes by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him: or the Church stands by thy Tabor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You have said, sir: To see this age! A sentence is but a chev'rill glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turn'd outward!

Vio. Nay, that's certain; they that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had no name, Sir.

Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton; But indeed, words are very Rascals, since bonds disgrac'd them.

Vio. Thy reason, man?

Clo. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words, and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I do care for something; but, in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No indeed, sir, the Lady Olivia has no folly, she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands, as Pilchers are to Herrings, the husband's the bigger: I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Duke Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the Orb like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the Fool should be as oft with your Master, as with my Mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, and thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee. (Gives him a piece of mo

Clo. Now Jove in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy Lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troylus.

Vio. I understand you, sir, 'tis well begg'd.

Clo. The matter I hope is not great, sir; begging, but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My Lady is within, sir. I will conster to them whence you come, who you are, and what you would is out of my Welkin, I might say, Element, but the word is over-worn. Exit.

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool,
And to do that well, craves a kind of wit:
He must observe their mood on whom he jests,
The quality of persons, and the time;
And like the Haggard, check at every feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice,
As full of labour as a Wise-mans Art:
For folly, that he wisely shews, is fit;
But wise mens folly fall'n, quite taints their wit.

Scene II.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrew.

To. Save you Gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

And. Dieu vous guard Monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi votre serviteur.

And. I hope, sir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the house, my Neece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece, sir, I mean she is the list of my voyage.

To.

To. Taste your legs, sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

To. I mean to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and ~~Gentlewoman~~ Maria.

Most excellent accomplish'd Lady, the Heavens rain Odours on you!

Sr And. That youth's a rare Courtier, rain Odours, well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, Lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sr And. Odours, pregnant and vouchsafed: I'le get 'em all three ready.

Ol. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing. Give me your hand, sir. Exe. Sr An. & Mar.

Vio. My duty, Madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servants name, fair Princess.

Ol. My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd complement: Y'are servant to the ~~Count~~ Orsino youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: Your servants servant is your servant, Madam.

Olivia. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts, Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts On his behalf.

Ol. O, by your leave, I pray you; I bad you never speak again of him; But would you undertake another suit I had rather hear you to sollicit that, Than Musick from the spheres.

Vio. Dear Lady.

Ol. Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send, After the last enchantment you did hear, A Ring in chase of you. So did I abuse My self, my servant, and I fear me, you; Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you in a shameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours. What might you think? Have you not set mine honour at the stake, And baited it with all th'unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? to ~~one of~~ your receiving Enough is shewn; a Cypress, not a bosom, Hides my poor heart: so let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Ol. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No not a grice: for 'tis a vulgar proof That very oft we pity enemies.

Ol. Why then methinks 'tis time to smile again; O world, how apt the poor are to be proud! If one should be a prey, how much better To fall before the Lion, than the Wolf!

Clock strikes.

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time. Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you; And yet when wit and youth is come to harvest, Your wife is like to reap a proper man: There lies your way, due West.

Vio. Then Westward hoe!

Grace and good disposition attend your ~~Ladiship~~; You'll nothing, Madam, to my Lord, by me?

Ol. Stay; I prithee tell me what thou think'st of me?

Vio. That you do think you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, Madam, than I am? I wish it might, for now I am your fool.

Ol. O what a deal of scorn, looks beautiful In the contempt and anger of his lip! A murderous guilt shews not it self more soon, Than love that would seem hid: Loves night is noon. Cesario, by the Roses of the Spring, By maid-hood, honour, truth, and every thing, I love thee so, that maugre all thy pride, Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide: Do not extort thy reasons from this clause, For that I woo; thou therefore hast no cause: But rather reason thus, with reason fetter; Love sought is good; but given unsought, is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth, I have one heart, one bosome, and one truth, And that no woman has, nor never none Shall mistris be of it, save I alone. And so adieu, good Madam; never more, Will I my Masters tears to you deplore.

Ol. Yet come again; for thou perhaps may'st move That heart, which now abhors to like his love.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda. IV.

Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

Sr And. No, faith, I'le not stay a jot longer.

Sr Tob. Thy reason, dear venome, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sr And. Marry, I saw your Neece do more favours to the ~~Count's~~ Dukes Serving-man, than ever she bestow'd upon me. I saw't i'th Orchard.

Sr To. Did she see thee the while, old boy, tell me that?

Sr An. As plain as I see you now.

Fabi. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sr And. 'Slight! will you make an Ass o' me?

Fabi. I prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment, and reason.

Sr To. And they have been grand-Jury-men, since before Noah was a Sailor.

Fabi. She did shew favour to the youth in your sight, only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liver: you should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have bang'd the youth into dumbness: this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baulkt: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sail'd into the North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an Icicle on a Dutchmans beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

Sr An. And it be any way, it must be with Valour, for Policy I hate: I had as lief be a Brownist, as a Politician.

Sr To. Why then build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the ~~Counts~~ Dukes youth to fight with him, hurt him in eleven places, my Neece shall take note of it, and assure thy self, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in mens commendation with women, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

Sr An. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sr To. Go, write it in a martial hand, be curst and brief: it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention; taunt him with the license of Ink; if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss, and as many Lies, as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink, tho thou write with a Goose-pen, no matter: about it.

And. Where shall I find you?

To. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo: Go. (Exit Sir Andrew.

Scena V.

Fab. This is a dear Manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Tob. I have been dear to him, lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fa. We shall have a rare Letter from him; but you'll not deliver't.

Tob. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think Oxen and wain-ropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd, and you find so much blood in his Liver, as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of th' anatomy.

Fab And his opposite the youth bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Tob. Look where the youngest Wren of mine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh your selves into stitches, follow me; yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a very Renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

Tob. And cross garter'd?

Mar. Most villanously; like a Pedant that keeps a School i'th Church: I have dogg'd him like his murtherer. He does obey every point of the Letter that I dropt, to betray him; He does smile his face into more lines, than is in the new Map, with the augmentation of the Indies; you have not seen such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my Lady will strike him; if she do, he'll smile, and tak't for a great favour.

To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is. (Exeunt omnes.

Scena Tertia. VI.
The Street.

Enter Sebastian, and Anthonio.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.

Anth. I could not stay behind you; my desire
(More sharp than filed steel) did spur me forth,
And not all love to see you (tho so much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage),
But jealousy, what might befal your travel,
Being skilless in these parts; (which to a stranger,
Unguided, and unfriended, often prove
Rough, and unhospitable) My willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Anthonio,
I can no other answer make, but thanks;
But were my worth, as is my conscience firm,
You should find better dealing: what's to do?
Shall we go see the relicks of this Town?

Ant. To morrow, sir, best first go see your Lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night;
I pray you let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That do renown this City.

Ant. Would you'd pardon me:
I do not without danger walk these streets.
Once in a Sea-Fight 'gainst the Count his gallies,
I did some service, of such note indeed,
That were I tane here, it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people.

Ant. Th' offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of time, and quarrel
Might well have given us bloody argument;
It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them, which for Traffick's sake
Most of our City did. Only my self stood out,
For which if I be lapsed in this place
I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.

Ant. It doth not fit me: hold, sir, here's my purse.
In the South Suburbs at the Elephant
Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Town; there shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse?

Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store
I think is not for idle Markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you
For an hour.

Ant. To th' Elephant.

Seb. I do remember. (Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. VII.
Olivia's House.

Enter Olivia, and Maria.

Ol. I have sent after him; he says he'll come:
How shall I feast him? What bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, than beg'd, or borrow'd.
I speak too loud: Where's Malvolio, he is sad, and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes.
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, Madam:
But in very strange manner. He is sure possest, Madam.

Ol. Why, what's the matter, does he rave?

Mar. No, Madam, he does nothing but smile: your Ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.

Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.
How now Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet Lady, ha, ha: (Smiles fantastically.

Ol. Smil'st thou? I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, Lady? I could be sad;
This does make some obstruction in the blood;
This cross gartering, but what of that?
If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true Sonnet is: Please one, and please all.

Ol. Why? How do'st thou man?
What is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs: It did come to his hands, and Commands shall be executed. I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Ol. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? Ay sweet heart; and I'll come to thee.

Ol. God comfort thee! why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal.

And thanks, And ever thanks: & oft good turns
Are shuffled off with such uncurrent pay.

1. The Wren is remarkable for laying many Eggs at a time 9 or 10 & sometimes more as she is the smallest of Birds, the last of 10 large a brood may be supposed to be little

Mal. At your request? Yes, Nightingales answer Daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my Lady?

Mal. Be not afraid of greatness; 'twas well writ.

Ol. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. Some are born great.——

Ol. Ha?

Mal. Some atchieve greatness.——

Ol. What say'st thou?

Mal. And some have Greatness thrust upon them.——

Ol. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow Stockings——

Ol. Thy yellow Stockings?

Mal. wish'd to see thee cross-garter'd.——

Ol Cross-garter'd?

Mal. Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so.

Ol. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me see thee a Servant still.

Ol. Why, this is very Midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young Gentleman of the ~~Count~~ Orsino's is return'd; I could hardly entreat him back; he attends your Ladyships pleasure.

Ol. I'll come to him.

Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd to. Where's my ~~Cousin~~ Toby, let some of my people have a special care of him, I would not have him miscarry for the half of my Dowry. (Exit.

Mal. Oh, ho, do you come near me now? no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me. This concurs directly with the Letter, she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she insites me to that in the Letter. Cast thy humble slough, says she; be opposite with a Kinsman, surly with Servants, let thy Tongue tang with Arguments of State, put thy self into the trick of singularity: and consequently sets down the manner how; as a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow Tongue, in the habit of some Sir of note, and so forth. I have limd her, but it is *Jove*s doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd to: Fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres together, that no dram of a scruple; no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle; no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—What can be said? Nothing that can be, can come between me, and the full prospect of my hopes. Well Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the Devils ~~or~~ in Hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possest him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is; how is't with you sir? How is't, with you, man?

Mal. Go off, I discard you; let me enjoy my privacy: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does she so?

To. Go to, go to; peace, peace; we must deal gently with him; Let ~~me~~ him alone. How do you do, Malvolio? How is't with you? What man, defie the Devil; consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, ~~and~~ you speak ill of the Devil, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th' wise Woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to morrow morning if I live. My Lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now Mistris?

Mar. Oh Lord!——

To. Prithee hold thy peace, that is not the way: Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fa. No ~~way~~ way but gentleness, gently, gently; the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly us'd.

To. Why how now, my ~~havock~~ catzeach? how dost thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir.?

To. Ay, biddy, come with me. What, man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him foul Collier.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, Minx!

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go hang your selves all: you are idle shallow things, I am not of your Element, you shall know more hereafter. (Exit.

To. Is't possible?

Fab. If this were plaid upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an ~~unprofitable~~ improbable fiction.

To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air, and taint.

Fa. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

To. Come, we'll have him in a dark Room and bound. My Neece is already in the belief that he's mad; we may carry it thus for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of Madmen; but see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

And. Here's the Challenge, read it: I warrant there's Vinegar and Pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so sawcy?

And. Ay, is't? I warrant him: do but read.

To. Give me. (Sr Toby reads)

Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fa. Good and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire in thy mind why I do call thee so, for I will shew thee no reason for't. (Law.

Fa. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the Law.

To. Thou com'st to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly; but thou lieſt in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very brief, and ~~to~~ exceeding good sense-less.

To. I will way-lay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me.——

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kill'st me like a rogue and a villain.

Fa. Still you keep o'th windy side of the Law: good.

To. Fare the well, and God have mercy upon one of our Souls. He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better, and so look to thy self. Thy friend as thou uſeſt him, and thy sworn enemy, Andrew Ague-cheek.

~~To.~~ If this Letter move him not, his Legs cannot: I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my Lady, and will by and by depart.

To. Go sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Baily; so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and as thou draw'st, swear horribly: for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible Oath, with a swaggering accent sharp'ly twang'd off, gives manhood more approbation, approbation, than ever proof it ſelf would have earn'd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for ſwearing. (Exit.

To. Now will not I deliver this Letter; for the behaviour of the young Gentleman, gives him out to be of good capacity, and breeding; his imployment between his Lord and my Neece, confirms no leſs. Therefore, this Letter being ſo excellently ignorant, will breed no terrour in the youth; he will find that it comes from a Clodde-pole. But, ſir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; ſet upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour, and drive the Gentleman, (as I know his youth will aptly receive it,) into a moſt hideous opinion of his rage, ſkill, fury, and impetuoſity. This will ſo fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like Cockatrices.

Scene XI.

Enter Olivia, and Viola.

F. Here he comes with your Neece; give them away till he take leave, and preſently after him.

To. I will meditate the while upon ſome horrid meſſage for a Challenge. (Exeunt.

Ol. I have ſaid too much unto a heart of ſtone,
And laid mine honour too unchary out:
There's ſomething in me that reproves my fault;
But ſuch a head-ſtrong potent fault it is,
That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the ſame haviour that your paſſion bears,
Goes on my Maſter's grief.

Ol. Here, wear this Jewel for me, 'tis my picture;
Refuſe it not, it hath no tongue to vex you:
And I beſeech you, come again to morrow.
What ſhall you ask of me that I'll deny,
That (honour ſav'd) may upon asking give?

Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my Maſter.

Ol. How with mine honour may I give him that,
Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to morrow: fare-thee-well.
A Fiend like thee might bear my ſoul to hell. (Exit.

Scene XII.

Enter Toby and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God ſave thee.

Vio. And you, ſir.

To. That defence thou haſt, betake thee to't; of what nature the wrongs are thou haſt done him, I know not; but thy intercepter, full of deſpight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end; diſmount thy Tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy aſſailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You miſtake, ſir, I am ſure, no man hath any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

To. You'll find it otherwiſe, I aſſure you; therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your oppoſite hath in him, what youth, ſtrength, ſkill, and wrath can furniſh a man withall.

Vio. I pray you, ſir, what is he?

To. He is knight dubb'd with unhatch'd Rapier, and on carpet conſideration, but he is a devil in private brawl; ſouls and bodies hath he divorc'd three; and his incenſement at this moment is ſo implacable, that ſatisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and ſepulcher: Hob, nob, is his word; giv't or tak't.

Vio. I will return again into the houſe, and deſire ſome conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I have heard of ſome kind of men, that put quarrels purpoſely on others to taſte their valour; belike this is a man of that quirk.

To. Sir, no: his indignation drives it ſelf out of a very competent injury, therefore get you on, and give him deſire. Back you ſhall not to the houſe, unleſs you undertake that with me, which with as much ſafety you might anſwer him; therefore on, or ſtrip your ſword ſtark naked: for meddle you muſt, that's certain, or forſwear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil as ſtrange. I beſeech you do me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: it is ſomething of my negligence, nothing of my purpoſe.

To. I will do ſo. Signior Fabian, ſtay you by this Gentleman till my return. (Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you, ſir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the Knight is incenſ'd againſt you, even to a mortal arbitrement, but nothing of the circumſtance more.

Vio. I beſeech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promiſe to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is indeed, ſir, the moſt ſkilful, bloody, and fatal oppoſite that you could poſſibly have found in any part of Illirya: will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I ſhall be much bound to you for't: I am one that had rather go with ſir Prieſt, than ſir Knight: I care not who knows ſo much of my mettle. (Exeunt.

Scene XIII.

Enter Toby and Andrew.

Tob. Why man, he's a very devil; I have not ſeen ſuch a Virago: I had a paſs with him, rapier, ſcabbard, and all; and he gives me the ſtuck in with ſuch a mortal motion, that it is inevitable: and on the anſwer, he pays you as ſurely, as your feet hits the ground they ſtep on. They ſay, he has been Fencer to the Sophy.

And. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can ſcarce hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, and I thought he had been valiant, and ſo cunning in Fence, I'd have ſeen him damn'd ere I'd have challeng'd him. Let him let the matter ſlip, and I'll give him my horſe, grey Capiler.

Tob. I'll make the motion; ſtand here, make a Good ſhew on't; this ſhall end without the perdition of ſouls; marry, I'll ride your horſe, as well as I ride you. (Aside)

Enter Fabian, and Viola.

I have his horſe to take up the quarrel, I have perſwaded him the youth's a devil. (To Fabian)

Fab. He is horribly conceited of him; and pants, and looks pale, as if a Bear were at his heels.

To. There's no remedy, ſir, he will fight with you for's oath ſake: marry he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now ſcarce to be worth talking of; therefore draw for the ſupportance of his vow, he proteſts he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me; a little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground if you ſee him furious.

To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the Gentleman will for his honours ſake have one bout with you; he cannot by the Duello avoid it; but he has promiſed me, as he is a Gentleman and a Souldier, he will not hurt you. Come on, to't.

And. Pray God he keep his oath! (They draw)

Scene XIV.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I do aſſure you 'tis againſt my will.

Ant. Put up your ſword; if this young Gentleman
Have done offence, I take the fault on me;
If you offend him, I for him defie you. (Drawing)

Tob. You ſir? Why, what are you?

Ant. One ſir, that for his love dares yet do more
Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Tob. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. (Draws)

Enter

Enter Officers.

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold: here come the Officers.
Tob. I'll be with you anon.
Vio. Pray, sir, put your sword up if you please.
And. Marry will I, sir; and for that I promis'd you I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and runs well.
1. Off. This is the man, do thy Office.
2. Off. Anthonio, I arrest thee at the suit of ~~Count~~ Orsino.
Ant. You do mistake me, sir.
1. Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well;
Tho now you have no sea-cap on your head.
Take him away, he knows I know him well.
Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you;
But there's no remedy, I shall answer it.
What will you do? now my necessity
Makes me to ask you for my purse. It grieves me
Much more, for what I cannot do for you,
Than what befals my self: you stand amaz'd,
Be of comfort.
2. Off. Come, sir, away.
Ant. I must intreat of you some of that money.
Vio. What money, sir?
For the fair kindness you have shew'd me here,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lean and low ability
I'll lend you something; my having is not much,
I'll make division of my present with you:
Hold, there's half my Coffer.
Ant. Will you deny me now?
Is't possible, that my deserts to you
Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,
Lest that it make me so unsound a man,
As to upbraid you with those kindnesses
That I have done for you.
Vio. I know of none,
Nor know I you by voice, or any feature.
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying, vainness, babling drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.
Ant. Oh heavens themselves!
2. Off. Come, sir, I pray you go.
Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here,
I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death,
Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love;
And to his image, which me thought did promise
Most venerable worth, did I devotion.
1. Off. What's that to us, the time goes by; away.
Ant. But oh, how vile an idol proves this God!
Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame,
In nature there's no blemish but the mind:
None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind.
Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks, o'te-flourish'd by the Devil.
1. Off. The man grows mad, away with him:
Come, come, sir,
Ant. Lead me on. Exit.
Vio. Methinks his words do from such passion fly,
That he believes himself; so do not I:
Prove true imagination, oh prove true,
That I dear brother, be now tane for you.
To. Come hither, Knight, come hither, Fabian; Well whisper o're a couplet or two of most sage saws.
Vio. He nam'd Sebastian; I my brother know
Yet living in my glass; even such, and so
In favour was my Brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament;
For him I imitate: Oh if it prove,
Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love. Exit.
Tob. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a Hare; his dishonesty appears, in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship ask Fabian.
Fab. A Coward, a most devout Coward, religious in it.
And. Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.
To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.
And. And I do not.
Fab. Come let's see the event.
To. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.
The Street.

Enter Sebastian, and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?
Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow,
Let me be clear of thee.
Clo. Well held out, i'faith: No, I do not know you, nor I am not sent to you by my Lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario, nor this is not my nose neither; nothing that is so, is so.
Seb. I prythee vent thy folly somewhere else, thou know'st not me.
Clow. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber the world will prove a Cockney: I prythee now ungird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my Lady; shall I vent to her that thou art coming?
Seb. I prythee foolish Greek, depart from me, there's money for thee. If you tarry longer, I shall give worse payment.
Clo. By my troth thou hast an open hand; these Wisemen that give fools mony, get themselves a good report, after fourteen years purchase.

Enter Andrew, Toby, and Fabian.

And. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you. (Strikes Seb.)
Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there: Are all the people mad? (Beating Sr Andrew)
To. Hold sir, or I'll throw your dagger o're the house.
Clo. This will I tell my Lady straight: I would not be in some of your coats for two-pence. (Exit Clow.)
To. Come on sir, hold. (Holding Seb.)
And. Nay, let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of Battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria; tho I struck him first, Yet it's no matter for that.
Seb. Let go thy hand.
Tob. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come my young souldier, put up your iron; you are well flesh'd: Come on.
Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'st thou now? If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.
To. What, what? Nay then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. (They fight)

Scene II.

Enter Olivia.

Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.
To. Madam.
Ol. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the Mountains, and the barbarous Caves,
Where manners ne're were preach'd: out of my sight!
Be not offended, dear Cesario.
Rudesby be gone. I prythee gentle friend,

Let

Let thy fair wiſdome, not thy paſſion ſway
In this uncivil, and unjuſt extent
Againſt thy peace. Go with me to my houſe,
And hear thou there, how many fruitleſs pranks
This Ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby
Maiſt ſmile at this: Thou ſhalt not chuſe but go:
Do not deny; beſhrew his ſoul for me!
He ſtarted one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What reliſh is in this? How runs the ſtream?
Or I am mad, or elſe this is a dreame:
Let fancy ſtill my ſenſe in Lethe ſteep,
If it be thus to dream, ſtill let me ſleep.

Ol. Nay, come I prethee, would thoud'ſt be rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Ol. O, ſay ſo, and ſo be! (Exeunt.

Scena ~~Secunda~~. III.
Olivia's House.

Enter Maria, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this Gown, and this beard; make him believe thou art Sir Topas the Curate; do it quickly. I'l call Sir Toby the whil'ſt. (Exit Mar.

Clo. Well, I'l put it on, and I will deſſemble my ſelf in't; and I would I were the firſt that ever diſſembled in ſuch a Gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor leane enough to be thought a good Student; but to be ſaid an honeſt man, and a good Houſekeeper goes as fairely, as to ſay, a carefull man, and a great Scholler. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Jove bleſs thee, M^r. Parſon.

Clo. Bonos dies Sir Toby; for as the old Hermit of Prague, that never ſaw Pen and Ink, very wittily ſaid to a Neece of King Gorboduck, that is, is: ſo I being M^r. Parſon, am M^r. Parſon; for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

To. To him, ſir Topas.

Clo. What hoa, I ſay, Peace in this priſon! (In a counterfeit voice

To. The Knave counterfeits well; a good Knave.

Malvolio within.

Mal. Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas the Curat, who comes to viſite Malvolio the Lunatick.

Mal. Sir Topas, ſir Topas, good ſir Topas, go to my Lady.

Clo. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexeſt thou this man? Talkeſt thou nothing but of Ladies?

Tob. Well ſaid, M^r. Parſon.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged; good ſir Topas, do not think I am mad; they have laid me here in hideous darkneſs.

Clo. Fye, thou diſhoneſt Sathan; I call thee by the moſt modeſt termes, for I am one of thoſe gentle ones, that will uſe the Devil himſelf with courteſie: ſayſt thou that houſe is darke?

Mal. As hell, ſir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath bay Windows tranſparant as Baricadoes, and the clear ſtones toward the South North, are as luſtrous as Ebony; and yet complaineſt thou of obſtruction?

Mal. I am not mad, ſir Topas, I ſay to you this houſe is darke.

Clo. Mad man, thou erreſt; I ſay there is no darkneſs but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I ſay this houſe is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I ſay there was never man thus abus'd; I am no more mad than you are, make the trial of it in any conſtant queſtion.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras, concerning Wilde-foule?

Mal. That the ſoul of our Grandam, might happily inhabit a Bird.

Clo. What think'ſt thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think nobly of the ſoul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remain thou ſtill in darkneſs; thou ſhalt hold th' opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and feare to kill a Woodcock, leſt thou diſpoſſeſs the houſe of thy Grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, ſir Topas!

To. My moſt exquiſite ſir Topas.

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters. (In his own voice

Mar. Thou mightſt have done this without thy beard and gown; he ſees thee not.

Tob. To him in thine own voyce, and bring me word, how thou findſt him: I would we were all rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were, for I am now ſo far in offence with my Neece, that I cannot purſue with any ſafety this ſport, the upſhot. Come by and by to my Chamber. (Exit. Scene IV. with Ma

Clo. Hey Robin, jolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does. (Singing

Mal. Fool.

Clo. My Lady is unkind, perdie.

Mal. Fool!

Clo. Alaſs why is ſhe ſo?

Mal. Fool, I ſay.

Clo. She loves another. Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good Fool, as ever thou wilt deſerve well at my hand, help me to a Candle and Pen, Ink, and Paper; as I am a Gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clo. M. Malvolio!

Mal. Ay good Fool.

Clo. Alaſs, ſir, how fell you beſides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man ſo notoriouſly abus'd; I am as well in my wits (fool) as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here propertied me; keep me in darkneſs, ſend Miniſters to me, Aſſes, and do all they can to face me out of my wits. (Hey

Clo. Adviſe you what you ſay; the Miniſter is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens reſtore! endeavour thy ſelf to ſleep, and leave thy vaine bibble babble. (As the Parſon

Mal. Sir Topas!

Clo. Maintain no words with him good fellow. (In his own voice
Who I ſir, not I ſir. God buy you good ſir Topas: Marry Amen. I will ſir, I will ſir.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool I ſay.

Clo. Alas, ſir be patient. What ſay you ſir, I am ſhent for ſpeaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to ſome light, and ſome Paper; I tell thee I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day that you were, ſir.

Mal. By this hand I am: good fool, ſome Ink, Paper, and Light; and convey what I will ſet down to my Lady: it ſhall advantage thee more, than ever the bearing of Letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'l ne're believe a madman till I ſee his brains, I will fetch you light, and paper, and Ink.

Mal. Fool, I'l requite it in the higheſt degree; I prethee be gone.

Clo. I am gone ſir, and anon ſir, (Singing
I'l be with you again

In a trice, like to the old vice,
your need to sustain-
Who with Dagger of lath, in his rage, and his wrath,
cries ah ah, to the Devil:
Like a mad Lad, pair thy nailes, Dad, adieu good man Devil. rivel (Exit.

Scena Tertia. V.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This the aire, that is the glorious Sun,
This Pearl she gave me, I do feel't, and see't.
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Anthonio then?
I could not find him at the Elephant,
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit, current,
That he did range the Town to seek me out,
His counsell now might do me golden service;
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of Fortune,
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason that perswades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad,
Or else the Lady's mad; yet if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take, and give back affairs, and their dispatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable-bearing
As I perceive she do's: there's something in't
That is deceivable. But here the Lady comes.

Enter Olivia, and Priest.

Ol. Blame not this haste of mine: if you mean well,
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by; there before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most jealous, and too doubtful soul
May live at Peace. He shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth, what do you say?
Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you,
And having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Ol. Then lead the way, good father, & heaven so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine. (Exeunt.

Finis Actus Quarti.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.
The Street.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fab. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see this Letter.
Clo. Good M. Fabian, grant me another request.
Fab. Any thing.
Clo. Do not desire to see this Letter.
Fab. This is to give a Dog, and in recompence desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Du. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?
Clo. Ay sir, we are some of her trappings.
Duke. I know thee well; how do'st thou my good Fellow?
Clo. Truly sir, the bettee for my foes, and the worse for my friends.
Du. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.
Clow. No, sir, the worse.
Du. How can that be?
Clo. Mary, sir, they praise me, and make an Ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of my self, and by my friends I am abused: so that conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.
Du. Why, this is excellent.
Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.
Du. Thou shalt not be the worse for me, there's gold.
Clo. But that it would be double dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.
Du. O, you give me ill counsel.
Clo. Put your Grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.
Du. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer: there's another.
Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play, and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex sir, is a good tripping measure, or the bells of S. Bennet sir, may put you in mind, one, two, three.
Du. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw; if you will let your Lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.
Clo. Marry sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. (Exit.

Scene II.
Enter Anthonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.
Du. That face of his I do remember well;
Yet when I saw it last, it was besmear'd
As black as Vulcan, in the smoak of War:
A bawbling Vessel was he Captain of,
For shallow draught and Bulk unprizable,
With which such scathful grapple did he make,
With the most noble bottom of our Fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss
Cried fame and honour on him. What's the matter?
1. Offi. Orsino, this is that Anthonio
That took the Phenix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger board,
When your young Nephew Titus lost his leg:
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.
Vio. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side,
But in conclusion put strange speech upon me,
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.
Du. Notable Pyrate, thou salt-water Thief,
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in terms so bloody, and so dear
Hast made thine enemies?
Ant. Orsino: Noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake of these names you give me:
Anthonio never yet was Thief, or Pyrate,
Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ungrateful Boy there by your side,
From the rude seas enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wrack past hope he was:
His Life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love without retention, or restraint,

All

his dedication. For his sake,
Did I expose my self (pure for his love)
Into the danger of this adverse Town,
Drew to defend him, when he was beset;
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty years removed thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use,
Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

Du. When came he to this Town?

Ant. To day, my Lord: and for three months before,
No interim, not a minutes vacancy,
Both day and night did we keep company.

Scene III.

Enter Olivia, and Attendants.

Du. Here comes the Countess; now heaven walks on earth:
But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness,
Three months this Youth hath tended upon me;
But more of that anon. Take him aside.

Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam!

Du. Gracious Olivia!

Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.—

Vio. My Lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Ol. If it be ought to the old tune, my Lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear,
As howling after Musick.

Du. Still so cruel?

Ol. Still so constant my Lord.

Du. What to perverseness? you uncivil Lady,
To whose ingrate, and unauspicious Altars
My Soul the faithfull'st Offerings have breath'd out
That ere Devotion tender'd. What shall I do?

Ol. Even what it please my Lord, that shall become him.

Du. Why should I not, (had I the heart to do it),
Like to the Egyptian Thief, at point of Death
Kill what I love? (a savage jealousie),
That sometime savours nobly; but hear me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour;
Live you the Marble-breasted Tyrant still.
But this your Minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by Heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel Eye,
Where he sits crowned in his Masters spight.
Come Boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the Lamb that I do love,
To spight a Ravens heart within a Dove.

Vio. And I most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

Ol. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love,
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More by all mores, than ere I shall love wife.
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life, for tainting of my Love!

Ol. Ay me detested, how am I beguil'd?

Vio. Who do's beguile you? who do's do you wrong?

Ol. Hast thou forgot thy self? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy Father.

Du. Come, away. (To Viola

Ol. Whither my Lord? Cesario, Husband, stay.

Du. Husband?

Ol. Ay, Husband. Can he that deny?

Du. Her husband, sirrah?

Vio. No, my Lord, not I.

Ol. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up,
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as thou fear'st.

Enter Priest.

O welcome, Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Here to unfold, (tho lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe) what thou do'st know
Hath newly past between this Youth, and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of Love,
Confirm'd by mutual joynder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strengthned by enterchangement of your Rings,
And all the Ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my Function, by my Testimony:
Since when, my Watch hath told me, toward my Grave
I have travell'd but two hours.

Du. O thou dissembling Cub! what wilt thou be
When time hath sow'd a grizzel on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewel, and take her, but direct thy feet,
Where thou, and (I henceforth) may never meet.

Vio. My Lord, I do protest.—

Ol. O, do not swear,
How little Faith, tho thou hast too much fear.

Scene IV

Enter Sir Andrew. with his head broke

And. For the Love of God a Surgeon, and one presently to Sir Toby:

Ol. What's the matter?

And. H'as broke my head a-cross, and given Sir Toby a bloody Coxcomb too: for the love of God your help, I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Ol. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

And. The Count's Gentleman, one Cesario; we took him for a Coward, but he's the very Devil incardinate.

Du. My Gentleman, Cesario?

And. Odd's lifelings, here he is: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to do't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me, I never hurt you:
You drew your Sword upon me without cause,
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Clown.

And. If a bloody Coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody Coxcomb. Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more; but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickl'd you other gates than he did.

Du. How now, Gentleman? how is't with you?

To. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's an end on't; Sot, did'st thou see Dick Surgeon, sot?

Clo. O he's drunk, sir, above an hour agone; his eyes were set at eight i'th morning.

To. Then he's a Rogue after a passy measures Pavin: I hate a drunken Rogue.

Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this havock with them?

And. I'll help you Sir Toby, because we'll be dreft together.

To. Will you help an Ass-head, and a Coxcomb, and a Knave, a thin-fac'd Knave, a Gull? Exeunt

Ol. Get him to Bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

A. Alluding to a Story in the Romance of Theagenes & Chariclea written by Heliodorus.

Scene V.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, Madam, I have hurt your ~~kinsman~~ uncle:
But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, ~~and~~ by ~~that~~
I do perceive it hath offended you;
Pardon me, (sweet one,) even for the vows
We made each other, but so late ago.
Du. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,
A natural Perspective, that is, and is not.
Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio!
How have the hours rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee?
Ant. Sebastian are you?
Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?
Ant. How have you made division of your self,
An ample cleft in two, is not more twin
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?
Ol. Most wonderful.
Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be a Deity in my nature
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd:
Of charity, what kin are you to me? To Viola
What Country-man? what name? what Parentage?
Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too:
So went he suited to his watery tomb:
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.
Seb. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest go even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.
Vio. My Father had a Mole upon his brow.
Seb. And so had mine.
Vio. And died that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteen years.
Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul;
He finished indeed his mortal act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.
Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both,
But this my masculine usurp'd attire;
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump
That I am Viola; which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a Captain in this Town,
Where lye my Maiden weeds: by whose gentle help,
I was preserv'd to serve this noble ~~Count~~ Duke:
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this Lady, and his Lord.
Seb. So comes it, Lady, you have been mistook (To Olio)
But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein, (by my life,) deceiv'd,
You are betroth'd both to a Maid and man.
Du. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood:
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wrack.
Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times, (To Viola.
Thou never should'st love woman like to me:
Vio. And all those sayings, will I over-swear
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth that orbed continent, the fire,
That severs day from night.
Du. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weeds.
Vio. The Captain that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my Maids garments: he upon some Action
s now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,
A Gentleman and follower of my Lady's.
Ol. He shall enlarge him: fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor Gentleman, he's much distract.

Scene VI.

Enter the Clown with a Letter, and Fabian.

A most ~~exacting~~ frenzy of mine own,
From my remembrance, clearly banish'd his.
How does he sirrah?
Clo. Truly, Madam, he holds Belzebub at the staves end as well as a man in his case may do: has here writ a letter to you, I should have given't you to day morning. But as a mad mans Epistles are no Gospels, so it skills not much when they are deliver'd.
Ol. Open't and read it.
Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the Madam. By the Lord Madam.— Reads
Ol. How now, art ~~thou~~ mad?
Clo. No, Madam, I do but read madness: and your Ladiship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow Vox.
Ol. Prethee read it i'thy right wits.
Clo. So I do Madona; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore, perpend my Princess, and give ear.
Ol. Read it you, sirrah. To Fabian
Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken Cozen uncle rule over me, yet have I benefit of my senses as well as your Ladiship. I have your own Letter; that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my self much right, or you much shame: Think of me as you please; I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury. The madly us'd Malvolio.
Ol. Did he write this?
Clo. Ay, Madam.
Du. This savours not much of distraction.
Ol. See him deliver'd, Fabian, bring him hither:
My Lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister, as a wife,
One day shall crown th'alliance on't, so please you;
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.
Du. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer:
Your Master quits you; and for your service done him,
So much against the metal of your sex, (To Viola
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master, for so long;
Here is my hand, you shall from this time be
Your Masters, Mistress. & his Sister She.
~~Ol. A sister, you are she.~~

Scene VII.

Enter Malvolio.

Du. Is this the mad man?
Ol. Ay my Lord this same: how now, Malvolio?
Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.
Ol. Have I, Malvolio? No.
Mal. Lady you have, pray you peruse that letter.
You must not now deny it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand or phrase,
Or say 'tis not your seal, nor your invention;
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour,
Bad me come smiling, and cross garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people?
And acting this in an obedient hope?
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the Priest,
And made the most notorious geck or gull

That

That ere invention plaid on? Tell me why?
Ol. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Tho, I confeſs, much like the Character:
But out of queſtion, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was ſhe
Firſt told me thou waſt mad; then cam'ſt in ſmiling,
And in ſuch forms, which here were preſuppos'd
Upon thee in the Letter: prythee be content,
This practiſe hath moſt ſhrewdly paſt upon thee;
But when we know the Grounds and Authors of it,
Thou ſhalt be both the Plaintiff and the Judge
Of thine own cauſe.
Fab. Good Madam, hear me ſpeak,
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this preſent hour,
Which I have wondred at. In hope it ſhall not,
Moſt freely I confeſs my ſelf, and Toby
Set this device againſt Malvolio here,
Upon ſome ſtubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd againſt him. Maria writ
The Letter, at Sir Toby's great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her:
How with a ſportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on Laughter than Revenge,
If that the injuries be juſtly weigh'd,
That have on both ſides paſt.
Ol. Alas, poor Fool, how have they baffl'd thee?
Clo. Why ſome are born great, ſome atchieve greatneſs, and ſome have greatneſs thrown upon them. I was one, ſir, in this Interlude, one Sir Topas ſir; but that's all one: By the Lord, Fool, I am not mad; but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at ſuch a barren raſcal? and you ſmile not he's gag'd; and thus the whirl-gigg of time, brings in his revenges.
Mal. I'le be reveng'd on the whole pack of you. (Exit
Ol. He hath been moſt notoriouſly abus'd.
Du. Purſue him, and entreat him to a peace:
He hath not told us of the Captain yet;
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A ſolemn Combination ſhall be made
Of our dear Souls. Mean time ſweet Siſter,
We will not part from hence. Ceſario come,
(For ſo you ſhall be, while you are a man:)
But when in other habits you are ſeen.
Orſino's Miſtreſs, and his fancies Queen.

Exeunt.

Clown ſings.

When that I was and a little tine Boy,
with hey, ho, the Wind and the Rain:
A fooliſh thing was but a toy,
for the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to mans eſtate
with hey, ho, &c.
'Gainſt Knaves and Thieves men ſhut their gate,
for the Rain, &c.
alas!
But when I came, at laſt to Wive,
with hey, ho, &c.
By ſwaggering could I never thrive,
for the Rain, &c.
But when I came unto my Beds,
with hey, ho, &c.
With Toſpots ſtill had drunken heads,
for the Rain, &c.
A great while a go the World be gone,
with hey, ho, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
and we'll ſtrive to pleaſe you every day. Exit

THE

WINTER'S TALE.

Scene partly in Sicilia, & partly in Bithynia.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima. A Palace.

Enter Camillo, and Archidamus.

Arch. IF you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia on the like occasion, whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see (as I have said) great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this comming Summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation, which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us; we will be justified in our Loves; for indeed——

Cam. 'Beseech you——

Arch. Verily I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence——in so rare——I know not what to say——We will give you sleepy Drinks, that your senses (un-intelligent of our insufficience) may, tho they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear, for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were train'd together in their Child hoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royal Necessities, made separation of their Society, their encounters (tho not personal) have been royally attornied with enterchange of gifts, Letters, loving Embassies, that they have seem'd to be together, tho absent; shook hands, as over a Vast Sea, and embrac'd as it were from the ends of opposed Winds. The Heavens continue their Loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world, either Malice or Matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius; it is a Gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child, one that (indeed) Physicks the Subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes, if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the King had no Son, they would desire to live on Crutches, till he had one.

(Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo, & Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the watry Star hath been
The Shepherds Note, since we have left our Throne
Without a Burthen; Time as long again
Would be fill'd up (my Brother), with our Thanks,
And yet we should, for perpetuity,
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a Cipher,
(Yet standing in rich place) I multiply
With one we thank you, many thousands moe
That go before it.

Leo. Stay your thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow:
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance,
Or breed upon our absence; that may blow
No sneaping Winds at home, to make us say,
This is put forth too truly: besides, I have stay'd
To tire your Royalty.

Leo. We are tougher (Brother),
Than you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leo. One sev'night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to morrow.

Leo. We'll part the time between's then: and in that I'll no gain-saying.

Pol. Press me not, ('beseech you) so;
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i'th' world
So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, altho'
'Twere needful I deny'd it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder,
Were (in your Love) a whip to me; my stay,
To you a charge, and trouble: to save both,
Farewel, (our brother)!

Leo. Tongue-tied our Queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, (Sir), to have held my peace, until
You had drawn Oaths from him, not to stay: you, (Sir),
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction,
The by-gone-day proclaim'd: say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leo. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his Son, were strong;
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'l thwack him hence whith Distaffs.

Yet

The Country here called Bithynia hath in all former Editions been put into Bohemia an inland kingdom situated nearly in the Center of Europe, whereas many of the great incidents of y^e Play turn upon its being a maritime country of which Polixenes was y^e King. This is a blunder and an Absurdity which shakespear in justice ought not to be thought capable: & as he hath turnd quite anew the Story found in the old paulted Book of Dorastus & Fawnia, changing most of the main circumstances & all the

Yet of your Royal presence, I'le adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my Lord, I'le give him my Commission,
To let him there a Month, behind the Gueste
Prefix'd for's parting: yet (good heed) Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o'th Clock, behind
What Lady she her Lord. You'l stay?
Pol. No, Madam.
Her. Nay, but you will?
Pol. I may not verily.
Her. Verily?
You put me off with limber vows; but I,
Tho you would seek t'unsphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet say, Sir, no going: verily
You shall not go; a Ladies verily is
As potent as a Lords. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a Guest? so you shall pay your Fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner? or my Guest? by your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your Guest then, Madam:
To be your Prisoner, should import offending;
Which is for me less easie to commit,
Than you to punish.
Her. Not your Goaler then,
But your kind hostess; come, I'le question you
Of my Lords tricks and yours, when you were boys:
You were pretty Lordings then?
Pol. We were (fair Queen),
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be boy eternal.
Her. Was not my Lord
The verier wag o'th' two?
Pol. We were as twin'd Lambs, that did frisk i'th'Sun,
And bleat the one at th' other: what we chang'd,
Was innocence, for innocence; we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, no nor dream'd
That any did: had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne're been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd Heaven
Boldly, not guilty; the imposition clear'd,
Hereditary ours.
Her. By this we gather
You have tript since.
Pol. O my most sacred Lady,
Temptations have since then been born to's; for
In those unfledg'd dayes, was my wife a Girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young Play-fellow.
Her. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your Queen and I are Devils: yet go on,
Th' offences we have made you do, we'l answer,
If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault; and that you slipt not
With any, but with us.
Leo. Is he won yet?
Her. He'll stay, (my Lord).
Leo. At my request, he would not:
Hermione (my dearest), thou never spok'st
To better purpose.
Her. Never?
Leo. Never, but once.
Her. What? have I twice said well? when was't before?
I prithee tell me; cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueless,
Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages. You may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand Furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an Acre. But to th' Goal:
My last good deed was to intreat his stay;
What was my first? it has an elder Sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spake to th'purpose? when?
Nay, let me have't; I long.
Leo. Why, that was when
Three crabbed Months had sowr'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand;
And clap thy self, my Love; then didst thou utter,
I am yours for ever.
Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.
Why, lo-you now; I have spoke to th'purpose twice;
The one for ever earn'd a Royal Husband;
Th' other, for some while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot: (Aside
To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.
I have Tremor Cordis on me: my heart dances,
But not for joy; not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on; derives a Liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom;
And well become the Agent; 't may, I grant;
But to be padling palms, and pinching fingers,
As now they are, and making practis'd smiles
As in a Looking-Glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The Mort o'th' Deer; oh, that is entertainment
My bosome likes not, nor my Brows. Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?
Mam. Ay, my good Lord.
Leo. I fecks!
Why that's my Bawcock; what? has't smutch'd thy nose?
They say it is a Copy out of mine. Come Captain,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly Captain; (Wipes his
And yet the Steer, the Heifer, and the Calf,
Are all call'd Neat. Still Virgin'alling (Observing Polix
Upon his palm? How now, (you wanton Calf)?
Art thou my Calf)?
Mam. Yes, if you will, (my Lord).
Leo. Thou want'st a rough pash, & the shoots that I have,
To be full, like me; yet they say we are Almost as like as Eggs; Women say so,
(That will say any thing); but were they false
As o're di'd Blacks, as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourne 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To say this boy were like me. Come, (sir Page),
Look on me with your welkin eye; sweet villain,
Most dear'st, my collop! Can thy dam, may't be?
Affection! thy intention stabs the Center.
Thou do'st make possible, things not be so held,
Communicat'st with dreams; (how can this be?)
With what's unreal, thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothings. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou may'st co-join with something, and thou dost,
(And that beyond commission), and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Brains,
And hardning of my Brows.)
Pal. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something seems unsetled.
Pol. How? my Lord?
Leo. What cheer? how is't with you, best Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a brow of much distraction,
Are you mov'd, (my Lord)?
Leo. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes Nature will betray its folly!
Its tenderness? and make it self a pastime
To harder bosoms? Looking on the Lines
Of my Boys face, methoughts I did recoil
Twenty three years, and saw my self unbreech'd,
In my green Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite it's Master, and so prove
(As Ornaments oft does) too dangerous;
How like, (me thought) I then was to this Kernel,
This Squash, this Gentleman! Mine honest friend,
Will you take Eggs for Money?
Mam. No (my Lord) I'le fight.
Leo. You will? why happy man be's dole! My Brother,

Are

Are you ſo fond of your young Prince, as we
Do ſeem to be of ours?
Pol. If at home, (Sir),
He's all my Exerciſe, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my ſworn Friend, and then mine Enemy;
My Paraſite, my Soldier, States-man; all;
He makes a July's day, ſhort as December,
And with his varying Childneſs, cures in me
Thoughts, that ſhould think my Blood.
Leo. So ſtands this Squire
Offic'd with me: We two will walk, (my Lord),
And leave you to your graver ſteps. Hermione,
How thou lov'ſt us, ſhew in our Brothers welcome,
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:
Next to thy ſelf, and my young Rover, he's Apparent to my heart.
Her. If you would ſeek us,
We are yours i'th' Garden: ſhall's attend you there?
Leo. To your own bents diſpoſe you; you'll be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am angling now,
(Tho you perceive me not how I give Line);
Go to, go to. — (Aside Obſerving Herm.
How ſhe holds up the Neb? the Bill to him?
And arms her with the boldneſs of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Inch thick, Knee deep; ore head and ears a fork'd one.
Go play, (Boy), play — thy Mother plays, and I
Play too; but ſo diſgrac'd a part, whoſe iſſue
Will hiſs me to my Grave: Contempt and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Go play, (Boy), play, there have been,
(Or I am much deceiv'd), Cuckolds ere now;
And many a man there is, (even at this preſent,
Now, while I ſpeak this), holds his Wife by th' Arm.
That little thinks ſhe has been ſluic'd in's abſence,
And his Pond fiſh'd by his next Neighbour, (by Sir Smile his Neighbour:) nay, there's comfort in't,
Whiles other men have Gates, and thoſe Gates open'd,
(As mine), againſt their will. Should all deſpair
That have revolted Wives, the tenth of Mankind
Would hang themſelves. Phyſick for't, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet, that will ſtrike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful: think it:
From Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, be it concluded,
No Barricado for a Belly. Know't, omitted
It will let in and out the Enemy,
With bag and baggage: many a thouſand ~~one's~~ of's
Have the diſeaſe, and feel't not. How now Boy?
Mam. I am like you, they ſay.
Leo. Why, that's ſome comfort.
What? Camillo there?
Cam. Ay, my good Lord.
Leo. Go play (Mamillius) thou'rt an honeſt man;
Camillo; this great Sir will yet ſtay longer. Exit Mla
Cam. You had much ado to make his Anchor hold;
When you caſt out, it ſtill came home.
Leo. Didſt note it?
Cam. He would not ſtay at your petitions, made;
His buſineſs more material.
Leo. Didſt perceive it?
They're here with me already; whiſp'ring, rounding
Sicilia is a-ſo-forth: 'tis far gone, Aside
When I ſhall guſt it laſt. How cam'ſt, (Camillo)
That he did ſtay?
Cam. At the good Queens entreaty.
Leo. At the Queens be't; Good ſhould be pertinent;
But ſo it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any underſtanding pate but thine?
For the conceit is ſoaking, will draw in
More than the common Blocks; not noted, is't,
But of the finer Natures? by ſome Severals
Of head-piece extraordinary? Lower Meſſes
Perchance are to this buſineſs purblind? Say.
Cam. Buſineſs, my Lord? I think moſt underſtand
Bohemia ſtays here longer. Bithynia

Leo. Ha?
Cam. Stays here longer.
Leo. Ay but why?
Cam. To ſatisfie your Highneſs, and the Entreaties
Of our moſt gracious Miſtreſs.
Leo. Satisfie?
Th'entreaties of your Miſtreſs? Satisfie? ——
Let that ſuffice. I have truſted thee (Camillo),
With all the nearſt things to my heart, as well with all
My Chamber-Councels, wherein, (Prieſt-like), thou
Haſt cleans'd my Boſom; I, from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been
Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which ſeems ſo.
Cam. Be it forbid, (my Lord).
Leo. To bide upon't — thou art not honeſt; or
If thou inclin'ſt that way, thou art a Coward,
Which hoxes honeſty behind, reſtraining
From courſe requir'd; or elſe thou muſt be counted
A Servant, grafted in my ſerious Truſt,
And therein negligent; or elſe a Fool,
That ſeeſt a Game play'd home, the rich ſtake drawn,
And tak'ſt it all for jeſt.
Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent, fooliſh and fearful;
In every one of theſe; no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongſt the infinite doings of the World,
Sometimes puts forth in your affairs, (my Lord),
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if induſtriouſly injuriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the iſſue doubted,
Whereof the Execution did cry out
Againſt the non-performance; 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wiſeſt: theſe, (my Lord),
Are ſuch allow'd infirmities, that honeſty
Is never free of. But beſeech your Grace,
Be plainer with me, let me know my treſpaſs
By it's own viſage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.
Leo. Ha'not you ſeen, Camillo?
(But that's paſt doubt; you have, or your eye-glaſs
Is thicker than a Cockolds Horn) or heard?
(For to a Viſion ſo apparent, Rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cogitation
Reſides not in that man, that do's not think)
My Wife is ſlippery? if thou wilt, confeſs,
Or elſe be impudently negative,
To have nor Eyes, nor Ears, nor Thought, then ſay
My Wife's a Hobby-Horſe, deſerves a Name
As rank as any Flax-wench, that puts to
Before her troth-plight: ſay't and juſtifie't.
Cam. I would not be a ſtander-by, to hear
My Soveraign Miſtreſs clouded ſo, without
My preſent vengeance taken; 'ſhrew my heart,
You never ſpoke what did become you leſs
Than this; which to reiterate, were ſin
As deep as that, tho true.
Leo. Is whiſpering nothing?
Is leaning Cheek to Cheek? is meeting Noſes?
Kiſſing with inſide Lip? ſtopping the Career
Of Laughter, with a Sigh? (a note infallible
Of breaking honeſty:) horſing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wiſhing Clocks more ſwift?
Hours, Minutes? the Noon, Midnight? and all Eyes
Blind with the pin and web, but theirs; theirs only,
That would unſeen be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the World, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The covering Sky is nothing, Bohemia nothing,
My wife is nothing, nor nothing have theſe nothings,
If this be nothing.
Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd

Scene III.

Of

Of this diſeas'd opinion, and betimes
For 'tis moſt dangerous.
Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my Lord,
Leo. It is; you lye, you lye:
I ſay thou lieſt, Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a groſs Lowt, a mindleſs Slave,
Or elſe a hovering Temporizer, that
Canſt with thine eyes at once ſee good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wives Liver
Infected, as her life, ſhe would not live
The running of one Glaſs.
Cam. Who do's infect her?
Leo. Why, he that wears her like her Medal, hanging
About his neck, Bohemia, who, if I
Had ſervants true about me, that bear eyes
To ſee alike mine honour, as their profits,
Their own particular Thrifts, they would do that
Which ſhould undo more doing: I, and thou
His cup-bearer, whom I from meaner form
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worſhip, who may'ſt ſee
Plainly, as heaven ſees earth, and earth ſees Heaven,
How I am gall'd, thou mightſt be-ſpice a Cup,
To give mine enemy a laſting wink;
Which draught to me, were cordial.
Cam. Sir, my Lord,
I could do this, and that with no raſh Potion,
But with a lingring Dram, that ſhould not work,
Maliciouſly, like a poiſon; but I cannot Believe this Crack to be in my dread Miſtreſs,
So ſovereignly being honourable,
I have lov'd thee.
Leo. Make that thy queſtion, and go rot:
Do'ſt think I am ſo muddy, ſo unſettled,
To appoint my ſelf in this vexation?
Sully the purity and witneſs of my ſheets
(Which to preſerve, is ſleep; which being ſpotted,
Is Goads, Thorns, Nettles, Tails of Waſps):
Give ſcandal to the blood o'th' Prince, my Son,
(Who, I do think is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe moving to't? would I do this?
Could man ſo blench?
Cam. I muſt believe you, Sir;
I do, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highneſs
Will take again your Queen, as yours at firſt,
Even for your Sons ſake, and thereby for ſealing
The injury of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdoms
Known and ally'd to yours.
Leo. Thou doſt adviſe me,
Even ſo as I mine own courſe have ſet down:
I'll give no blemiſh to her honour, none.
Cam. My Lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendſhip wears at Feaſts, keep with Bohemia
And with your Queen: I am his Cup-bearer;
If from me he have wholſome Beveridge,
Account me not your ſervant.
Leo. This is all:
Do't, and thou haſt the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou ſplit'ſt thine own.
Cam. I'll do't, my Lord.
Leo. I will ſeem friendly, as thou haſt adviſ'd me. (Exit.
Cam. O miſerable Lady! But for me!
What caſe ſtand I in? I muſt be the poiſoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Maſter, one,
Who in Rebellion with himſelf, will have
All that are his, ſo too. To do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thouſands that had ſtruck anointed Kings,
And flouriſh'd after, I'd not do't: But ſince
Nor Braſs, nor Stone, nor Parchment bears not one,
Let villiany it ſelf forſwear't. I muſt
Forſake the Court; to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy Star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia. (Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is ſtrange! me thinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not ſpeak?
Good day, Camillo.
Cam. Hail, moſt royal ſir!
Pol. What is the news i'th' Court?
Cam. None rare, my Lord.
Pol. The King hath on him ſuch a countenance,
As had he loſt ſome Province, and a Region
Lov'd, as he loves himſelf: even now I met him
With cuſtomary complement, when he
Wafting his eyes to th'contraty, and falling
A Lip of much contempt, ſpeeds from me, and
So leaves me to conſider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.
Cam. I dare not know.
Pol. How, dare not? do not? do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligent to me; 'tis thereabouts:
For to your ſelf, what do you know, you muſt,
And cannot ſay, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which ſhews me mine chang'd too; for I muſt be
A party in this alteration, finding
My ſelf thus alter'd with't.
Cam. There is a ſickneſs
Which puts ſome of us in diſtemper, but
I cannot name the Diſeaſe, and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.
Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not ſighted like the Baſiliſque.
I have look'd on thouſands, who have ſped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none ſo: Camillo,
As you are certainly a Gentleman, thereto
Clerk-like experienc'd, (which no leſs adorns
Our Gentry, than our Parents Noble Names,
In whoſe ſucceſs we are gentle) I beſeech you,
If you know ought which do's behove my knowledge
Thereof to be inform'd, impriſon't not
In ignorant concealment.
Cam. I may not anſwer.
Pol. A Sickneſs caught of me, and yet I well?
I muſt be anſwer'd. Doſt thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee by all the parts of man,
Which honour do's acknowledge, whereof the leaſt
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou doſt gueſs of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near,
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how beſt to bear it.
Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honour, and by him
That I think Honourable; therefore mark my counſel,
Which muſt be ev'n as ſwiftly followed, as
I mean to utter it; or both your ſelf, and me,
Cry loſt, and ſo good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the King.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he ſwears,
As he had ſeen't, or been an Inſtrument
To vice you to't, that you have toucht his Queen
Forbiddenly.
Pol. Oh then, my beſt blood turn
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yoak'd with his, that did betray the beſt!
Turn then my freſheſt Reputation to
A ſavour, that may ſtrike the dulleſt Noſtril
Where I arrive; and my approch be ſhun'd,
Nay, hated too, worſe than the great'ſt infection,
That ere was heard, or read!

Cam.

Cam. Swear this thought over
By each particular Star in Heaven, and
By all their influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moon,
As (or by Oath) remove, or (Counsel) shake
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his Faith, and will continue
The standing of his Body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not; but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown, than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies inclosed in this Trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawn'd, away to Night.
Your Followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twoes, and threes, at several Posterns,
Clear them o'th' City. For my self, I'll put
My fortunes to your service (which are here
By this discovery lost.) Be not uncertain,
For by the honour of my Parents, I
Have uttred Truth; which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,
Than one condemned by the Kings own mouth;
Thereon his Execution sworn.
Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in's face. Give me thy hand;
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago. This Jealousie
Is for a precious Creature; as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his Person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and, as he do's conceive,
He is dishonour'd by a man, which ever
Profess'd to him; Why his Revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear ore-shades me;
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queen, part of his Theam, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'ne suspition. Come Camillo,
I will respect thee as a Father, if
Thou bear'st my life off, hence. Let us avoid.
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The Keys of all the Posterns: Please your Highness
To take the urgent hour. Come, Sir, away.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: ~~Leontes, Antigonus, Lord.~~

Her. Take the boy to you; he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
Lady. Come (my gracious Lord),
Shall I be your play-fellow?
Mam. No, I'le none of you.
Lady. Why (my sweet Lord?)
Mam. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me, as if I were a Baby still. I love you better.
2 Lady And why so (my Lord?)
Mam. Not for because
Your Brows are blacker (yet black-brows they say)
Become some Women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a Semicircle,
Or a half-Moon made with a Pen.
2 Lady. Who taught this?
Mam. I learn'd it out of Womens faces: pray now,
What colour be your eye-brows?
Lady. Blew (my Lord).
Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a Ladies Nose
That has been blew, but not her eye-brows.
Lady. Hark ye,
The Queen (your Mother) rounds apace: we shall
Present our services to a fine new Prince
One of these dayes, and then you'l wanton with us,
If we would have you.
2 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly Bulk (good time encounter her!)
Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come Sir, now
I am for you again. Pray you sit by us,
And tell's a Tale.
Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad Tale's best for VVinter:
I have one of Sprights, and Goblins.
Her. Let's have that (good Sir.)
Come-on, sit down. Come-on, and do your best,
To fright me with your sprights: you're powerful at it.
Mam. There was a man——
Her. Nay, come sit down; then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not hear it.
Her. Come on then, and giv't me in mine ear.

Scene II. Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords.

Leon. VVas he met there? his Train? Camillo with him?
Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them; never Saw I men scowr so on their way: I eyed them
Even to their Ships.
Leo. How blest am I
In my just Censure? In my true Opinion?
Alack, for lesser knowledge, how accurs'd,
In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom; (for his knowledge
Is not infected:) but if one present
Th' abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his Gorge, his sides
VVith violent Hefts. I have drunk, and seen the Spider.
Camillo was his help in this, his Pander:
There is a Plot against my Life, my Crown;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false Villain,
VVhom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He has discovered my Design, and I
Remain a pinch'd Thing; yea, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Posterns
So easily open?
Lord. By his great authority,
VVhich often has no less prevailed, than so
On your command.
Leo. I know't too well.
Give me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he do's bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.
Her. What is this? sport?
Leo. Bear the Boy hence, he shall not come about her,
Away with him, and let her sport her self
With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.
Her. But I'ld say he had not;
And I'le be sworn you would believe my saying,
How e're you lean to th' Nayward.
Leo. You (my Lords),
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say she is a goodly Lady, and
The Justice of your hearts will thereto add
'Tis pity she's not honest, Honourable:
Praise her but for this her without-doore-Form,
(Which on my faith deserves high speech) and straight
The Shrug, the Hum, or Ha, (these Petty-brands
That Calumny doth use) Oh, I am out,

That

That mercy do's, (for Calumny will ſear
Vertue it ſelf) theſe Shrugs, theſe Hum's, and Ha's,
When you have ſaid ſhe's goodly, come between
Ere you can ſay ſhe's honeſt: but be't known
(From him that ha's moſt cauſe to grieve it ſhould be),
She's an Adultreſs.
Her. Should a Villain ſay ſo,
(The moſt replenish'd villain in the world),
He were as much more villain: you (my Lord),
Do but miſtake.
Leo. You have miſtook, (my Lady),
Polixenes for Leontes. O thou thing,
(Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
Leaſt Barbariſm, (making me the precedent),
Should a like Language uſe to all degrees,
And mannerly diſtinguiſhment leave out,
Betwixt the Prince and Beggar. I have ſaid
She's an Adultreſs, I have ſaid with whom:
More; She's a Traitor, and Camillo is
A Federary with her, and one that knows
What ſhe ſhould ſhame to know her ſelf,
But with her moſt vile Principal; that ſhe's
A bed ſwerver, even as bad as thoſe
That vulgar give bold'ſt Titles; Ay, and privy
To this their late eſcape.
Her. No (by my life,)
Privy to none of this: how will this grieve you,
When you ſhall come to clearer knowledge, that,
You thus have publiſh'd me? Gentle my Lord,
You ſcarce can right me throughly, then, to ſay
You did miſtake.
Leo. No, if I miſtake
In thoſe foundations which I build upon,
The center is not big enough to bear
A School-boys Top. Away with her, to priſon:
He who ſhall ſpeak for her, is far off guilty,
But that he ſpeaks.
Her. There's ſome ill Planet reigns;
I muſt be patient, till the heavens look
With an aſpect more favourable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping, (as our ſex
Commonly are), the want of which vain dew
Perchance ſhall dry your pities; but I have
That honourable Grief lodg'd here, which burns
Worſe than tears drown: beſeech you all (my Lords),
With thoughts ſo qualified as your Charities
Shall beſt inſtruct you, meaſure me; and ſo
The Kings Will be perform'd!
Leo. Shall I be heard?
Her. Who is't that goes with me? beſeech your highneſs
My women may be with me, for you ſee
My plight requires it. Do not weep, (good Fools),
There is no cauſe; when you ſhall know your Miſtreſs
Has deſerv'd Priſon, then abound in tears,
As I come out; this action I now go on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord),
I never wiſh'd to ſee you ſorry; now
I truſt I ſhall. My women, come, you have leave.
Leo. Go, do our bidding; hence! (Exit Queen. Guard & Ladies.)
Lord. Beſeech your highneſs call the Queen again.
Ant. Be certain what you do (Sir) leſt your Juſtice
Prove violence, in the which three great ones ſuffer,
Your ſelf, your Queen, your Son.
Lord. For her, (my Lord),
I dare my life lay down, and will do't (Sir),
Pleaſe you t' accept it, that the Queen is ſpotleſs
I'th' eyes of heaven, and to you (I mean.
In this, which you accuſe her.)
Antig. If it prove She's otherwiſe, I'll keep my Stable (where
I lodge my wife, I'll go in couples with her:
Then when I feel, and ſee her, no further truſt her;
For every inch of Woman in the world,
Every dram of womans fleſh is falſe,
If ſhe be.
Leo. Hold your peaces.
Lord. Good my Lord.
Antig. It is for you we ſpeak, not for our ſelves:
You are abus'd, by ſome putter on,
That will be damn'd for't; would I knew the villain,
I would Land-damn him: be ſhe honour-flaw'd,
I have three daughters; the eldeſt is eleven;
The ſecond, and the third, nine; and ſome five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for't. By mine honour,
I'll geld 'em all: fourteen they ſhall not ſee
To bring falſe generations: they are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib my ſelf, than they
Should not produce fair iſſue.
Leo. Ceaſe, no more:
You ſmell this buſineſs with a ſence as cold
As is a dead-mans noſe; but I do ſee't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus; and ſee withal (Laying hold of his Arm.
The inſtruments that feel.
Ant. If it be ſo,
We need no grave to bury honeſty,
There's not a grain of it, the face to ſweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth.
Leo. What? lack I credit?
Lord. I had rather you did lack then I, (my Lord),
Upon this ground; and more it would content me
To have her honour true, than your ſuſpition
Be blam'd for't how you might.
Leo. Why, what need we
Commune with you for this? but rather follow
Our forceful inſtigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counſels, but our natural goodneſs
Imparts this; which, if you, or ſtupified,
Or ſeeming ſo, in ſkill, cannot, or will not
Reliſh a truth, like us; inform your ſelves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loſs, the gain, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours.
Ant. And I wiſh, (my Liege),
You had only in your ſilent judgment try'd it,
Without more overture.
Leo. How could that be?
Either thou art moſt ignorant by age;
Or thou wer't born a fool. Camillo's flight
Added to their familiarity,
(Which was as groſs, as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd ſight only, nought for approbation
But only ſeeing, all other circumſtances
Made up to th' deed) doth puſh on this proceeding;
Yet for a greater confirmation,
(For in an act of this importance, 'twere
Moſt pitious to be wild) I have diſpatch'd in poſt,
To ſacred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Cleomines and Dion, whom you know
Of ſtuff'd ſufficiency: Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whoſe ſpiritual counſel had,
Shall ſtop, or ſpur me. Have I done well?
Lord. Well done, (my Lord.)
Leo. Tho I am ſatisfi'd, and need no more
Than what I know; yet ſhall the Oracle
Give reſt to th'minds of others; ſuch as he,
Whoſe ignorant credulity will not
Come up to th' truth. So we have thought it good
From our free perſon, ſhe ſhould be confin'd,
Leſt that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us,
We are to ſpeak in publick; for this buſineſs
Will raiſe us all.
Antig. To laughter, as I take it, (Aside)
If the good truth, were known. (Exeunt.)

Scena

† Stable-Stand (stabilis statio as Spelman interprets it) is a term of the Forest Laws, & signifies a place where a Deer-Stealer fixes his stand under some convenient cover, & keeps watch for the purpose of killing Deer as they pass by. From the place it came to be applied also to the person, & any man taken in a forest in that situation with a gun or bow in his hand was presumed to be an offender & had the name of Scena ~~Secunda~~. III.

A Prison

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Goaler, Emilia.

Paul. The keeper of the prison, call to him:
Let him have knowledg (who) I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee;
What dost thou then in prison? Now, good Sir,
You know me, do you not? (Enter Goaler.
Goa. For a worthy Lady,
And one, whom much I honour.
Pau. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queen.
Goa. I may not (Madam);
To the contrary I have expres commandment.
Pau. Here's a-do to lock up honesty and honour from
Th' acces of gentle visitors! Is't lawful pray you
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?
Goa. So please you (Madam)
To put a part these your attendants, I
Shall bring Emilia forth.
Pau. I pray ~~you~~ now, call her:
Withdraw your selves. (To her attendants who go out)
Goa. And, Madam,
I must be present at your conference.
Paul. Well; be't so; prythee. Enter Emilia.
Here's such a-do, to make no stain, a stain,
As passes colouring. Dear Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady?
Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn
May hold together; On her frights, and griefs
(Which never tender Lady hath born greater),
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.
Pau. A boy?
Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the Queen receives
Much comfort in't; Says, my poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.
Pau. I dare be sworn:
These dangerous, unsafe Lunes i'th' King, beshrew them!
He must be told on't, and he shall; the office
Becoms a woman best. I'll take it upon me,
If I prove Honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The Trumpet any more! pray you (Emilia),
Commend my best obedience to the Queen,
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll shew't the King, and undertake to be
Her advocate to'th loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o'th' Child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.
Emil. Most worthy Madam,
Your honour and your goodnes is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no Lady living
So meet for this great errand, please your Ladyship
To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the Queen of your most noble offer,
Who, but to day hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a Minister of honour,
Least she should be denyd.
Paul. Tell her (Emilia),
I'll use that tongue I have; If wit flow from't
As boldnes from my bosom, let't not be doubted
I shall do good.
Emil. Now be you blest for it!
I'll to the Queen: please you come something nearer.
Goa. Madam if't please the Queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur, to pass it,
Having no warrant.
Pau. You need not fear it (sir);
This Child was prisoner to the womb, and is
By Law and process of great Nature, thence Free'd, and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King, nor guilty of
(If any be) the trespas of the Queen.
Goa. I do believe it.
Pau. Do not you fear; upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you, and danger.
(Exeunt.

Scena ~~Tertia~~. IV.
The Palace

Enter Leontes, Servants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no rest; it is but weakness
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness, if
The cause were not in being; part o'th cause,
She, th' Adultress; for the harlot-king
Is quite beyond mine arm; out of the blank
And level of my brain; plot-proof; but she,
I can hook to me: say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moity of my rest
Might come to me again. Who's there?
Ser. My Lord. Enter Attend.
Leo. How do's the boy?
Ser. He took good rest to night; 'tis hop'd
His sickness is discharg'd.
Leo. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his Mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Fasten'd, and fix'd the shame on't in himself;
Threw off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleep,
And down-right languish'd. Leave me solely; go,
See how he fares: Fie, fie, no thought of him, (Exit Attend.
The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoyl upon me; in himself too mighty? And in his party, his alliance, let him
~~Hence~~ Until a time may serve, for present vengeance,
Take it on her: Camillo, and Polixenes
Laugh at me, make their pastime at my sorrow;
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall she, within my power.

Scene V.
Enter Paulina. with a Child.

Lord. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be second to me:
Fear you his tyrannous passion more (alas),
Then the Queens life? A gracious innocent Soul,
More free, than he is jealous.
Antig. That's enough.
Ser. Madam he hath not slept to night; commanded
None should come at him.
Pau. Not so hot (good Sir),
I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings; such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking. I
Do come with words, as medicinal, as true;
(Honest, as either) to purge him of that humour,
That presses him from sleep.
Leo. What noise there, hoo?
Pau. No noise (my Lord), but needful conference,
About some Gossips for your Highness.
Leo. How?
Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would.

Ant

Ant. I told her so, (my Lord),
On your displeasures peril and on mine,
She should not visit you.
Leo. What? canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty he can; in this,
(Unless he take the course that you have done)
Commit me, for committing honor, trust it,
He shall not rule me.
Ant. Lo you now, you hear,
When she will take the rein, I let her run,
But she'll not stumble.
Paul. Good my Liege, (I) come:——
And I beseech you hear me; who professes
My self your loyal servant, your Physitian,
Your most obedient Counsellor: yet that dares
Less appear so, in comforting your evils,
Than such as most seem yours. I say, I come
From your good Queen.
Leo. Good Queen?
Paul. Good Queen, (my Lord), good Queen,
I say good Queen,
And would by combate, make her good, so, were I
A man, the worst about you.
Leo. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine own accord, I'll off,
But first, I'll do my errand. The good Queen,
(For she is good,) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing. (Laying down the Child.
Leo. Out!
A mankind Witch! Hence with her, out o'dore:
A most intelligencing bawd.
Paul. Not so,
I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In so entit'ling me; and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
(As this world goes,) to pass for honest.
Leo. Traitors;
Will you not push her out? Give her the Bastard, (To Ant.
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tir'd: unroosted
By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the bastard,
Tak'e up, I say; give't to thy Croan,
Paul. For ever
Unvenerable by thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the Princess, by that forced baseness
Which he has put upon't,
Leo. He dreads his Wife.
Paul. So I would you did: then 'twere past all doubt
You'd call your Children, yours.
Leo. A nest of Traitors.
Ant. I am none, by this good light.
Paul. Nor I; nor any
But one that's here; and that's himself; for he,
The sacred honor of himself, his Queens,
His hopeful Sons, his babes betrays to slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the Swords; and will not
(For as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compell'd to't) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten,
As ever Oak, or stone was sound.
Leo. A Callat
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me! this brat is none of mine.
It is the issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.
Paul. It is yours;
And might we lay th' old Proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse. Behold, (my Lords),
Altho the print be little, the whole Matter
And copy of the Father; (Eye, Nose, Lip,
The trick of's Frown, his forehead, nay, the Valleys,
The ~~pccrs~~ dimples of his Chin, and Cheek; his Smiles:
The very Mold, and frame of hand, nayl, Finger.)
And thou, good Goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the Mind too, 'mongst all Colours
No Yellow in't, lest she suspect, as he do's,
Her Children, not her Husbands.
Leo. A gross hag!
And Lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue.
Antig. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that Feat, you'll leave your self
Hardly one subject.
Leo. Once more take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy, and unnatural Lord
Can do no more.
Leo. I'll ha' thee burnt.
Paul. I care not;
It is an Heretick that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you Tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your Queen
(Not able to produce more accusation
Than your own weak-hing'd fancy) something savours
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.
Leo. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her, Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she dar'st not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!
Paul. I pray you, do not push me, I'll be gone.
Look to your Babe, (my Lord), 'tis yours; Jove send her
A better guiding spirit! What need these hands?
You that are thus so tender o're his Follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so: farewel, we are gone. Exit
~~Exit.~~

Scene VII.

Leo. Thou, (Traytor,) hast set on thy wife to this,
My Child? away with't? even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o're it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire,
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimony,) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine: if thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The Bastard-brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out: go take it to the fire,
For thou sett'st on thy wife.
Antig. I did not, sir:
These Lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.
Lords. We can, my Royal Liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.
Leo. You're liars all.
Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better credit:
We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech
So to esteem of us: and on our knees we beg,
(As recompence of our dear services
Past, and to come) that you do change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must
Lead on to some foul Issue. We all kneel.
Leo. I am a Father (for each wind that blows:)
Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel,
And call me Father? better burn it now,
Then curse it then. But be it; let it live:
It shall not neither. You sir, come you hither: (To Ant.
You that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margery, your Mid-wife there,
To save this bastards life; (for 'tis a bastard,
So sure as this beard's grey.) What will you adventure,
To save this brats life?
Antig. Any thing, (my Lord),
That my ability may undergo,
And noblenes impose: at last thus much;
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left,

To ſave the innocent; ~~any thing~~ what's poſſible.
Leo. It ſhall be poſſible; Swear by this ſword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.
Antig. I will, (my Lord.)
Leo. Mark and perform it; ſeeſt thou? for the fail
Of any point in't, ſhall not only be
Death to thy ſelf, but to thy lewd-tongu'd Wife,
(Whom for this time we pardon). We enjoin thee
As thou art Liege-man to us, that thou carry
This female Baſtard hence, and that thou bear it
To ſome remote and deſart place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leave it
(Without more mercy) to its own protection,
And favour of the Climate; as by ſtrange fortune
It came to us, I do in Juſtice charge thee,
On thy ſouls peril, and thy bodies torture,
That thou commend it ſtrangely to ſome place,
Where chance may nurſe or end it: take it up.
Antig. I ſwear to do this; tho a preſent death
Had been more merciful. Come on, (poor Babe),
Some powerful Spirit inſtruct the Kites and Ravens
To be thy Nurſes! Wolves and Bears, they ſay,
(Caſting their ſavageneſs aſide) have done
Like offices of pity. Sir, be proſperous
In more than this deed do's require! and bleſſing
Againſt this Cruelty, fight on thy ſide,
(Poor thing condemn'd to loſs.) (with child) Exit.
Leo. No; I'll not rear
Anothers Iſſue. Enter a Servant.
Serv. Pleaſe your Highneſs, Poſts
From thoſe you ſent to th' Oracle, are come
An hour ſince: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Haſting to th' Court.
Lord. So pleaſe you, (Sir), their ſpeed
Hath been beyond account.
Leo. Twenty three days
They have been abſent: 'tis good ſpeed foretels
The great Apollo ſuddenly will have
The truth of this appear: Prepare you, Lords,
Summon a Seſſion, that we may arraign
Our moſt diſloyal Lady; for as ſhe hath
Been publickly accus'd, ſo ſhall ſhe have
A juſt and open Trial. While ſhe lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,
And think upon my bidding. Exeunt. (Severally)

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.
A Part of Sicily.
Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cle. The Climate's delicate, the Air moſt ſweet,
Fertile the Iſle, the Temple much ſurpaſſing
The common praiſe it bears.
Dion. I ſhall report,
For moſt it caught me, the Celeſtial Habits,
(Methinks I ſo ſhould term them,) and the reverence
Of the Grave Wearers. O, the Sacrifice.
How ceremonious, ſolemn, and un-earthly
It was i'th' Offering?
Cleo. But of all the burſt
And the ear-deafning Voice o' th' Oracle,
Kin to Joves Thunder, ſo ſurpriz'd my Senſe
That I was nothing.
Dio. If th' event o'th' Journey
Prove as ſucceſsful to the Queen (O be't ſo!)
As it hath been to us, rare, pleaſant, ſpeedy;
The time is worth the uſe on't.
Cle. Great Apollo,
Turn all to th' beſt! theſe Proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.
Dio. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end the Buſineſs, when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Divine ſeal'd up),
Shall the Contents diſcover: ſomething rare
Even then will ruſh to knowledge. Go; freſh Horſes,
And gracious be the iſſue. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.
A Court of Juſtice.
Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers: Hermione (as to her Trial) Ladies, Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Seſſions, (to our great grief, we pronounce),
Even puſhes 'gainſt our heart. The party try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd, Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, ſince we ſo openly
Proceed in Juſtice, which ſhall have due courſe,
Even to the Guilt, or the Purgation.
Produce the Priſoner.
Offi. It is his Highneſs pleaſure, that the Queen
Appear in perſon, here in Court. Silence! Enter Hermione
Leo. Read the Indictment.

Officer. Hermione, Queen to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accuſed and arraigned of High Treaſon, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conſpiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Soveraign Lord the King, thy royal Husband; the pretence whereof being by circumſtance partly laid open, thou, (Hermione), contrary to the Faith and Allegiance of a true Subject, didſt counſel and aid them, for their better ſafety, to fly away by Night.
Her. Since what I am to ſay, muſt be but that
Which contradicts my Accuſation, and
The teſtimony on my part, no other
But what comes from my ſelf, it ſhall ſcarce boot me
To ſay, Not guilty: mine integrity
Being counted Falſhood, ſhall, (as I expreſs it),
Be ſo receiv'd. But thus, if Powers divine
Behold our humane Actions, (as they do),
I doubt not then, but innocence ſhall make
Falſe Accuſations bluſh, and Tyranny
Tremble at Patience. You, (my Lord), beſt know,
(Whom leaſt will ſeem to do ſo,) my paſt life
Hath been as continent, as chaſt, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than Hiſtory can pattern, tho deviſ'd,
And play'd to take Spectators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royal Bed, which owe
A Moſty of the Throne; a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopeful Prince, here ſtanding
To prate and talk for Life, and Honour, fore
Who pleaſe to come and hear. For Life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, (which I would ſpare:) For Honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I ſtand for. I appeal
To your own Conſcience, (Sir), before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be ſo: Since he came,
With what encounter ſo uncurrant, have
~~Have~~ ſtrain'd t' appear thus; if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, ot in act, or will,
That way enclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'ſt of Kin
Cry fie upon my Grave.
Leo. I ne'r heard yet
That any of thoſe bolder Vices wanted
Leſs impudence to gain-ſay what they did,

Than

Than to perform it firſt.
Her. That is true enough,
Tho 'tis a ſaying (Sir), not due to me.
Leo You will not own it.
Her. More than Miſtreſs of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I muſt not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
(With whom I am accus'd) I do confeſs
I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd;
With ſuch a kind of love, as might become
A Lady like me; with a love, even ſuch,
So and no other, as your ſelf commanded:
Which not to have done, I think had been in me
Both diſobedience, and in gratitude
To you, and towards your friends; whoſe love had ſpoke,
Even ſince it could ſpeak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for conſpiracy,
I know not how it taſtes, tho it be diſh'd
For me to try how; all I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honeſt man;
And why he left your court, the Gods themſelves,
(Wotting no more than I) are ignorant.
Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have undertane to do in's abſence.
Her. Sir,
You ſpeak a Language that I underſtand not;
My Life ſtands in the level of your Dreams,
Which I'll lay down.
Leo. Your actions are my Dreams,
You had a baſtard by Polixenes, and
And I but dream'd it: As you were paſt all ſhame,
(Thoſe of your fact are ſo) ſo paſt all truth;
Which to deny, concerns more than avails: for as
Thy brat hath been caſt out, like to it ſelf,
No Father owning it, (which is indeed
More criminal in thee, than it) ſo thou
Shalt feel our juſtice, in whoſe eaſieſt paſſage,
Look for no leſs than death.
Her. Sir, ſpare your threats;
The bug which you would fright me with, I ſeek:
To me can life be no commodity;
The Crown and comfort of my Life, (your Favour)
I do give loſt, for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My ſecond Joy,
And firſt fruits of my body, from his preſence
I am bar'd like one infectious. My third comfort,
(Star'd moſt unluckily) is from my breſt
(The innocent milk in it moſt innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murder; My ſelf on every Poſt
Proclaim'd a Strumpet, with immodeſt hatred;
The Child-bed privilege deny'd which 'longs
To women of all faſhion: Laſtly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open air, before
I have got ſtrength of limbs. Now (my Liege),
Tell me wat bleſſings I have here alive,
That I ſhould fear to die? Therefore proceed:
But yet hear this; miſtake me not; no life,
(I prize it not a ſtraw) but for mine honour,
Which I would free; if I ſhall be condemn'd
Upon ſurmizes, all proofs ſleeping elſe,
But what your Jealouſies awake, I tell you
'Tis Rigour, and not Law. Your honours all,
I do refer me to the Oracle:
Apollo be my Judge.

Lord. This your requeſt.

Enter Dion and Cleomines.

Is altogether juſt; therefore bring forth,
(And in Apollo's Name) his oracle.
Her. The Emperour of Ruſſia was my Father,
Oh that he were alive, and here beholding
His Daughters tryal: that he did but ſee
The flatneſs of my miſery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge.

Officer. You here ſhall ſwear upon the Sword of Juſtice,
That you (Cleomines and Dion) have
Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This ſeal'd-up Oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's Prieſt; and that ſince then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy Seal,
Nor read the Secrets in't.
Cleo. Dio. All this we ſwear.
Leo. Break up the Seals, and read.
Officer. Hermione is chaſte Polixenes blameleſs, Camillo a true Subject, Leontes a jealous Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King ſhall live without an Heir, if that which is loſt, be not found.
Lords. Now bleſſed be the great Apollo!
Her. Praiſed!
Leo. Haſt thou read the truth?
Offic. Ay my Lord, even ſo as it is here ſet down.
Leo. There is no truth at all i'th' oracle;
The Seſſions ſhall proceed; this is meer falſhood. (Enter Serv.
Ser. My Lord the King: the King!
Leo. What is the buſineſs?
Ser. O Sir, I ſhall be hated to report it.
The Prince your Son, with meer conceit and fear
Of the Queen's ſpeed, is gone.
Leo. How? Gone?
Ser. Is dead.
Leo. Apollo's angry, and the Heavens themſelves
Do ſtrike at my injuſtice. How now there? (Herm. faints
Paul. This news is mortal to the Queen: Look down
And ſee what death is doing.
Leo. Take her hence; Exe. Ladies with Herm.
Her heart is but o'recharg'd; ſhe will recover.
I have too much believ'd mine own ſuſpition; Scene IV
'Beſeech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life. Apollo pardon
My great prophaneſs 'gainſt thine oracle.
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my Queen, recall the good Camillo
(Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;)
For being tranſported by my Jealouſies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I choſe
Camillo for the Miniſter, to poiſon
My friend Polixenes; which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My ſwift command; tho I with death, and with
Reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done; he, (moſt humane,
And fill'd with honour) to my Kingly gueſt
Unclaſp'd my practiſe, quit his fortunes here,
Which you knew great, and to the certain hazard
Of all-uncertainties, himſelf commended,
No richer than his honour: How he gliſters
Through my dark Ruſt? and how his Piety
Do's my deeds make the blacker? Scene V.
Paul. Wo the while:
O cut my lace, leſt my heart (cracking it)
Break too.
Lord. What fit is this? Good Lady?
Paul. What ſtudied torments, (tyrant), haſt for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? what flaying? boyling? burning,
In Leads, or Oyls? what old, or new torture
Muſt I receive? whoſe every word deſerves
To taſte of thy moſt worſt. Thy tyranny
(Together working with thy Jealouſies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For Girls of nine) O think what they have done,
And then run mad indeed; ſtark mad: for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but ſpices of it.
That thou betrayed'ſt Polixenes, 'twas nothing,
(That did but ſhew thee, of a Fool, inconſtant,
And damnable ingrateful:) Nor was't much,
Thou would'ſt have poiſon'd good Camillo's Honour,
To have him kill a King: poor treſpaſſes,

More monstrous standing by; wherefore I reckon
The casting forth of Crows, thy Baby-daughter,
To be or none, or little; tho a Devil
Would have shed water out of fire, ere don't:
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young Prince, whose honourable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish Sire
Blemish'd his gracious Dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer; but the last: O Lords,
When I have said, cry woe! the Queen, the Queen,
The sweet'st dear'st creature's dead; and vengeance for't
Not drop't down yet.

Lord. The higher powers forbid!

Pau. I say she's dead: I'll swear't. If word, nor oath
Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture, or lustre in her lip, her eye;
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Dost not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren Mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the Gods
To look that way thou wer't.

Leo. Go on, go on:
Thou canst not speak too much, I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.

Lord. Say no more,
How ere the business goes, you have made fault
I'th boldness of your speech.

Pau. I am sorry for't,
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: alas, I have shew'd too much
The rashness of a woman; he is toucht
To th' noble heart. What's gone, and what's past help
Should be past grief. Do not receive affliction
At my petition, I beseech you; rather
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, (good my Liege,)
Sir, Royal Sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your Queen (Lo, fool again)—
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your Children:
I'll not remember you of my own Lord,
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.

Leo. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth; which I receive much better,
Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queen and Son,
One grave shall be for both. Upon them shall
The causes of their death appear (unto
Our shame perpetual;) once a day, I'll visit
The Chappel where they lie, and tears shed there
Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come and lead me
To these sorrows. (Ex.

Scena Tertia. VI

Changes to Bithynia. A desart Country; The Sea at a little Distance.

Enter Antigonus, Mariner, Babe and Shepherd, and Clown.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our Ship hath toucht upon
The Desarts of Bohemia. Bithynia.

Mar. Ay, (My Lord) and fear
We have Landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience
The heavens with that we have in hand, are angry,
And frown upon's.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done; get aboard,
Look to thy bark, I'll not be long before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best hast, and go not
Too far i'th' Land; 'tis like to be loud weather.
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keep upon't.

Antig. Go thou away,
I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o'th business. (Exit.

Ant. Come, poor Babe;
I have heard, (but not believ'd), the spirits o'th' dead
May walk again; if such thing be, thy Mother
Appear'd to me last night; for ne're was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head is on one side, some another,
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow
So fill'd, and so becoming; in pure white Robes,
Like very Sanctity she did approach
My Cabin where I lay; thrice bow'd before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech), her eyes;
Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her. Good Antigonus,
Since fate, (against thy better disposition),
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia, Bithynia
There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prythee call't: For this ungentle business
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shalt see
Thy Wife Paulina more: and so, with shrikes
She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my self, and thought
This was so, and no slumber: Dreams, are toys,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe
Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that
Apollo would, (this being indeed the issue
Of King Polixenes,) it should here be laid,
(Either for life, or death,) upon the Earth
Of it's right Father. Blossom, speed thee well! (laying down the Child.
There lie; and there thy character: there these,
Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, (Pretty one,
And still rest thine. The storm begins; poor wretch,
That for thy mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To loss, and what may follow. Weep I cannot,
But my heart bleeds: and most accurst am I
To be by oath enjoyn'd to this. Farewel.
The day frowns more and more: thou art like to have
A lullaby too rough: I never saw
The heavens so dim, by day. A savage clamour!
Well may I get a-board! This is the Chace,
I am gone for ever. Exit pursued by a Bear. Enter a Shepherd.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest: for there is nothing (in the between) but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting, hark you now—would any but these boild brains of nineteen, and two and tweenty, hunt this weather? They have scarr'd away two of my best Sheep, which I fear the Wolf will sooner find than the Master; if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browzing of Ivy. Good luck, (and't be the will), what have we here? Mercy on's, a barne! a very pretty barne, a boy, or a child I wonder? (a pretty one, a very pretty one,) sure some scape: tho I am not bookish, yet I can read Waiting-Gentlewoman in the scape: this has been some stair-work, some Trunk-work, some behind-door work: they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity, yet I'll tarry till till my ſon come: he hollow'd but even now. Whoa-ho-hoa!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Hilloa, loa!

Shep. What art ſo near? If thou'lt ſee a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither: what ail'ſt thou, man?

Clo. I have ſeen two ſuch ſights, by Sea and by Land; but I am not to ſay it is a Sea, for it is now the ſky; betwixt the Firmament and it, you cannot thruſt a bodkins point.

Shep. Why boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but ſee how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the ſhore; but that's not to the point; Oh the moſt piteous cry of the poor ſouls, ſometimes to ſee 'em, and not to ſee 'em: Now the Ship boaring the Moon with her main Maſt, and anon ſwallowed with yeſt and froth, as youl'd thruſt a Cork into a hogs-head. And then for the Land-ſervice, To ſee how the Bear tore out his ſhoulder-bone, how he cry'd to me for help, and ſaid his name was Antigonus a Nobleman. But to make an end of the Ship, to ſee how the Sea flap-dragon'd it. But firſt, how the poor ſouls roar'd, and the Sea mock'd them. And how the poor Gentleman roared, and the Bear mocked him; both roaring louder than the Sea, or Weather.

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now, I have not winked ſince I ſaw theſe ſights; the men are not yet cold under water, nor the Bear half-dined on the Gentleman; he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by to have help'd the old man.

Clo. I would you had been by the ſhip-ſide, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shep. Heavy matters, heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bleſs thy ſelf; thou meet'ſt with things dying, I with things new born. Here is a ſight for thee; Look thee, a bearing-cloath for a Squires child! look thee here; take up, take up, Boy, open't, ſo, let's ſee, it was told me I ſhould be rich by the Fairies. This is ſome Changeling; open't, what is within boy?

Clo. You're a made old man; If the ſins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold, all Gold.

Shep. This is Fairy Gold, boy, and 'twill prove ſo: up with't, keep it cloſe: home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy, and to be ſo ſtill requires nothing but ſecreſy. Let my ſheep go: Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your Findings, I'le go ſee if the Bear be gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curſt, but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I'le bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed, if thou may'ſt diſcern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th' ſight of him.

Clo. Marry will I, and you ſhall help to put him i'th' ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Time, as the Chorus.

Time. I that pleaſe ſome, try all, both joy and terror
Of good, and bad, that makes and unfolds error,
Now take upon me, in thr name of Time,
To uſe my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me, or my ſwift paſſage, that I ſlide,
O're ſixteen years, and leave the growth untri'd
Of that wide gap, ſince it is in my power
To orethrow Law, and in one ſelf born hour
To plant, and ore-whelm Cuſtom. Let me paſs
The ſame I am, ere ancient'ſt Order was,
Or what is now receiv'd. I witneſs to
The times that brought them in, ſo ſhall I do
To th' freſheſt things now reigning, and make ſtale
The gliſtering of this preſent, as my Tale
Now ſeems to it: your patience this allowing,
I turn my glaſs, and give my Scene ſuch growing
As you had ſlept between: Leontes leaving
Th'effects of his fond jealouſies, ſo grieving
That he ſhuts up himſelf; imagine me
Gentle Spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia, and remember well,
I mention here a ſon o'th' Kings, whom Florizel
I now name to you, and with ſpeed ſo pace
To ſpeak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wondring. What of her enſues
I liſt not propheſie; but let Times news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A Shepherds daughter,
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is th'argument of Time; of this allow,
If ever you have ſpent time worſe, ere now:
If never, yet that time himſelf doth ſay,
He wiſhes earneſtly, you never may.

Scena Secunda.

Court of Bithynia.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate; 'tis a ſickneſs denying thee any thing; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is ſixteen years ſince I ſaw my Country; tho' I have for the moſt part being aired abroad, I deſire to lay my bones there. Beſides, the penitent King, my Maſter, hath ſent for me, to whoſe feeling ſorrows I might be ſome allay, or I oreween to think ſo, which is another ſpur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lov'ſt me, Camillo, wipe not out the reſt of thy ſervices, by leaving me now; the need I have of thee, thine own goodneſs hath made: better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee, thou having made me Buſineſs, which none, without thee, can ſufficiently manage, muſt either ſtay to execute them thy ſelf, or take away with thee the very ſervices thou haſt done; which if I have not enough conſidered, as too much I cannot, to be more thankful to thee, ſhall be my ſtudy, and my profit therein, the heaping friendſhips. Of that fatal Country Sicilia, prethee ſpeak no more, whoſe very naming, puniſhes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'ſt him, and reconciled King my brother, whoſe loſs of his moſt precious Queen and Children, are even now to be a-freſh lamented. Say to me, when ſaw'ſt thou the Prince Florizel my ſon? Kings are no leſs unhappy, their iſſue not being gracious, than they are in loſing them, when they have approved their vertues.

Cam. Sir it is three days ſince I ſaw the Prince; what his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have (unwillingly) noted, he is of late much retired from Court, and is leſs frequent to his Princely exerciſes than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have conſidered ſo much, Camillo, and with ſome care ſo far, that I have eyes under my ſervice, which look upon his removedneſs; from whom I have this intelligence, that he is ſeldom from the houſe of a moſt homely Shepherd; a man, (they ſay) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unſpeakable eſtate.

Cam. I have heard, (Sir) of ſuch a man, who hath a Daughter of moſt rare note; the report of her is extended more, than can be thought to begin from ſuch a cottage.

Pol. That's likewiſe part of my intelligence; but (I fear) the Angle that plucks our Son thither. Thou ſhalt accompany us to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) have ſome queſtion with the Shepherd; from whoſe ſimplicity, I think it not uneaſie to get the cauſe of my Sons reſort thither. Prythee be my preſent partner in this buſineſs, and lay aſide the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My beſt Camillo, we muſt diſguiſe our ſelves. (Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

The Country.

Enter Autolicus ſinging.

When Daffadils begin to peer,
With heigh the Doxy over the dale,
Why then comes in the ſweet o'th year.
For the red blood raigns in the Winters pale.

The white ſheet bleaching on the hedge,
With hey the ſweet Birds, O how they ſing!
Doth ſet my pugging tooth an edg,
For a quart of Ale is a diſh for a King.

The Lark that tirra Lyrachaunts,
With heigh, with heigh the Thruſh and the Jay:
Are Summers ſongs for me and my Aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have ſerv'd Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three pile, but now I am out of ſervice.

But ſhall I go mourn for that, (my dear)?
the pale Moon ſhines by night:
And when I wander here and there,
I then do moſt go right.
If Tinkers may have leave to live,
and bear the Sow-skin Bowget,
Then my account I well may give,
and in the Stocks avouch it.

My Traffick is ſheets; when the Kite builds, look to leſſer Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolicus, who being, (as I am), litter'd under Mercury, was likewiſe a ſnapper-up of unconſidered trifles: With Die and Drab, I purchas'd Capariſon, and my Revenue is the ſilly Cheat, Gallows, and Knocks, are too powerful on the Highway, Beating and Hanging are Terrors to me: For the life to come, I ſleep out the thought of it. A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Cl. Let me ſee, every Leaven-weather todes, every tod yields a pound and odd ſhillings: fifteen hundred ſhorn, what comes the Wool to?

Aut. If the ſpringhold, the Cock's mine. (Aside

Clo. I cannot do it without Compters. Let me ſee, what am I to buy for our Sheep-ſhearing-Feaſt? Three pound of Sugar, five pound of Currans, Rice—What will this Siſter of mine do with Rice? but my Father hath made her Miſtreſs of the Feaſt, and ſhe lays it on. She hath made me four and twenty Noſe-gays for the Shearers (three-man ſong-men, all, and very good ones), but they are moſt of them Means and Baſes; but one Puritan among them, and he ſings Pſalms to horn-Pipes. I muſt have Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace—Dates, none—that's out of my note: Nutmegs, ſeven; a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may beg; Four pound of Prunes, and as many of Raiſins o'th' Sun.

Aut. Oh, that ever I was born! (Grovelling on the ground.

Clo. I'th' name of me.——

Aut. Oh, help me, help me! pluck but off theſe rags; and then, Death, Death.——

Clo. Alack, poor Soul, thou haſt need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have theſe off.

Aut. Oh, ſir, the loathſomneſs of them offends me, more than the ſtripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

Cl. Alas poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd, ſir, and beaten; my money and apparrel tane from me, and theſe deteſtable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a Horſe-man, or a Foot-man?

Aut. A Foot-man, (ſweet ſir), a Foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he ſhould be a Foot-man, by the Garments he has left with thee; if this be a Horſmans Coat, it hath ſeen very hot ſervice. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee. Come lend me thy hand. (Helping him up.

Aut. Oh! good ſir, tenderly, oh!

Cl. Alas, poor Soul!

Aut. Oh, good ſir, ſoftly, good ſir: I fear, (ſir), my Shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canſt ſtand?

Aut. Softly, dear ſir; good ſir, ſoftly; you ha done me a charitable office.

Clo. Doſt lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good ſweet ſir: no, I beſeech you ſir; I have a Kinſman not paſt three quarters of a Mile hence, unto whom I was going; I ſhall there have money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money, I pray you, that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of Fellow was he that rob'd you?

Aut. A Fellow, (Sir) that I have known to go about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a Servant of the Prince; I cannot tell good ſir, for which of his Vertues it was, but he was certainly Whipt out of the Court.

Clo. His vices you would ſay; there's no Vertue whipt out of the Court; they cheriſh it to make it ſtay there, and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would ſay, (Sir). I know this man well, he hath been ſince an Ape-bearer, then a Proceſs-ſerver, (a Bailiff), then he compaſt a Motion of the Prodigal Son, and married a Tinkers wife, within a mile where my Land and Living lies; and (having flown over many knaviſh profeſſions) he ſetled only in Rogue; ſome call him Autolicus.

Clo. Out upon him; Prig! for my life, Prig! he haunts Wakes, Fairs, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, ſir; he, ſir he; that's the Rogue that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; If you had but look'd big, and ſpit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I muſt conſeſs to you, (ſir), I am no fighter; I am falſe of heart that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you do now?

Aut. Sweet ſir, much better than I was; I can ſtand, and walk; I will even take my leave of you, and pace ſoftly towards my Kinſmans.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on thy way?

Aut. No, good fac'd ſir; no ſweet ſir.

Clo

Clo. Then farewel, I must go to buy Spices for our Sheep-shearing. (Exit.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir. Your Purse is not hot enough to purchase your Spice. I'le be with you at your Sheep-shearing too: If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the Shearers prove Sheep, let me be unrold, and my name put in the book of Vertue.

Song. Jog-on, Jog-on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hent the Stile-a.
A Merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a Mile-a. (Exit.

Scæna Quarta. The Old Shepherds House.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, ~~Shepherd, Clown, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopsa, Dorcas, Servants, Autolicus.~~

Flo. These your unusual weeds, to each part of you
Do's give a life: no Shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. This your Sheep-shearing,
Is as a ~~merry~~ meeting of the petty gods,
And you the Queen on't.
Per. Sir, my gracious Lord,
To chide at your extreams, it not becomes me:
(Oh pardon, that I name them:) your high self,
The gracious mark o'th' Land, you have obscur'd
With a Swains wearing; and me, (poor lowly Maid),
Most goddess-like prank'd up: But that our Feasts
In every Mess, have folly; and the Feeders
Digest it with a Custom, I should blush
To see you so attir'd; sworn, I think,
To shew my self a glass:
Flo. I bless the time
When my good Falcon, made her flight a-cross
Thy Fathers ground.
Per. Now Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference forges dread, (your Greatness
Hath not been us'd to fear;) even now I tremble
To think your Father, by some accident,
Should pass this way, as you did: Oh the Fates,
How would he look to see his work, so noble,
Vildly bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed Flaunts) behold
The sternness of his presence?
Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity: the gods themselves,
(Humbling their Deities to love), have taken
The shapes of Beasts upon them. Jupiter
Became a Bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune
A Ram, and bleated; and the Fire-rob'd-God,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble Swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations,
Were never for a piece of Beauty, rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste, since my desires
Run not before mine Honour, nor my Lusts
Burn hotter than my Faith.
Per. O but, dear sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd, (as it must be), by th' power of the King.
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.
Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prythee darken not
The Mirth o'th' Feast; Or I'le be thine, (my Fair),
Or not my Fathers. For I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine. To this I am most constant,
Tho' Destiny say no. Be merry, (Gentle)
Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing
That you behold the while. Your Guests are coming:
Lift up you Countenance, as it were the day
Of Celebration of that Nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.
Per. O Lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious. Scene V. Enter all. Polixenes & Camillo disguis'd
Flo. See, your Guests approach,
Address your self to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.
Shep. Fie, (Daughter); when my old Wife liv'd, upon
This day, she was both Pantler, Butler, Cook,
Both Dame and Servant; Welcom'd all, serv'd all;
Would sing her Song, and dance her turn; now here
At upper end o'th' Table; now i'th middle;
On his shoulder, and his; her face o'fire
With labour; and the things she took to quench it;
She would to each one sip. You are retired,
As if you were a feasted one; and not
The Hostess of the meeting: Pray you bid
These unknow friends to's welcome, for it is
A way to make us better Friends, more known.
Come, quench your Blushes, and present you self
That which you are, Mistress o'th' Feast. Come on,
And bid us welcome to your Sheep-shearing,
As your good Flock shall prosper.
Per. Sir, welcome: (To Pol. & Cam.
It is my Fathers will, I should take on me
The Hostesship o'th' day; you're welcome, sir,
Give me those Flowers there, (Dorcas.) Reverend Sirs,
For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, these keep Seeming, and savour all the Winter long:
Grace, and Remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our Shearing!
Pol. Shepherdess,
(A fair one are you) well you fit our ages
With Flowers of Winter.
Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on Summers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling Winter, the fairest Flowers o'th' Season
Are our Carnations, and streak'd Gilly-~~vors~~, flowers
(Which some call Natures Bastards), of that kind
Our rustick Garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.
Pol. Wherefore, (gentle Maiden),
Do you neglect them?
Per. For I have heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their pideness shares
With great creating-Nature.
Pol. Say there be;
Yet Nature is made better by no mean,
But Nature makes that mean; so over that Art,
(Which you say adds to Nature), is an Art
That Nature makes; you see, (sweet Maid), we Marry
A gentler Scion, to the wildest Stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
Which do's mend Nature, change it rather; but
The Art it self, is Nature.
Per. So it is.
Pol. Then make your Garden rich in Gilly-~~vors~~, flowers
And do not call them Bastards.
Per. I'le not put
The Dibble in earth, to set one slip of them:
No more than were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 'twere well; and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flowers for you;
Hot Lavender, Mints, Savory, Marjoram,
The Mary-gold, that goes to bed with Sun,
And with him rises, weeping: These are Flowers
Of middle Summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. Y'are very welcome.
Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your Flock,
And only live by gazing.

Per.

Per. Out, alas;
You'ld be ſo lean, that blaſts of January (Friends
Would blow you through and through. Now (my faireſt
I would I had ſome Flowers o'th' Spring, that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden-heads growing: O Proſerpina,
For the Flowers now, that (frighted) thou let'ſt fall
From Diſſes Waggon! Daffadils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; Violets (dim
But ſweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath); pale Prim-roſes,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his ſtrength, (a Malady Moſt incident to Maids;) bold Oxlips, and
The Crown imperial; Lillies of all kinds,
(The Flower-de-Luce being one.) O, theſe I lack,
To make you Garlands of) and my ſweet Friend,
To ſtrow him o're, and o're.

Flo. What? like a Coarſe?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on;
Not like a Coarſe; or if, not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come take your flowers,
Methinks I play as I have ſeen them do
In Whitſun-paſtorals: Sure this Robe of mine
Do's change my diſpoſition.

Flo. What you do,
Still betters what is done. When you ſpeak, (ſweet)
I'l have you do it ever; when you ſing,
I'l have you buy, and ſell ſo; ſo give Alms;
Pray ſo; and for the ord'ring your Affairs,
To ſing them too. When you do dance, I wiſh you
A Wave o'th Sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move ſtill, ſtill ſo,
And own no other Function. Each your doing,
(So ſingular in each particular),
Crowns what you are doing, in the preſent deeds,
That all your Acts, are Queens.

Per. O Doricles,
Your praiſes are too large; but that your Youth
And the true blood which peeps fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unſtain'd Shepherd;
With wiſdom, I might fear, (my Doricles),
You woo'd me the falſe way.

Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpoſe
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray;
Your hand, (my Perdita;) ſo Turtles pair
That never mean to part.

Per. I'l ſwear for 'em.

Pol. This is the prettieſt Low-born Laſs, that ever
Ran on the green-ſord; Nothing ſhe does, or ſeems,
But ſmacks of ſomething greater than her ſelf,
Too Noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her ſomething
That makes her blood look on it: Good ſooth ſhe is
The Queen of Curds and Cream.

Clo. Come on, ſtrike up.

Dor. Mopſa muſt be your Miſtreſs; marry Garlick to mend her kiſſing with.

Mop. Now in good time.

Clo. Not a word, a word, we ſtand upon our manners, Come ſtrike up.

Here a Dance of Shepherds and Shepherdeſſes.

Pol. I Pray good Shepherd, what fair Swain is this
Which dances with your Daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boaſts himſelf
To have a worthy Breeding; but I have it:
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like ſooth; he ſays he loves my Daughter,
I think ſo too; for never gaz'd the Moon
Upon the Water, as he'll ſtand and read
As 'twere my Daughters Eyes: and to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiſs to chuſe
Who loves another beſt.

Pol. She dances featly.

Shep. So ſhe do's any thing, tho I report it
That ſhould be ſilent; if young Doricles
Do light upon her, ſhe ſhall bring him that
Which he not dreams of. Scene VI. Enter Servant.

Ser. O Maſter, if you did but hear the Pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not move you; he ſings ſeveral Tunes faſter than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten Ballads, and all mens Ears grew to his Tunes.

Clo. He could never come better; he ſhall come in; I love a Ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily ſet down; or a very pleaſant thing indeed, and ſung lamentably.

Ser. He hath Songs for man, or woman, of all ſizes; No Milliner can ſo fit his cuſtomers with Gloves: he has the prettieſt Love-ſongs for Maids, ſo without bawdry, (which is ſtrange) with ſuch delicate burthens of Dildo's and Fadings: Jump her and thump-her; and where ſome ſtretch-mouth'd Raſcal, would, (as it were), mean miſchief, and break a foul gap into the Matter, he makes the Maid to anſwer, Whoop! do me no harm, good man; put's him off, ſlights him, with Whoop! do me no harm, good man.

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkeſt of an admirable conceited fellow; has he any unbraided Wares?

Ser. He hath Ribbons of all the colours i'th' Rainbow; Points, more than all the Lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, tho they come to him by th' groſs: Inkles, Caddiſſes, Cambricks, Lawns; why, he ſings 'em over, as they were Gods or Goddeſſes; you would think a Smock were a ſhe-Angel, he ſo chants to the ſleeve-hand, and the work about the Square on't.

Clo. Prythee bring him in, and let him approach ſinging.

Per. Forewarn him that he uſe no ſcurrilous words in's Tunes.

Clo. You have of theſe Pedlers, that have more in them, than you'ld think (Siſter)

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolicus ſinging.

Lawn as white as driven Snow,
Cyprus black, as e're was Crow,
Gloves as ſweet as Damask Roſes,
Maſks for Faces, and for Noſes;
Bugle-Bracelets, Neck-lace Amber,
Perfume for a Ladys Chamber:
Golden Quoifs, and Stomachers
For my Lads to give their Dears:
Pins, and poaking ſticks of ſteel.
What Maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come: come buy, come buy,
Buy Lads, or elſe your Laſſes cry: Come buy.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopſa, thou ſhouldſt take no money of me; but being enthrall'd as I am, it will alſo be the bondage of certain Ribbons and Gloves.

Mop. I was promis'd them againſt the Feaſt, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more than that, or there be liars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you: 'May be he has paid you more, which will ſhame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among Maids? will they wear were their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? when you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tatling before all our Guests? 'Tis well they are whispring: clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done; Come you promis'd me a tawdry-lace, and a pair of sweet Gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefore it behooves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, sir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now buy some, I love a Ballad in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, how a Usurers wife was brought to bed with twenty money-bags at a burthen, and how she long'd to eat Adders heads, and Toads Carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true, and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marying a Usurer!

Aut. Here's the Midwives name to't, one Mistris Tale-Porter, and five or six honest Wives, that were present. Why should I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. 'Pray you now buy it.

Clo. Come on, Lay it by; and let's first see more Ballads; We'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another Ballad of a fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fadom above water, and sung this Ballad against the hard hearts of Maids; it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that lov'd her: The Ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five Justices hands at it; and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another.

Aut. This is a merry Ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two Maids wooing a man; there's scarce a Maid Westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it; if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear, 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a month a go.

Aut. I can bear my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Have at it with you:

Song.

Get you hence, for I must go
Aut. Where fits not you to know.
Dor. Whither?
Mop. O whither?
Dor. Whither?
Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
Dor. Me too, let me go thither:
Mop. Or thou goest to th' Grange, or Mill,
Dor. If to either thou dost ill,
Aut. Neither.
Dor. what neither?
Ant. Neither.
Dor. Thou hast sworn my Love to be,
Mop. Thou hast sworn it more to me:
Then whither goest? Say whither?

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by our selves: My Father and the Gent. are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: Come bring away thy pack after me, Wenches I'll buy for you both: Pedler let's have the first choice; follow me girls. Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song.

Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Cape?
My dainty Duck, my Deer-a?
Any Silk, any Thred, any Toyes for your head
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the Pedler, Money's a medler,
That doth utter all mens ware-a. (Exe. Clown. Aut. Dor. & Mop.)

Scene VII. Enter a Servant.

Ser. Master, there is three Carters, three Shepherds, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds that have made themselves all men of hair, thay call themselves Saltiers. and they have a Dance, which the wenches say is a gally-maufry of Gambols, because they are not in't: but they themselves are o'th'mind (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away; we'll none on't; here has been too much homely foolery already. I know, (Sir), we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that 'refresh us: Pray let's see these four-threes of Herdsmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their own report, (Sir), hath danc'd before the King; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and half by th'squire.

Shep. Leave your prating, since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in; but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they stay at door Sir. Flo.

Here a Dance of twelve Sa

Flo. Pol. O Father, you'l know more of that
Is it not too far gone? 'tis time to part them.
He's simple, and tells much. How now, (fair shepherd)?
Your heart is full of something, that do's take
Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young,
And handed love, as you do, I was wont
To load my Shee with knacks: I would have ransack'd
The Pedlers silken Treasury, and have pour'd it
To her acceptance; you have let him go,
And nothing marted with him. If your Lass
Interpretation should abuse, and call this
Your lack of love, or bounty, you were straited
For a reply at least, if you make a care
Of happy holding her.
Flo. Old Sir, I know
She prizes not such triffles as these are;
The gifts she looks from me, are packt and lockt
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not deliver'd. O hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient Sir, who (it should seem)
Hath sometime lov'd. I take thy hand, this hand,
As soft as Doves Down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopians tooth, or the fan'd snow,
That's bolted by th'Nothern blast, twice o're.
Pol. what follows this?
How prettily th'young Swain seems to wash
The hand, was fair before? I have put you out,
But to your protestation: Let me hear
What you profess.
Flo. Do, and be witness to't.
Pol. And this my neighbour too?
Flo. And he, and more
Than he, and men; the earth, and heavens, and all;
That were I crown'd the most Imperial Monarch
Thereof most worthy, were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge
More than was ever mans, I would not prize them
Without her Love; for her imploy them all,
Commend them, and condemn them to her service,
Or to their own perdition.
Pol. Fairly offer'd,
Cam. This shews a sound affection,
She. But my daughter,
Say you the like to him.
Per. I cannot speak

So well, (nothing so well) no, nor mean better,
By the pattern of mine own thoughts, I cut out
The purity of his
Shep. Take hands, a bargain;
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her Portion equal his.
Flo. O, that must be
I'th' vertue of your daughter; one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet,
Enough then for you wonder: but come-on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.
Shep. Come, your hand:
And daughter, yours.
Pol. Soft, Swain a-while; beseech you,
Have you a Father?
Flo. I have; but what of him?
Pol. Knows he of this?
Flo. He neither do's, nor shall.
Pol. Me-thinks a Father,
Is at the nuptial of his son, a Guest
That best becomes the Table: pray you once more,
Is not your Father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With Age, and altring Rheums? Can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? Dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? And again, does nothing
But what he did, being childish?
Flo. No, good Sir;
He has his health, and ampler strength indeed
Than most have of his age.
Pol. By my white Beard,
You offer him, (if this be so,) a wrong
Something unfilial: reason my son
Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason
The Father, (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity) should hold some counsel
In such a business.
Flo. I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, (my grave Sir,)
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My Father of this business.
Pol. Let him know't.
Flo. He shall not.
Pol. Prithee let him.
Flo. No; he must not.
Shep. Let him, my son, he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.
Flo. Come, come, he must not:
Mark our Contract.
Pol. Mark your divorce, (young Sir,) (Discovering himself)
Whom son I dare not call: Thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd. Thou a Scepters Heir,
That thus affects a sheep-hook! Thou old Traitor,
I am sorry that by hanging thee, I can
But shorten thy life one week. And thou fresh Piece
Of excellent Witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal Fool thou coap'st with.——
Shep. Oh my heart!
Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratcht with briers, and made
More homely than thy state. For thee, (fond boy,)
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh,
That thou no more shalt never see this knack, (as never
I mean thou shalt) we'll bar thee from succession,
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our Kin,
(Less) far than Deucalion off: (mark thou my words);
Follow us to the Court. Thou Churl, for this time,
(Though full of our displeasure), yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it: And your enchantment,
Worthy enough a Herdsman: yea him too,
That makes himself, (but for our Honour therein),
Unworthy thee. If ever henceforth, thou
These rural Latches to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will devise a death, as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't. Exit. Scene VIII.
Perd. Even here undone: I was not much afeard; for once, or twice
I was about to speak, and tell him plainly,
The self-same Sun, that shines upon his Court,
Hides not his visage from our Cottage, but Looks on alike. Will't please you (Sir) be gone? (To Flor.
I told you what would come of this. Beseech you,
Of your own state take care. This dream of mine (from Being now awake, I'll Queen it no inch farther,
But milk my Ewes, and weep.
Cam. Why, how now Father,
Speak ere thou dyest.
Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know, that which I know. O Sir, (To Flo.
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father dy'd,
To lie close by his honest bones; but now
Some Hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no Priest shovels-in dust. Oh cursed wretch! (To Per.
That knew'st this was the Prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him. Undone, undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire. Scene IX. (Exit.
Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afear'd; delayd,
But nothing alter'd; What I was, I am;
More straining on, for plucking back; not following
My leash unwillingly
Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know your Fathers temper: at this time
He will allow no speech, (which I do guess
You do not purpose to him;) and as hardly
Will he endure your sight, as yet, I fear;
Then, till the fury of his Highness settle,
Come not before him.
Flo. I not purpose it,
I think, Camillo.
Cam. Even he, my Lord.
Per. How often have I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?
Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature crush the sides o'th' earth together,
And mar the seeds within! Lift up thy looks;——
From my succession wipe me, (Father,) I
Am heir to my affection.
Cam. Be advis'd.
Flo. I am; and by my Fancy; if my Reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have Reason;
If not, my senses better (pleas'd with madness)
Do bid it welcome.
Cam. This is desperate, (sir.)
Flo. So call it; but it do's fulfil my vow;
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be thereat gleaned; for all that the Sun sees, or
The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fadomes, will I break my Oath
To this my fair belov'd; Therefore I pray you,
As you have ever been my Fathers friend,
When he shall miss me, as (in faith I mean not
To see him any more) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion; Let my self, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver, I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And most opportune to her need, I have
A Vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold
Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor

Concern

Concern me the reporting.
Cam. O my Lord,
I would your ſpirit were eaſier for advice,
Or ſtronger for your need.
Flo. Heark Perdita, (To Cam.)
I'll hear you by and by.
Cam. He's irremovable,
Reſolv'd for flight: Now were I happy, if
His going, I could frame to ſerve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchaſe the ſight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy King, my Maſter, whom
I ſo much thirſt to ſee. (Aside.
Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am ſo fraught with curious buſineſs, that
I leave out Ceremony.
Cam. Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor ſervices, i'th' love
That I have born your Father?
Flo. Very nobly
Have you deſerv'd: It is my Fathers Muſick
To ſpeak your deeds, not little of his care
To have them recompenc'd, as thought on.
Cam. Well, (my Lord), ,
If you may pleaſe to think I love the King,
And through him, what is neareſt to him, which is
Your gracious ſelf; embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and ſettled project
May ſuffer alteration; On mine honour,
I'll point you where you ſhall have ſuch receiving
As ſhall become your highneſs, where you may
Enjoy your Miſtreſs; from the whom, I ſee,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by
(As heavens forfend) your ruin: Marry her,
And with my beſt endeavours, in your abſence,
Your diſcontenting Father, ſtrive to qualifie,
And bring him up to liking.
Flo. How, Camillo,
May this (almoſt a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee ſomething more than man,
And after that truſt to thee?
Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'll go?
Flo. Not any yet:
But as th'unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, ſo we profeſs
Our ſelves to be the ſlaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.
Cam. Then liſt to me:
This follows, if you will not change your purpoſe,
But undergo this flight; make for Sicilia,
And there preſent your ſelf, and your fair Princeſs,
(For ſo I ſee ſhe muſt be) 'fore Leontes;
She ſhall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Methinks I ſee
Leontes opening his free Arms, and weeping
His welcomes forth; asks thee, the Son forgiveneſs,
As 'twere i'th' Fathers perſon; kiſſes the hands
Of your freſh Princeſs; ore and ore divides him,
'Twixt his unkindneſs, and his kindneſs: th'one
He chids to Hell, and bids the other grow
Faſter than Thought, or Time.
Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my viſitation, ſhall I
Hold up before him?
Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father), ſhall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down;
The which ſhall point you forth at every ſitting
What you muſt ſay, that he ſhall not perceive,
But that you have your Fathers Boſom there,
And ſpeak his very heart.
Flo. I am bound to you:
There is ſome ſap in this.
Cam. A Courſe more promiſing
Than a wild dedication of your ſelves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd Shores; moſt certain,
To miſeries enough: no hope to help you.
But as you ſhake off one, to take another:
Nothing ſo certain, as your Anchors, who
Do their beſt office, if they can but ſtay you,
Where you'l be loath to be: beſides you know,
Proſperity's the very bond of love,
Whoſe freſh complexion, and whoſe heart together,
Affliction alters.
Per. One of theſe is true:
I think Affliction may ſubdue the cheek,
But not take in the Mind.
Cam. Yea, ſay you ſo?
There ſhall not at your Fathers houſe, theſe ſeven years
Be born another ſuch.
Flo. My good Camillo,
She's as forward of her breeding, as
She is i'th' rear 'our birth.
Cam. I cannot ſay, 'tis pity
She lacks inſtructions, for ſhe ſeems a Miſtreſs
To moſt that teach.
Per. Your pardon, Sir; for this
I'll bluſh you thanks.
Flo. My prettieſt Perdita.
But O, the Thorns we ſtand upon! (Camillo),
Preſerver of my Father, now of me;
The Medicine of our Houſe; how ſhall we do?
We are not furniſh'd like Bohemia's Son, Bithynia's
Nor ſhall appear in Sicily.
Cam. My Lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: It ſhall be ſo my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The Scene you play, were mine. For inſtance, Sir,
That you may know you ſhall not want; one word. (They talk aside

Scene X.

Enter Autolichus.

Aut. Ha, ha, what a fool Honeſty is! and Truſt, (his ſworn brother,) a very ſimple Gentleman. I have ſold all my trumpery; not a counterfeit ſtone, not a ribbon, glaſs, pomander, browch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, ſhooe-tye, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from faſtning: they throng who ſhould buy firſt, as if my Trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer; by which means, I ſaw whoſe purſe was beſt in picture; and what I ſaw, to my good uſe, I remember. My Clown (who wants but ſomething to be a reaſonable man) grew ſo in love with the Wenches ſong, that he would not ſtir his pettytoes till he had both tune and words, which ſo drew the reſt of the herd to me, that all their other ſenſes ſtuck in ears; you might have pinch'd a Placket, it was ſenſeleſs, 'twas nothing to geld a Codpiece of a purſe; I would have filed Keys off that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my ſirs ſong, and admiring the nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargy, I pick't and cut moſt of their Feſtival purſes: and had not the old man come in with a Whoo-bub againſt his Daughter, and the Kings Son, and ſcar'd my chowghes from the chaff, I had not left a purſe alive in the whole Army. Camillo, Florizel, & Perdita come forward
Cam. Nay; but my Letters by this means being there,
So ſoon as you arrive, ſhall clear that doubt.
Flo. And thoſe that you'll procure from King Leontes?
Cam. Shall ſatisfie your Father.
Perd. Happy be you:
All that you ſpeak, ſhews fair.
Cam. Who have we here? Seeing Autol.

We'll

We'll make an inſtrument of this; omit
Nothing may give us aid.
Aut. If they have over-heard me now: why, hanging.
Cam. How now (Good Fellow), come,
Why ſhak'ſt thou ſo? fear not, (man),
Here's no harm intended to thee.
Aut. I am a poor fellow, Sir.
Cam. Why, be ſo ſtill: here's no body will ſteal that from thee; yet for the out-ſide of thy poverty, we muſt make an exchange; therefore diſ-caſe thee inſtantly (thou muſt think there's a neceſſity in't) and change garments with this Gentleman: tho the peny-worth (on his ſide) be the worſt, yet hold thee, there's ſome boot.
Aut. I am a poor fellow, Sir, (I know ye well enough.) (Aside,
Cam. Nay prythee diſpatch: the Gentleman is half flea'd already.
Aut. Are you in earneſt, Sir? (I ſmell the trick on't. (Aside
Flo. Diſpatch, I prythee.
Aut. Indeed I have had earneſt, but I cannot with conſcience take it.
Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.
Fortunate Miſtreſs (let my prophecy
Come home to ye!) you muſt retire your ſelf
Into ſome Covert; take your ſweet-hearts hat
And pluck it ore your brows, muffle your face,
Diſmantle you, and (as you can) diſliken
The truth of your own ſeeming, that you may
(For I do fear eyes over) to Ship-board
Get undeſcry'd.
Per. I ſee the Play ſo lies,
That I muſt bear a part.
Cam. No remedy.
Have you done there?
Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Son.
Cam. Nay, you ſhall have no hat;
Come Lady, come; farewel, (my friend.)
Aut. Adieu Sir.
Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot;
Pray you a word.
Cam. What I do next, ſhall be to tell the King (Aside
Of this eſcape, and whither they are bound:
Wherein my hope is, I ſhall ſo prevail,
To force him after; in whoſe company
I ſhall review Sicilia; for whoſe ſight,
I have a womans Longing.
Flo. Fortune ſpeed us!
Thus we ſet on, (Camillo,) to th' Sea ſide.
Cam. The ſwifter ſpeed, the better. (Flo. & Per. Exit.

Scene XI.

Aut. I underſtand the buſineſs, I hear it: to have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is neceſſary for a Cut-purſe; a good noſe is requiſite alſo, to ſmell out work for th'other ſenſes. I ſee this is the time that the unjuſt man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot! What a boot is here, with this exchange; ſure the Gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing extempore. The Prince himſelf is about a piece of iniquity, (ſtealing away from his Father, with his Clog at his heels.) if I thought it were a piece of honeſty to acquaint the King withal, I would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I conſtant to my Profeſſion.

Enter Clown and Shepheard.

Aſide, aſide, here's more matter for a hot brain; Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Seſſion, Hanging yields a careful man work.
Clown. See, ſee: what a man you are now! there is no other way, but to tell the King ſhe's a Changling, and none of your fleſh and blood.
Shep. Nay, but hear me.
Clow. Nay, but hear me.
Shep. Go to then.
Clow. She being none of your fleſh and blood, your fleſh and blood has not offended the King, and ſo your fleſh and blood is not to be puniſh'd by him. Shew thoſe things you found about her, (thoſe ſecret things, all but what ſhe has with her:) This being done, let the Law go whiſtle; I warrant you.
Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sons pranks too; who, I may ſay, is no honeſt man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the Kings brother in Law.
Clow. Indeed Brother in Law was the fartheſt off you could have been to him, and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.
Aut. Very wiſely, (Puppies), (Aside
Shep. Well; let us to the King; there is that in this Farthel, will make him ſcratch his beard.
Aut. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my maſter. (Aside
Clo. 'Pray heartily he be at Pallace.
Aut. Tho I am not naturally honeſt, I am ſo ſometimes by chance: Let me pocket up my pedlars excrement. How now (Ruſtiques) whither are you bound?
Shep. To th' Pallace, (and it like your Worſhip).
Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that Farthel? the place of your dwelling? your names? your ages? of what having? breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, diſcover?
Clo. We are but plain fellows, Sir.
Aut. A Lye; you are rough, and hairy; Let me have no lying; it becomes none but Tradeſmen, and they often give us Souldiers the lie, but we pay them for it with ſtamped Coine, not ſtabbing ſteel, therefore they do not give us the lye.
Clo. Your Worſhip had like to have given us one, if you had not taken your ſelf with the manner.
Shep. Are you a courtier, and't like you Sir?
Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seeſt thou not the air of the Court, in theſe enfoldings? hath not my gate in it, the meaſure of the Court? receives not thy Noſe Court-Odour from me? reflect I not on thy baſeneſs, Court-contempt? Think'ſt thou, for that I inſinuate, or toze from thee thy buſineſs, I am therefore no Courtier? I am courtier Cap-a-pe; and one that will either puſh-on, or pluck-back, thy buſineſs there) whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.
Shep. My buſineſs, Sir, is to the King.
Aut. What advocate haſt thou to him?
Shep. I know not, (and't like you.)
Clo. Advocate's the Court-word for a Pheaſant: ſay you have none.
Shep. None, ſir; I have no Pheaſant cock, nor hen.
Aut. How bleſſed are we, that are not ſimple men? Yet nature might have made me as theſe are, Therefore I will not diſdain.
Clo. This cannot be but a great Courtier.
Shep. His Garments are rich, but he wears them not handſomly.
Clo. He ſeems to be the more noble in being fantaſtical: a great man, I'le warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.
Aut. The Farthel there? What's i'th' Farthel? wherefore that Box?
Shep. Sir, there lies ſuch ſecrets in this Farthel and Box, which none muſt know but the King, and which he ſhall know within this hour, if I may come to th' ſpeech of him.
Aut. Age, thou haſt loſt thy labour.
Shep. Why Sir?
Aut. The King is not at the Pallace, he is gone aboard a new Ship, to purge Melancholly, and air himſelf; for if thou be'ſt capable of things ſerious, thou muſt know the King is full of grief.
Shep. So, 'tis ſaid, (Sir,) about his Son that ſhould have have married a Shepherds daughter.

Aut. If that Shepherd be not in hand-faſt, let him fly; the Curſes he ſhall have, the Tortures he ſhall feel, will break the back of Man, the heart of Monſter.

Clo. Think you ſo, Sir?

Aut. Not he alone ſhall ſuffer what Wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but thoſe that are Germain to him (tho remov'd fifty times) ſhall all come under the Hangman; which, tho it be great pity, yet it is neceſſary. An old Sheep-whiſtling Rogue, a Ram-tender, to offer to have his Daughter come into grace? Some ſay he ſhall be ſton'd; but that Death is too ſoft for him, (ſay I:) Draw our Throne into a Sheep-Coat? all Deaths are too few, the ſharpeſt too eaſie.

Clo. Ha's the old man ere a Son, Sir, (do you hear) and't like you, Sir.

Aut. He ha's a Son, who ſhall be flay'd alive, then 'nointed over with honey, ſet on the Head of a Waſps Neſt, then ſtand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recover'd again with Aqua-vitæ, or ſome other hot Infuſion; then, raw as he is (and in the hotteſt day Prognoſtication proclaims) ſhall he be ſet againſt a Brick-wall (the Sun looking with a Southward Eye upon him) where he is to behold him, with Flies blown to Death. But what talk we of theſe Traitorly-Raſcals, whoſe miſeries are to be ſmil'd at, their offences being ſo capital? Tell me (for you ſeem to be honeſt plain men) what you have to the King; being ſomething gently conſider'd, I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your perſons to his preſence, whiſper him in your behalf; and if it be in man, beſides the King, to effect your Suits, here is a man ſhall do it.

Clo. He ſeems to be of great Authority; cloſe with him, give him Gold; and though authority be a ſtubborn Bear, yet he is oft led by the Noſe with Gold; ſhew the inſide of your Purſe to the outſide of his hand, and no more ado. Remember ſton'd and flay'd alive.

Shep. And't pleaſe you, (Sir) to undertake the buſineſs for us, here is that Gold I have; I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in Pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promiſed?

Shep. Ay, Sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moity; are you a partiſan in this buſineſs.

Clo. In ſome ſort, Sir: but tho my caſe be a pitiful one, I hope I ſhall not be flay'd out of it.

Aut. Oh, that's the caſe of the Shepherds Son; hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort; We muſt to the King, and ſhew our ſtrange ſights; he muſt know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Siſter; we are gone elſe. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man do's, when the buſineſs is performed, and remain (as he ſays) your Pawn till it be brought you.

Aut. I will truſt you, walk before toward the Sea-ſide, go on the right hand, I will but look upon the Hedge and follow you.

Clo. We are bleſs'd, in this man; as I may ſay, even bleſs'd.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us; he was provided to do us good.

Exeunt.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honeſt, I ſee Fortune would not ſuffer me; ſhe drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occaſion: (gold, and a means to do the Prince my Maſter good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement?) I will bring theſe two Moales, theſe blind ones, aboard him; if he think it fit to ſhoar them again, and that the Complaint they have to the King concerns him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being ſo far officious; for I am proof againſt that Title, and what ſhame elſe belongs to't: To him will I preſent them, there may be matter in it.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Changes to Sicilia.

Enter Leontes, Cleomines, Dion, Paulina, Servants, ~~Florizel, Perdita~~.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd
A Saint-like Sorrow: No fault could you make,
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed pay'd down
More penitence, than done treſpaſs at the laſt
Do as the Heavens have done; forget your evil;
With them, forgive your ſelf.

Leo. Whilſt I remember
Her and her vertues, I cannot forget
My blemiſhes in them, and ſo ſtill think of
The wrong I did my ſelf; which was ſo much,
That Heir-leſs it hath made my Kingdom, and
Deſtroy'd the ſweet'ſt companion that ere man
Bred his hopes out of, ~~true~~.

Paul. Too true (my Lord:
If one by one, you wedded all the World,
Or from the All that are, took ſomething good,
To make a perfect Woman; ſhe you kill'd,
Would be unparallel'd.

Leo. I think ſo. Kill'd?
She I kill'd? I did ſo, but thou ſtrik'ſt me
Sorely, to ſay I did; it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now,
Say ſo but ſeldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good Lady;
You might have ſpoken a thouſand things, that would
Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindneſs better.

Paul. You are none of thoſe,
Would have him wed again.

Dio. If you would not ſo,
You pity not the State, nor the Remembrance
Of his moſt Sovereign Name; Conſider little,
What dangers, (by his Highneſs fail of iſſue)
May drop upon his Kingdom, and devour
Incertain lookers on. What were more holy,
Than to rejoyce the former Queen is well? This will.
What holier, than for Royalties repair,
For preſent comfort, and for future good,
To bleſs the Bed of Majeſty again
With a ſweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
(Reſpecting her that's gone;) beſides the Gods
Will have fulfill'd their ſecret purpoſes:
For has not the Divine Apollo ſaid,
Is't not the tenor of his Oracle,
That King Leontes ſhall not have an Heir,
Till his loſt Child be found? Which, that it ſhall,
Is all as monſtrous to our humane reaſon,
As my Antigonus to break his Grave,
And come again to me; who on my life,
Did periſh with the Infant. 'Tis your Counſel,
My Lord ſhould to the Heavens be contrary,
Oppoſe againſt their wills. Care not for iſſue, To the King.
The Crown will find an Heir. Great Alexander
Left his to th' Worthieſt; ſo his Succeſſor
Was like, to be the beſt.

Leo. Good Paulina,
Who haſt the memory of Hermione,
I know in honour: O, that ever I
Had ſquar'd me to thy Counſel; then, even now

I might have look'd upon my Queens full eyes,
Have taken Treasure from her lips!
Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.
Leo. Thou speak'st truth:
No more such wives, therefore no wife; one worse,
And better us'd, would make her Sainted Spirit,
Again possess her Corps, and on this Stage,
(Where we Offenders now appear) Soul-vext,
And begin, why to me.
Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.
Leo. She had, and would incense me
To murther her I married.
Paul. I should so:
Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'ld bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her; then I'ld shriek, that even your Ears
Should rift to hear me, and the words that follow'd,
Should be, Remember mine.
Leo. Stars, Stars,
And all eyes else, dead coals; fear thou no Wife;
I'll have no Wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?
Leo. Never (Paulina), so be blest'd my Spirit!
Paul. Then good my Lords, bear witness to his Oath.
Cleo. You tempt him over-much.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione, as is her picture;
Affront his eye.
Cleo. Good Madam, I have done.
Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry; if you will, Sirs;
No remedy, but you will; Give me the office
To chuse you a Queen; she shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queens Ghost), it should take joy
To see her in your arms.
Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidst us.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queen's again in breath:
Never till then.

Scene II.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. One that gives out himself Prince Florizel,
Son of Polixenes, with his Princess (she
The fairest I have yet beheld) desires access
To your high presence.
Leo. What with him? he comes not
Like to his Fathers greatness; his approach
(So out of circumstance, and sudden) tells us,
'Tis not a Visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What Train?
Ser. But few,
And those but mean.
Leo. His Princess (say you), with him?
Ser. Yes, the most peerless piece of Earth, I think,
That ere the Sun shone bright on.
Paul. Oh Hermione,
As ever present Time doth boast it self
Above a better, gone; so must thy Grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you your self
Have said, and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder than that Theame, she had not been,
Nor was not to be equall'd; thus your Verse
Flow'd with her Beauty once, 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.
Ser. Pardon, Madam;
The one, I have almost forgot, (your pardon:)
The other, when she has obtain'd your Eye,
Will have your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Sect, might quench the zeal
Of all Professors else, make proselites
Of who she but bid follow.
Paul. How? not Women?
Ser. Women will love her, that she is a Woman
More worth than any Man: Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.
Leo. Go, Cleomines,
You self (assisted with your honour'd friends)
Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steal upon us.

(Cleom. Exit.

Paul. Had our Prince,
(Jewel of Children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this Lord; there was not a full month
Between their Births.
Leo. Prythee no more; cease: thou know'st
He dies to me again, when talk'd of: sure
When I shall see this Gentleman, thy Speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of Reason. They are come.

Scene III.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Cleomines, and others.

Your Mother was most true to Wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royal Father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty one,
Your Fathers Image is so hit in you,
(His very air) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome,
And your fair Princess: (Goddess), oh! alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt Heaven and Earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder, as
You, (gracious Couple), do: and then I lost
(All mine own Folly) the Society,
Amity too of your brave Father, whom (Tho bearing Misery) I desire my life
Once more to look on him.
Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings, that a King, (as friend),
Can send his Brother; and but infirmity
(Which waits upon worn times), hath something seiz'd
His wish'd Ability, he had himself
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his
Measur'd, to look upon you; whom he loves,
(He bad me say so), more than all the Scepters,
And those that bear them, living.
Leo. Oh my Brother,
(Good Gentleman), the wrongs I have done thee, stir
Afresh within me; and these thy offices
(So rarely kind), are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th' Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th' fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her pains; much less,
Th' adventure of her person?
Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Lybia.
Leo. Where the warlike Smalus,
That Noble honour'd Lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?
Flo. Most Royal Sir,
From thence; from him, whose Daughter
His Tears proclaim'd his, parting with her; thence
(A prosperous South-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the Charge my Father gave me,
For visiting (your Highness); my best Train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd,
Who for Bohemia bend, to signifie
Not only my success in Lybia, (sir),
But my arrival, and my Wifes, in safety
Here, where we are. happily

Leo.

Leo. The blessed Gods
Purge all infection from our Air, whilst you
Do Climate here: you have a holy Father,
A graceful Gentleman, against whose person
(So sacred as it is) I have done sin;
For which the Heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me Issue-less; and your Father's blest
As he from Heaven merits it, with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a Son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Scene IV.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most Noble Sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great Sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me;
Desires you to attach his Son, who ha's
His Dignity, and Duty both cast off;
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepherds Daughter.
Leo. Where's Bohemia? speak.
Lor. Here in your City; I now came from him.
I speak amazedly, and it becomes,
My marvel, and my Message; to your Court
Whiles he was hastning, in the Chase, it seems,
Of this fair Couple, meets he on the way
The Father of this seeming Lady, and
Her Brother, having both their Countrey quitted,
With this young Prince.
Leo. Camillo ha's betray'd me;
Whose honour, and whose honesty till now,
Endur'd all Weathers.
Lord. Lay't so to his charge;
He's with the King your Father.
Leo. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo? Sir; I spake with him; who now
Ha's these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake; they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths, in death.
Per. Oh my poor Father!
The Heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our Contract celebrated.
Leo. You are married?
Flo. We are not, Sir, nor are we like to be;
The Stars, I see, will kiss the Valleys first;
The odds for high and low's alike.
Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King?
Flo. She is,
When once she is my Wife.
Leo. That once, I see, by your good Fathers speed,
Will come-on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry you have broken from his liking,
Where you were ty'd in duty; and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in Worth, as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.
Flo. Dear, look up:
Though Fortune, visible, an enemy,
Should chase us, with my Father; power no jot
Hath she to change our Loves. Beseech you, Sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to Time
Than I do now; with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine Advocate: at your request,
My Father will grant precious things, as Trifles.
Leo. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious Mistris,
Which he counts but a Trifle.
Paul. Sir, my Liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't; not a month
'Fore your Queen dy'd, she was more worth such gazes
Than what you look on now.
Leo. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made. But your Petition
Is yet un-answer'd; I will to your Father;
Your Honour not o're thrown by your desires,
I am friend to them, and you; upon which Errand
I now go toward him; therefore follow me,
And mark what way I make: Come, good my Lord

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda. V.

Enter Autolicus, and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, Sir, were you present at this Relation?
Gent. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fardel, heard the old Shepherd deliver the manner how he found it; whereupon (after a little amazedness), we were all commanded out of the Chamber: only this (me thought) I heard the Shepherd say, he found the Child.
Aut. I would most gladly know the Issue of it.
Gent. 1. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the King and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration; they seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the Cases of their Eyes. There was speech in their dumbness, Language in their very Gesture; they look'd as they had heard of a World ransom'd, or one destroyed; a notable passion of Wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if th' importance were Joy, or Sorrow; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knows more:
The News, Rogero?
Gen. 2. Nothing but Bonfires: the Oracle is fulfil'd; the Kings Daughter is found; such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to expresse it.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, he can deliver you more. How goes it now, Sir? This News (which is call'd true) is so like an old Tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspition; Ha's the King found his heir?
Gen. 3. Most true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance; That which you hear, you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the Proofs. The Mantle of Queen Hermione's; her Jewel about the Neck of it; the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character; the Majesty of the Creature, in resemblance of the Mother; the Affection of Nobleness, which nature shews above her breeding; and many other Evidences, proclaim her with all certainty to be the Kings Daughter: did you see the meeting of the two Kings?
Gent. 2. No.
Gent. 3. Then have you lost a sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one Joy crown another, so and in such manner, that it seem'd Sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their Joy waded in tears. There was casting up of Eyes, holding up of hands, with Countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by Garment, not by Favour. Our King being ready to leap out of himself, for joy of his found Daughter; as if that joy were now become a Loss, cries, Oh, thy Mother, thy Mother! then asks

Bohemia forgiveneſs; then embraces his Son-in-law; then again worries he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shepherd, which ſtands by, like a weather-beaten Conduit of many Kings Reigns. I never heard of ſuch another encounter, which lames Report to follow it, and undo's deſcription to do it.

Gent. 2. What pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale ſtill, which will have matters to rehearſe, tho Credit be aſleep, and not an ear open; he was torn to pieces with a Bear; This avouches the Shepherds ſon, who has not only his innocence (which ſeems much) to juſtifie him, but a Handkerchief and Rings of his, that Paulina knows.

Gent. 1. What became of his Bark, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wracke the ſame inſtant of their Maſters death, and in the view of the Shepherd; ſo that all the inſtruments which aided to expoſe the Child, were even then loſt, when it was found. But oh the Noble combat, that 'twixt Joy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loſs of her Husband, another elevated that the Oracle was fulfill'd. She lifted the Princeſs from the Earth, and ſo locks her in embracing, as if ſhe would pin her to her heart, that ſhe mighe no more be in danger of loſing.

Gent. 1. The Dignity of this Act was worth the audience of Kings and Princes, for by ſuch was it acted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettieſt touches of all, and that which angled for mine Eyes (caught the water, though not the Fiſh) was, when at the Relation of the Queens death (with the manner how ſhe came to't, bravely confeſs'd, and lamented by the King) how attentiveneſs wounded his Daughter, till (from one ſign of dolour to another) ſhe did (with an Alas,) I would fain ſay, bleed Tears; for I am ſure, my heart wept blood. Who was moſt marble there, changed colour; ſome ſwounded, all ſorrowed; if all the World could have ſeen't, the Woe had been univerſal.

Gent. 1. Are they returned ro the Court?

Gent. 3. No: the Princeſs hearing of her Mothers Statue (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Piece many years in doing, and now newly perform'd by that rare Italian Maſter, Julio Romano, who (had he himſelf eternity, and could put breath into his Work) would beguile Nature of her Cuſtom, ſo perfectly he is her Ape. He ſo near to Hermione, hath done Hermione, that they ſay one would ſpeak ro her, and ſtand in hope of anſwer. Thither (with all greedineſs of affection) are they gone; and there they intend to ſup.

Gent. 2. I thought ſhe had ſome great matter there in hand, for ſhe hath privately twice or thrice a day, ever ſince the death of Hermione, viſited that removed houſe. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that ha's the benefit of acceſs? every wink of an Eye, ſome new Grace will be born: our abſence makes us unthrifty to our Knowledge. Let's along.

(Exit.

Aut. Now (had I not the daſh of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his Son aboard the Prince; told him, I heard them talk of a Farthel, and I know not what; but he at that time over-fond of the Shepherds daughter (ſo he then took her to be) who began to be much Sea-ſick, and himſelf little better, extremity of weather continuing, this Myſtery remained undiſcover'd. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder-out of this ſecret, it would not have reliſh'd among my other diſcredits.

Scene VI.

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Here come thoſe I have done good to againſt my will, and already appearing in the bloſſoms of their Fortune.

Shep. Come boy, I am paſt more Children; but thy Sons and daughters will be all Gentlemen born.

Clo. You are well met (Sir) you denied to fight with me this other day, becauſe I was no Gentleman born. See you theſe clothes? ſay you ſee them not, and think me ſtill no Gentleman born: You were beſt ſay theſe Robes are not Gentlemen born. Give me the Lye; do; and try whether I am not now a Gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now (Sir), a Gentleman born.

Clo. Ay, and have been ſo any time theſe four hours.

Shep. And ſo have I, boy.

Clo. So you have; but I was a Gentleman born before my Father; for the Kings Son took me by the hand, and call'd me brother; and then the two Kings call'd my Father brother; and then the Prince my brother and the Princeſs my Siſter call'd my Father, father, and ſo we wept; and there was the firſt Gentleman-like tears that ever we ſhed.

Shep. We may live, Son, to ſhed many more.

Clo. Ay, or elſe 'twere hard luck, being in ſo prepoſterous eſtate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beſeech you, ſir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your Worſhip, and to give me your good report to the Prince my Maſter.

Shep. 'Prythee ſon do; for we muſt be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, and it like your good Worſhip.

Clo. Give me thy hand; I will ſwear to the Prince, thou art as honeſt a true Fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may ſay it, but not ſwear it.

Clow. Not ſwear it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boors and Franklins ſay it, I'll ſwear it.

Shep. How if it be falſe ſon?

Clo. If it be nere ſo falſe, a true Gentleman may ſwear it in the behalf of his friend: And I'll ſwear to the Prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll ſwear it, and I would thou wouldſt be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove ſo, ſir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall Fellow; if I do not wonder how thou dar'ſt venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, truſt me not. Hark, the Kings and the Princes (our Kindred) are going to ſee the Queens Picture. Come, follow us: We'll be thy good Maſters.

(Exeunt.

Scena Tertia. VII.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizel, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Hermione, (like a Statue) Lords, &c.

Leo. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I have had of thee!

Paul. What, Sovereign ſir,
I did not well, I meant well; all my ſervices
You have paid home. But that you have vouchſafed (VVith your Crown'd Brother, and theſe your contracted Heirs of your Kingdoms) my poor Houſe to viſit,
It is a ſurplus of your Grace, which never
My life may laſt to anſwer.

Leo. O Paulina,
VVe honour you with trouble; but we came
To ſee the Statue of our Queen. Your Gallery

Have

Have we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities; but we saw not
That which my Daughter came to look upon,
The Statue of her Mother.
Paul. As she liv'd Peerless,
So her dead likeness I do well believe
Excells what ever yet you look'd upon,
Or hand of Man hath done; therefore I keep it
Lonely, apart. But here it is; prepare
To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever
Still Sleep mock'd death: behold, and say 'tis well.
I like your silence, it the more shews off (Draws a curtain
Your wonder; but yet speak, first you, (my Liege),
Comes it not something near?
Leo. Her natural Posture.
Chide me (dear Stone) that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she,
In thy not chiding; for she was as tender
As infancy, and grace. But yet, (Paulina),
Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing
So aged as this seems.
Pol. Oh, not by much.
Paul. So much the more our Carvers excellence,
Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her
As she liv'd now.
Leo. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is
Now piercing to my Soul. Oh, thus she stood;
Even with such Life of Majesty, (warm Life,
As now it coldly stands), when first I woo'd her
I am asham'd; do's not the stone rebuke me,
For being more stone than it? Oh Royal Piece!
There's Magick in thy Majesty, which has
My evils conjur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring Daughter took the Spirits,
Standing like Stone with thee.
Perd. And give me leave.
And do not say 'tis Superstition, that
I kneel, and then implore her blessing. Lady,
Dear Queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kiss.
Paul O, patience;
The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's
Not dry.
Cam. My Lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on,
Which sixteen Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry; scarce any Joy
Did ever so long live; no Sorrow,
But kill'd it self much sooner.
Pol. Dear my Brother,
Let him that was the cause of this, have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he
Will piece up in himself.
Paul. Indeed, my Lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor Image
Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is mine),
I'd not have shew'd you it.
Leo. Do not draw the Curtain.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't; lest your Fancy
May think anon, it moves.
Leo. Let be, let be;
Would I were dead, but that methinks already——
(What was he that did make it? See (my Lord),
Would you not deem it breath'd? and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?
Pol. Masterly done.
The very life seems warm upon her Lip.
Leo. The fixture of her Eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.
Paul. I'll draw the Curtain;
My Lord's almost so far transported, that
He'll think anon it lives.
Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together:
No setled senses of the World can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let't alone.
Paul. I am sorry, (Sir), I have thus far stir'd you; but I could afflict you further.
Leo. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction ha's a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort. Still methinks
There is an air comes from her. What fine Chizzel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.
Paul. Good my Lord, forbear;
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'l marr it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With Oily Painting; shall I draw the Curtain?
Leo. No, not these twenty years.
Perd. So long could I
Stand by, a looker on.
Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the Chappel, or resolve you
For more amazement; if you can behold it,
I'll make the Statue move indeed, descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against), I am assisted
By wicked Powers.
Leo. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on; what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.
Paul. It is requir'd
You do awake your Faith; then all stand still.
On; those that think it is unlawful Business
I am about, let them depart.
Leo. Proceed;
No foot shall stir, (Musick
Paul. Musick; awake her: Strike;
'Tis time; descend; be Stone no more; approach,
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come,
I'll fill your Grave up: stir, nay come away:
Bequeath to death your numbness; (for from him
Dear life redeems you) you perceive she stirs, (Her. comes down
Start not, her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful; do not shun her,
Until you see her dye again, for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand;
When she was young, you woo'd her, now in age,
Is she become the Suitor?
Leo. Oh she's warm, (Embracing her
If this be Magick, let it be an art
Lawful as Eating.
Pol. She embraces him.
Cam. She hangs about his neck;
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.
Pol. Ay, and make it manifest where she has lived,
Or how stoln from the dead?
Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Tho yet she speak not. Mark a little while.
Please you to interpose (fair Madam), kneel,
And pray your Mothers blessing, turn good Lady,
Our Perdita is found. Presenting Perdita who kneels.
Her. You gods look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my Daughters head! tell me (mine own),
Where hast thou been preserved? where lived? how found
Thy Fathers Court? For thou shalt hear that I
Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserved
My self, to see the Issue.
Paul. There is time enough for that;
Lest they desire (upon this push) to trouble
Your joys with like relation. Go together,
You precious winners all, your exultation
Partake to every one; I (an old Turtle),

Will

Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My Mate, (that's never to be found again),
Lament till I am lost.
Leo. O peace, Paulina:
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made between's by Vows. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be question'd; for I saw her
(As I thought) dead; and have (in vain), said many
A prayer upon her Grave. I'll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable Husband. Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand; whose worth, and honesty
Is richly noted; and here justified
By Us, a pair of Kings. Let's from this place.
What? look upon my Brother: both your pardons, (To Her.
That ere I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion: This your Son-in-law,
And Son unto the King, whom heavens directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, since first
We were dissever'd. Hastily lead away.

THE LIFE and DEATH OF KING JOHN. A.

The Scene sometimes in England & sometimes in France

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima. The Court of England.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Eſſex, and Salisbury, with the Chattillion of France.

King John.

NOw ſay, Chattillion, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus (after greeting) ſpeaks the King of France,
In my behaviour, to the Majeſty,
The borrowed Majeſty of England here.

Eli. A ſtrange beginning; borrowed Majeſty!

K. John. Silence (good Mother) hear the Embaſſie.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf
Of thy deceaſed Brother Geffrey's Son,
Arthur Plantagenet, lays ~~moſt~~ lawful Claim
To this fair Iſland, and the Territories:
To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine;
Deſiring thee to lay aſide the Sword
Which ſways uſurpingly theſe ſeveral Titles,
And Put the ſame into young Arthur's hand,
Thy Nephew, and right Royal Sovereign.

K. Joh. What follows, if we diſallow of this?

Chat. The proud controul of fierce and bloody War,
To inforce theſe Rights ſo forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we War for War, and Blood for Blood,
Controlment for Controlment; ſo anſwer France.

Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
The fartheſt limit of my Embaſſie.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and ſo depart in peace,
Be thou as lightning in the Eies of France;
For e're thou canſt report, I will be there;
The Thunder of my Cannon ſhall be heard.
So hence! be thou the Trumpet of our wrath,
And ſullen preſage of your own decay.
An honourable conduct let him have,
Pembroke, look to't; farewell Chattillion.

[Exit Chat. and Pem.

Eli. What now, my Son, have I not ever ſaid
How that ambitious Conſtance would not ceaſe
Till ſhe had kindled France and all the World,
Upon the Right and Party of her Son?
This might have been prevented, and made whole
With very eaſie Arguments of Love;
Which now the mannage of two Kingdoms muſt
With fearful bloody iſſue arbitrate.

K. John. Our ſtrong Poſſeſſion, and our Right for us.

Eli. Your ſtrong Poſſeſſion much more than your Right,
Or elſe it muſt go wrong with you and me;
So much my Conſcience whiſpers in your Ear,
Which none but Heaven, and you and I ſhall hear.

Enter a Sheriff.

Eſſex. My Liege, here is the ſtrangeſt controverſie
Come from the Country to be judg'd by you
That e're I heard; ſhall I produce the men

K. John. Let them approach:
Our Abbies and our Priories ſhall pay
This Expedition's Charge. What men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge and Philip. the Baſtard.

Philip. Your faithful Subject, I, a Gentleman,
Born in Northamptonſhire, and eldeſt Son,
As I ſuppoſe, to Faulconbridge, Robert
A Soldier, by the Honour-giving-hand
Of Cordelion, Knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Robert. The Son and Heir to that ſame Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the Elder, and art thou the Heir?
You came not of one Mother then it ſeems?

Philip. Moſt certain of one Mother, mighty King,
That is well known, and, as I think, one Father:
But for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o're to Heaven, and to my Mother;
Of that I doubt, as all mens Children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man, thou doſt ſhame thy Mother,
And wound her Honour with this diffidence.

Phil. I, Madam? No, I have no Reaſon for it,
That is my Brother's Plea, and none of mine,
The which if he can prove, a pops me out,
At leaſt from fair five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my Mother's Honour, and my Land!

K. John. A good blunt Fellow: why, being younger born,
Doth he lay claim to thine Inheritance?

Phil. I know not why, except to get the Land;
But once he ſlandered me with Baſtardy:
But whether I be ~~as~~ true begot or no,
That ſtill I lay upon my Mother's head,
But that I am as well begot, my Liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge your ſelf.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our Father, and this Son like him:
O old Sir Robert, Father, on my knee
I give Heaven thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why what a mad-cap hath heaven lent us here?

Eli. He hath a trick of Cordelion's face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him;
Do you not read ſome tokens of my ſon
In the large compoſition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard: ſirrah ſpeak,
What doth move you to claim your Brother's Land?

Phil. Becauſe he hath a half-face, like my Father,
With half that face would he have all my Land,

A: The troublesome reign of K: John was written in two parts by Wm. Shakespear & Wm. Rowley, & printed in 1611. But The present Play is entirely different, & infinitely superior to it.

A half-fac'd groat, five hundred pound a year?
Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my Father liv'd,
Your Brother did imploy my Father much.
Phil. Well, Sir, by this you cannot get my Land,
Your tale must be how he imploy'd my Mother.
Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany; there with the Emperour
To treat of high Affairs touching that time:
Th'advantage of his absence took the King,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my Fathers;
Where, how he did prevail, I shame to speak:
But truth is truth; large lengths of Seas and Shores
Between my Father, and my Mother lay,
(As I have heard my Father speak himself,)
When this same lusty Gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by Will bequeath'd
His Lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my Mother's Son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time:
Then, good my Liege, let me have what is mine,
My Father's Land, as was my Father's Will.
K. John. Sirrah, your Brother is Legitimate,
Your Father's Wife did after Wedlock bear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazzards of all Husbands
That marry Wives: tell me, how if my Brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this Son,
Had of your Father claim'd this Son for his,
In sooth, good Friend, your Father might have kept
This Calf, bred from his Cow, from all the world.
In sooth he might; then if he were my Brother's,
My Brother might not claim him; nor your Father,
Being none of his, refuse him; this concludes,
My Mother's Son did get your Father's Heir,
Your Father's Heir must have your Father's Land.
Rob. Shall then my Father's Will be of no force
To dispossess that Child which is not his?
Phil. Of no more force to dispossess me, Sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And, like thy Brother, to enjoy thy Land:
Or the reputed Son of Cordelion, our Lee-lion.
Lord of thy Presence, and no Land beside?
Bast. Madam, and if my Brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert's, his like him,
And if my Legs were two such riding Rods,
My Arms such Eel-skins stuft; my Face so thin,
That in mine Ear I durst not stick a Rose, A
Lest men should say, look where three farthings goes,
And to his shape were Heir to all this Land,
Would I might never stir from off this place,
I would give it every Foot to have this Face;
I would not be Sir Nobbe in any case.
Eli. I like thee well; wilt thou forsake thy Fortune,
Bequeath thy Land to him, and follow me?
I am a Soldier, and now bound to France.
Bast. Brother, take you my Land, I'll take my chance;
Your Face hath got five hundred pound a year,
Yet sell your Face for five-pence, and 'tis dear.
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.
Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.
Bast. Our Country manners give our betters way.
K. John. What is thy Name?
Bast. Philip, my Liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Robert's Wives eldest Son.
K. John. From henceforth bear his name
Whose form thou bearest:
Kneel thou down Philip, but rise more great,
Arise Sir Richard and Plantagenet.
Bast. Brother by th' Mother's side, give me your hand,
My Father gave me Honour, yours gave Land,
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got, Sir Robert was away!
Eli. The very Spirit of Plantagenet!
I am thy Grandam; Richard, call me so.
Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth, what tho?
Something about, a little from the right,
In at the Window, or else o're the Hatch:
Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do catch;
Near or far off, well won is still well shot,
And I am I, how e're I was begot.
K. John. Go, Faulconbridge; now hast thou thy desire,
A Landless Knight, makes thee a Landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more than need.
Bast. Brother, adieu, good Fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got i'th' way of honesty.

Scene III.

[Exeunt all but Bastard.
Bast. A Foot of Honour better than I was,
But many, many Foot of Land the worse!
Well, now can I make any Joane a Lady.
Good den, Sir Richard, Godamercy, Fellow,
And if his Name be George, I'll call him Peter;
For new made Honour doth forget mens Names:
'Tis too respective, and too sociable
For your conversion now your Traveller,
He and his Tooth-pick, at my Worships Mess;
And when my Knightly stomach is suffic'd,
Why then I suck my teeth, and Catechise
My picked man of Countrys: my dear, Sir,
(Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,)
I shall beseech you; that is Question now, A. B. C.
And then comes Answer like an Abcy-book:
O Sir, says Answer, at your best Command,
At your Employment, at your Service, Sir:
No Sir, says Question, I sweet Sir, at yours,
And so e're Answer knows what Question would,
Saving in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Appenines,
The Pyrenean and the River Po,
It draws towards supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipful Society,
And fits the mounting Spirit like my self;
For he is but a Bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of Observation,
(And so am I whether I smack or no;)
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior Form, outward Accoutrement;
But from the inward Motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the Ages Tooth, (A meaning Flattery)
Which though I will not Practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.
But who comes in such haste in riding Robes?
What Woman-post is this? hath she no Husband
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me, 'tis my Mother; how now, good Lady,
What brings you here to Court so hastily?

Scene IV.

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

Lady. Where is that Slave, thy Brother? where is he?
That holds in chase mine Honour up and down?
Bast. My Brother Robert, old Sir Robert's Son,
Colbrand the Giant, that same mighty man,
Is it Sir Robert's Son that you seek so?
Lady. Sir Robert's Son, ay thou unreverend Boy,
Sir Robert's Son, why scornest thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Robert's Son, and so art thou.
Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a while?
Gur. Good leave, good Philip.
Bast. Philip! Sparrow, James, Spare me
There's toys abroad, anon I'll tell thee more.
[Exit James.
Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's Son,
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me

Upon

A. Alluding to the three farthing pieces current in Queen Elizabeths time a which had a Rose on the reverse: being of Silver they must be supposed to be very thin.
2 Sr Nobbe, A nickname, in contempt of Sr Robert.

Upon good Friday, and ne're broke his Faſt:
Sir Robert could do well, marry, to confeſs!
Could get me? Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handy-work, therefore good Mother,
To whom am I beholding for theſe Limbs?
Sir Robert never holp to make this Leg.
Lady. Haſt thou conſpired with thy Brother to o
That for thine own gain ſhould'ſt defend mine Honour?
What means this ſcorn, thou moſt untoward Knave?
Baſt. Knight, Knight, good Mother, Baſiliſco-like.
What, I am dub'd, I have it on my ſhoulder:
But Mother, I am not Sir Robert's Son,
I have diſclaim'd Sir Robert and my Land,
Legitimation, Name, and all is gone;
Then, good my Mother, let me know my Father;
Some proper man I hope; who was it, Mother?
Lady. Haſt thou deny'd thy ſelf a Faulconbridge?
Baſt. As faithfully as I deny the Devil.
Lady. King Richard Cordelion was thy Father,
By long and vehement ſuit I was ſeduc'd
To make room for him in my Husbands Bed:
Heaven lay not my tranſgreſſion to my charge,
Thou art the Iſſue of my dear Offence,
Which was ſo ſtrongly urg'd paſt my defence.
Baſt. Now, by this light, were I to get again,
Madam, I would not wiſh a better Father:
Some ſins do bear their priviledge on Earth,
And ſo doth yours; your fault was not your folly;
Needs muſt you lay your heart at his diſpoſe,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Againſt whoſe fury and unmatched force,
The awleſs Lyon could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his Princly heart from Richard's hands:
He that per force robs Lyons of their Hearts,
May eaſily win a Womans: ay, my Mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my Father:
Who lives and dares but ſay, thou didſt not well
When I was got, I'll ſend his Soul to Hell.
Come, Lady, I will ſhew thee to my Kin,
And they ſhall ſay, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadſt ſaid him nay, it had been ſin;
Who ſays it was, he lies, I ſay 'twas not.

Exeunt.

Act II. Scæna Secunda. I.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Dauphin, Auſtria, Conſtance, Arthur.

Lewis. Before Angiers well met brave Auſtria,
Arthur, that great fore-runner of thy Blood,
Richard, that rob'd the Lyon of his heart,
And fought the Holy Wars in Paleſtine,
By this brave Duke came early to his Grave;
And for amends to his Poſterity,
At our importance hither is he come,
To ſpread his Colours Boy, in thy behalf;
And to rebuke the Uſurpation
Of thy unnatural Uncle, Engliſh John,
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.
Arth. God ſhall forgive you Cordelion's death
The rather, that you give his Off-ſpring life,
Shadowing their Right under your Wings of War:
I give you welcome with a Powerleſs Hand,
But with a Heart full of unſtained Love;
Welcome before the Gates of Angiers, Duke.
Lewis. A Noble Boy, who would not do thee right?
Auſt. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiſs,
As Seal to this Indenture of my love;
That to my home I will no more return
Till Angiers, and the Right thou haſt in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd ſhore,
Whoſe foot ſpurns back the Oceans roaring Tides,
And coops from other Lands her Iſlanders;
Even till that England, hedg'd in with the Main,
That water-walled Bulwark, ſtill ſecure
And confident from Foreign purpoſes,
Even till that outmoſt Corner of the Weſt
Salute thee for her King, till then, fair Boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow Arms.
Conſt. O take his Mothers thanks, a Widows thanks,
Till your ſtrong hand ſhall help to give him ſtrength,
To make a more requital to your love.
Auſt. The peace of Heaven is theirs, who lift their Swords
In ſuch a juſt and charitable War.
King. Well, then, to work, our Cannon ſhall be bent
Againſt the Brows of this reſiſting Town;
Call for our cheifeſt men of Diſcipline,
To cull the Plots of beſt Advantages:
We'll lay before this Town our Royal Bones,
Wade to the Market-place in French-mens Blood,
But we will make it ſubject to this Boy.
Conſt. Stay for an anſwer to your Embaſſie,
Leſt unadvis'd you ſtain your Swords with Blood:
My Lord Chatillon may from England bring
That Right in Peace, which here we urge in War,
And then we ſhall repent each drop of Blood,
That hot raſh haſte ſo indirectly ſhed.

Enter Chatillon.

King. A wonder, Lady! lo upon thy wiſh
Our Meſſenger Chatillon is arriv'd;
What England ſays, ſay briefly, gentle Lord,
We coldly pauſe for thee, Chatillion ſpeak.
Chat. Then turn your Forces from this paultry Siege,
And ſtir them up againſt a mightier Task.
England, impatient of your juſt Demands,
Hath put himſelf in Arms; the adverſe winds,
Whoſe leiſure I have ſtaid, have given him time
To Land his Legions all as ſoon as I:
His Marches are expedient to this Town,
His Forces ſtrong, his Souldiers confident:
With him along is come the Mother-Queen,
An Ate ſtirring him to bloud and ſtrife,
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanch of Spain;
With them a Baſtard of the King deceas'd,
And all the unſettled humors of the Land;
Raſh, inconſiderate, fiery Volunteers, Aries
With Ladies Faces, and fierce Dragons Spleens,
Have ſold their Fortunes at their Native Homes,
Bearing their Birth-right proudly on their Backs,
To make a hazzard of new Fortunes here;
In brief, a braver Choice of dauntleſs Spirits
Than now the Engliſh Bottoms have waft o'r,
Did never float upon the ſwelling Tide,
To do offence and ſcathe in Chriſtendom:
The interruption of their churliſh Drums
Cuts off more Circumſtance; they are at hand, [Drums beat.
To parly or to fight, therefore prepare.
King. How much unlook'd for, is this Expedition!
Auſt. By how much unexpected, by ſo much
We muſt awake, endeavour for defence;
For Courage mounteth with occaſion;
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Scene II.

Enter King of England, Baſtard, Queen, Blanch, Pembroke, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France; if France in peace permit
Our juſt and lineal Entrance to our own;
If not, bleed France, and peace aſcend to Heaven!
While we Gods wrathful Agent do correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to Heaven.
Fran. Peace be to England, if that War return
From France to England, there to live in peace!

* Alluding to a part in a Play known at that time called Soliman & Perseda

England we love, and for that England's ſake,
With burthen of our Armour here we ſweat;
This toyl of ours ſhould be a work of thine,
But thou from loving England art ſo far,
That thou haſt under-wrought his lawful King,
Cut off the ſequence of Poſterity,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a Rape
Upon the Maiden-Vertue of the Crown.
Look here upon thy Brother Geffreys Face,
Theſe eyes, theſe brows, were moulded out of his;
This little Abſtract doth contain that large,
Which dy'd in Geffrey; and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a Volume.
That Geffrey was thy Elder Brother born,
And this his Son; England was Geffreys Right,
And this is Geffreys; in the Name of God,
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When living blood doth in theſe Temples beat
Which owe the Crown that thou o're-maſtereſt?
K. John. From whom haſt thou this great Commiſſion,
To draw my Anſwer from thy Articles? [France,
Fra. From that ſupernal Judge that ſtirs good thoughts
In any Breaſt of ſtrong Authority,
To look into the Blots and Stains of Right,
That Judge hath made me Guardian to this Boy;
Under whoſe Warrant I impeach thy Wrong,
And by whoſe help I mean to chaſtiſe it.
K. John. Alack thou doſt uſurp Authority.
Fran. Excuſe it is to beat Uſurping down.
Queen. Who is it thou doſt call Uſurper, France?
Conſt. Let me make anſwer: thy Uſurping Son.
Queen. Out inſolent, thy Baſtard ſhall be King,
That thou may'ſt be a Queen, and check the World.
Conſt. My Bed was ever to thy Son as true,
As thine was to thy Husband, and this Boy,
Liker in feature to his Father Geffrey,
Than thou and John, in manners being as like,
As Rain to Water, or Devil to his Dam.
My Boy a Baſtard? by my Soul I think
His Father never was ſo true begot,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his Mother.
Qu. There's a good Mother, Boy, that blots thy Father.
Conſt. There's a good Grandam, Boy,
That would blot thee.
Auſt. Peace.
Baſt. Hear the Cryer.
Auſt. What the Devil art thou?
Baſt. One that will play the Devil, Sir, with you.
And a may catch your hide and you alone:
You are the Hare, of whom the Proverb goes,
Whoſe valour plucks dead Lyons by the beard;
I'le ſmoak your Skin-coat, and I catch you right,
Sirra, look to't, i'faith I will, i'faith.
Blan. O well did he become that Lyons Robe,
That did diſrobe the Lyon of that Robe.
Baſt. It lyes as ſightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides ſhoos upon an Aſs:
But, Aſs, I'le take that burthen from your back,
Or lay on that ſhall make your ſhoulders crack.
Auſt. What cracker is this ſame that deafs our ears
With this abundance of ſuperfluous breath?
King Lewis determine what we ſhall do ſtreight.
Lewis. Women and Fools break off your Conference.
King John, this is the very ſum of all;
England, and Ireland, Angiers, Touraine, Main,
In Right of Arthur do I claim of thee:
Wilt thou reſign them, and lay down thy Arms?
John. My life as ſoon, I do deſie thee, France,
Arthur of Britaigne, yield thee to my hand;
And out of my dear love I'le give thee more,
Than e're the Coward-hand of France can win;
Submit thee, Boy.
Queen. Come to thy Grandam, Child.
Conſt. Do, Child, go to it Grandam, Child,
Give Grandam Kingdom, and it Grandam will Give it a Plum, a Cherry, and a Fig,
There's a good Grandam.
Arthur. Good my Mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my Grave,
I am not worth this coyl that's made for me.
Qu. Mo. His Mother ſhames him ſo, poor Boy he weeps.
Conſt. Now ſhame upon yon whe're ſhe does or no.
His Grandam's wrong, and not his Mothers ſhames,
Draws thoſe Heaven-moving Pearls from his poor Eyes,
Which Heaven ſhall take in nature of a Fee:
I, with theſe ſad Cryſtal Beads Heaven ſhall be brib'd
To do him Juſtice, and Revenge on you.
Qu. Thou monſtrous ſlanderer of Heaven and Earth.
Conſt. Thou monſtrous injurer of Heaven and Earth,
Call me not ſlanderer, thou and thine uſurp
The Domination, Royalties and Rights
Of this oppreſſed Boy; this is thy Eldeſt Son's Son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee;
Thy ſins are viſited in this poor Child,
The Canon of the Law is laid on him,
Being but the ſecond generation
Removed from thy ſin-conceiving Womb.
John. Bedlam have done.
Conſt. I have but this to ſay,
That he is not only plagued for her ſin,
But God hath made her ſin and her, the plague
On this removed iſſue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her ſin: his injury
Her injury the Beadle to her ſin,
All puniſh'd in the perſon of this Child,
And all for her, a plague upon her.
Qu. Thou unadviſed ſcold, I can produce
A Will that bars the Title of thy Son.
Conſt. I, who doubts, a will: a wicked will,
A womans will, a cankered Grandams will.
Fran. Peace Lady, pauſe, or be more temperate,
It ill beſeems this preſence to cry ay me
To theſe ill tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet ſummon hither to the walls
Theſe men of Angiers, let us hear them ſpeak,
Whoſe Title they admit, Arthurs or Johns.

Scene III.

Trumpet ſounds.
Enter a Citizen upon the Walls.

Citi. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the Walls?
Fran. 'Tis France, for England.
John. England for it ſelf;
You men of Angiers, and my loving Subjects.
Fran. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's Subjects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.
John. For our advantage; therefore hear us firſt:
Theſe Flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and proſpect of your Town,
Have hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to ſpit forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainſt your walls;
All preparations for a bloody Siege
And mercileſs proceeding, by theſe French,
Comfort your Cities eyes, your winking gates;
And but for our approach, thoſe ſleeping ſtones,
That as a waiſte doth girdle you about,
By the compulſion of their Ordinance
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been diſhabited, and wide havock made
For bloody power to ruſh upon your peace.
But on the ſight of us your lawful King,
Who painfully with much expedient march
Have brought a counter-check before your Gates,
To ſave unſcratch'd your Cities threatned Cheeks:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchſafe a parle;
And now in ſtead of Bullets wrapt in fire,

To

To make a ſhaking Feaver in your Walls,
They ſhoot but calm words, folded up in ſmoak,
To make a faithleſs error in your ears;
Which truſt accordingly kind Citizens,
And let us in. Your King, whoſe labour'd ſpirits
Fore-wearied in this action of ſwift-ſpeed,
Craves harbourage within your City walls.
Fran. When I have ſaid, make anſwer to us both.
Loe in this right hand, whoſe protection
Is moſt divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, ſtands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder Brother of this man,
And King o're him, and all that he enjoys:
For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In warlick march, theſe greens before your Town;
Being no further Enemy to you
Than the conſtraint of Hoſpitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppreſſed Child,
Religiouſly provokes. Be pleaſed then
To pay that duty which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this young Prince,
And then our Arms, like to a muzled Bear,
Save in aſpect, hath all offence ſeal'd up:
Our Cannons malice, vainly ſhall be ſpent
Againſt th' invulnerable Clouds of Heaven;
And with a bleſſed, and un-vext retire,
With unhack'd ſwords, and Helmets all unbruis'd,
We will bear home that luſty blood again,
Which here we came to ſpout againſt your Town;
And leave your Children, Wives, and you in peace.
But if you fondly paſs our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the rounder of your old fac'd Walls,
Can hide you from our Meſſengers of War;
Though all theſe Engliſh, and their Diſcipline,
Were harbour'd in their rude Circumference:
Then tell us, ſhall your City call us Lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?
Or ſhall we give the ſignal to our rage,
And ſtalk in blood to our poſſeſſion?
Citi. In brief, we are the King of England's Subjects;
For him, and in his right, we hold this Town.
John. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.
Citi. That can we not; but he that proves the King,
To him will we prove loyal; till that time
Have we ramm'd up our Gates againſt the world.
John. Doth not the Crown of England, prove the King?
And if not that, I bring you Witneſſes,
Twice fifteen thouſand hearts of England's breed.
Baſt. (Baſtards, and elſe.)
John. To verifie our Title with their Lives.
Fran. As many, and as well born Bloods as thoſe.
Baſt. (Some Baſtards too.)
Fran. Stand in his face to contradict his Claim.
Citi. Till you compound whoſe right is worthieſt,
We for the worthieſt hold the right from both.
John. Then God forgive the ſin of all thoſe ſouls,
That to their everlaſting reſidence,
Before the dew of evening fall, ſhall fleet
In dreadful trial of our Kingdoms King!
Fran. Amen, Amen, mount Chevaliers to Arms.
Baſt. Saint George that ſwindg'd the Dragon,
And e're ſince ſits on's horſeback at mine Hoſteſs door,
Teach us ſome fence! Sirrah, were I at home
At your den, Sirrah, with your Lionneſs,
I would ſet an Ox-head to your Lyons hide: A
And make a Monſter of you. (To Austria
Auſt. Peace, no more.
Baſt. O tremble; for you hear the Lion roar.
John. Up higher to the plain, where we'll ſet forth,
In beſt appointment, all our Regiments.
Baſt. Speed then to take advantage of the Field.
Fran. It ſhall be ſo; and at the other hill
Command the reſt to ſtand. God and our right!
(Exeunt.

Scene IV.

Here after excurſions, enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the Gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers open wide your Gates,
And let young Arthur Duke of Britaigne in,
Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an Engliſh Mother,
Whoſe Sons lye ſcatter'd on the bleeding ground:
Many a Widows Husband groveling lyes,
Coldly embracing the diſcolour'd Earth;
And Victory with little loſs doth play
Upon the dancing Banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly diſplay'd
To enter Conquerors; and to proclaim
Arthur of Britaigne, England's King, and yours.

Enter Engliſh Herald with Trumpet.

E. Her. Rejoice you men of Angiers, ring your Bells;
King John, your King and England's, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day,
Their Armours, that march'd hence ſo ſilver bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmens Blood.
There ſtuck no Plume in any Engliſh Creſt,
That is removed by a Staff of France.
Our Colours do return in thoſe ſame hands,
That did diſplay them when we firſt marcht forth;
And Like a jolly Troop of Huntſmen come
Our luſty Engliſh, all with purpled hands,
Dy'd in the dying ſlaughter of their foes.
Open your Gates, and give the Victors way.
Hub. Heralds, from off our Towers we might behold,
From firſt to laſt, the on-ſet and retire,
Of both your Armies, whoſe equality
By our beſt eyes cannot be cenſured;
Blood hath bought Blood, and blows have anſwered blows;
Strength matcht with ſtrength, and power confronted
Both are alike, and both alike we like;
One muſt prove greateſt. While they weigh ſo even,
We hold our Town for neither; yet for both.

Scene V.

Enter the two Kings with their Powers at ſeveral doors.

John. France, haſt thou yet more Blood to caſt away?
Say, ſhall the current of our Right run on?
Whoſe paſſage vext with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native Channel, and o're-ſwell
With courſe diſturb'd even thy confining ſhores;
Unleſs thou let his ſilver Water keep
A peaceful progreſs to the Ocean.
Fran. England, thou haſt not ſav'd one drop of Blood
In this hot Tryal, more than we of France;
Rather loſt more. And by this hand I ſwear
That ſways the Earth this Climate over-looks,
Before we will lay down our juſt-born Arms;
We'll put thee down, 'gainſt whom theſe Arms we bear,
Or add a Royal Number to the dead;
Gracing the Scroul that tells of this Wars loſs,
With ſlaughter coupled to the name of Kings.
Baſt. Ha! Majeſty; how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of Kings is ſet on fire!
Oh, now doth death line his dead chaps with ſteel;
The Swords of Souldiers are his Teeth, his Phangs;
And now he feaſts, mouthing the fleſh of men
In undetermin'd differences of Kings.
Why ſtand theſe Royal Fronts amazed thus?
Cry havock Kings, back to the ſtained field,
You equal Potents, fiery kindled Spirits;
Then let confuſion of one part confirm
The others peace; till then, blows, blood, and death.
John. Whoſe Party do the Townſmen yet admit?
Fran. Speak Citizens, for England, who's your King?
Citi. The King of England, when we know the King.

A. The Arch Duke wore a Lions hide which had belong'd to K. Rich. Cœur-de-lion

Fran. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.
John. In us, that are our own great Deputy,
And bear poſſeſſion of our Perſon here,
Lord of our preſence, Angiers, and of you.
Fran. A greater power than We denies all this,
And till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former ſcruple in our ſtrong barr'd Gates:
Kings of our fear, until our fears reſolv'd
Be by ſome certain King purg'd and depos'd.
Baſt. By Heaven, theſe Scroyles of Angiers flout you (Kings,
And ſtand ſecurely on their Battlements,
As in a Theater, whence they gape and point
At your induſtrious Scenes and acts of death.
Your Royal Preſences, be rul'd by me,
Do like the Mutines of Jeruſalem,
Be friends a while, and both conjointly bend
Your ſharpeſt deeds of malice on this Town.
By Eaſt and Weſt let France and England mount
Their battering Cannon charged to the mouths,
Till their ſoul-fearing clamours have braul'd down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous City,
I'd play inceſſantly upon theſe Jades,
Even till unfenced deſolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar Air.
That done, diſſever your united Strengths,
And part your mingled Colours once again,
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point.
Then in a moment Fortune ſhall cull forth,
Out of one ſide, her happy Minion,
To whom in favour ſhe ſhall give the day,
And kiſs him with a glorious Victory.
How like you this wild Counſel mighty States,
Smacks it not ſomething of the policy?
John. Now by the Sky that hangs above our heads,
I like it well. France, ſhall we knit our Powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then after fight who ſhall be King of it?
Baſt. And if thou haſt the mettle of a King,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peeviſh Town;
Turn thou the mouth of thy Artillery,
As we will ours, againſt theſe ſaucy Walls;
And when that we have daſh'd them to the ground,
Why then defie each other, and pell-mell,
Make work upon our ſelves for Heaven or Hell.
Fran. Let it be ſo; ſay, where will you aſſault?
John. We from the Weſt will ſend deſtruction
Into this Cities boſom.
Auſt. I from the North.
Fran. Our Thunder from the South,
Shall rain their drift of Bullets on this Town.
Baſt. O prudent Diſcipline! From North to South:
Auſtria and France ſhoot in each others mouth,
I'le ſtir them to it: come away, away.
Hub. Hear us great Kings; vouchſafe a while to ſtay,
And I ſhall ſhew you peace, and fair-fac'd League;
Win you this City without ſtroak, or wound;
Reſcue thoſe Breathing lives to die in Beds,
That here come Sacrifices for the Field:
Perſevere not, but hear me, mighty Kings.
John. Speak on with favour, we are bent to hear.
Hub. That Daughter there of Spain, the Lady Blanch,
Is near to England, look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dolphin, and that lovely Maid.
If luſty love ſhould go in queſt of Beauty,
Where ſhould he find it fairer, than in Blanch?
If zealous Love go in ſearch of Vertue,
Where ſhould he find it purer than in Blanch?
If Love ambitious, ſought a Match of Birth,
Whoſe Veins bound richer Blood than Lady Blanch?
Such as ſhe is, in Beauty, Vertue, Birth,
Is the young Dolphin every way compleat;
If not compleat of, ſay he is not ſhe;
And ſhe again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that ſhe is not he:
He is the half part of a bleſſed man,
Left to be finiſhed by ſuch as ſhe;
And ſhe a fair divided Excellence,
Whoſe fulneſs of perfection lies in him.
O! two ſuch ſilver Currents when they join,
Do glorifie the Banks that bound them in:
And two ſuch Shores, to two ſuch Streams made one,
Two ſuch controlling Bounds ſhall you be, Kings,
To theſe two Princes, if you marry them.
This Union ſhall do more than Battery can,
To our faſt cloſed Gates: for at this Match,
With ſwifter Spleen than Powder can enforce,
The mouth of paſſage ſhall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but without this Match,
The Sea enraged is not half ſo deaf,
Lyons more confident, Mountains and Rocks
More free from Motion, no not death himſelf
In mortal fury half ſo peremptory,
As we to keep this City.
Baſt. Here's a ſtay,
That ſhakes the rotten Carkaſs of old death
Out of his rags. Here's a large mouth indeed,
That ſpits forth death, and Mountains, Rocks, and Seas,
Talks as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
As Maids of thirteen do of Puppy dogs.
What Cannoneer begot this luſty Blood,
He ſpeaks plain Cannon fire, and ſmoak, and bounce,
He gives the Baſtinado with his Tongue:
Our ears are cudgel'd; not a Word of his
But buffets better than a Fiſt of France;
Zounds, I was never ſo bethumpt with words,
Since I firſt call'd my Brother's Father Dad.
Old Qu. Son, liſt to this conjunction, make this Match,
Give with our Neece a Dowry large enough;
For by this Knot, thou ſhalt ſo ſurely tye,
Thy now unſur'd Aſſurance to the Crown,
That yon green Boy ſhall have no Sun to ripe,
The bloom that promiſeth a mighty fruit,
I ſee a yielding in the looks of France:
Mark how they whiſper, urge them while their ſouls
Are capable of this ambition,
Leſt zeal now melted by the windy breath
Of ſoft petitions, pity and remorſe,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.
Hub. Why anſwer not the double Majeſties,
This friendly Treaty of our threatned Town?
Fra. Speak England firſt, that hath been forward firſt
To ſpeak unto this City: What ſay you?
John. If that the Dolphin there, thy Princely Son,
Can in this Book of Beauty read I love;
Her Dowry ſhall weigh equal with the Queen,
For Anjou, and fair Touraine, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this ſide the Sea,
(Except this City now by us beſieg'd)
Find liable to our Crown and dignity,
Shall gild her Bridal Bed, and make her rich
In Titles, Honours, and Promotions,
As ſhe in Beauty, Education, Blood,
Holds hands with any Princeſs of the World.
Fra. What ſay'ſt thou, Boy? look in the Ladies face.
Dol. I do, my Lord, and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous Miracle,
The ſhadow of my ſelf form'd in her eye,
Which being but the ſhadow of your Son,
Becomes a Son, and makes your Son a ſhadow;
I do proteſt I never lov'd my ſelf
Till now, infixed I behold my ſelf,
Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye.
[Whiſpers with Blanch.
Baſt. Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth eſpie
Himſelf Loves Traitor; this is pity now,
That hang'd, and drawn, and quarter'd there ſhould be,

In

In ſuch a Love, ſo vile a Lout as he.
Blan. My Uncles Will in this reſpect is mine.
If he ſee ought in you that makes him like,
That any thing, he ſees, which moves his liking,
I can with eaſe tranſlate it to my will:
Or if you will, to ſpeak more properly,
I will enforce it eaſily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my Lord,
That all I ſee in you is worthy Love,
Than this; that nothing do I ſee in you,
(Though churliſh thoughts themſelves ſhould be your Judge)
That I can find, ſhould merit any hate.
John. What ſay theſe young-ones? What ſay you my Neece?
Blan. That ſhe is bound in honour ſtill to do
What you in wiſdom ſtill vouchſafe to ſay.
John. Speak then, Prince Dolphin, can you love this Lady?
Dol. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her moſt unfeignedly.
John. Then do I give Volqueſſen, Torain, Main,
Poictiers, and Anjou, theſe five Provinces
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thouſand Marks of Engliſh Coyn;
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withall,
Command thy Son and Daughter to join hands.
Fran. It likes us well; young Princes, cloſe your Hands.
Auſt. And your Lips too, for I am well aſſur'd,
That I did ſo, when I was firſt aſſur'd,
Fran. Now Citizens of Angiers, ope your Gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary's Chappel preſently,
The Rites of Marriage ſhall be ſolemniz'd.
Is not the Lady Conſtance in this Troop?
I know ſhe is not; for this Match made up,
Her preſence would have interrupted much.
Where is ſhe and her Son, tell me, who knows?
Dol. She is ſad and paſſionate at your Highneſs Tent.
Fran. And by my faith, this League that we have made,
Will give her ſadneſs very little cure.
Brother of England, how may we content
This Widow Lady? in her Right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turned another way,
To our own vantage.
John. We will heal up all,
For we'll create young Arthur Duke of ~~Britain~~ Bretagne,
And Earl of Richmond, and this rich fair Town
We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Conſtance,
Some ſpeedy Meſſenger bid her repair
To our Solemnity: I truſt we ſhall,
(If not fill up the meaſure of her will)
Yet in Some meaſure ſatisfie her ſo,
That we ſhall ſtop her Exclamation.
Go we, as well as haſte will ſuffer us,
To this unlook'd for, unprepared pomp. [Exeunt.
Baſt. Mad world, mad Kings, mad Compoſition!
John, to ſtop Arthurs Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part;
And France, whoſe Armour Conſcience buckled on,
Whom Zeal and Charity brought to the Field,
As Gods own Soldier, rounded in the ear
With that ſame Purpoſe-changer, that ſly Devil,
That Broker, that ſtill breaks the pate of Faith,
That daily Break-Vow, he that wins of all,
Of Kings, of Beggars, old men, young men, maids,
Who, having no external thing to loſe,
But the word Maid, cheats the poor Maid of that.
That ſmooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling Commodity;
Commodity, the bias of the World;
The World, who of it ſelf is poiſed well,
Made to run even, upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This ſway of motion, this Commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpoſe, courſe, intent:
And this ſame Bias, this Commodity,
This Bawd, this Broker, that all-changing-world,
Clapt on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,
From a reſolv'd and honourable War,
To a moſt baſe and vile concluded Peace.
And why rail I on this Commodity?
But for becauſe he hath not wooed me yet;
Not that I have the power to clutch my Hand,
When his fair Angels would ſalute my Palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor Beggar, raileth on the Rich.
Well, while I am a Beggar, I will rail,
And ſay there is no ſin but to be rich;
And being Rich, my Vertue then ſhall be,
To ſay there is no Vice, but Beggary.
Since Kings break Faith upon Commodity,
Gain, be my Lord, for I will worſhip thee. [Exit.

Actus Secundus. III.

The French Kings Pavilion.

Enter Conſtance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Conſt. Gone to be married! gone to ſwear a peace!
False blood to false blood joyn'd! Gone to be Friends?
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch thoſe Provinces?
It is not ſo, thou haſt miſpoke, miſheard;
Be well advis'd, tell o're thy tale again,
It cannot be; thou doſt but ſay 'tis ſo.
I truſt I may not truſt thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee man,
I have a Kings Oath to the contrary.
Thou ſhalt be puniſh'd for thus frighting me,
For I am ſick, and capable of fears,
Oppreſt with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
A Widow, Husbandleſs, ſubject to fears,
A Woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confeſs thou didſt but jeſt,
With my vext Spirits, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What doſt thou mean by ſhaking of thy head?
Why doſt thou look ſo ſadly on my Son?
What means that hand upon that breaſt of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o're his bounds?
Be theſe ſad ſigns confirmers of thy words?
Then ſpeak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.
Sal. As true, as I believe you think them falſe,
That give you cauſe to prove my ſaying true.
Conſt. Oh, if thou teach me to believe this ſorrow,
Teach thou this ſorrow how to make me dye;
And let belief, and life encounter ſo,
As doth the fury of two deſperate men,
Which in the very meeting, fall and dye.
Lewis marry Blanch! O Boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot brook thy ſight,
This news hath made thee a moſt ugly man.
Sal. What other harm have I, good Lady, done,
But ſpoke the harm, that is by others done.
Conſt. Which harm within it ſelf ſo hainous is,
As it makes harmful all that ſpeak of it.
Arthur. I do beſeech you, Madam, be content.
Conſt. If thou that bidſt me be content, wert grim,
Ugly, and ſlanderous to thy Mothers Womb,
Full of unpleaſing blots, and ſightleſs ſtains,
Lame, fooliſh, crooked, ſwart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul Moles, and eye-offending marks;
I would not care, I then would be content;
For then I ſhould not love thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great Birth, nor deſerve a Crown.

But

But thou art fair, and at thy birth, dear Boy!
Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee great.
Of Natures Gifts thou may'st with Lillies boast,
And with the half blown Rose. But Fortune, oh!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee,
She adulterates hourly with thy Uncle John,
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread down fair respect of Soveraignty,
And made his Majesty the Bawd to theirs.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and John,
That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John!
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave these woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. Pardon me, Madam,
I may not go without you to the Kings.

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt, I will not go with thee.
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop,
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let Kings assemble: for my grief's so great,
That no Supporter but the huge firm Earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my Throne, bid Kings come bow to it.

Sits down on the Floor.

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima. II.

Enter King John, France, Dolphin, Blanch, Elianor, Philip, Austria, Constance.

Fran. 'Tis true, fair Daughter, and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept Festival:
To solemnize this day, the glorious Sun
Stays in his course, and plays the Alchymist,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meager cloddy Earth to glittering Gold:
The yearly course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it, but a Holy-day.

Const. A wicked day, and not a Holy-day. (Rising)
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden Letters should be set
Among the high Tides in the Kalendar?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the Week,
This day of Shame, Oppression, Perjury:
Or if it must stand still, let Wives with Child
Pray that their Burthens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be crost:
Except But on this day, let Sea-men fear no wrack;
No bargains break, that are not this day made;
This day all things begun, come to ill end,
Yea, faith it self, to hollow falshood change!

Fran. By Heaven, Lady you shall have no cause
To curse the fair Proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawn'd to you my Majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a Counterfeit
Resembling Majesty, which being touch'd and try'd,
Proves valueless: you are forsworn, forsworn,
You came in Arms to spill my Enemies Blood,
But now in Arms, you strengthen it with yours.
The grapling vigor, and rough frown of War
Is cold in amity, and painted peace,
And our Oppression hath made up this League.
Arm, arm, you Heavens, against these perjur'd Kings!
A Widow cries, be Husband to me, (Heavens)!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the days in peace; but e're Sun-set,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd Kings,
Hear me, Oh, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.

Const. War, war, no peace; Peace is to me a War:
O Lymoges, O Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou Slave, thou Wretch, thou Coward,
Thou Little Valiant, Great in Villany:
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side;
Thou Fortunes Champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous Ladyship is by
To teach thee safety; thou art perjur'd too,
And sooth'st up greatness. What a Fool art thou,
A ramping Fool, to brag, to stamp, and swear,
Upon my Party; thou cold-blooded Slave,
Hast thou not spoke like Thunder on my side?
Been sworn my Souldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy Stars, thy Fortune, and thy Strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my Foes?
Thou wear a Lyons hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. O that a man should speak those words to me!

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, Villain, for thy life.

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

John. We like not this, thou dost forget thy self.

Scene III.

Enter Pandulph.

Fran. Here comes the holy Legate of the Pope.

Pan. Hail, you anointed Deputies of Heaven!
To thee King John my holy errand is;
I Pandulph, of fair Millan Cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the Legate here,
Do in his Name religiously demand
Why thou against the Church, our holy Mother,
So wilfully dost spurn, and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy See?
This in our foresaid holy Fathers Name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

John. What earthly name to Interrogatories
Can tax the free-breath of a sacred King?
Thou canst not, (Cardinal), devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the Pope.
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England,
Add thus much more, that no Italian Priest
Shall tythe or toll in our Dominions:
But as we, under Heaven, are supream head,
So under him that great Supremacy
Where we do Reign, we will alone uphold,
Without th' assistance of a mortal hand.
So tell the Pope, all Reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd Authority.

Fran. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

John. Though you, and all the Kings of Cristendom
Are led so grosly by this medling Priest,
Dreading the Curse that Money may buy out;
And, by the merit of vile Gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted Pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sells Pardon from himself:
Though you, and all the rest so grosly led,
This jugling witch-craft with Revenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone, do me oppose
Against the Pope, and count his Friends my Foes.

Pand. Then by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curst, and excommunicate;
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his Allegiance to an Heretique,
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized and worshipp'd as a Saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse a while,
Good Father Cardinal, cry thou Amen
To my keen Curses; for without my Wrong
There is no Tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pan. There's Law and Warrant, (Lady), for my curse.

Const.

* (Aust.) Methinks that Richards pride & Richards fall should be a precedent to fright you, Sir
(Dh.) What words are these? how do my sinews shake
My fathers foe clad in my fathers spoil!

Delay not Richard, kill the Villain first
Pierce be him of the matchless monuments
Thy fathers triumph o're the Savages
Now by his soul I swear, my Father's soul
Twice will I not review the morning light

Const. And for mine too; when Law can do no right,
Let it be lawful, that Law bar no wrong:
Law cannot give my Child his Kingdom here;
For he that holds his Kingdom, holds the Law;
Therefore since Law it self is perfect wrong,
How can the Law forbid my Tongue to curse?
Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that Arch-heretique,
And raise the Power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.
Eleo. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand.
Const. Look to that Devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoyning hands Hell lose a Soul.
Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinal.
Bast. And hang a Calves-skin on his recreant Limbs.
Aust. Well, Ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs,
Because, ——
Bast. Your Breeches best may carry them.
John. Philip, what say'st thou to the Cardinal?
Const. What should he say, but as the Cardinal?
Dolph. Bethink you Father; for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy Curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a Friend;
Forgo the easier.
Blu. That is the Curse of Rome.
Con. O Lewis, stand fast, the Devil tempts thee here
In likeness of a new untrimmed Bride.
Blu. The Lady Constance speaks not from her Faith:
But from her Need.
Const. Oh, if thou grant my Need,
Which onely lives but by the death of Faith,
That Need, must needs infer this Principle,
That Faith would live again by death of Need:
O then tread down my Need, and Faith mounts up:
Keep my Need up, and Faith is trodden down.
John. The King is moved, and answers not to this.
Const. O be remov'd from him, and answer well:
Aust. Do so, King Philip, hang no more in doubt.
Bast. Hang nothing but a Calves-skin, most sweet lout.
Fran. I am perplext, and know not what to say.
Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?
Fran. Good reverend Father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow your self?
This Royal hand, and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all Religious strength of sacred Vows:
The latest breath, that gave the sound of words,
Was deep sworn Faith, Peace, Amity, true Love
Between our Kingdoms and our Royal selves,
And even before this Truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this Royal Bargain up of Peace,
Heaven knows they were besmear'd and over stain'd
With Slaughter's Pencil; where Revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed Kings:
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of Blood?
So newly joyn'd in love? so strong in both,
Unyoke this seisure, and this kind regreet?
Play fast and loose with Faith? so jest with Heaven,
Make such unconstant Children of our selves,
As now again to snatch our Palm from Palm?
Un-swear Faith sworn, and on the Marriage-bed
Of smiling Peace to march a bloody Host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy Sir,
My reverend Father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle Order, and then we shall be blest
To do your pleasure, and continue Friends.
Pand. All Form is formless, Order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore to Arms! be Champion of our Church!
Or let the Church our Mother breathe her curse,
A Mothers curse, on her revolting Son.
France, thou may'st hold a Serpent by the Tongue,
A cased Lion by the mortal Paw,
A fasting Tyger safer by the Tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.
Fran. I may dis-joyn my Hand, but not my Faith.
Pand. So mak'st thou Faith an Enemy to Faith;
And like a Civil War set'st Oath to Oath,
Thy Tongue against thy Tongue. O, let thy Vow
First made to Heaven, first be to Heaven perform'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church.
What since thou swor'st, is sworn against thy self,
And may not be performed by thy self,
For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss,
Is not amiss, when it is truly done:
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done, not doing it:
The better Act of Purposes mistook,
Is to mistake again; though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood, falsehood cures, as fire cools fire
Within the scorching veins of one new burn'd.
It is Religion that doth make Vows kept,
But thou hast sworn against Religion:
By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou swear'st;
And mak'st an Oath the surety for thy Truth
Against an Oath, the Truth, thou art unsure true
To swear, swear, only not to be forsworn;
Else what a mockery should it be to swear?
But thou dost swear, only to be forsworn,
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear,
Therefore thy latter Vows, against thy first,
Is in thy self Rebellion to thy self:
And better Conquest never canst thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy, loose suggestions:
Upon which better part, our Pray'rs come in,
If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know
The peril of our Curses light on thee
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But in despair, dye under their black weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat Rebellion.
Bast. Will't not be?
Will not a Calves-skin stop that mouth of thine?
Daul. Father, to Arms.
Blanch. Upon thy Wedding-day?
Against the blood that thou hast married?
What, shall our Feast be kept with slaughtered men?
Shall braying Trumpets, and loud churlish Drums,
Clamours of Hell, be measures to our Pomp?
O Husband, hear me: ay, alack, how new
Is Husband in my Mouth? even for that Name
Which till this time my Tongue did ne're pronounce,
Upon my knee I beg, go not to Arms
Against mine Uncle.
Const. O, upon my knee, made hard with kneeling,
I do pray to thee, thou vertuous Daulphin,
Alter not the Doom, fore-thought by Heaven.
Blan. Now shall I see thy love; what motive may
Be stronger with thee than the Name of Wife?
Const. That which upholdeth him, that thee upholds,
His Honour. Oh, thine Honour, Lewis, thine Honour!
Dolph. I muse your Majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound Respects do pull you on?
Pand. I will denounce a Curse upon his head.
Fran. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall from thee.
Const. O fair return of banish'd Majesty!
Eleo. O foul revolt of French Inconstancy!
Eng. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.
Bast. Old Time the Clock-Setter, that bald Sexton, Time,
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.
Blan. The Sun's o'recast with Blood: fair day, adieu!
Which is the side that I must go withall?

I am

(And split thy heart for wearing it so long.
K. John) We like not this, thou dost forget thyself.

I am with both, each Army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirle asunder, and dismember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win:
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose:
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine:
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Who ever wins, on that side shall I lose:
Assured loss, before the match be play'd.
Dolph. Lady, with me, with me thy Fortune lyes.
Bla. There where my Fortune lives, there my life dies.
John. Cosen, go draw our Puissance together. (Exit Bast.
France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can allay, nothing but Blood,
The Blood, and dearest valued Blood of France.
Fran. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn
To ashes, e're our blood shall quench that fire:
Look to thy self, thou art in jeopardy.
John. No more than he that threats. To Arms let's hie.
[Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Secunda.~~ IV.

A Field of Battle.

Allarms, Excursions: Enter Bastard with Austria's head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some fiery Devil hovers in the sky,
And pours down mischief. Austria's head lye there,
Thus hath King Richard's Son performed his Vow,
And offered Austria's blood for sacrifice unto his Father's Enter John, Arthur, Hubert. Ever living Soul.

~~While Philip breathes.~~ Cousin
John. Hubert, keep this Boy: Philip make up;
My Mother is assailed in our Tent,
And tane, I fear.
Bast. My Lord, I rescued her:
Her Highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on, my Liege, for very little Pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end. [Exit.

Scene V.

Alarms, Excursions, Retreat. Enter John Eleanor, Arthur, Bastard, Hubert, Lords.

John. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind (To Ele.
So strongly guarded: Cosen, look not sad, To Arthur.
Thy Grandam loves thee, and thy Uncle will
As dear be to thee, as thy Father was.
Arth. O, this will make my Mother die with grief.
John. Cosen, away for England, haste before, To Bast.
And e're our coming see thou shake the Bags
Of hoarding Abbots, imprisoned Angels
Set at liberty: The fat ribs of Peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
Use our Commission in his utmost force.
Bast. Bell, Book, and Candle, shall not drive me back,
When Gold and Silver becks me to come on.
I leave your Highness: Grandam, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your fair safety; so I kiss your hand.
Ele. Farewell, gentle Cosen.
John. Coz, farewell!
Ele. Come hither little Kinsman, hark, a word.
John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much; within this wall of flesh
There is a Soul counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good Friend, thy voluntary Oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better tune.
By Heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd
To say what good respect I have of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to your Majesty.
John. Good Friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet,
But thou shalt have: and creep time ne're so slow,
Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to say, but let it go:
The Sun is in the Heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawds,
To give me audience, if the midnight Bell
Did with his Iron Tongue, and Brazen Mouth
Sound on into the drowsie race of night;
If this same were a Church-yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand Wrongs;
Or if that surly Spirit, Melancholly,
Had bak'd thy Blood, and made it heavy, thick,
Which else runs tickling up and down the Veins,
Making that idot Laughter keep mens Eyes,
And strain their Cheeks to idle Merriment,
(A passion hateful to my Purposes)
Or if that thou couldst see me without Eies,
Hear me without thine Ears, and make reply
Without a Tongue, using conceit alone,
Without Eies, Ears, and harmful sound of Words;
Then, in despight of brooded watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
But (ah), I will not, yet I love thee well,
And by my troth I think thou lov'st me well.
Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my Act,
By Heaven I would do it.
John. Do not I know thou would'st?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert throw thine eye
On yon young Boy: I'le tell thee what, my Friend,
He is a very Serpent in my way,
And whereso're this Foot of mine doth tread,
He lyes before me: dost thou understand me?
Thou art his Keeper.
Hub. And I'le keep him so,
That he shall not offend your Majesty.
John. Death.
Hub. My Lord?
John. A Grave.
Hub. He shall not live.
John. Enough.
I could be merry now, Hubert, I love thee.
Well, I'le not say what I intend for thee:
Remember. Madam, fare you well. Returning to Lad
I'le send those Powers o're to your Majesty.
Ele. My blessing go with thee!
John. For England, Cosen, go.
Hubert shall be your man, to attend on you
With all true duty; on toward Calice, hoa! [Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Tertia.~~ VI.

The French Court.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandulpho. Attendants.

Fran. So by a roaring Tempest on the Flood,
A whole Armado of convicted Sail collected
Is scattered and disjoyned from fellowship.
Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet go well.
Fran. What can go well, when we have run so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur tane Prisoner? divers dear Friends slain?
And bloody England into England gone,
O're-bearing Interruption, spight of France?
Dol. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed, with such Advice dispos'd,
Such temperate Order in so fierce a Cause, course,
Doth want Example; who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?

Fran.

Fran. Well could I bear that England had this Praiſe,
So we could find ſome Pattern of our Shame.

Enter Conſtance.

Look, who comes here? a Grave unto a Soul,
Holding th'eternal Spirit againſt her Will,
In the vile Priſon of afflicted Breath;
I Prithee, Lady, go away with me.
Conſt. Lo, now; now ſee the iſſue of your Peace.
Fran. Patience, good Lady; comfort, gentle Conſtance.
Conſt. No, I defie all Counſel, all Redreſs,
But that which ends all Counſel, true Redreſs,
Death; Death, O amiable, lovely Death,
~~Thou odoriferous ſtench: ſound rottenneſs,~~
Ariſe forth from the Couch of laſting Night,
Thou hate and terror to Proſperity,
And I will kiſs thy deteſtable Bones,
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulty Brows,
And ring theſe Fingers with thy houſhold Worms,
And ſtop this gap of breath with fulſom duſt,
And be a Carrion Monſter like thy ſelf;
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou ſmil'ſt,
And buſs thee as thy Wife; Miſeries Love,
O come to me!
Fran. O fair Affliction, Peace!
Conſt. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry;
O that my Tongue were in the Thunders Mouth,
Then with a Paſſion I would ſhake the World,
And rouze from ſleep that fell Anatomy,
Which cannot hear a Ladys feeble Voice,
Which ſcorns a modern Invocation.
Pand. Lady, you utter madneſs, and not ſorrow.
Conſt. Thou art not holy to belie me ſo;
I am not mad; this hair I tear is mine;
My name is Conſtance, I was Geffrey's Wife;
Young Arthur is my Son, and he is loſt!
I am not mad; I would to Heaven I were,
For then 'tis like I ſhould forget my ſelf;
O, if I could, what grief ſhould I forget!
Preach ſome Philoſophy to make me mad,
And thou ſhalt be Canoniz'd (Cardinal)
For, being not mad, but ſenſible of grief,
My reaſonable part produces Reaſon
How I may be deliver'd of theſe Woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang my ſelf:
If I were mad, I ſhould forget my Son,
Or madly think a Babe of Clouts were he;
I am not mad; too well, too well I feel
The different Plague of each Calamity.
Fran. Bind up thoſe Treſſes: O what love I note
In the fair multitude of thoſe her Hairs;
Where but by chance a ſilver drop hath faln,
Even to that drop ten thouſand wiery Fiends
Do glew themſelves in ſociable grief,
Like true, inſeparable, faithful Loves,
Sticking together in Calamity.
Conſt. To England, if you will.
Fran. Bind up your Hairs.
Conſt. Yes, that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their Bonds, and cry'd aloud,
O, that theſe hands could ſo redeem my Son,
As they have given theſe Hairs their liberty:
But now I envy at their Liberty:
And will again commit them to their Bonds,
Becauſe my poor Child is a Priſoner.
~~And~~ Father Cardinal, I have heard you ſay
That we ſhall ſee and know our Friends in Heaven:
If that be, ~~true~~, I ſhall ſee my Boy again.
For ſince the birth of Cain, the firſt Male-child,
To him that did but yeſterday ſuſpire,
There was not ſuch a gracious Creature born.
But now will Canker-ſorrow eat my Bud,
And chaſe the native Beauty from his Cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a Ghoſt,
As dim and meager as an Agues fit,
And ſo he'll die; and riſing ſo again,
When I ſhall meet him in the Court of Heaven
I ſhall not know him; therefore never, never Muſt I behold my Pretty Arthur more.
Pand. You hold too heinous a reſpect of grief.
Conſt. He talks to me, that never had a Son.
Fran. You are as fond of Grief, as of your Child.
Conſt. Grief fills the room up of my abſent Child:
Lies in his Bed, walks up and down with me;
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts;
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his Form;
Then have I reaſon to be fond of grief?
Fare you well; had you ſuch a loſs as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.
I will not keep this Form upon my head,
When there is ſuch diſorder in my Wit.
O Lord, my Boy, my Arthur, my fair Son,
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world,
My Widow-comfort, and my Sorrows cure! [Exit.
Fran. I fear ſome outrage, and I'll follow her. [Exit.
Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me joy;
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowſie man;
And bitter ſhame hath ſpoil'd the ſweet words taſte,
That it yields nought but ſhame and bitterneſs.
Pand. Before the curing of a ſtrong diſeaſe,
Even in the inſtant of repair and health,
The fit is ſtrongeſt: evils that take leave,
On their departure, moſt of all ſhew evil.
What have you loſt by loſing of this day?
Dol. All days of glory, joy, and happineſs.
Pand. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no; when Fortune means to men moſt good,
She looks upon them with a threatning Eye.
'Tis ſtrange to think how much King John hath loſt
In this, which he accounts ſo clearly won.
Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his Priſoner?
Dol. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Pand. Your Mind is all as youthful as your Blood.
Now hear me ſpeak with a Prophetick Spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to ſpeak,
Shall blow each duſt, each ſtraw, each little rub
Out of the Path which ſhall directly lead
Thy foot to England's Throne: And therefore mark.
John hath ſeiz'd Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warm life plays in that Infants veins,
The miſplac'd John ſhould entertain an hour,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of reſt.
A Scepter ſnatch'd with an unruly hand,
Muſt be as boiſterouſly maintain'd as gain'd.
And he that ſtands upon a ſlipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to ſtay him up.
That John may ſtand, then, Arthur needs muſt fall;
So be it, for it cannot be but ſo.
Dol. But what ſhall I gain by young Arthur's fall?
Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your Wife,
May then make all the Claim that Arthur did.
Dol. And loſe it, life and all, as Arthur did.
Pand. How green you are, and freſh in this old world!
John lays you Plots: the Times conſpire with you;
For he that ſteeps his ſafety in true Blood,
Shall find but bloody ſafety and untrue.
This Act ſo evilly born, ſhall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal;
That none ſo ſmall advantage ſhall ſtep forth
To check his Reign, but they will cheriſh it.
No natural exhalation in the Skie,
No ſcope of Nature, no diſtemper'd Day,
No common Wind, no cuſtomed Event,
But they will pluck away his Natural Cauſe,
And call them Meteors, Prodigies, and Signs,
Abortives, Preſages, and Tongues of Heaven,
Plainly denouncing Vengeance upon John.

Dol.

Dol. May be he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himſelf ſafe in his Priſonment.
Pand. O Sir, when he ſhall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at this news he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his People ſhall revolt from him,
And kiſs the lips of unacquainted Change,
And pick ſtrong matter of Revolt, and Wrath,
Out of the Bloody Fingers ends of John.
Methinks I ſee this Hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd? The Baſtard Faulconbridge
Is now in England, ranſacking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Arms, they would be as a Call
To train ten thouſand Engliſh to their ſide;
Or, as a little ſnow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dolphin,
Go with me to the King; 'tis wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their Diſcontent,
Now that their Souls are top full of Offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.
Dol. Strong Reaſons makes ſtrong Actions: let us go,
If you ſay Ay, the King will not ſay no. [Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scæna prima.

Changes to England. A Priſon.

Enter Hubert and Executioners.

Hub. Heat me theſe Irons hot, and look thou ſtand
Within the Arras; when I ſtrike my foot
Upon the boſom of the ground, ruſh forth
And bind the Boy, which you ſhall find with me,
Faſt to the Chair: be heedful; hence, and watch.
Exec. I hope your Warrant will bear out the Deed.
Hub. Uncleanly Scruples! fear not you; look to't.
Young Lad, come forth; I have to ſay with you.

Enter Arthur.

Ar. Good morrow, Hubert.
Hub. Good morrow, little Prince.
Ar. As little Prince, (having ſo great a Title
To be more Prince) as may be. you are ſad.
Hub. Indeed I have been merrier.
Ar. Mercy on me!
Methinks no body ſhould be ſad but I.
Yet I remember when I was in France,
Young Gentlemen would be as ſad as night,
Only for wantonneſs. by my Chriſtendom,
So I were out of Priſon, and kept Sheep,
I ſhould be as merry as the day is long.
And ſo I would be here, but that I doubt
My Uncle practiſes more harm to me.
He is afraid of me, and I of him.
Is it my fault that I was Geffrey's Son?
No indeed is't not, and I would to Heaven
I were your Son, ſo you would love me, Hubert.
Hub. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my Mercy, which lyes dead;
Therefore I will be ſudden, and diſpatch. (Aside)
Ar. Are you ſick, Hubert? you look pale to day;
Inſooth, I would you were a little ſick,
That I might ſit all night and watch with you.
Alas, I warrant I love you more than you do me.
Hub. His words do take poſſeſſion of my Boſom.
Read here, young Arthur. How now fooliſh rheum,
Turning diſpitious Torture out of door?
I muſt be brief, leſt Reſolution drop
Out at mine Eyes, in tender Womaniſh Tears.
Can you not read it? Is it not fair writ?
Ar. Too fairly, Hubert, for ſo foul Effect.
Muſt you with hot Irons burn out both mine Eyes?
Hub. Young Boy, I muſt.
Ar. And will you?
Hub. And I will.
Ar. Have you the heart? When your head did but ake,
I knit my Hand-kercher about your Brows,
(The beſt I had, a Princeſs wrought it me)
And I did never ask it you again;
And with my Hand, at midnight held your Head;
And like the watchful Minutes, to the Hour,
Still and anon chear'd up the heavy time,
Saying, what lack you? and where lies your grief?
Or what good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor mans Son would have lain ſtill,
And ne're have ſpoke a loving word to you;
But you, at your ſick ſervice had a Prince.
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning. Do, and if you will;
If Heaven be pleas'd, that you muſt uſe me ill,
Why then you muſt. Will you put out mine Eyes?
Theſe Eyes, that never did, nor never ſhall
So much as frown on you?
Hub. I have ſworn to do it,
And with hot Irons muſt I burn them out.
Ar. Ah, none but in this Iron age, would do it:
The Iron of it ſelf, though heat red hot,
Approaching near theſe Eies, would drink my tears,
And quench this fiery Indignation,
Even in the matter of mine Innocence:
Nay, after that, conſume away in Ruſt,
But for containing Fire to harm mine Eye:
Are you more ſtubborn hard, than hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angel ſhould have come to me,
And told me Hubert ſhould put out mine Eyes,
I would not have believ'd him: no Tongue but Hubert's.
Hub. Come forth; Do as I bid you do. (Stamps. Men Enter
Ar. O ſave me, Hubert, ſave me! my Eyes are out
Even with the fierce looks of theſe bloody men.
Hub. Give me the Iron, I ſay, and bind him here.
Ar. Alas, what need you be ſo boiſterous rough?
I will not ſtruggle, I will ſtand ſtone ſtill.
For Heaven ſake, Hubert, let me not be bound.
Nay, hear me, Hubert, drive theſe men away,
And I will ſit as quiet as a Lamb.
I will not ſtir, nor wince, nor ſpeak a word,
Nor look upon the Iron angerly:
Thruſt but theſe men away, and I'll forgive you,
What ever torment you do put me to.
Hub. Go, ſtand within; let me alone with him.
Exec. I am beſt pleas'd to be from ſuch a deed. (Exeunt Ex
Art. Alas, I then have chid away my Friend,
He hath a ſtern Look, but a gentle Heart;
Let him come back, that his compaſſion may
Give life to yours.
Hub. Come (Boy), prepare your ſelf.
Ar. Is there no remedy?
Hub. None, but to loſe your Eyes.
Art. O Heaven! that there were but a Moth in yours,
A Grain, a Duſt, a Gnat, a wandring Hair,
Any Annoyance in that precious ſenſe:
Then feeling what ſmall things are boiſterous there,
Your vile intent muſt needs ſeem horrible.
Hub. Is this your Promiſe? Go too, hold your Tongue.
Ar. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of Tongues, omitted
Muſt needs want pleading for a pair of Eyes:
Let me not hold my Tongue; let me not, Hubert,
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my Tongue,
So I may keep mine Eies, O ſpare mine Eyes!
Though to no uſe, but ſtill to look on you.
Lo, by my troth, the inſtrument is cold,
And would not harm me.
Hub. I can heat it, Boy.
Ar. No, in good ſooth, the fire is dead with grief,
Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeſerved Extreams; ſee elſe your ſelf,
There is no malice in this burning coal;

The

The breath of Heaven hath blown his Spirit out,
And ſtrew'd repentant aſhes on his head.
Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, Boy.
Art. And if you do, you will but make it bluſh,
And glow with ſhame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will ſparkle in your Eyes:
And, like a Dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his Maſter that doth tarre him on.
All things that you ſhould uſe to do me wrong,
Deny their Office; only you do lack
That Mercy which fierce Fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for Mercy-lacking uſes.
Hub. Well, ſee to live; I will not touch thine Eye
For all the Treaſure that thine Uncle owes,
Yet am I ſworn, and I did purpoſe, Boy,
With this ſame very Iron, to burn them out.
Art. O now you look like Hubert. All this while
You were diſguis'd.
Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu,
Your Uncle muſt not know but you are dead.
I'll fill theſe dogged Spies with falſe Reports:
And, pretty Child, ſleep doubtleſs, and ſecure,
That Hubert, for the Wealth of all the World,
Will not offend thee.
Art. O heaven! I thank you, Hubert.
Hub. Silence, no more; go cloſely in with me.
Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.
The Court of England.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords.

John. Here once again we ſit, once again crownd,
And look'd upon, I hope, with chearful Eyes,
Pem. This once again, (but that your Highneſs pleas'd),
Was once ſuperfluous; you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was n' ere pluck'd off:
The Faiths of men, ne're ſtained with Revolt:
Freſh Expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for change, or better State.
Sal. Therefore to be poſſeſs'd with double Pomp,
To guard a Title that was rich before,
To gild refined Gold, to paint the Lilly,
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To ſmooth the Ice, or add another hew
Unto the Rainbow, or with Taper-light
To ſeek the beauteous Eye of Heaven to garniſh,
Is waſteful and ridiculous exceſs.
Pem. But that your Royal Pleaſure muſt be done,
This Act is as an ancient Tale new told,
And in the laſt repeating troubleſom,
Being urged at a time unſeaſonable.
Sal. In this the Antick, and well noted face
Of plain old form, is much diſfigured;
And like a ſhifted Wind unto a Sail,
It makes the courſe of thoughts to fetch about;
Startles and frights Conſideration;
Makes ſound Opinion ſick, and Truth ſuſpected,
For putting on ſo new a faſhion'd Robe.
Pem. When Workmen ſtrive to do better than Well,
They do confound their Skill in Covetouſneſs;
And oftentimes excuſing of a Fault,
Doth make the Fault the worſe by the excuſe:
As Patches ſet upon a little Breach,
Diſcredit more in hiding of the Fault,
Than did the Fault before it was ſo patch'd.
Sal. To this Effect, before you were new crown'd,
We breath'd our Counſel; but it pleas'd your Highneſs
To over-bear it, and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all, and every part of what we would,
Doth make a ſtand, at what your Highneſs will.
John. Some Reaſons of this double Coronation
I have poſſeſt you with, and think them ſtrong;
And more, more ſtrong, (then leſs is my fear)
I ſhall endue you with: Mean time, but ask
What you would have Reform'd, that is not well,
And well ſhall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requeſts.
Pem. Then I, as one that am the Tongue of theſe
To ſound the Purpoſes of all their Hearts,
(Both for my ſelf, and them; but chief of all
Your ſafety; for the which, my ſelf and them
Bend their beſt ſtudies;) heartily requeſt
The Infranchiſement of Arthur, whoſe reſtraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of Diſcontent
To break into this dangerous Argument,
If what in Reſt you have, in Right you hold,
Why then your Fears, (which as they ſay, attend
The ſteps of Wrong,) ſhould move you to mew up
Your tender Kinſman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good Excerciſe,
That the Times Enemies may not have this
To grace Occaſions; let it be our ſuit,
That you have bid us ask, his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than, whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal, he have his Liberty.

Enter Hubert.

John. Let it be ſo; I do commit his Youth
To your direction. Hubert, what News with you?
Pem. This is the man ſhould do the Bloody deed:
He ſhew'd his Warrant to a Friend of mine,
The Image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his Eye; that cloſe aſpect of his,
Does ſhew the mood of a much troubled Breaſt,
And I do fearfully believe 'tis done,
What we ſo fear'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the King doth come and go,
Between his Purpoſe and his Conſcience,
Like Heralds 'twixt two dreadful Battels ſet:
His Paſſion is ſo ripe, it needs muſt break.
Pem. And when it breaks, I fear will iſſue thence
The foul corruption of a ſweet Child's Death.
John. We cannot hold Mortalities ſtrong hand.
Good Lords, although my will to give, is living,
The ſuit which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tells us Arthur is deceas'd to night.
Sal. Indeed we fear'd his ſickneſs was paſt cure.
Pem. Indeed we heard how near his death he was,
Before the Child himſelf felt he was ſick,
This muſt be anſwer'd either here or hence.
John. Why do you bend ſuch ſolemn Brows on me?
Think you I bear the Shears of Deſtiny?
Have I Commandment on the Pulſe of Life?
Sal. It is apparent foul-play, and 'tis ſhame
That greatneſs ſhould ſo groſly offer it:
So thrive it in your Game, and ſo farewell.
Pem. Stay yet, Lord Salisbury, I'll go with thee,
And find th'inheritance of this poor Child,
His little Kingdom of a forced Grave.
That Blood which ow'd the breadth of all this Iſle,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while!
This muſt not be thus born, this will break out
To all our ſorrows, and e're long I doubt. [Exeunt.
John. They burn in indignation; I repent. [Enter Meſ.
There is no ſure Foundation ſet on Blood;
No certain Life atchiev'd by others Death.
A fearful Eye thou haſt; Where is that Blood
That I have ſeen inhabit in thoſe Cheeks?
So foul a Sky, clears not without a Storm;
Pour down thy Weather: how goes all in France?
Meſ. From France to England, never ſuch a Power,
For any Foreign Preparation,
Was levied in the Body of a Land.
The Copy of your ſpeed is learn'd by them:

For when you ſhould be told they do prepare,
The tidings come, that they are all arriv'd.
John. Oh, where hath our Intelligence been drunk?
Where hath it ſlept? Where is my Mother's care?
That ſuch an Army ſhould be drawn in France,
And ſhe not hear of it?
Meſ. My Liege, her ear
Is ſtopt with duſt: the firſt of April dy'd
Your noble Mother; and, as I hear, my Lord,
The Lady Conſtance in a frenzie dy'd
Three days before: but this from rumours Tongue
I idely heard; if true, or falſe, I know not.
John. With-hold thy ſpeed, dreadful Occaſion!
O make a League with me, 'till I have pleas'd
My diſcontented Peers. What? Mother dead?
How wildly then walks my Eſtate in France!
Under whoſe Conduct came thoſe Powers of France?
That thou for truth giv'ſt out are landed here?
Meſ. Under the Dolphin.

Enter Baſtard and Peter of Pomfret.

John. Thou haſt made me giddy
With theſe ill tidings. Now? What ſays the World
To your proceedings? Do not ſeek to ſtuff
My head with more ill News, for it is full.
Baſt. But if you be afraid to hear the worſt,
Then let the worſt unheard fall on your head.
John. Bear with me, Couſin; for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breath again
Aloft the flood; and can give Audience
To any Tongue, ſpeak it of what it will.
Baſt. How I have ſped among the Clergy-men,
The Sums I have collected ſhall expreſs.
But as I travel'd hither through the Land,
I find the People ſtrangely fantaſied;
Poſſeſt with Rumours, full of idle Dreams;
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the Streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels:
To whom he ſung in rude harſh ſounding Rimes,
That e're the next Aſcenſion day at noon,
Your Highneſs ſhould deliver up your Crown.
John. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didſt thou ſo?
Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out ſo.
John. Hubert, away with him; impriſon him,
And on that day at noon, whereon he ſays
I ſhall yield up my Crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to ſafety, and return,
For I muſt uſe thee.—O my gentle Couſin, Exit Hub. with Pet.
Hear'ſt thou the News abroad, who are arriv'd?
Baſt. The French, my Lord; men's mouths are full of it:
Beſides, I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisbury,
With Eyes as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to ſeek the Grave
Of Arthur, whom they ſay is kill'd to night, on your (ſuggeſtion.
John. Gentle Kinſman, go
And thruſt thy ſelf into their Companies,
I have a way to win their loves again:
Bring them before me.
Baſt. I will ſeek them out.
John. Nay, but make haſte; the better foot before.
O, let me have no Subjects Enemies,
When adverſe Foreigners affright my Towns
With dreadful Pomp of ſtout Invaſion.
Be Mercury, ſet Feathers to thy heels,
And fly (like thought) from them to me again.
Baſt. The Spirit of the Time ſhall teach me ſpeed. [Exit.
John. Spoke like a ſprightful Noble Gentleman.
Go after him; for he perhaps ſhall need
Some Meſſenger betwixt me and the Peers;
And be thou he.
Meſ. With all my heart, my Liege. (Exit

John. My Mother dead!
Enter Hubert. Scene IV.
Hub. My Lord, they ſay five Moons were ſeen to night:
Four fixed, and the fifth did whirl about
The other four in wondrous motion.
John. Five Moons?
Hub. Old men and Beldams, in the Sreets,
Do propheſie upon it dangerouſly:
Young Arthur's death is common in their Mouths,
And when they talk of him, they ſhake their Heads,
And whiſper one another in the Ear.
And he that ſpeaks, doth gripe the hearer's Wriſt,
Whilſt he that hears makes fearful Action
With wrinkled Brows, with Nods, with rolling Eyes,
I ſaw a Smith ſtand with his Hammer (thus),
The whilſt his Iron did on the Anvil cool,
With open mouth ſwallowing a Taylor's News;
Who with his Sheers, and Meaſure in his hand,
Standing on Slippers, which his nimble haſte
Had falſly thruſt upon contrary feet,
Told of a many thouſand warlike French,
That were embatteled, and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean, unwaſh'd Artificer,
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.
John. Why ſeek'ſt thou to poſſeſs me with theſe Fears?
Why urgeſt thou ſo oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murdered him: I had a ~~mighty~~ Cauſe
To wiſh him dead, but thou hadſt none to kill him.
H. ~~No~~ had (my Lord?) why, did you not provoke me?
John. It is the Curſe of Kings, to be attended
By Slaves that take their Humours for a Warrant,
To break within the bloody houſe of life,
And on the Winking of Authority
To underſtand a Law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Majeſty, when perchance it frowns
More upon Humour, than advis'd Reſpect.
Hub. Here is your Hand and Seal for what I did.
John. Oh, when the laſt account 'twixt Heaven and Earth
Is to be made, then ſhall this Hand and Seal
Witneſs againſt us to Damnation.
How oft the ſight of means to do ill deeds,
Makes deeds ill done! hadſt not thou been by,
A Fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and ſign'd to do a deed of ſhame,
This Murther had not come into my mind.
But taking note of thy abhor'd Aſpect,
Finding thee fit for Bloody Villany;
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death:
And thou to be endeared to a King,
Made it no conſcience to deſtroy a Prince.
Hub. My Lord.
John. Had'ſt thou but ſhook thy head, or made a pauſe,
When I ſpake darkly, what I purpoſed:
Or turn'd an Eye of doubt upon my Face,
As bid me tell my tale in expreſs words;
Deep ſhame had ſtruck me dumb, made me break off,
And thoſe thy Fears, might have wrought Fears in me,
But thou didſt underſtand me by my Signs,
And didſt in Signs again parley with ſin;
Yea, without ſtop didſt let thy Heart conſent,
And conſequently thy rude Hand to act
The deed, which both our Tongues held vile to name.
Out of my ſight, and never ſee me more!
My Nobles leave me, and my State is brav'd,
Even at my Gates, with ranks of foreign Powers;
Nay, in the Body of this fleſhly Land,
This Kingdom, this Confine of Blood, and Breath,
Hoſtility and Civil Tumult reigns,
Between my Conſcience, and my Couſins death.
Hub. Arm you againſt your other Enemies,
I'll make a peace between your Soul, and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a Maiden, and an innocent hand,

Not

Not painted with the Crimſon ſpots of Blood
Within this Boſom, never entred yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,
And you have ſlander'd Nature in my Form,
Which howſoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer Mind,
Than to be Butcher of an innocent Child.
John. Doth Arthur live? O haſte thee to the Peers,
Throw this Report on their incenſed rage,
And make them tame to their Obedience.
Forgive the Comment that my Paſſion made
Upon thy Feature; for my Rage was blind,
And foul imaginary Eyes of Blood
Preſented thee more hideous than thou art.
Oh, anſwer not; but to my Cloſet bring
The angry Lords, with all expedient haſte;
I conjure thee but ſlowly; run more faſt. [Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia. V.

Enter Arthur on the Walls, disguis'd.

Art. The wall is high, and yet will I leap down.
Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!
There's few or none do know me; if they did,
This Ship-boys ſemblance hath diſguis'd me quite.
I am afraid, and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my Limbs,
I'll find a thouſand ſhifts to get away;
As good to die, and go; as die, and ſtay. (Leaps down.
Oh me! my Uncles ſpirit is in theſe ſtones.
Heaven take my Soul, and England keep my Bones. [Dies.

Enter Pembroke, and Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at St. Edmondsbury;
It is our ſafety, and we muſt embrace
This gentle Offer of the perilous time.
Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinal?
Sal. The Count Melun, a Noble Lord of France,
Whoſe private with me of the Dolphin's love
Is much more general than theſe lines import.
Bigot. To morrow morning let us meet him then.
Sal. Or rather then ſet forward, for 'twill be
Two long days journey, (Lords) or e're we meet.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. Once more to day well met, diſtemper'd Lords;
The King by me requeſts your Preſence ſtraight.
Sal. The King hath diſpoſſeſt himſelf of us;
We will not line his thin-beſtained cloke
With our pure Honours: nor attend the Foot
That leaves the print of Blood where e're it walks.
Return, and tell him ſo: we know the worſt. (beſt.
Baſt. What e're you think, good words I think were
Sal. Our Griefs, and not our Manners reaſon now.
Baſt. But there is little Reaſon in your Grief,
Therefore 'twere Reaſon you had Manners now.
Pem. Sir, Sir, impatience hath his Priviledge.
Baſt. 'Tis true, to hurt his Maſter, no man elſe.
Sal. This is the Priſon: what is he lyes here? (Seeing
P. Oh death, made proud with pure and Princely Beauty! Arthur.
The Earth had not a hole to hide this deed.
Sal. Murther, as hating what himſelf hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on Revenge. the Glaives
Big. Or when he doom'd this Beauty to a Grave,
Found it too precious Princely, for a Grave.
Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? have you beheld,
Or have you read, or heard, or could you think;
Or do you almoſt think, although you ſee,
That you do ſee? could Thought, without this Object,
Form ſuch another? this is the very top,
The height, the Creſt, or Creſt unto the Creſt
Of Murthers Arms; this is the bloodieſt ſhame,
The wildeſt Savagery, the vileſt ſtroke,
That ever wall-ey'd Wrath, or ſtaring Rage
Preſented to the Tears of ſoft Remorſe.
Pem. All Murthers paſt, do ſtand excus'd in this;
And this ſo ſole, and ſo unmatchable,
Shall give a holineſs, a purity,
To the yet unbegotten ſin of times;
And prove a deadly blood-ſhed, but a Jeaſt,
Exampled by this heinous Spectacle.
Baſt. It is a damned, and a bloody Work,
The graceleſs action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?
We had a kind of light, what would enſue
It is the ſhameful work of Hubert's hand,
The practiſe, and the purpoſe of the King:
From whoſe Obedience I forbid my Soul,
Kneeling before this Ruine of ſweet Life,
And breathing to his breathleſs Excellence
The Incenſe of a Vow, a holy Vow!
Never to taſte the Pleaſures of the World,
Never to be infected with Delight,
Nor converſant with Eaſe, and Idleneſs,
Till I have ſet a glory to this Hand,
By giving it the Worſhip of Revenge.
Pem. Big. Our ſouls Religiouſly confirm thy words.

Enter Hubert. Scene VI.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haſte, in ſeeking you;
Arthur doth live, the King hath ſent for you.
Sal. Oh, he is bold, and bluſhes not at death;
Avant, thou hateful Villain, get thee gone!
Hub. I am no Villain.
Sal. Muſt I rob the Law? (Drawing his Sword
Baſt. Your Sword is bright, Sir, put it up again
Sal. Not till I ſheath it in a Murtherer's skin.
Hub. Stand back, Lord Salisbury, ſtand back, I ſay,
By Heaven, I think my Sword's as ſharp as yours.
I would not have you, (Lord), forget your ſelf,
Nor tempt the Danger of my true Defence;
Leſt I, by marking of your rage, forget
Your Worth, your Greatneſs, and Nobility.
Big. Out Dunghill, dar'ſt thou brave a Nobleman?
Hub. Not for my life; but yet I dare defend
My innocent life againſt an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.
Hub. Do not prove me ſo;
Yet I am none. Whoſe tongue ſo e're ſpeaks falſe,
Not truly ſpeaks; who ſpeaks not truly, Lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.
Baſt. Keep the peace, I ſay.
Sal. Stand by, or I ſhall gaul you, Faulconbridge.
Baſt. Thou wert better gaul the Devil, Salisbury.
If thou but frown on me, or ſtir thy foot,
Or teach thy haſty Spleen to do me ſhame,
I'll ſtrike thee dead. Put up thy Sword betime,
Or I'll ſo maul you, and your toſting-Iron,
That you ſhall think the Devil is come from Hell.
Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a Villain, and a Murtherer?
Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.
Big. Who kill'd this Prince?
Hub. 'Tis not an hour ſince I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lov'd him, and will weep
My date of life out, for his ſweet life's loſs.
Sal. Truſt not thoſe cunning Waters of his Eyes,
For Villany is not without ſuch Rheume;
And he long traded in it, makes it ſeem
Like Rivers of Remorſe and Innocence.
Away with me, all you whoſe ſouls abhor
Th'uncleanly ſavour of a ſlaughter-houſe,
For I am ſtifled with the ſmell of ſin.
Big. Away toward Bury, to the Dolphin there.
P. There tell the King he may enquire us out. [Ex. Lords.

Scene VII.

Ba. Here's a good World; knew you of this fair Work?
Beyond the infinite and boundless reach of Mercy,
(If thou did'st this deed of death) thou art damn'd, Hubert.
Hub. Do but hear me, Sir.
Baſt. Ha? I'll tell thee what,
Thou'rt damn'd as black, nay nothing is ſo black;
Thou art more deep damn'd than Prince Lucifer.
There is not yet ſo ugly a Fiend of Hell
As thou ſhalt be, if thou did'ſt kill this Child.
Hub. Upon my Soul.
Baſt. If thou did'ſt but conſent
To this moſt cruel Act, do but deſpair;
And if thou want'ſt a Cord, the ſmalleſt thread
That ever Spider twiſted from her Womb
Will ſtrangle thee; A ruſh will be a Beam
To hang thee on: Or would'ſt thou drown thy ſelf,
Put but a little Water in a Spoon,
And it ſhall be as all the Ocean,
Enough to ſtifle ſuch a Villain up.
I do ſuſpect thee very grievouſly.
Hub. If I in act, conſent, or ſin of thought,
Be guilty of the ſtealing that ſweet Breath
Which was embounded in this Beauteous Clay,
Let Hell want pains enough to torture me!
I left him well.
Baſt. Go, bear him in thine Arms.
I am amaz'd, methinks, and loſe my way
Among the Thorns, and Dangers of this World.
How eaſie doſt thou take all England up!
From forth this Morſel of dead Royalty?
The Life, the Right, and Truth of all this Realm
Is fled to Heaven; and England now is left
To tug and ſcramble, and to part by th'Teeth
The unowed intereſt of proud ſwelling State.
Now for the bare-pickt bone of Majeſty,
Doth dogged War briſtle his angry Creſt,
And ſnarleth in the gentle Eyes of Peace.
Now Powers from home, and Diſcontents at home
Meet in one Line: and vaſt Confuſion waits
(As doth a Raven on a ſick, fallen Beaſt,)
The imminent decay of wreſted Pomp.
Now happy he, whoſe Cloak and Center can
Hold out this tempeſt. Bear away that Child,
And follow me with ſpeed; I'll to the King;
A thouſand buſineſſes are brief in hand,
And Heaven it ſelf doth frown upon the Land. [Exeunt.

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

The Court of England.

Enter King John and Pandulph, Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The Circle of my Glory. (Giving the Crown.
Pand. Take again
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope,
Your Sovereign Greatneſs and Authority.
John. Now keep your holy word; go meet the French,
And from his Holineſs uſe all your Power
To ſtop their Marches 'ſore we are enflam'd.
Our diſcontented Counties do revolt;
Our people quarrel with Obedience,
Swearing Allegiance, and the love of Soul
To ſtranger-blood, to foreign Royalty;
This inundation of miſtempered humour,
Reſts by you only to be qualified.
Then pauſe not; for the preſent time's ſo ſick,
That preſent Med'cine muſt be miniſtred,
Or overthrow incurable enſues.
Pand. It was my breath that blew this Tempeſt up,
Upon your ſtubborn uſage of the Pope:
But ſince you are a gentle Convertite,
My Tongue ſhall hush again this Storm of War,
And make fair Weather in your bluſtring Land.
On this Aſcenſion day, remember well,
Upon your Oath of ſervice to the Pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their Arms. [Exit.
John. Is this Aſcenſion day? did not the Prophet
Say, that before Aſcenſion day at noon,
My Crown I ſhould give off? even ſo I have:
I did ſuppoſe it ſhould be on conſtraint,
But (Heav'n be thank'd) it is but Voluntary.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. All Kent hath yielded, nothing there holds out
But Dover Caſtle: London hath receiv'd,
Like a kind Hoſt, the Dolphin and his Powers.
Your Nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer ſervice to your Enemy;
And wild Amazement hurries up and down
The little number of doubtful Friends.
John. Would not my Lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?
Baſt. They found him dead, and caſt into the ſtreets,
An empty Casket, where the Jewel of life,
By ſome damn'd hand was rob'd and tane away.
John. That Villain Hubert told me he did live.
Baſt. So on my Soul he did, for ought he knew:
But wherefore do you droop? why look you ſad?
Be great in Act, as you have been in Thought:
Let not the world ſee Fear and ſad Diſtruſt
Govern the motion of a Kingly Eye;
Be ſtirring as the time, be fire with fire;
Threaten the threatner, and out-face the Brow
Of bragging Horror: So ſhall inferior Eyes,
That borrow their Behaviours from the Great,
Grow great by your Example, and put on
The dauntleſs Spirit of Reſolution.
Away, and gliſter like the God of War
When he intendeth to become the Field;
Shew boldneſs and aſpiring Confidence.
What, ſhall they ſeek the Lyon in his Den,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
Oh, let it not be ſaid! forrage, and run
To meet diſpleaſure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him e're he come ſo nigh.
John. The Legat of the Pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy Peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to diſmiſs the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.
Baſt. Oh inglorious League!
Shall we upon the footing of our Land,
Send fair-play-orders, and make compromiſe,
Inſinuation, parley, and baſe truce,
To Arms Invaſive? Shall a beardleſs Boy,
A cockred-ſilken Wanton brave our Fields,
And ſleſh his Spirit in a War-like Soil,
Mocking the air with Colours idely ſpread,
And find no check? Let us, my Liege, to Arms:
Perchance the Cardinal cannot make your Peace;
Or if he do, let it at leaſt be ſaid
They ſaw we had a purpoſe of defence.
John. Have thou the ordering of this preſent time.
Baſt. Away then, with good Courage; yet I know
Our Party may well meet a prouder Foe. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

The Dauphins Camp at St. Edmundsbury

Enter (in Arms) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melloon, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melloon, let this be copied out,
And keep it ſafe for our remembrance:
Return the Preſident to theſe Lords again,
That having our fair Order written down,
Both they and we, peruſing o're theſe Notes,

May

May know wherefore we took the Sacrament,
And keep our Faiths firm and inviolable.
Sal. Upon our ſides it never ſhall be broken.
And, noble Dolphin, albeit we ſwear
A voluntary Zeal, and an un-urg'd Faith
To your Proceedings; yet believe me, Prince,
I am not glad that ſuch a Sore of Time
Should ſeek a Plaiſter by contemn'd Revolt,
And heal the inveterate Canker of one wound,
By making many. Oh, it grieves my Soul,
That I muſt draw this Metle from my ſide
To be a Widow-maker: Oh, and there
Where honourable Reſcue, and Defence,
Cries out upon the Name of Salisbury.
But ſuch is the Infection of the time,
That for the Health and Phyſick of our Right,
We cannot deal but with the very Hand
Of ſtern Injuſtice, and confuſed Wrong.
And is't not pity, (oh my grieved Friends)!
That we, the Sons and Children of this Iſle,
Were born to ſee ſo ſad an hour as this,
Wherein we ſtep after a Stranger, march
Upon her gentle Boſom, and fill up
Her Enemies Ranks? (I muſt withdraw and weep
Upon the ſpot of this enforced Cauſe,)
To Grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow unacquainted Colours here?
What here? O nation, that thou couldſt remove,
That Neptunes Arms who clippeth thee about,
Would bear the from the knowledge of thy ſelf,
And apple thee unto a Pagan ſhore,
Where theſe two Chriſtian Armies might combine
The blood of malice, in a vein of league,
And not ~~to~~ ſpend it ſo un-neighbourly.
Dol. A noble Temper doſt thou ſhew in this,
And great Affections wreſtling in thy Boſom
Doth make an Earthquake of Nobility.
Oh, what a Noble combate haſt thou fought,
Between compulſion, and a brave reſpect!
Let me wipe off this Honourable Dew,
That ſilverly doth progreſs on thy cheeks.
My heart hath melted at a Ladies tears,
Being an ordinary inundation:
But this Effuſion of ſuch Manly Drops,
This ſhowr blown up by tempeſt of the Soul,
Startles mine Eyes, and makes me more amaz'd,
Than had I ſeen the vaulty top of Heaven
Figur'd quite o're with burning Meteors.
Lift up thy brow (renowned Salisbury,)
And with a great Heart heave away this ſtorm.
Commend theſe Wars to thoſe Baby-eyes
That never ſaw the Giant-world enrag'd;
Nor met with Fortune, other than at Feaſts,
Full warm of Blood, of Mirth, of Goſſipping.
Come, come, for thou ſhall thruſt thy hand as deep
Into the Purſe of rich Proſperity
As Lewis himſelf; ſo (Nobles), ſhall you all,
That knit your Sinews to the ſtrength of mine.

Enter Pandulpho.

And even there, methinks an Angel ſpake;
Look where the Holy Legate comes apace,
To give us Warrant from the hand of Heaven,
And on our Actions ſet the Name of Right
With holy Breath.

Scene III.

Pan. Hail, Noble Prince of France!
The next is this: King John hath reconcil'd
Himſelf to Rome; his Spirit is come in,
That ſo ſtood out againſt the Holy Church,
The great Metropolis and See of Rome.
Therefore thy threatning Colours now wind up,
And tame the Savage Spirit of Wild War;
That like a Lion foſtered up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of Peace,
And be no further harmful than in ſhew.
Dolph. Your Grace ſhall pardon me, I will not back:
I am too high-born to be Propertied,
To be a ſecondary at controul,
Or uſeful Serving-man, and inſtrument
To any Sovereign State throughout the World.
Your breath firſt kindled the dead Coal of Wars,
Between this chaſtis'd Kingdom and my ſelf,
And brought in Matter that ſhould feed this Fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that ſame weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of Right,
Acquainted me with Intereſt to this Land,
Yea thruſt this Enterprize into my heart;
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His Peace with Rome? what is that Peace to me?
I, (by the Honour of my Marriage-bed),
After young Arthur, Claim this Land for mine;
And now it is half conquer'd, muſt I back,
Becauſe that John hath made his Peace with Rome?
Am I Romes Slave? what Penny hath Rome born?
What Men provided? what munition ſent
To under-prop this Action? Is't not I
That under-go this Charge? who elſe but I,
And ſuch as to my Claim are liable,
Sweat in this Buſineſs, and maintain this War?
Have I not heard theſe Iſlanders ſhout out
Vive le Roy, as I have bank'd their Towns?
Have I not here the beſt Cards for the Game
To win this eaſie Match, play'd for a Crown?
And ſhall I now give o're the yielded Set?
No, no, on my Soul it ſhall never be ſaid.
Pan. You look but on the out-ſide of this Work.
Dolp. Out-ſide or in-ſide, I will not return,
Till my Attempt ſo much be glorified,
As to my ample Hope was promiſed,
Before I drew this gallant head of War,
And cull'd theſe fiery Spirits from the world
To out-look Conqueſt, and to win Renown
Even in the jaws of danger, and of death.
What luſty Trumpet thus doth ſummon us? (Trumpet Sounds.

Scene IV.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. According to the fair-play of the World,
Let me have Audience: I am ſent to ſpeak:
My holy Lord of Milan, from the King
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him:
And as you anſwer, I do know the ſcope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.
Pand. The Dolphin is too wilful, oppoſite,
And will not temporize with my Entreaties:
He flatly ſays, he'll not lay down his Arms.
Baſt. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth ſays well. Now hear our Engliſh King;
For thus his Royalty doth ſpeak in me:
He is prepar'd, and Reaſon too he ſhould,
This apiſh and unmannerly approach,
This harneſs'd Mask, and unadviſed Revel,
This unheard ſawcineſs and Boyiſh Troops,
The King doth ſmile at; and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfiſh War, theſe Pigmy Arms,
From out the Circle of his Territories.
That Hand which had the ſtrength, even at your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch,
To dive like Buckets in concealed Wells,
To crouch in Litter of your Stable Planks,
To lye like Pawns, lock'd up in Cheſts and Trunks,
To hug with Swine, to ſeek ſweet ſafety out
In Vaults and Priſons, and to thrill and ſhake;
Even at the crying of your Nation's Crow,
Thinking this Voice an armed Engliſh man;
Shall that victorious Hand be feebled here,

That in your Chambers gave you Chaſtiſement?
No; know the gallant Monarch is in Arms,
And like an Eagle, o're his ayery, Towrs
To ſouſe Annoyance that comes near his Neſt.
And you degenerate, you ingrate Revolters
You bloody Nero's, ripping up the Womb
Of your dear Mother-England; bluſh for ſhame
For your own Ladies, and Pale-viſag'd Maids,
Like Amazons, come tripping after Drums;
Their Thimbles into armed Gantlets change,
Their Needles to Lances, and their gentle Hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Dol. There end thy Brave, and turn thy Face in Peace;
We grant thou canſt out-ſcold us; fare thee well;
We hold our time too precious to be ſpent
With ſuch a Babler.

Pan. Give me leave to ſpeak.

Baſt. No, I will ſpeak.

Dol. We will attend to neither:
Strike up the Drums, and let the Tongue of VVar
Plead for our Intereſt, and our being here.

Baſt. Indeed your Drums being beaten, will cry out;
And ſo ſhall you, being beaten; do but ſtart
An eccho with the Clamour of thy Drum,
And even at hand, a Drum is ready brac'd,
That ſhall reverberate all, as loud as thine.
Sound but another, and another ſhall
(As loud as thine) rattle the Welkin's Ear,
And mock the deep-mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not truſting to this halting Legat here
Whom he hath us'd rather for ſport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead ſits
A bare-rib'd death, whoſe Office is this day
To feaſt upon whole thouſands of the French.

Dol. Strike up our Drums, to find this danger out.

Baſt. And thou ſhalt find it, (Dolphin) do not doubt.

[Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Tertia.~~ V

The Field of Battle.

Alarms. Enter John, and Hubert.

John. How goes the day with us? oh tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear; how fares your Majeſty?

John. This Feaver that hath troubled me ſo long,
Lyes heavy on me: oh, my heart is ſick!

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſ. My Lord, your Valiant Kinſman, Faulconbridge,
Deſires your Majeſty to leave the Field,
And ſend him word by me, which way you go.

John. Tell him, toward Swinſted, to the Abby there.

Meſſ. Be of good comfort: for the great Supply,
That was expected by the Dolphin here,
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin Sands.
This News was brought to Richard but even now,
The French fight coldly, and retire themſelves.

John. Ay me, this Tyrant Feaver burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good News.
Set on toward Swinſted: to my Litter ſtraight,
Weakneſs poſſeſſeth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Quarta.~~ VI.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.

Sal. I did not think the King ſo ſtor'd with Friends.

Pem. Up once again; put Spirit in the French;
If they miſcarry, we miſcarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten Devil Faulconbridge,
In ſpight of ſpight, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They ſay, King John, ſore ſick, hath left the Field.

Enter Meloon wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other Names.

Pem. It is the Count Melune.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, Noble Engliſh, you are bought and ſold;
Unthread the rude Eye of Rebellion,
And welcome home again diſcarded Faith,
Seek out King John, and fall before his feet:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He means to recompence the Pains you take,
By cutting off your Heads; thus hath he ſworn,
And I with him, and many more with me,
Upon the Altar at St. Edmondsbury,
Even on that Altar, where we ſwore to you
Dear Amity, and everlaſting Love.

Sal. May this be poſſible? May this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a Form of Wax
Reſolveth from his Figure 'gainſt the Fire?
What in the world ſhould make me now deceive,
Since I muſt loſe the uſe of all deceit?
Why ſhould I then be falſe, ſince it is true
That I muſt die here, and live hence, by truth?
I ſay again, if Lewis ~~do~~ win the day,
He is forſworn, if e're thoſe Eyes of yours
Behold another Day break in the Eaſt:
But even this Night, whoſe black contagious breath
Already ſmoaks about the burning Creſt
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sun,
Even this ill night, your breathing ſhall expire;
Paying the Fine of rated Treachery,
Even with a treacherous Fine of all your lives;
If Lewis, by your aſſiſtance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The love of him, and this reſpect beſides
(For that my Grandſire was an Engliſhman),
Awakes my Conſcience to confeſs all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you bear me hence
From forth the noiſe and rumour of the Field;
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace, and part this Body and my Soul,
With Contemplation, and devout Deſires.

Sal. We do believe thee, and beſhrew my Soul,
But I do love the favour, and the form
Of this moſt fair occaſion, by the which
We will untread the ſteps of damned flight;
And like a'bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankneſs, and irregular courſe,
Stoop low within thoſe Bounds we have o're-look'd,
And calmly run on in Obedience,
Even to our Ocean, to our great King John.
My Arm ſhall give thee help to bear thee hence,
For I do ſee the cruel Pangs of death
Right in thine Eyes; Away, my Friends, ~~new flight~~,
~~And happy newneſs that intends old right.~~

[Exeunt.

leading Melun.

Scæna ~~Quinta.~~ VII.

The French Camp.

Enter Dolphin and his Train.

Dol. The Sun of Heaven (methought) was loth to ſet,
But ſtaid, and made the Weſtern Welkin bluſh,
When Engliſh meaſur'd backward their own ground
In faint retire: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a Volley of our needleſs ſhot,
After ſuch bloody toyle, we bid good night,
And wonn'd our tott'ring Colours clearly up,
Laſt in the Field, and almoſt Lords of it.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Where is my Prince, the Dolphin?
Dol. Here, what News?
Meſ. The Count Melloone is ſlain; The Engliſh Lords
By his perſwaſion are at length faln off,
And your Supply, which you have wiſh'd ſo long,
Are caſt away, and ſunk on Goodwin Sands.
Dol. Ah foul ſhrew'd News! Beſhrew thy very heart!
I did not think to be ſo ſad to Night
As this hath made me. Who was he that ſaid
King John did fly an hour or two before
The ſtumbling Night did part our weary Powers?
Meſ. Who ever ſpoke it, it is true, my Lord.
Dol. Well; keep good Quarter, and good care to Night;
The Day ſhall not be up ſo ſoon as I,
To try the fair Adventure of to Morrow. [Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta. VIII.

Enter Baſtard and Hubert ſeverally.

Hub. Who's there? Speak, hoa, ſpeak quickly, or I ſhoot.
Baſt. A Friend. What art thou?
Hub. Of the part of England.
Baſt. Whither doſt thou go?
Hub. What's that to thee?
Why may not I demand of thine Affairs,
As well as thou of mine?
Baſt. Hubert, I think.
Hub. Thou haſt a perfect thought:
I will upon all hazzards well believe
Thou art my Friend, that know'ſt my Tongue ſo well:
Who art thou?
Baſt. Who thou wilt; and if thou pleaſe
Thou maiſt be-friend me ſo much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.
Hub. Unkind Remembrance! thou, and yeleſs night,
Have done me ſhame; brave Souldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy Tongue,
Should ſcape the true acquaintance of mine ear.
Baſt. Come, come: ſans complement, What News abroad?
Hub. Why here walk I, in the black Brow of Night,
To find you out.
Baſt. Brief then: and what's the News?
Hub. O my ſweet Sir, news fitting to the Night,
Black, fearful, comfortleſs, and horrible.
Baſt. Shew me the very wound of this ill News,
I am no Woman, I'll not ſwoon at it.
Hub. The King, I fear, is poiſon'd by a Monk;
I left him almoſt ſpeechleſs, and broke out
To acquaint you with this Evil, that you might
The better Arm you to the ſudden time,
Than if you had at leiſure known of this.
Baſt. How did he take it? Who did taſte to him?
Hub. A Monk, I tell you, a reſolved Villain,
Whoſe Bowels ſuddenly burſt out; The King
Yet ſpeaks, and peradventure may recover.
Baſt. Who didſt thou leave to tend his Majeſty?
Hub. Why, know you not? the Lords are all come back,
And brought Prince Henry in their company,
At whoſe requeſt the King hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his Majeſty.
Baſt. With-hold thine Indignation, mighty Heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our Power.
I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my Powers this Night
Paſſing theſe Flats, are taken by the Tide,
Theſe Lincoln-Waſhes have devoured them;
My ſelf, well mounted, hardly have eſcap'd.
Away before: Conduct me to the King,
I doubt he will be dead, or e're I come. [Exeunt.

Scæna Septima. IX.

The Orchard at Swinestead Abby.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his Blood
Is touch'd corruptibly; and his pure Brain,
(Which ſome ſuppoſe the Soul's frail dwelling houſe),
Doth by the idle Comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of Mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His Highneſs yet doth ſpeak, and holds belief,
That being brought into the open air,
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell Poiſon which aſſaileth him.
Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard here;
Doth he ſtill rage?
Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he ſung.
Hen. Oh vanity of Sickneſs! fierce Extreams
In their continuance will not feel themſelves.
Death having prey'd upon the outward parts
Leaves them inviſible, and his ſiege is now
Againſt the Mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many Legions of ſtrange Fantaſies,
Which in their throng and preſs to that laſt hold,
Confound themſelves. 'Tis ſtrange that death ſhould ſing:
I am the Cygnet to this pale, faint Swan,
Who chaunts a doleful Hymn to his own death,
And from the Organ-pipe of frailty ſings
His Soul and Body their laſting reſt.
Sal. Be of good comfort, (Prince), for you are born
To ſet a form upon that indigeſt
Which he hath left ſo ſhapeleſs and ſo rude.

John brought in.

John. Ay marry now my Soul hath elbow-room;
It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is ſo hot a Summer in my Boſom,
That all my Bowels crumble up to Duſt;
I am a ſcribled Form drawn with a Pen,
Upon a Parchment, and againſt this fire do I ſhrink up.
Hen. How fares your Majeſty?
John. Poiſon'd, ill fare; dead, forſook, caſt off,
And none of you will bid the Winter come
To thruſt his Icy Fingers in my Maw;
Nor let my Kingdoms Rivers take their courſe
Through my burn'd Boſom: nor intreat the North
To make his bleak winds kiſs my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not ask you much,
I beg cold comfort; and you are ſo ſtraight
And ſo ungrateful, you deny me that.
Hen. Oh that there were ſome Virtue in my Tears,
That might relieve you!
John. The Salt of them is hot.
Within me is a Hell, and there the Poiſon
Is, as a Fiend, confind to tyrannize,
On unrepreeveable condemned Blood.

Scene X.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. Oh, I am ſcalded with my violent Motion,
And Spleen of Speed to ſee your Majeſty.
John. Oh Couſin, thou are come to ſet mine Eye:
The Tackle of my Heart is crackt and burnt,
And all the ſhrowds wherewith my life ſhould ſail,
Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
My Heart hath one poor ſtring to ſtay it by,
Which holds but till thy News be uttered;
And then all this thou ſeeſt, is but a Clod,
And module of confounded Royalty.
Baſt. The Dolphin is preparing hitherward,
Where Heaven he knows how we ſhall anſwer him.
For, in a night, the beſt part of my Power,
As I upon advantage did remove,

Were

Were in the Waſhes all, unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected Flood. (King dies.
Sal. You breath theſe dead News in as dead an Ear;
My Liege, my Lord! but now a King, now thus.
Hen. Even ſo muſt I run on, and even ſo ſtop.
What ſurety of the World, what hope, what ſtay,
When this was now a King, and now is Clay?
Baſt. Art thou gone ſo? I do but ſtay behind
To do the Office for thee, of Revenge;
And then my Soul ſhall wait on thee to Heaven,
As it on Earth hath been thy Servant ſtill.
Now, now, you Stars, that move in your right Spheres,
Where be your Powers? Shew now your mended Faiths,
And inſtantly return with me again,
To puſh Deſtruction, and perpetual Shame
Out of the weak door of our fainting Land:
Straight let us ſeek, or ſtraight we ſhall be ſought;
The Dolphin rages at our very heels.
Sal. It ſeems you know not then ſo much as we;
The Cardinal Pandulph is within at reſt,
Who half an hour ſince came from the Dolphin;
And brings from him ſuch Offers of our Peace,
As we with Honour and Reſpect may take,
With purpoſe preſently to leave this War.
Baſt. He will the rather do it, when he ſees
Our ſelves well ſinewed to our Defence.
Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already;
For many Carriages he hath diſpatch'd
To the Sea-ſide, and put his Cauſe and Quarrel
To the diſpoſing of the Cardinal;
With whom your ſelf, my ſelf, and other Lords,
If you think meet, this Afternoon will poſt
To conſummate this buſineſs happily.
Baſt. Let it be ſo; and you, my Noble Prince,
With other Princes that may beſt be ſpar'd,
Shall wait upon your Father's Funeral.
Hen. At Worceſter muſt his Body be interr'd,
For ſo he will'd it.
Baſt. Thither ſhall it then,
And happily may your ſweet ſelf put on
The lineal ſtate, and glory of the Land,
To whom with all ſubmiſſion on my Knee,
I do bequeath my faithful Services,
And true Subjection everlaſtingly.
Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,
To reſt without a ſpot for evermore.
Hen. I have a kind Soul that would give thanks,
And knows not how to do it, but with Tears.
Baſt. Oh let us pay the time but needful Woe,
Since it hath been before hand with our griefs.
This England never did, nor never ſhall,
Lye at the proud foot of a Conqueror,
But when it firſt did help to wound it ſelf.
Now, theſe her Princes are come home again,
Come the three Corners of the world in Arms,
And we ſhall ſhock them. Nought ſhall make us rue,
If England to it ſelf, do reſt but true. Exeunt.

THE LIFE and DEATH OF KING RICHARD II.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima. The Court.

Enter King Richard, John of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

OLd John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaſter,
Haſt thou, according to thy Oath and Band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford thy bold Son;
Here to make good the boiſterous late Appeal,
Which then our leiſure would not let us hear,
Againſt the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
Gaunt. I have, my Liege.
King. Tell me moreover, haſt thou ſounded him,
If he Appeal the Duke on ancient Malice,
Or worthily, as good Subject ſhould,
On ſome known ground of Treachery in him?
Gaunt. As near as I could ſift him on that Argument,
On ſome apparent Danger ſeen in him,
Aim'd at your Highneſs; no inveterate Malice.
King. Then call them to our Preſence; face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our ſelves will hear
Th'Accuſer, and the Accuſed freely ſpeak;
High ſtomack'd are they both, and full of ire.
In rage, deaf as the Sea; haſty as Fire.

Scene II. Boling brook

Enter Bullingbrook and Mowbray.

Bull. May Many years of happy dayes befall
My gracious Sovereign, my moſt loving Liege.
Mow. Each day ſtill better others happineſs;
Until the Heavens envying Earths good hap,
Add an immortal Title to your Crown!
King. We thank you both, yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the Cauſe you come, for;

Namely

Namely to Appeal each other of high Treason.
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
Bull. First, Heaven be the record to my speech,
In the devotion of a Subjects love,
Tendring the precious safety of my Prince,
And free from other mis-begotten hate,
Come I Appellant to this Princely Presence.
Now, Thomas Mowbray do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
My Body shall make good upon this Earth,
Or my Divine Soul answer it in Heaven.
Thou art a Traitor and a Miscreant;
Too good to be so, and too bad to live;
Since the more fair and Crystal is the Skie,
The uglier seem the Clouds that in it flye:
Once more, the more to aggravate the note, O mitted.
With a foul Traitors Name stuff I thy throat,
And wish (so please my Soveraign) e're I move, (prove.
What my Tongue speaks, my right drawn Sword may
Mow. Let not my cold Words here accuse my Zeal;
'Tis not the Tryal of a Woman's War,
The bitter Clamour of two eager Tongues,
Can arbitrate this Cause betwixt us twain;
The Blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush't, and nought at all to say.
First the fair reverence of your Highness curbs me,
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of Treason, doubly down his throat.
Setting aside his high Bloods Royalty,
And let him be no Kinsman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I spit at him,
Call him a slanderous Coward and a Villain;
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tide to run a foot,
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot,
Mean time, let this defend my Loyalty;
By all my hopes most falsly doth he lie.
Bull. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my Gage,
Disclaiming here the Kindred of a King,
And lay aside my high Blood's Royalty,
(Which Fear, not Reverence makes thee to except;)
If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine Honour's Pawn, then stoop.
By that, and all the Rights of Knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoken, ~~or thou canst devise.~~ as what Mowb. hast done
Mow. I take it up, and by that Sword I swear,
Which gently laid my Knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or Chivalrous design of Knightly tryal;
And when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or unjustly fight!
King. What doth our Cousin lay to Mowbray's Charge?
It must be great that can inherit us,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.
Bull. Look what I said, my life shall Prove it true,
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand Nobles,
In name of lendings for your Highness Souldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd Imployments;
Like a false Traitor and injurious Villain,
Besides, I say, and will in Battel prove,
Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest Verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye;
That all the Treasons for these eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this Land,
Fetcht from false Mowbray their First Head and Spring.
Further I say, and further will maintain,
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Gloster's death,
Suggest his soon believing Adversaries,
And consequently like a Traitor Coward,
Sluc'd out his innocent Soul through streams of Blood;
Which Blood, like sacrificing Abel's cries,
(Even from the tongueless Caverns of the Earth),
To me for Justice, and rough Chastisement.
And by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.
King. How high a pitch his Resolution soars!
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?
Mow. O, let my Soveraign turn away his Face,
And bid his Ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his Blood,
How God and good men hate so foul a Lie.
King. Mowbray, impartial are our Eyes and Ears.
Were he my Brother, nay, our Kingdom's Heir,
As he is but my Father's Brother's Son;
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a Vow,
Such neighbour-nearness to our sacred Blood,
Should nothing privilledge him, nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright Soul.
He is our Subject, (Mowbray), so art thou,
Free speech and fearless I to thee allow.
Mow. Then, Bullingbrooke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest!
Three parts of that Receipt I had for Calice,
Disburst I to his Highness Souldiers;
The other part reserv'd I by consent,
For that my Soveraign Liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear Account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his Queen.
Now swallow down that lie. For Gloster's death,
I slew him not; but, (to mine own disgrace),
Neglected my sworn Duty in that case.
For you, my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The Honourable Father to my Foe,
Once I did lay an ambush for your Life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved Soul;
But e're I last receiv'd the Sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your Graces Pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault; as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancor of a Villain,
A Recreant and most degenerate Traitor;
Which in my self I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurle down my Gage,
Upon this overweening Traitors foot,
To prove my self a Loyal Gentleman,
Even in the best Blood chamber'd in his bosom.
In haste whereof most heartily I pray
Your Highness to assign our Tryal-day.
King. Wrath-kindled Gentlemen, be rul'd by me;
Let's purge this Choler without letting Blood:
This we prescribe, though no Physitian,
Deep Malice makes too deep Incision. omitted
Forget, forgive, conclude and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, this is no time to bleed.
Good Uncle, let this end where it begun,
We'll calm the Duke of Norfolk, you your Son.
Gaunt. To be a Make-peace shall become my age;
Throw down, (my Son), the Duke of Norfolk's Gage.
King. And, Norfolk, throw down his.
Gaunt. When Harry, when? ~~Obedience bids,~~
Obedience bids, I should not bid agen.
King. Norfolk, throw down, we bid; there is no boot.
Mow. My self I throw, (dread Soveraign), at thy foot.
My Life thou shalt command, but not my Shame;
The one my Duty owes; but my fair Name,
Despight of death, that lives upon my Grave,
To dark dishonours use, thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffl'd here,
Pierc'd to the Soul, with slanders venom'd Spear;
The which no ~~Blame~~ can cure, but his heart Blood
Which breath'd this Poyson.

King.

King. Rage muſt be withſtood:
Give me his Gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.
Mow. Yea, but not change his Spots: take but my ſhame,
And I reſign my Gage. My dear, dear Lord,
The pureſt Treaſure mortal times afford,
Is ſpotleſs Reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded Loam, or painted Clay.
A Jewel in a ten-times barr'd up Cheſt,
Is a bold Spirit in a Loyal Breaſt.
Mine Honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take Honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my Liege, mine Honour let me try,
In that I live; and for that will I die.
King. Couſin, throw down your Gage; Do you begin.
Bol. Oh, Heaven defend my Soul from ſuch foul ſin!
Shall I ſeem Creſt-fain in my Father's ſight,
Or with pale beggar'd Fear impeach my Might,
Before this out-dar'd Daſtard? E're my Tongue
Shall wound my Honour with ſuch feeble Wrong;
Or ſound ſo baſe a parle; my Teeth ſhall tear
The ſlaviſh Motive of recanting Fear,
And ſpit it bleeding in his high diſgrace,
Where ſhame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's Face.
[Exit Gaunt.
King. We were not born to ſue, but to Command,
Which ſince we cannot do to make you Friends,
Be ready, as your lives ſhall anſwer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day.
There ſhall your Swords and Lances arbitrate
The ſwelling Difference of your ſetled Hate:
Since we cannot attone you, you ſhall ſee
Juſtice deſign the Victor's Chivalry.
Lord Marſhal, command our Officers at Arms,
Be ready to direct theſe home Alarms. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda. III.

The Duke of Lancaster's Palace.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutcheſs of Gloſter.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Gloſter's blood,
Doth more ſolicit me than your Exclaims,
To ſtir againſt the Butchers of his life.
But ſince Correction lyeth in thoſe Hands,
Which made the Fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our Quarrel to the Will of Heaven;
Who when they ſee the Hours ripe on Earth,
Will rain hot Vengeance on Offenders heads.
Dut. Finds Brotherhood in thee no ſharper ſpur?
Hath love in thy old Blood no living fire?
Edward's ſeven Sons, whereof thy ſelf art one,
Were as ſeven Vials of his ſacred Blood;
Or ſeven fair Branches ſpringing from one Root:
Some of thoſe ſeven are dri'd by Natures Courſe;
Some of thoſe Branches by the Deſtinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear Lord, my life, my Gloſter,
One Vial full of Edward's Sacred Blood,
One flouriſhing Branch of his moſt Royal Root
Is crack'd, and all the precious Liquor ſpilt;
Is hackt down, and his Summer Leaves all faded,
By Envy's hand, and Murder's Bloody Axe.
Ah Gaunt! His Blood was thine; that Bed, that Womb,
That Metal, that Self-mould that faſhion'd thee,
Made him a Man; And though thou liv'ſt and breath'ſt,
Yet art thou ſlain in him; thou doſt conſent
In ſome large meaſure to thy Father's death;
In that thou ſeeſt thy wretched Brother die,
Who was the Model of thy Father's life.
Call it not Patience, Gaunt, it is Deſpair.
In ſuffring thus thy Brother to be ſlaughter'd,
Thou ſhew'ſt the naked Pathway to thy life,
Teaching ſtern Murther how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men, we intitle Patience,
Is pale cold Cowardice in noble Breaſts.
What ſhall I ſay? to ſafegard thine own life,
The beſt way is to'venge my Gloſter's death.
Gaunt. Heavens is the Quarrel: for Heaven's Subſtitute,
His Deputy anointed in his ſight,
Hath caus'd his death; the which if wrongfully,
Let Heaven Revenge; for I may never lift
An angry Arm againſt his Miniſter.
Dut. Where then, alas, may I complain my ſelf?
Gaun. To Heaven, the Widows Champion and defence.
Dut. Why then I will: farewel, old Gaunt. farewel.
Thou go'ſt to Coventry, there to behold
Our Couſin Hereford, and fell Mowbray fight.
O ſit my Husbands Wrongs on Hereford's Spear,
That it may enter Butcher Mowbray's breaſt!
Or if Misfortune miſs the firſt Carreer,
Be Mowbray's ſins ſo heavy in his Boſom,
That they may break his foaming Courſers back,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Liſts,
A Caitiff recreant to my Couſin Hereford!
Farewel, old Gaunt, thy ſomtimes Brother's Wife
With her Companion Grief muſt end her life.
Gaunt. Siſter, farewel; I muſt to Coventry,
As much good ſtay with thee, as go with me!
Dut. Yet one word more; Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowneſs, but weight:
I take my leave, before I have begun;
For Sorrow ends not, when it ſeemeth done.
Commend me to my Brother, Edward York.
Lo, this is all: nay, yet depart not ſo,
Though this be all, do not ſo quickly go,
I ſhall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good ſpeed at Plaſhie viſit me.
Alack, and what ſhall good old York there ſee
But empty Lodgings, and unfurniſh'd Walls,
Un-peopl'd Offices, untrodden Stones?
And what hear there for Welcome, but my Groans?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there
To ſeek out Sorrow that dwells every where;
Deſolate, deſolate will I hence, and die;
The laſt leave of thee, takes my weeping Eye. [Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia. IV.

The Liſts at Coventry.

Enter Marſhal and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, ſprightful and bold,
Stays but the Summons of the Appellants Trumpet.
Au. Why then the Champions are prepar'd, and ſtay
For nothing but his Majeſties approach. [Flouriſh.

Enter King, Gaunt, Buſhy, Bagot, Green, and others:
Then Mowbray in Armour, and Harrold.

Rich. Marſhal, demand of yonder Champion
The Cauſe of his arrival here in Arms;
Ask him his Name, and orderly proceed
To ſwear him in the Juſtice of his Cauſe.
Mar. In Gods Name, and the Kings, ſay who thou art?
And why thou com'ſt, thus Knightly clad in Arms?
Againſt what man thou com'ſt, and what's thy Quarrel,
Speak truly on thy Kinghthood, and thine Oath,
As ſo defend thee Heaven, and thy Valour!
Mow. My Name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engaged by my Oath,
(Which Heaven defend a Knight ſhould violate)
Both to defend my Loyalty and Truth,
To God, my King, and his ſucceeding Iſſue,

Againſt

Againſt the Duke of Hereford, that Appeals me;
And by the Grace of God, and this mine Arm,
To prove him, in defending of my ſelf,
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me;
And as I truly fight, defend me Heaven!

Tucket. Enter Hereford, and Harold.

Rich. Marſhal, Ask yonder Knight in Arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither,
Thus plated in Habiliments of War:
And formally according to our Law
Depoſe him in the Juſtice of his Cauſe.
Mar. What is thy Name, and wherefore com'ſt thou hither,
Before King Richard, in his Royal Liſts?
Againſt whom comeſt thou? and what's thy Quarrel?
Speak like a true Knight, ſo defend thee Heaven!
Bull. Harry of Hereford, Lancaſter, and Darby,
Am I, who ready here do ſtand in Arms,
To prove by Heaven's grace, my Body's Valour,
In Liſts, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,
That he's a Traitor foul and dangerous,
To God of Heaven, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me Heaven!
Mar. On pain of Death, no perſon be ſo bold,
Or daring hardy, as to touch the Liſts,
Except the Marſhal, and ſuch Officers
Appointed to direct theſe fair Deſigns.
Bull. Lord Marſhal, let me kiſs my Sovereign's Hand,
And bow my Knee before his Majeſty:
For Mowbray and my ſelf are like two men,
That vow a long and weary Pilgrimage;
Then let us take a ceremonious Leave
And loving Farewel of our ſeveral Friends.
Mar. The Appellant in all duty greets your Highneſs,
And craves to kiſs your hand, and take his leave.
Rich. We will deſcend and fold him in our arms.
Couſin of Hereford, as thy Cauſe is ~~juſt~~ right,
So be thy Fortune in this Royal Fight!
Farewel, my Blood, which if to day thou ſhed,
Lament me may, but not Revenge thee dead.
Bull. Oh, let no noble Eye profane a Tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's Spear:
As confident, as is the Faulcon's flight
Againſt a Bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my noble Couſin) Lord Aumerle:

~~Not ſick, although I have to do with death,~~
~~But luſty, young, and chearly drawing breath.~~ omitted
~~Lo, as at Engliſh Feaſts, ſo I regreet~~
~~The daintieſt laſt, to make the end moſt ſweet:~~

Oh thou the Earthy Author of my Blood, (To Gaunt.
Whoſe youthful Spirit, in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up
To reach at Victory above my Head,
Add proof unto mine Armour with thy Prayers,
And with thy Bleſſings ſteel my Lances Point,
That it may enter Mowbray's Waxen Coat,
And furniſh new the Name of John a Gaunt
Even in the luſty 'haviour of his Son.
Gaunt. Heaven in thy good Cauſe make thee proſp'rous;
Be ſwift like Lightning in the Execution,
And let thy Blows, doubly redoubled, on
Fall like amazing thunder on the Cask
Of thy ~~amaz'd~~ pernicious Enemy. adverſe
Rouze up thy youthful Blood, be ~~Valiant~~ grave, and live!
Bull. Mine Innocence, and St. George to thrive.
Mow. How ever Heaven or Fortune caſt my Lot,
There lives, or dies, true to King Richard's Throne,
A Loyal, Juſt, and Upright Gentleman:
Never did Captive with a freer heart
Caſt off his Chains of Bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroul'd Enfranchiſement,
More than my dancing Soul doth celebrate
This feaſt of Battle, with mine Adverſary.
Moſt mighty Liege, and my Companion Peers,
Take from my mouth, the wiſh of happy years;
As gentle, and as jocund, as to jeſt,
Go I to fight: Truth hath a quiet breaſt.
Rich. Farewel, my Lord, ſecurely I eſpy
Virtue with Valour, couched in thine Eye.
Order the Trial, Marſhal, and begin.
Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaſter and Darby,
Receive thy Launce, and Heaven defend thy Right!
Bull. Strong as a Tower, in hope, I cry Amen.
Mar. Go bear this Launce to Thomas Duke of Norfolk.
1. Harry of Hereford, Lancaſter and Darby,
Stands here for God, his Sovereign, and Himſelf,
On pain to be found falſe and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to ſet forward to the fight.
2. Har. Here ſtandeth Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk
On pain to be found falſe and recreant,
Both to defend himſelf, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaſter, and Darby,
To God, his Sovereign, and to him diſloyal:
Courageouſly, and with a free deſire,
Attending but the Signal to begin. [A charge ſounded.
Mar. Sound Trumpets, and ſet forward, Combatants:
Stay, the King hath thrown his Warder down.
Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets, and their Spears,
And both return back to their Chairs again:
Withdraw with us, and let the Trumpets ſound,
While we return theſe Dukes what we decree.
[A long Flouriſh, After which the King ſpeaks.
Draw near, and liſt ——
What with our Council we have done.
For that our Kingdoms Earth ſhould not be ſoild
With that dear Blood which it hath foſtered;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aſpect
Of Civil Wounds plough'd up with Neighbours Swords; *
~~Which~~ and ~~ſo~~ rouz'd up with boiſterous untun'd Drums,
~~With~~ harſh reſounding Trumpets dreadful bray,
And grating ſhock of wrathful Iron Arms,
Might from our quiet Confines ~~fright fair Peace~~, be affrighted
And make us wade even in our Kindreds Blood:
Therefore, we baniſh you our Territories.
You, Couſin Hereford, upon pain of death,
Till twice five Summers have enrich'd our Fields,
Shall not regreet our fair Dominions,
But tread the ſtranger Paths of Baniſhment.
Bull. Your will be done: This muſt my Comfort be,
That Sun that warms you here, ſhall ſhine on me:
And thoſe his golden Beams to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my Baniſhment.
Rich. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier Doom,
Which I with ſome unwillingneſs pronounce.
The ſly-ſlow Hours ſhall not determinate
The dateleſs limit of thy dear Exile:
The hopeleſs word, of never to return,
Breathe I againſt thee, upon pain of life.
Mow. A heavy Sentence, my moſt Sovereign Liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highneſs mouth:
A dearer Merit, not ſo deep a Maim,
As to be caſt forth in the common air,
Have I deſerved at your Highneſs hands.
The Language I have learn'd theſe forty years,
(My native Engliſh), now I muſt forgo,
And now my Tongues uſe is to me no more,
Than an unſtringed Viol, or a Harp,
Or like a cunning Inſtrument caſ'd up,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.

~~Within my Mouth you have engoal'd my Tongue,~~
~~Doubly percullis'd with my Teeth and Lips,~~
~~And dull, unfeeling, barren Ignorance,~~ omitted
~~Is made my Goaler to attend on me:~~

* And for we think, the eagle-winged pride
Of ſky aſpiring & ambitious thoughts,
With rival-hating Envy, ſet you on
To wake our peace, which in our Countrys cradle
Draws the ſweet infant breath of gentle ſleep,

I am too old to fawn upon a Nurſe,
Too far in years to be a Pupil now:
What is thy Sentence then, but ſpeechleſs death,
Which robs my Tongue from breathing native breath?
Rich. It boots thee not to be compaſſionate;
After our Sentence, plaining comes too late.
Mow. Then thus I turn me from my Country's light,
To dwell in ſolemn Shades of endleſs night.
Rich. Return again, and take an Oath with thee.
Lay on our Royal Sword, your baniſh'd hands;
Swear by the Duty that you owe to Heaven
(Our part therein we baniſh with your ſelves)
To keep the Oath that we adminiſter:
You never ſhall (ſo help you Truth, and Heaven),
Embrace each others Love in Baniſhment,
Nor ever look upon each others Face,
Nor ever write, regreet, or reconcile
This lowring Tempeſt of your home-bred Hate,
Nor ever by adviſed purpoſe meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainſt Us, our State, our Subjects, or our Land.
Bul. I ſwear.
Mow. And I, to keep all this.
Bul. Norfolk, ſo far, as to mine Enemy: (In ſalutation
By this time, had the King permitted us),
One of our Souls had wandred in the air,
Baniſh'd this frail Sepulchre of our fleſh,
As now our fleſh is baniſh'd from this Land.
Confeſs thy Treaſons, e're thou fly this Realm,
Since thou has far to go, bear not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty Soul.
Mow. No Bullingbroke if ever I were Traitor,
My Name be blotted from the book of Life,
And I from Heaven baniſh'd, as from hence!
But what thou art, Heaven, thou and I do know,
And all too ſoon, (I fear), the King ſhall rue.
Farewel (my Liege), now no way can I ſtray;
Save back to England, all the world's my way. (Exit
Rich. Uncle, even in the Glaſſes of thine Eyes
I ſee thy grieved Heart; thy ſad Aſpect,
Hath from the number of his baniſh'd years
Pluck'd four away; Six frozen Winters ſpent,
Return with welcome home from Baniſhment.
Bul. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging Winters, and four wanton Springs
End in a word; ſuch is the breath of Kings.
Gaunt. I thank my Liege, that in regard of me
He ſhortens four years of my Sons Exile:
But little vantage ſhall I reap thereby;
For e're the ſix years that he hath to ſpend,
Can change their Moons, and bring their times about,
My oyl-dry'd Lamp, and time-bewaſted Light,
Shall be extinct with Age, and endleſs Night:
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me ſee my Son.
Rich. Why, Uncle? thou haſt many years to live.
Gaunt. But not a minute, (King), that thou canſt give;
Shorten my days thou canſt with ſudden Sorrow,
And pluck Nights from me, but not lend me a Morrow:
Thou canſt help time to furrow me with Age,
But ſtop no Wrinckle in his Pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death;
But dead, thy Kingdom cannot buy my breath.
Rich. Thy Son is baniſh'd upon good advice,
Whereto thy Tongue a party-verdict gave;
Why at our Juſtice ſeem'ſt thou then to lowre?
Gaunt. Things ſweet to taſte, prove in digeſtion ſowr:
You urg'd me as a Judge, but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when ſome of you ſhould ſay,
I was too ſtrict to make mine own away:
But you gave leave to my unwilling Tongue,
Againſt my will, to do my ſelf this wrong.
Rich. Couſin, farewel! and Uncle bid him ſo:
Six years we baniſh him, and he ſhall go. [Exit.

Scene VI

Flouriſh.

Au. Couſin, farewel, what preſence muſt not know,
From where you do remain, let Paper ſhow.
Mar. My Lord, no leave take I, for I will ride
As far as Land will let me, by your ſide.
Gaunt. Oh, to what purpoſe doſt thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'ſt no greeting to thy Friends?
Bul. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the Tongue's Office ſhould be prodigal,
To breathe th'abundant dolour of the Heart.
Gaunt. Thy Grief is but thy Abſence for a time.
Bul. Joy abſent, Grief is preſent for that time.
Gaunt. What is ſix Winters, they are quickly gone.
Bul. To men in Joy; but Grief makes one hour ten.
Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'ſt for pleaſure.
Bul. My heart will ſigh, when I miſcall it ſo,
Which finds it an enforced Pilgrimage.
Gaunt. The ſullen paſſage of thy weary ſteps
Eſteem a Foil, wherein thou art to ſet
The precious Jewel of thy home return. *
Bul. Oh, who can hold a Fire in his hand
By thinking on the Froſty Caucaſus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of Appetite,
By bare imagination of a Feaſt?
Or wallow naked in December Snow
By thinking on fantaſtick Summers Heat?
Oh no, the apprehenſion of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worſe;
Fell Sorrow's Tooth, doth never rankle more
Than when it bites, but lanceth not the ſore.
Gaunt. Come, come, (my Son), I'll bring thee on thy way;
Had I thy Youth, and Cauſe, I would not ſtay.
Bul. Then, England's ground farewel! ſweet ſoil adieu,
My Mother and my Nurſe, which bears me yet.
Where-e're I wander, boaſt of this I can,
Though baniſh'd, yet a true-born Engliſh-man. (Exeunt

Scæna Quarta. VII.

The Court.

Enter King, Aumerle, Green, Bagot.

Rich. We did obſerve. Couſin Aumerle,
How far brought you High Hereford on his way?
Aum. I brought High Hereford, (if you call him ſo),
But to the next high way, and there I left him.
Rich. And ſay, what ſtore of parting tears were ſhed?
Aum. Faith, none by me; except the North-Eaſt wind
(Which then grew bitterly againſt our faces)
Awak'd the ſleepy rheume, and ſo by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.
Rich. What ſaid our Couſin when you parted with him?
Au. Farewel! and for my heart diſdained that my Tongue
Should ſo prophane the word, That taught me craft
To counterfeit oppreſſion of ſuch Grief,
That word ſeem'd buried in my Sorrows Grave.
Marry, would the word farewel, have lengthn'd Hours,
And added Years to his ſhort Baniſhment,
He ſhould have had a Volume of Farewels;
But ſince it would not, he had none of me.
Ric. He is our Couſin (Couſin); but 'tis doubt,
When time ſhall call him home from Baniſhment,
Whether our Kinſman come to ſee his Friends.
Our Self, and Buſhy, here Bagot, and Green
Obſerv'd his Courtſhip to the Common People:
How he did ſeem to dive into their Hearts,
With humble, and familiar Courteſie,
What Reverence he did throw away on Slaves;
Wooing poor Crafts-men with the craft of Smiles,
And patient under-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to baniſh their Affects with him.
Off goes his Bonnet to an Oyſter-wench;

A

* All places that the Eye of heaven visits
Are to a wise man ports & happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus:
There is no virtue like necessity.
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
& thou art flying to a fresher clime.
Look what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lye that way thou go'st not whence thou com'st
Suppose the singing birds musicians;

A brace of Dray-men bid God ſpeed him well,
And had the Tribute of his ſupple Knee,
With thanks, my Countrymen, my loving Friends;
As were our England in Reverſion his,
And he our Subjects next Degree in hope.
Gr. Well, he is gone, and with him go theſe thoughts!
Now for the Rebels, which ſtand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage muſt be made, my Liege;
E're further leiſure, yield the further means
For their advantage, and your Highneſs loſs.
Rich. We will our Self in Perſon to this VVar,
And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
And liberal Largeſs, are grown ſomewhat light,
VVe are inforc'd to farm our Royal Realm,
The Revenue whereof ſhall furniſh us
For our Affairs in hand; if they come ſhort,
Our Subſtitutes at home ſhall have Blank Charters:
Whereto, when they ſhall know what men are rich,
They ſhall Subſcribe them for large Sums of Gold,
And ſend them after to ſupply our Wants:
For we will make for Ireland preſently.

Enter Buſhy.

Buſhy, what News?
Bu. Old John of Gaunt is ~~very~~ ſick, my Lord,
Suddenly taken, and hath ſent poſt haſte
To intreat your Majeſty to viſit him.
Ric. Where lies he?
Bu. At Ely-houſe.
Ric. Now put it (Heaven) in his Phyſician's mind,
To help him to his Grave immediately!
The lining of his Coffers ſhall make Coats
To deck our Souldiers for theſe Iriſh Wars.
Come Gentlemen, let's all go viſit him:
Pray Heaven we may make haſte, and come too late! [Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.
Ely House.

Enter ſick Gaunt, with York.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breathe my laſt
In wholeſom counſel to his unſtaid youth?
Yor. Vex not your ſelf, nor ſtrive not with your breath;
For all in vain comes counſel to his ear.
Gau. Oh but, (they ſay), the Tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deep harmony:
Where words are ſcarce, they are ſeldom ſpent in vain,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in pain.
He that no more muſt ſay, is liſten'd more,
Than they whom youth and eaſe have taught to gloſe,
More are mens ends markt than their lives before,
The ſetting Sun, and Muſick is the cloſe,
As the laſt taſte of ſweets, is ſweeteſt laſt,
Writ in remembrance, more than things long paſt;
Though Richard my lifes counſel would not hear,
My deaths ſad tale may yet undeaf his Ear. O mittee
Yor. No, it is ſtopt with other flatt'ring Sounds, charms
As praiſes of his State; then there are deſire
Laſcivious Meeters, to whoſe venom ſound
The open Ears of youth doth always liſten:
Report of Faſhions in proud Italy,
Whoſe Manners ſtill our tardie apiſh Nation
Limps after in baſe imitation. awkard
Where doth the World thruſt forth a Vanity,
(So it be new, there's no reſpect how vile,)
That is not quickly buz'd into their Ears?
That all too late comes counſel to be heard,
Where Will doth mutiny with Wits regard:
Direct not him, whoſe way himſelf will chooſe, omitt.
'Tis breath thou lack'ſt, and that breath wilt thou looſe.
Gaunt. Methinks I am a Prophet new inſpir'd,
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
His raſh fierce Blaze of Riot cannot laſt;
For violent Fires ſoon burn out themſelves,
Small Showers laſt long, but ſudden Storms are ſhort;
He tires betimes, that ſpurs too faſt betimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder;
Light Vanity, inſatiate Cormorant,
Conſuming means, ſoon preys upon it ſelf.
This Royal Throne of Kings, this Scepter'd Iſle,
This Earth of Majeſty, this Seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demy Paradiſe,
This Fortreſs built by Nature for her ſelf,
Againſt infection, and the hand of War;
This happy Breed of men, this little World,
This precious Stone ſet in the Silver Sea,
Which ſerves it in the Office of a Wall,
Or as a Moat defenſive to a Houſe,
Againſt the envy of leſs happier Lands;
This bleſſed Plot, this Earth, this Realm, this England,
This Nurſe, this teeming womb of Royal Kings,
Fear'd by their Breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their Deeds, as far from home,
For Chriſtian Service, and true Chivalry,
As is the Sepulchre in ſtubborn Jury
Of the World's Ranſom, bleſſ'd Mary's Son;
This Land of ſuch dear Souls, this dear-dear Land,
Dear for her Reputation through the World,
Is now Leas'd out (I die pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement, or pelting Farm;
England bound in with the triumphant Sea,
Whoſe rocky ſhore beats back the envious Siege
Of watry Neptune, is now bound in with ſhame,
With Inky Blots, and rotten Parchment Bonds.
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a ſhameful Conqueſt of it ſelf.
Ah! would the Scandal vaniſh with my life,
How happy then were my enſuing death!

Scene II.

Enter King, Queen, Aumerle, Buſhy, Green, Bagot, Roſs, and Willoughby.

Yor. The King is come, deal mildly with his youth,
For young hot Colts, being rag'd, do rage the more.
Qu. How fares our Noble Uncle, Lancaſter?
Ric. What comfort, man? How is't with aged Gaunt?
Ga. Oh how that Name befits my Compoſition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me Grief hath kept a tedious Faſt,
And who abſtains from Meat, that is not gaunt:
For ſleeping England long time have I watcht,
Whatching breeds leanneſs, leanneſs is all gaunt:
The Pleaſure that ſome Fathers feed upon,
Is my ſtrict Faſt, I mean my Childrens looks,
And therein Faſting haſt thou made me gaunt;
Gaunt am I for the Grave, gaunt as a Grave, omitte
Whoſe hollow Womb inherits nought but Bones.
Ric. Can ſick men play ſo nicely with their Names?
Gau. No, Miſery makes ſport to mock it ſelf:
Since thou doſt ſeek to kill my Name in me,
I mock my Name (great King) to flatter thee.
Ric. Should dying men flatter thoſe that live?
Gau. No, no, men living flatter thoſe that dye.
Ric. Thou now a dying, ſay'ſt thou flatter'ſt me.
Gau. Oh no, thou dy'ſt, though I the ſicker be.
Ric. I am in health, I breathe, I ſee thee ill.
Gau. Now he that made me, knows I ſee thee ill:
Ill in my ſelf ~~to ſee, and in thee ſeeing ill,~~ But ſeeing thee ill.
Thy Death-bed is no leſſer than the Land,
Wherein thou lieſt in Reputation ſick;
And thou, too careleſs Patient as thou art,
Committ'ſt thy anointed Body to the cure
Of thoſe Phyſicians that firſt wounded thee:
A thouſand flatterers ſit within thy Crown,
Whoſe compaſs is no bigger than thy hand, cad
And yet ingaged in ſo ſmall a Verge,
The waſte is no whit leſſer than thy Land.

Then a delightfull measure or a dance.

Oh had thy Grandſire with a Prophets Eye,
Seen how his Son's Son ſhould deſtroy his Sons,
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy ſhame,
Depoſing thee before thou wert poſſeſt,
Which art poſſeſt now to depoſe thy ſelf.
Why (Couſin) wert thou Regent of the world,
It were a ſhame to let this Land by leaſe:
But for thy world enjoying but this Land,
Is it not more than ſhame, to ſhame it ſo?
Landlord of England art thou, and not King:
Thy ſtate of Law, is bondſlave to the Law,
And——

Rich. And thou, a lunatick lean-witted Fool,
Preſuming on an Agues privilege,
Dar'ſt with thy frozen Admonition
Make pale our cheek, chaſing the Royal Blood
With fury, from his Native Reſidence;
Now by my Seats right Royal Majeſty,
Wert thou not Brother to great Edward's Son,
This Tongue that runs ſo roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy unreverent ſhoulders.

Gau. Oh, ſpare me not, my Brother Edward's Son,
For that I was his Father Edward's Son;
That Blood already, (like the Pelican)
Thou haſt tapt out, and drunkenly carows'd.
My Brother Glocester, plain well meaning Soul,
(Whom fair befall in Heaven 'mongſt happy Souls)
May be a Preſident and Witneſs good,
That thou reſpect'ſt not ſpilling Edward's Blood;
Join with the preſent ſickneſs that I have,
And thy unkindneſs be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too long wither'd Flower.
Live in thy ſhame, but die not ſhame with thee,
Theſe words hereafter thy tormentors be!
Convey me to my Bed, then to my Grave.
Love they to live, that Love and Honour have. [Exit.

Rich. And let them die, that Age and Sullens have;
For both haſt thou, and both become the Grave.

Yor. I do beſeech your Majeſty, impute his words
To wayward ſicklineſs, and age ~~in him~~:
He loves you on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.

Rich. Right, you ſay true; as Hereford's love, ſo his;
As theirs, ſo mine; and all be as it is!

Enter Northumberland. Scene III.

Nor. My Liege, old Gaunt commends him to your Majeſty.

Rich. What ſay's ~~he~~? old Gaunt?

Nor. Nay nothing, all is ſaid:
His Tongue is now a ſtringleſs Inſtrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaſter hath ſpent.

Yor. Be York the next, that muſt be Bankrupt ſo!
Though Death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

Rich. The ripeſt Fruit firſt falls, and ſo doth he;
His time is ſpent, our pilgrimage muſt be:
So much for that. Now for our Iriſh Wars;
We muſt ſupplant thoſe rough rug-headed Kerns,
Which live like Venom, where no Venom elſe,
But only they, have privilege to live.
And for theſe great Affairs do ask ſome charge,
Towards our Aſſiſtance, we do ſeize to us
The Plate, Coyn, ~~and~~ Revenues, and Moveables,
Whereof our Uncle Gaunt did ſtand poſſeſt.

Yor. How long ſhall I be patient? Oh how long
Shall tender duty make me ſuffer wrong?
Not Gloſter's death, not Hereford's Baniſhment.
Nor Gaunt's Rebukes, nor England's private Wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor ~~Bullingbroke~~ Young
About his Marriage, nor my own Diſgrace,
Have ever made me ſower my patient Cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my Soveraign's Face.
I am the laſt of noble Edward's Sons,
Of whom thy Fathar Prince of Wales was firſt;
In Wars was never Lyon rag'd more fierce;
In Peace, was never gentle Lamb more mild,
Than was that young and Princely Gentleman;
His Face thou haſt, for even ſo look'd he,
Accompliſh'd with the number of thy Hours;
But when he frown'd, it was againſt the French,
And not againſt his Friends: his Noble Hand
Did win what he did ſpend; and ſpent not that
Which his triumphant Father's Hand had won:
His Hands were guilty of no Kindreds Blood,
But bloody with the Enemies of his Kin;
Oh Richard, York is too far gone with Grief,
Or elſe he never would compare between.

Rich. Why Uncle, What's the matter?

Yor Oh, my Liege, pardon me if you pleaſe, if not,
I, pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
Seek you to ſeize, and gripe into your hands
The Royalties and Rights of baniſh'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt juſt, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deſerve to have an Heir?
Is not his Heir a well-deſerving Son?
Take Hereford's Rights away, and take from time
His Charters; and his cuſtomary Rights;
Let not to morrow then enſue to day,
Be not thy ſelf. For how art thou a King
But by fair Sequence and Succeſſion?
~~Now afore God, God forbid I ſay true,~~
If you do wrongfully ſeize Hereford's right,
Call in his Letters Patents that he hath,
By his Attorneys General, to ſue
His Livery, and deny his offer'd Homage;
You pluck a thouſand Dangers on your head;
You loſe a thouſand well diſpoſed Hearts;
And prick my tender Patience to thoſe thoughts
Which Honour and Allegiance cannot think.

Rich. Think what you will; we ſeize into our hands,
His Plate, his Goods, his Money, and his Lands.

Yor. I'll not be by the while; my Leige, farewell;
What will enſue hereof, there's none can tell,
But by bad Courſes may be underſtood,
That their Events can never fall out good. [Exit.

Rich Go, Buſhy, to the Earl of Wiltſhire ſtreight,
Bid him repair to us to Ely-houſe,
To ſee this buſineſs: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time I trow;
And we create in abſence of our ſelf
Our Uncle York, Lord Governour of England:
For he is juſt, and always lov'd us well.
Come on, our Queen, to morrow muſt we part;
Be merry, for our time of ſtay is ſhort. [Flouriſh.

Manet North, Willoughby, and Roſs. Scene IV.

North. Well, Lords, the Duke of Lancaſter is dead.

Roſſ. And living too, for now his Son is Duke.

Will. Barely in Title, not in Revenue.

Nor. Richly in both, if Juſtice had her Right.

Roſſ. My Heart is great; but it muſt break with ſilence,
Er't be diſburthened with a liberal Tongue.

Nor. Nay, ſpeak thy mind; and let him ne'er ſpeak more
That ſpeaks thy words again to do thee harm.

Will. Tends that thou'dſt ſpeak to the Duke of Hereford?
If it be ſo, out with it boldly, man:
Quick is mine Ear to hear of good towards him.

Roſſ. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unleſs you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his Patrimony.

Nor. Now afore heaven, it's ſhame ſuch wrongs are born,
In him a Royal Prince, and many more
Of Noble Blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himſelf, but baſely led
By Flatterers; and what they will inform
Meerly in hate 'gainſt any of us all,
That will the King ſeverely proſecute
'Gainſt us, our Lives, our Children, and our Heirs.

Roſſ. The Commons hath he pill'd with grievous Taxes
And ~~quite~~ loſt their Hearts: the Nobles hath he fin'd

For

For ancient Quarrels, and quite loſt their Hearts.
Will. And daily new Exactions are deviſ'd;
As Blanks, Benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o'Gods name doth become of this?
Nor. Wars hath not waſted it, for war'd he hath not,
But baſely yielded upon Comprimiſe,
That which his Anceſtors atchiev'd with blows:
More hath he ſpent in Peace, than they in Wars.
Roſ. The Earl of Wiltſhire hath the Realm in Farm.
Wil. The King's grown Bankrupt, like a broken man.
Nor. Reproach and Diſſolution hangeth over him.
Roſ. He hath not Money for theſe Iriſh Wars:
(His burthenous Taxations notwithſtanding)
But by the robbing of the baniſh'd Duke.
Nor. His Noble Kinſman, moſt degenerate King!
But Lords, we hear this fearful Tempeſt ſing,
Yet ſeek no ſhelter to avoid the Storm:
We ſee the Wind ſit ſore upon our Sails,
And yet we ſtrike not, but ſecurely periſh.
Roſ. We ſee the very Wrack that we muſt ſuffer,
And unavoided is the Danger now,
For ſuffering ſo the Cauſes of our Wrack.
Nor. Not ſo: even through the hollow Eyes of death,
I ſpie life peering; but I dare not ſay
How near the Tidings of our Comfort is.
Wil. Nay, let us ſhare thy Thoughts, as thou doſt ours.
Roſ. Be confident to ſpeak, Northumberland;
We three, are but thy ſelf, and ſpeaking ſo,
Thy Words are but as Thoughts, therefore be bold.
Nor. Then thus: I have from Port le Blanc,
A Bay in Britaine, receiv'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainald Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His Brother, Archbiſhop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainſton,
Sir John Norberie, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Quoint,
All theſe well furniſh'd by the Duke of Britaine
With eight tall Ships, three thouſand men of War,
Are making hither with all due Expedience,
And ſhortly mean to touch our Northern Shore;
Perhaps they had e're this, but that they ſtay
The firſt departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we ſhall ſhake off our ſlaviſh Yoke,
Imp out our drooping Countries broken Wing,
Redeem from broaking Pawn the blemiſh'd Crown,
Wipe off the Duſt that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Majeſty look like it ſelf;
Away with me in haſte to Ravenſpurg.
But if you faint, as fearing to do ſo,
Stay, and be ſecret, and my ſelf will go.
Roſ. To Horſe, to Horſe, urge Doubts to them that fear.
Wil. Hold out my Horſe, and I will firſt be there. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.
The Court of England.
Enter Queen, Buſhy, and Bagot.

Buſh. Madam, your Majeſty is too much ſad,
You promis'd, when you parted with the King,
To lay aſide ſelf-harming heavineſs,
And entertain a chearful Diſpoſition.
Qu. To pleaſe the King, I did; to pleaſe my ſelf,
I cannot do it; yet I know no Cauſe
VVhy I ſhould welcome ſuch a Gueſt as Grief,
Save bidding farewel to ſo ſweet a Gueſt
As my ſweet Richard: yet again methinks
Some unborn Sorrow, ripe in Fortune's VVomb,
Is coming towards me, and my inward Soul
VVhich nothing trembles, at ſomething it grieves,
More than with parting from my Lord the King.
Buſh. Each Subſtance of a Grief hath twenty Shadows,
VVhich ſhews like Grief it ſelf, but is not ſo:
For Sorrows eye, glazed with blinding Tears,
Divides one thing entire, to many Objects;
Like Perſpectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Shew nothing but Confuſion; ey'd awry,
Diſtinguiſh Form: ſo your ſweet Majeſty
Looking awry upon your Lord's departure,
Find ſhapes of Grief, more than himſelf to wail,
VVhich look'd on as they are, is nought but Shadows
Of what it is not: then thrice gracious Queen,
More than your Lords departure weep not, more's not
Or if it be, 'tis with falſe Sorrow's eye, (ſeen;
VVhich for things true, weeps things imaginary.
Qu. It may be ſo; but yet my inward ſoul
Perſwades me it is, otherwiſe: how-e're it be,
I cannot but be ſad; ſo moſt heavy ſad.
~~As though one thinking on no thought I think,~~
~~Makes me with heavy nothing faint and ſhrink.~~
Buſh. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious Lady.
Qu. 'Tis nothing leſs; conceit is ſtill deriv'd
From ſome fore-father Grief; mine is not ſo,
~~For Nothing hath begot my Something Grief,~~
~~Or Something, hath the nothing that I grieve,~~
~~'Tis in reverſion that I do poſſeſs,~~
But what it is, that is not yet known; what ~~I cannot name,~~ 'tis nameleſs woe. I wot.

Enter Green.

Gree. Heaven ſave your Majeſty, and well met, Gentlemen,
I hope the King is not yet ſhipt for Ireland.
Qu. VVhy hop'ſt thou ſo? 'Tis better hope he is;
For his Deſigns crave haſte, good hope:
Then wherefore doſt thou hope he is not ſhipt?
Gree. That he, our hope, might have retir'd his Power,
And driven into deſpair an Enemies Hope,
VVho ſtrongly hath ſet footing in this Land,
The baniſh'd Bullingbrook repeals himſelf,
And with up-lifted Arms is ſafe arriv'd
At Ravenſpurg.
Qu. Now God in Heaven forbid!
Gree. O, Madam, 'tis too true; and that is worſe,
The L. Northumberland, his young Son Henry Percy,
The Lords of Roſſe, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful Friends are fled to him.
Buſh. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland,
And all the reſt of that revolted Faction, Traitors?
Gree. We have: whereupon the Earl of Worceſter
Hath broke his Staff, reſign'd his Stewardſhip,
And all the Houſhold Servants fled with him to Bullingbrook.
Qu. So Green, thou art the Midwife of my woe,
And Bullingbrook my Sorrows diſmal Heir:
Now hath my Soul brought forth her Prodigie,
And I, a gaſping new delivered Mother,
Have Woe to Woe, Sorrow to Sorrow join'd.
Buſh. Deſpair not, Madam.
Qu. Who ſhall hinder me?
I will deſpair, and be at enmity
With cozening Hope; he is a Flatterer,
A Paraſite, a keeper back of Death,
Who gently would diſſolve the bands of Life,
Which falſe Hopes linger, in Extremity.

Enter York.

Gree. Here comes the Duke of York.
Qu. With Signs of War about his aged neck;
Oh, full of careful buſineſs are his looks:
Uncle, for Heaven ſake ſpeak comfortable words.
York. Comfort's in Heaven, and we are on the Earth,
Where nothing lives but Croſſes, Care and Grief.
Your Husband he is gone to ſave far off,
Whilſt others come to make his loſe at home:
Here am I left to underprop his Land,
Who weak with Age, cannot ſupport my ſelf:
Now comes his ſick hour that his ſurfeit made,
Now ſhall he try his Friends that flattered him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, your Son was gone before I came.

* Should I do ſo I ſhould belie my thoughts;

Yor. He was; why ſo; go all which way it will!
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons ~~they are~~ cold,
And will I fear, revolt on Hereford's ſide.
Sirrah, get thee to Plaſhie, to my Siſter Gloſter;
Bid her ſend ~~me~~ preſently a Thouſand Pound;
Hold, take my Ring.
Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell, ~~your Lordſhip,~~ to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I ſhall grieve you to report the reſt.
Yor. What is't, ~~Knave~~?
Ser. An Hour before I came, the Dutcheſs dy'd.
Yor. Heav'n for his mercy, what a Tide of Woes
Comes ruſhing on this woful Land at once!
I know not what to do: I would to Heaven,
(So my Untruth had not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my Brother's.
What, are there Poſts diſpatch'd for Ireland?
How ſhall we do for Money for theſe Wars?
Come Siſter; (Couſin, I would ſay; pray pardon me.
Go, follow, get thee home, provide ſome Carts, [To a Serv.
And bring away the Armour that is there.
Gentlemen, will you Muſter men?
If I know how, ~~or which way~~ to order theſe Affairs,
Thus diſorderly thruſt into my Hands,
Never believe me. Both are my Kinſmen;
Th' one ~~is~~ my Sovereign, whom both my Oath
And Duty bids defend; th' other again
Is my Kinſman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom Conſcience, and my Kindred bids to right.
Well, ſomewhat we muſt do: Come, Couſin, I'll ~~I'le~~ diſpoſe of you. ~~Gentlemen~~, go muſter up your men,
And meet me preſently at Barkly Caſtle;
I ſhould to Plaſhy too; but time will not permit,
All is uneven, and every thing is left at ſix and ſeven. [Exit.

Scene VIII.

Buſh. The wind ſits fair for News to go to Ireland,
But none returns; for us to levy Power
Proportionable to th' Enemy, is all impoſſible.
Gree. Beſides our nearneſs to the King in love,
Is near the hate of thoſe, love not the King.
Bag. And that's the wavering Commons, for their love
Lies in their Purſes; and who ſo empties them,
By ſo much fills their hearts with deadly hate.
Buſh. Wherein the King ſtands generally condemn'd.
Bag. If judgment lie in them, then ſo do we,
Becauſe we have been ever near the King.
Gree. Well; I will for refuge ſtreight to Briſtol Caſtle;
The Earl of Wiltſhire is already there.
Buſh. Thither, will I with you; for little Office
Will the hateful Commons perform for us,
Except, like Curs, to tear us all in pieces:
Will you go along with us?
Bag. No; I will to Ireland to his Majeſty:
Farewell; if Hearts preſages be not vain,
We three here part, that never ſhall meet again.
Bu. That's as York thrives, to beat back ~~Bullingbrook~~ Returning Broke.
Gree. Alas poor Duke, the Task he undertakes
Is numbring Sands, and drinking Oceans dry,
Where one on his ſide fights, thouſands will flye.
Buſh. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever!
Well, we may meet again.
Bag. I fear me, never. [Ex.

Scæna ~~Tertia~~ IX.
In Glouceſterſhire.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How far is it, my Lord, to Barkley now?
Nor. ~~Believe me, Noble Lord,~~
I am a ſtranger here in Glouſterſhire,
Theſe high wild Hills, and rough uneven Ways,
Draws out our Miles, and makes them wearieſome:
And yet our fair diſcourſe hath been as Sugar,
Making the hard Way ſweet and delectable.
But I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenſpurg to Cottſwold will be found,
By Roſſe and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which I proteſt hath very much beguil'd
The tedioufneſs and proceſs of my travel:
But theirs is ſweetned with the hope to have
The preſent benefit that I poſſeſs:
And hope to joy, is little leſs in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: By this, the weary Lords
Shall make their way ſeem ſhort, as mine hath done,
By ſight of what I have, your noble Company.
Bull. Of much leſs value is my Company,
Than your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percy.

North. It is my Son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my Brother Worceſter: whenceſoever,
Harry, how fares your Uncle?
Percy. I ~~had~~ thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his Health of you.
North. Why, is he not with the Queen?
Percy. No, my good Lord, he hath forſook the Court,
Broken his Staff of Office, and diſperſt
The Houſhold of the King.
North. What was his Reaſon?
He was not ſo reſolv'd, when we laſt ſpake together.
Percy. Becauſe your Lordſhip was proclaimed Traitor.
But he, my Lord, is gone to Ravenſpurg,
To offer ſervice to the Duke of Hereford,
And ſent me over by Barkley, to diſcover
What Power the Duke of York had levied there;
Then with direction to repair to Ravenſpurg.
North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford, ~~Boy~~?
Percy. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember; to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.
North. Then learn to know him now; this is the Duke.
Percy. My gracious Lord, I tender you my ſervice,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder days ſhall ripen, and confirm
To more approved ſervice and deſert.
Bull. I thank thee, gentle Percy, and be ſure
I count my ſelf in nothing elſe ſo happy,
As in a Soul remembring my good Friends:
And as my Fortune ripens with thy Love,
It ſhall be ſtill thy true Love's Recompence,
My Heart this Covenant makes, my Hand thus ſeals it.
North. How far is it to Barkley? and what ſtir
Keeps good old York there with his Men of War?
Percy. There ſtands the Caſtle by yond Tuft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard,
And in it are the Lords ~~of~~ York, Barkley, ~~and~~ Seymour,
None elſe of Name, and Noble Eſtimate.

Enter Roſſe and Willoughby.

North. Here comes the Lords of Roſſe and Willoughby,
Bloody with ſpurring, fiery red with haſte.
Bull. Welcome, my Lords; I wot your love purſues
A baniſht Traitor; all my Treaſury
Is yet but unfelt Thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labours Recompence.
Roſſe. Your Preſence makes us rich, moſt Noble Lord.
Willo. And far ſurmounts our labour to attain it.
Bull. Evermore Thanks, (th' Exchequer of the poor)
Which till my infant-fortune comes to years,
Stands for my Bounty: but who comes here?

Enter Barkley.

North. It is my Lord of Barkley, as I gueſs.
Bark. ~~My~~ Lord ~~of~~ Hereford, my Meſſage is to you.
Bull. My Lord, my anſwer is to Lancaſter,
And I am come to ſeek that Name in England,
And I muſt find that Title in your Tongue,
Before I make reply to ought you ſay.
Bark. Miſtake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one Title of your Honour out.

To

To you, my Lord, I come, what Lord you will,
From the moſt glorious of this Land,
The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take Advantage of the abſent time,
And fright our Native Peace, with ſelf-born Arms.

Enter York.

Bull. I ſhall not need tranſport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in Perſon. My Noble Uncle.
York. Shew me thy humble Heart, and not thy Knee,
Whoſe Duty is deceivable, and falſe.
Bull. My gracious Uncle!
York. ~~Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Uncle me,~~
I am no Traitors Uncle; and that word Grace,
In an ungracious Mouth, is but prophane.
Why have theſe baniſh'd, and forbidden Legs,
Dar'd once to touch a duſt of England's Ground?
But more then, why, why have they dar'd to march
So many Miles upon her peaceful Boſom,
Frighting her pale-fac'd Villages with War,
And oſtentation of ~~deſpiſed~~ Arms?
Com'ſt thou becauſe th' anointed King is hence?
Why, fooliſh Boy, the King is left behind,
And in my loyal Boſom lies his Power.
Were I but now the Lord of ſuch hot youth,
As when brave Gaunt, thy Father, and ~~my~~ ſelf
Reſcued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the Ranks of many thouſand French;
Oh then, how quickly ſhould this arm of mine,
Now Priſoner to the Palſie, chaſtiſe thee,
And miniſter Correction to thy Fault!
Bull. My gracious Uncle, let me know my Fault;
On what condition ſtands it, and wherein?
York. Even in condition of the worſt degree;
In groſs Rebellion, and deteſted Treaſon:
Thou art a baniſh'd man, and here art come,
Before th' expiration of thy time,
In braving Arms againſt thy Sovereign.
Bull. As I was baniſh'd, I was baniſh'd Hereford;
But as I come, I come for Lancaſter.
And, noble Uncle, I beſeech your Grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent Eye:
You are my Father, for methinks in you
I ſee old Gaunt alive. Oh then, my Father,
Will you permit that I ſhall ſtand condemn'd
A wandring Vagabond; my Rights and Royalties
Pluckt from my Arms perforce, and given away
To upſtart Unthrifts? wherefore was I born?
If that my Couſin King be King of England,
It muſt be granted I am Duke of Lancaſter.
You have a Son, Aumerle, my Noble Kinſman;
Had you firſt dy'd, and he been thus trod down,
He ſhould have found his Uncle Gaunt a Father,
To rowze his Wrongs and chaſe them to the bay.
I am deny'd to ſue my Livery here,
And yet my Letters Patents give me leave:
My Father's Goods are all diſtrain'd and ſold,
And theſe and all, are all amiſs employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a Subject,
And challenge Law: Attorneys are deny'd me,
And therefore Perſonally I lay my Claim
To mine Inheritance of free Deſcent.
North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.
Reſſ. It ſtands your Grace upon to do him right.
Willo. Baſe men by his Endowments are made great.
York. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I have had feeling of my Couſins Wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him Right:
But in this kind, to come in braving Arms,
Be his own Carver, and cut out his Way,
To find out Right with Wrongs, it may not be,
And you that do abet him in this kind,
Cheriſh Rebellion, and are Rebels all.
North. The Noble Duke hath ſworn his coming is
But for his own; and for the Right of that,
We all have ſtrongly ſworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er ſee joy that breaks that Oath.
York. Well, well, I ſee the iſſue of theſe Arms;
I cannot mend it, I muſt needs confeſs,
Becauſe my Power is weak, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you ſtoop
Unto the Sovereign Mercy of the King.
But ſince I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as Neuter. So fare ~~you~~ well,
Unleſs you pleaſe to enter in the Caſtle,
And there repoſe you for this Night.
Bull. An offer, Uncle, that we will accept;
But we muſt win your Grace to go with us
To Briſtol Caſtle, which they ſay is held
By Buſhy, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillars of the Common-wealth,
Which I have ſworn to weed, and pluck away.
York. It may be I will go ~~with you~~, but yet I'll pauſe,
For I am loth to break our Country's Laws:
For Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are;
Things paſt redreſs, are now with me paſt care. [Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Quarta.~~ XI.

In Wales.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captain.

Cap. My Lord of Salisbury, we have ſtaid ten days,
And hardly kept our Countrey-men together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will diſperſe our ſelves: farewell.
Sal. Stay yet another day, thou truſty Welchman;
The King repoſeth all his ~~Confidence~~ truſt in thee.
Cap. 'Tis thought the King is dead; we will not ſtay,
The Bay-tres in our Country are all wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Stars of Heaven;
The pale-fac'd Moon looks bloody on the Earth,
And lean look Prophets wiſper fearful Change;
Rich men look ſad, and Ruffians dance and leap;
The one in fear to loſe what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by Rage and War:
Theſe ſigns forerun the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countrymen are gone and fled,
As well aſſur'd, Richard their King is dead. [Exit.
Sal. Ah, Richard, with Eyes of heavy mind,
I ſee thy Glory, like a ſhooting Star,
Fall to the baſe Earth from the Firmament:
Thy Sun ſets weeping in the lowly Weſt,
Witneſſing Storms to come, Woe, and Unreſt:
Thy Friends are fled to wait upon thy Foes;
And croſſly to thy good, all Fortune goes. [Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Bolingbroke's Camp.

Enter ~~Bullinbrook~~, York, Northumberland, Roſſe, Percy, Willoughby, with Buſhy and Green, Priſoners.

Bull. Bring forth theſe men:
Buſhy and Green, I will not vex your Souls,
(Since preſently your Souls muſt part your Bodies)
With too much urging your pernicious lives;
For 'twere no Charity: yet to waſh your Blood
From off my Hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold ſome Cauſes of your Deaths.
You have mis-led a Prince, a Royal King,
A happy Gentleman in Blood and Lineaments,
By you unhappied, and diſfigur'd clean.
You have in manner, with your ſinful Hours
Made a divorce betwixt his Queen and him;
Broke the poſſeſſion of a Royal Bed,

And ſtain'd the Beauty of a fair Queens Cheeks
With Tears drawn from her Eyes, with your foul Wrongs.
My ſelf a Prince, by Fortune of my Birth,
Near to the King in Blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him miſ-interpret me,
Have ſtoopt my neck under your Injuries,
And ſigh'd my Engliſh breath in foreign Clouds,
Eating the bitter Bread of Baniſhment;
While you have fed upon my Seignories;
Diſ-park'd my Parks, and fell'd my Forreſt Woods;
From mine own Windows torn my Houſhold Coat,
Raz'd out my Impreſs; leaving me no ſign,
Save mens Opinions, and my living Blood,
To ſhew the world I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemns you to the death. See them delivered over
To Execution, and the hand of Death.
Buſhy. More welcome is the ſtroak of death to me,
Than Bullingbroke to England.
Gree. My comfort is, that Heaven will take our Souls,
And plague Injuſtice with the Pains of Hell.
Bull. My Lord Northumberland, ſee them diſpatch'd.
Uncle, you ſay the Queen is at your Houſe;
For Heavens ſake, fairly let her be entreated;
Tell her I ſend to her my kind Commends;
Take ſpecial care my Greetings be deliver'd.
Tor. A Gentleman of mine I have diſpatch'd
With Letters of your love to her at large.
Bull. Thanks, gentle Uncle: come, Lords away,
To fight with Glendowre, and his Complices;
A while to work; and after Holliday. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Changes to the Coast of Wales.

Drums: Flouriſh, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carliſle, and Souldiers.

Rich. Barkloughly-Caſtle call you this at hand?
Au. Yea, my Lord, How brooks your Grace the air,
After your late toſſing on the breaking Seas?
Rich. Needs muſt I like it well; I weep for joy
To ſtand upon my Kingdom once again.
Dear Earth, I do ſalute thee with my Hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horſes Hoofs:
As a long Parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her Tears, and ſmiles in meeting;
So weeping, ſmiling, greet I thee, my Earth,
And do thee favour with my Royal Hands.
Feed not thy Soveraigns Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy Sweets, comfort his ravenous Senſe:
But let thy Spiders that ſuck up thy Venom,
And heavy-gated Toads lie in their way,
Doing Annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with uſurping ſteps do trample thee.
Yield ſtinging Nettles to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy Boſom pluck a Flower,
Guard it, I prethee with a lurking Adder;
Whoſe double Tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy Soveraign's Enemies.
Mock not my ſenſeleſs Conjuration, Lords;
This Earth ſhall have a feeling, and theſe Stones
Prove armed Souldiers e're her Native King
Shall falter under foul Rebellious Arms.
Car. Fear not, my Lord, that Power that made you King
Hath Power to keep you King, in ſpight of all.
Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remiſs
Whilſt Bullingbroke, through their ſecurity,
Grows ſtrong and great, in Subſtance and in Friends.
Rich. Diſcomfortable Couſin, knoweſt thou not,
That when the ſearching Eye of Heaven is hid
Behind the Globe, that lights the lower World,
Then Thieves and Robbers range abroad unſeen,
In Murthers, and in out-rage bloody here:
But when from under this Terreſtrial Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Eaſtern Pines,
And darts his Lightning through ev'ry guilty hole;
Then Murthers, Treaſons, and deteſted ſins,
(The Cloak of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themſelves?
So when this Thief, this Traitor Bullingbroke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the Night,
Shall ſee us riſing in our Throne, the Eaſt,
His Treaſons will ſet bluſhing in his Face,
Not able to endure the ſight of Day;
But ſelf-affrighted, tremble at his ſin.
Not all the Water in the rough rude Sea
Can waſh the Balm from an anointed King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depoſe
The Deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bullingbroke hath preſt,
To lift ſhrewd Steel againſt our Golden Crown,
Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious Angel; then if Angels fight,
Weak Men muſt fall, for Heaven ſtill guards the Right.

Scene III. Enter Salisbury.

Welcome, my Lord, how far off lies your Power?
Saliſ. Nor near, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Than this weak arm; Diſcomfort guides my Tongue,
And bids me ſpeak of nothing but Deſpair:
One day too late, I fear, (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all my happy dayes on Earth.
Oh, call back yeſterday, bid time return,
And thou ſhalt have twelve thouſand fighting men.
To day, to day, unhappy day too late
O'rethrows thy Joys, Friends, Fortune, and thy State.
For all the Welchmen hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bullingbroke, diſperſt, and fled.
Aum. Comfort, my Liege, why looks your Grace ſo pale?
Rich. But now the Blood of twenty thouſand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till ſo much Blood thither come again,
Have I not reaſon to look pale, and dead?
All Souls, that will be ſafe, fly from my ſide;
For Time hath ſet a blot upon my Pride.
Aum. Comfort, my Liege, remember who you are.
Rich. I had forgot my ſelf. Am I not King?
Awake, thou ſluggard Majeſty, thou ſleepeſt:
Is not the Kings Name, forty thouſand Names?
Arm, arm, my Name! a puny Subject ſtrikes
At thy great Glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye Favorites of a King! are we not high?
High be our thoughts! I know my Uncle York
Hath Power enough to ſerve our turn,
But who comes here? Scene IV. [Enter Scroop.
Scroop. More health and happineſs betide my Liege,
Than can my care-tun'd Tongue deliver him.
Rich. Mine Ear is open, and my Heart prepar'd:
The worſt is worldly loſs, thou canſt unfold.
Say, Is my Kingdom loſt? why 'twas my Care:
And what loſs is it to be rid of Care?
Strives Bullingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he ſhall not be; if he ſerve God,
We'll ſerve him too, and be his Fellow ſo.
Revolt our Subjects? That we cannot mend;
They break their Faith to God as well as us.
Cry Woe, Deſtruction, Ruine, Loſs, Decay,
The worſt is Death, and death will have his day.
Scroop. Glad am I, that your Highneſs is ſo arm'd
To bear the Tidings of Calamity.
Like an unſeaſonable ſtormy day,
Which makes the Silver Rivers drown their Shores,
As if the world were all diſſolv'd to Tears;
So high above his Limits, ſwells the Rage
Of Bullingbroke, covering your fearful Land
With hard bright Steel, and hearts harder than Steel:

White

White Beare have arm'd their thin and hairleſs Scalps
Againſt thy Majeſty, and Boys with Womens voices,
Strive to ſpeak big, and clap their female joints
In ſtiff unwieldy Arms, againſt thy Crown:
Thy very Beadſ-men learn to bend their Bows
Of doubly fatal Ewe: againſt thy State:
Yea, diſtaff-women manage rusty Bills,
Againſt thy Seat both young and old rebell,
And all goes worſe than I have power to tell.
Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'ſt a tale ſo ill.
Where is the Earl of Wiltſhire? where is Bigot?
What is become of Buſhy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Meaſure our Confines with ſuch peaceful ſteps?
If we prevail, their Hands ſhall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bullingbroke.
Scroop. Peace have they made with him indeed, (my Lord.)
Rich. Oh Villains, Vipers, damn'd without redemption;
Dogs, eaſily won to fawn on any man,
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd, that ſting my heart;
Three Judaſſes, each one thrice worſe than Judas!
Would they make Peace? terrible Hell make War
Upon their ſpotted Souls for this Offence!
Scroop. Sweet Love, (I ſee) changing his Property,
Turns to the ſowreſt, and moſt deadly Hate:
Again uncurſe their Souls; their Peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands: thoſe whom you curſe
Have felt the worſt of Death's deſtroying Hand,
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.
Aum. Is Buſhy, Green, and the Earl of Wiltſhire dead?
Scroop. Yea, all of them at Briſtow loſt their Heads.
Aum. Where is the Duke, my Father, with his Power?
Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man ſpeak:
Let's talk of Graves, of Worms, and Epitaphs,
Make Duſt our Paper, and with Rainy Eies
Write Sorrow in the Boſom of the Earth.
Let's chuſe Executors, and talk of Wills;
And yet not ſo, for what can we bequeath,
Save our depoſed Bodies to the Ground?
Our Lands, our Lives, and all are Bullingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own, but Death;
And that ſmall Model of the barren Earth,
Which ſerves as Paſte, and Cover to our Bones.
For Heavens ſake let us ſit upon the ground,
And tell ſad Stories of the death of Kings:
How ſome have been depos'd, ſome ſlain in War;
Some haunted by the Ghoſts they have depos'd,
Some poiſon'd by their Wives, ſome ſleeping kill'd;
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crown,
That rounds the mortal Temples of a King,
Keeps Death his Court, and there the Antique ſits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his Pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little ſcene,
To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infuſing him with ſelf and vain Conceit,
As if this Fleſh, which walls about our Life,
Were Braſs impregnable: and humour'd thus,
Comes at the laſt, and with a little Pin
Boars through his Caſtle Walls, and farewell King!
Cover your heads, and mock not fleſh and blood
With ſolemn Reverence: throw away Reſpect,
Tradition, Form, and Ceremonious Duty,
For you have but miſtook me all this while;
I live with Bread like you, feel Want,
Taſte Grief, need Friends; ſubjected thus,
How can you ſay to me, I am a King?
Carl. My Lord, wiſe men ne're wail their preſent Woes,
But preſently prevent the ways to wail:
To fear the Foe, ſince fear oppreſſeth Strength,
Gives, in your weakneſs, Strength unto your Foe;
Fear, and be ſlain, no worſe can come to fight:
And fight and die, is death deſtroying death.
Where fearing, dying, pays death ſervile breath.
Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And ſo our ſollies fight againſt yourſelf.
And learn to make a Body of a Limb.
Rich. Thou chid'ſt me well: proud Bullingbroke, I come
To change Blows with thee, for our day of Doom:
This Ague-fit of Fear is over-blown,
An eaſie task it is to win our own.
Say Scroop where lies our Uncle with his Power?
Speak ſweetly man, although thy looks be ſowre.
Scroop. Men judge by the Complexion of the Skie
The ſtate and inclination of the day,
So may you by my dull and heavie Eye:
My Tongue hath but a heavier Tale to ſay:
I play the Torturer, by ſmall and ſmall
To lengthen out the worſt, that muſt be ſpoken.
Your Uncle York is joyn'd to Bullingbroke,
And all your Northern Caſtles yielded up,
And all your Southern Gentlemen in Arms
Upon his Faction.
Rich. Thou haſt ſaid enough.
Beſhrew thee, Couſin, which didſt lead me forth
Of that ſweet way I was in to Deſpair!
What ſay you now? what Comfort have we now?
By Heaven I'le hate him everlaſtingly
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint-Caſtle, there I'le pine away;
A King, Woes Slave, ſhall Kingly Woe obey:
That Power I have, diſcharge, and let 'em go
To ear the Land, that hath ſome hope to grow;
For I have none. Let no man ſpeak again
To alter this, for Counſel is but vain.
Aum. My Liege, one word.
Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his Tongue.
Diſcharge my Followers: let them hence away,
From Richard's Night, to Bullingbroke's fair day. [Exeunt.

Sæna Tertia. V.

Bolingbroke's Camp neay Flint.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Bullingbroke, York, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bul. So that by this Intelligence we learn
The Welchmen are diſpers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With ſome few private Friends upon this Coaſt.
North. The News is very fair and good, my Lord,
Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.
Yor. It would beſeem the Lord Northumberland,
To ſay King Richard: alack the heavy day,
When ſuch a ſacred King ſhould hide his head!
North. Your Grace miſtakes, onely to be brief,
Left I his Title out.
Yor. The time hath been,
Would you have been ſo brief with him, he would
Have been ſo brief with you, to ſhorten you,
For taking ſo the head, your whole heads length.
Bull. Miſtake not, (Uncle), farther than you ſhould.
Yor. Take not, (good Couſin), farther than you ſhould,
Leſt you miſtake; the Heavens are o're your head.
Bull. I know it, (Uncle), and oppoſe not my ſelf
Againſt their will. But who comes here? 'tis Percy.

Enter Percy.

Welcom Harry; what, will not this Caſtle yield?
Per. The Caſtle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Againſt your entrance.
Bull. Royally? Why, it doth contain no King?
Per. Yes, (my good Lord),
It doth contain a King: King Richard lies
Within the Limits of yond Lime and Stone;
And with him, the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop, beſides a Clergy-man
Of holy Reverence; who, I cannot learn.
North. Oh, belike it is the Biſhop of Carliſle.
Bul. Noble Lord,
Go to the rude Ribs of that ancient Caſtle,

Through

Through brazen Trumpet ſend the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:
Henry Bullingbroke upon his Knees doth kiſs
King Richard's Hand, and ſends Allegiance
And ~~true~~ Faith of heart to his Royal Perſon: ~~hither come~~
Even at his feet, ~~to~~ lay my Arms and Power,
Provided, that my Baniſhment repeal'd,
And Lands reſtor'd again, be freely granted;
If not, I'll uſe the Advantage of my Power,
And lay the Summer's duſt with ſhowers of Blood,
Rain'd from the Wounds of ſlaughter'd Engliſhmen;
The which, how far off from the mind of Bullingbroke
It is, ſuch Crimſon tempeſt ſhould bedrench
The freſh green Lap of fair King Richard's Land,
My ſtooping Duty tenderly ſhall ſhew.
Go ſignifie as much, while here we march
Upon the Graſſie Carpet of this Plain;
Let's march without the noiſe of threatning Drum,
That from this Caſtles tatter'd Battlements
Our fair Appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks King Richard and my ſelf ſhould meet
With no leſs terror than the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundring ~~ſmoak~~ hock
At meeting tears the cloudy Cheeks of Heaven?
~~Be he the Fire, I'le be the yielding Water:~~
~~The Rage be his, while on the Earth I rain~~
~~My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.~~
March on, and mark King Richard how he looks.

Scene VI

Parle without, and anſwer within; then a Flouriſh. Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carliſle, Aumerle, Scroop, Salisbury.

(York) See, ſee, King Richard doth himſelf appear
As doth the bluſhing diſcontented Sun,
~~From out~~ the fiery Portal of the Eaſt,
When he perceives the envious Clouds are bent
To dim his Glory, and to ſtain the tract
Of his bright paſſage to the Occident.
~~York~~ Yet looks he like a King; behold his Eye,
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Majeſty; alack, ~~alack~~, for woe,
That any Harm ſhould ſtain ſo fair a ſhow.
Rich. We are amaz'd, and thus long have we ſtood
To watch the fearful bending of thy Knee, (To North.
Becauſe we thought our ſelf thy lawful King;
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful Duty to our Preſence?
If we be not, ſhew us the Hand of God,
That hath diſmis'd us from our Stewardſhip,
For well we know, no Hand of Blood and Bone
Can gripe the ſacred Handle of our Scepter,
Unleſs he do prophane, ſteal or uſurp.
And though you think, that all, as you have done,
Have torn their Souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Maſter, God Omnipotent,
Is muſtering in his Clouds on our behalf,
Armies of Peſtilence; and they ſhall ſtrike,
Your Children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your Vaſſal Hands againſt my Head,
And threat the Glory of my precious Crown.
Tell Bullingbroke, (for yond methinks, he is)
That every ſtride he makes upon ~~my~~ the Land,
Is dangerous Treaſon, he is come to ope
The purple Teſtament of ~~a~~ bleeding War;
But e're the Crown he looks for, live in peace,
Ten thouſand bloody Crowns of Mothers Sons
Shall ill become the flower ~~of~~ of England's face,
Change the Complexion of her Maid-pale Peace
To Scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her Paſtures Graſs with faithful Engliſh Blood.
North. The King of Heaven forbid, our Lord the King
Should ſo with civil and uncivil Arms
Be ruſh'd upon! Thy thrice-noble Couſin,
Harry Bullingbroke doth ~~humbly~~ kiſs thy hand,
And by the honourable Tomb he ſwears
That ſtands upon your Royal Grandſire's Bones,
And by the Royalties of both your Bloods,
(Currents that ſpring from one moſt gracious Head)
And by the buried hand of VVarlike Gaunt,
And by the Worth and Honour of himſelf,
Compriſing all that may be ſworn, or ſaid,
His coming hither hath no further ſcope,
Than for his lineal Royalties, and to beg
Infranchiſement immediate on his Knees:
Which on thy Royal party granted once,
His glittering Arms he will commend to Ruſt,
His barbed Steeds to Stables; and his Heart
To faithful ſervice of your Majeſty.
This ſwears he, as he is a Prince, is juſt,
And as I am a Gentleman, I credit him.
Rich. Northumberland, ſay thus: The King returns,
His Noble Couſin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his fair Demands
Shall be accompliſh'd without Contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou haſt,
Speak to his gentle hearing-kind commends.
We do debaſe our ſelf, (Couſin) do we not, (To Aum.
To look ſo poorly, and to ſpeak ſo fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and ſend
Defiance to the Traitor, and ſo die?
Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend Friends, and Friends their hopeful Swords.
Rich. Oh God, oh God! that e're this tongue of mine
That laid the Sentence of dread Baniſhment
On yond proud man, ſhould take it off again
With words of ſooth; Oh that I were as great
As is my Grief, or leſſer than my Name!
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I muſt be now!
Swell'ſt thou proud Heart? I'll give thee ſcope to beat,
Since foes have ſcope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bullingbroke
Rich. What muſt the King do now? muſt he ſubmit?
The King ſhall do it: Muſt he be depos'd?
The King ſhall be contented: Muſt he loſe
The Name of King? o'Gods Name let it go.
I'll give my Jewels for a ſet of Beads;
My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage;
My gay Apparrel, for an Alms-mans Gown;
My figur'd Goblets, for a diſh of Wood;
My Scepter, for a Palmers walking Staff;
My Subjects, for a pair of Carved Saints,
And my large Kingdom, for a little Grave,
A little little Grave, an obſcure Grave.
Or I'll be buried in the Kings high-way;
Some way of common Trade, where Subjects Feet
May hourly trample on their Sovereign's Head:
~~For on my Heart they tread now, whilſt I live;~~
~~And buried once, why not upon my Head?~~
Aumerle, thou weepſt, (my tender hearted Couſin)
We'll make foul weather with deſpiſed Tears:
Our ſighs, and they, ſhall lodge the Summer Corn,
And make a dearth in this Revolting Land.
Or ſhall we play the Wantons with our Woes,
And make ſome pretty Match with ſhedding Tears?
As thus: to drop them ſtill upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of Graves,
~~Within the Earth: and therein laid, there lies~~
~~Two Kinſmen digg'd their Graves with weeping Eies?~~
~~Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I ſee~~
~~I talk but idely, and you mock at me.~~
Moſt mighty Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What ſays King Bullingbroke? Will his Majeſty
Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?
You make a Leg, and Bullingbroke ſays Ay.
North. My Lord, in the baſe Court he doth attend
To ſpeak with you, may it pleaſe you to come down.

Rich.

Rich. Down, down I come, like gliſt'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Jades.
~~In the baſe Court? baſe Court where Kings grow baſe,~~
~~To come at Traitors Calls, and do them Grace.~~
~~In the baſe Court come down: down Court, down King,~~
~~For night-Owls ſhreek, where mounting Larks ſhould ſing.~~
Bull. What ſays his Majeſty?
North. Sorrow, ~~and grief~~ of heart
Makes him ſpeak fondly, like a frantick man;
Yet he is come.
Bull. Stand all apart,
And ſhew fair duty to his Majeſty.
My gracious Lord. (Kneels
Rich. Fair Couſin,
You debaſe your Princely knee,
To make the baſe Earth proud with kiſſing it.
Me rather had, my Heart might feel your Love,
Than my un-pleas'd Eye ſee your Courteſie.
~~Up Couſin, up, your heart is up, I know,~~
~~Thus high at leaſt, although your Knee be low.~~
Bull. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine own.
Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.
Bull. So far be mine, my moſt redoubted Lord,
As my true Service ſhall deſerve your love.
Rich. Well you deſerv'd:
They well deſerve to have,
That know the ſtrong'ſt and ſureſt way to get.
Uncle, give me your hand; nay, dry your Eyes, (To York
Tears ſhew their love, but want their Remedies.
Couſin, I am too young to be your Father, (To Bolin.
Though you are old enough to be my Heir.
What you will have, I'll give, and willing too;
For do we muſt, what Force will have us do.
Set on towards London.
Couſin, is it ſo?
Bull. Yea, my good Lord.
Rich. Then I muſt not ſay no. [Flouriſh. [Exeunt.

A Garden

Enter Queen, and two Ladies.

Qu. What ſport ſhall we deviſe here in this Garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of Care?
La. Madam, we'll play at Bowls.
Qu. 'Twill make me think the world is full of Rubs,
And that my Fortune runs againſt the Byas.
La. Madam, we'll dance.
Qu. My Legs can keep no Meaſure in Delight,
When my poor Heart no Meaſure keeps in Grief.
Therefore no dancing, (Girl); ſome other ſport.
La. Madam, we'll tell Tales.
Qu. Of Sorrow, or of ~~Grief~~? Joy.
La. Of either, Madam.
Qu. Of neither, Girl.
For if of Joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of Sorrow:
Or if of Grief, being altogether had,
It adds more Sorrow to my want of Joy:
For what I have, I need not to repeat:
And what I want, it boots not to complain.
La. Madam, I'll Sing.
Qu. 'Tis well that thou haſt Cauſe:
But thou ſhouldſt'ſt pleaſe me better, would'ſt thou weep.
La. I could Weep, Madam, would it do you good?
Qu. And I could ~~Sing~~, would weeping do me good,
And never borrow any tear of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But ſtay here come the Gardiners,
Let's ſtep into the ſhadow of theſe Trees:
My wretchedneſs, unto a row of Pines,
They'll talk of State; for every one doth ſo,
Againſt a Change; woe is fore-run with woe. Queen & Lad. retire
Gard. Go bind thou up yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like unruly Children, make their Sire
Stoop with oppreſſion of their prodigal weight:
Give ſome ſupportance to the bending twigs.
Go thou, and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too faſt growing ſprays,
That look too lofty in our Common-wealth:
All muſt be even in our Government.
You thus imploy'd, I will go root away
The noiſom Weeds that without profit ſuck
The Soils fertility from wholſome Flowers.
Ser. Why ſhould we in the compaſs of a Pale,
Keep Law, and Form, and due Proportion,
Shewing, as in a Model, our firm ſtate?
When our Sea-walled Garden, (the whole Land,)
Is full of Weeds, her faireſt Flowers choakt up,
Her Fruit trees all unpruin'd, her Hedges ruin'd,
Her Knots diſorder'd, and her wholſome Herbs
Swarming with Caterpillers.
Gard. Hold thy peace,
He that hath ſuffer'd this diſorder'd Spring,
Hath now himſelf met with the fall of Leaf;
The Weeds that his broad-ſpreading Leaves did ſhelter,
(That ſeem'd in eating him, to hold him up)
Are pull'd up, root and all, by Bullingbroke,
I mean the Earl of Wiltſhire, Buſhy, Green.
Ser. What, are they dead?
Gard. They are,
And Bullingbroke hath ſeiz'd the waſteful King.
What pity is it, that he had not trimm'd
And dreſt his Land, as we this Garden ~~at time of year~~;
And wound the Bark, the skin, of our Fruit-trees,
Leſt being over proud with Sap and Blood,
With too much Riches it confound it ſelf?
Had he done ſo, to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taſte
Their Fruits of Duty. All ſuperfluous Branches
We lop away, that bearing Boughs may live:
Had he done ſo, himſelf had born the Crown,
Which waſte and idle hours hath quite thrown down.
Ser. What think you the King ſhall be depos'd?
Gar. Depreſt he is already, and depos'd
'Tis doubted he will be. Letters came laſt night
To a dear Friend of the Duke of York,
That tell black tidings.
Qu. Oh, I am preſt to death through want of ſpeaking:
Thou ~~old~~ Adam's likeneſs, ſet to dreſs this Garden,
How dares thy harſh tongue ſound this unpleaſing News?
What Eve, what Serpent hath ſuggeſted thee,
To make a ſecond fall of curſed man?
Why doſt thou ſay, King Richard is depos'd?
Dar'ſt thou, (thou little better thing than Earth),
Divine his downfall? ſay, where, when, and how
Cam'ſt thou by theſe ill tidings? ſpeak, thou Wretch.
Gard. Pardon me, Madam. Little joy have I
To breath theſe News; yet what I ſay is true;
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bullingbroke: their Fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himſelf,
And ſome few Vanities that make him light:
But in the Ballance of great Bullingbroke
Beſides himſelf, are all the Engliſh Peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.
Poſt you to London, and you'll find it ſo;
I ſpeak no more, than every one doth know.
Qu. Nimble Miſchance, that art ſo light of Foot,
Doth not thy Embaſſage belong to me?
And am I laſt that knows it? Oh thou think'ſt
To ſerve me laſt, that I may longeſt keep
Thy Sorrow in my breaſt. Come Ladies, go,
To meet at London London's King in woe.
What, was I born to this! that my ſad look,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbroke!

Gard'ner

Gard'ner, for telling me these News of woe,
I would the Plants thou graft'st may never grow. [Exit.
Gar. Poor Queen, so that thy State might be no worse,
I would my skill were subject to thy Curse.
Here did she drop a tear, here in this place
I'll set a bank of Rue, sowre Herb of Grace:
Rue ev'n for Ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping Queen. [Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

London.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrook, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Westminster, Herald, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullingbrook. Call forth Bagot.
Now Bagot, freely speak thy mind,
What thou dost know of Noble Gloster's death;
Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd
The bloody Office of his timeless end.
Bag. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.
Bull. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.
Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring Tongue
Scorns to unsay, what it hath once deliver'd.
In that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted,
I heard you say, Is not my Arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English Court
As far as Calis to my Uncles head?
Amongst much other talk, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand Crowns,
Than Bullingbrook return to England; adding withall,
How blest this Land would be in this your Cousins death.
Aum. Princes, and Noble Lords!
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair Stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine Honour soil'd
With the Attainder of his sland'rous lips.
There is my Gage, the manual Seal of death,
That marks thee out for Hell. Thou liest, Bagot,
And will maintain what thou hast said, is false,
In thy heart Blood, though being all too base,
To stain the temper of my Knightly Sword.
Bull. Bagot, forbear; thou shalt not take it up.
Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this Presence that hath moved me so.
Fitz. If that thy Valour stand on sympathies,
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that fair Sun, that shews me where thou stand'st,
I heard the say (and vauntingly thou spak'st it),
That thou wert cause of Noble Gloster's death.
If thou deny'st it, twenty times thou liest,
And I will turn thy falshood to thy Heart,
Where it was forged, with my Rapiers point.
Aum. Thou dar'st not (Coward) live to see the day.
Fitz. Now, by my Soul, I would it were this Hour.
Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to Hell for this.
Per. Aumerle, thou liest; his Honour is as true,
In this Appeal, as thou art all unjust:
And that thou art so, there I throw my Gage
To prove it on thee, to th'extremest point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st.
Aum. And if I do not may my Hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful Steel,
Over the glittering Helmet of my Foe!
Surrey. My Lord Fitzwater:
I do remember well, the very time
Aumerle and you did talk.
Fitz. My Lord,
'Tis very true: You were in Presence then;
And you can witness with me, this is true.
Surrey. As false, by Heaven,
As Heaven it self is true.
Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.
Surrey. Dishonourable Boy!
That Lie, shall lie so heavie on my Sword,
That it shall render Vengeance and Revenge,
Till thou the Lie-giver, and that Lie, do lie
In earth as quiet, as thy Father's Scull.
In proof whereof, there is mine Honours Pawn,
Engage it to the Tryal, if thou dar'st.
Fitzw. How fondly do'st thou spur a forward Horse!
If I dare eat, or drink, or breath, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a Wilderness,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he Lies,
And Lies, and Lies: there is my Bond of Faith,
To tye thee to my strong Correction.
As I intended to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true Appeal.
Besides, I heard the banisht Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men,
To Execute the Noble Duke at Calis.
Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a Gage,
That Norfolk lies; here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his Honour.
Bul. These Differences shall all rest under Gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be,
(And though mine Enemy) restor'd again
To all his Lands and Seigniories; when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his Tryal.
Carl. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.
Many a time hath banisht Norfolk fought
For Jesus Christ, in glorious Christian Field
Streaming the Ensign of the Christian Cross,
Against black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And toyl'd with works of War, retir'd himself
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soul unto his Captain Christ,
Under whose Colours he had fought so long.
Bull. Why, Bishop, is Norfolk dead?
Carl. As sure as I live, my Lord.
Bull. Sweet peace conduct his sweet Soul
To the Bosom of good old Abraham.
Lords Appealants, your Differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of Tryal.

Scæna II. Enter York.

York. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soul
Adopts thee Heir, and his high Scepter yields
To the possession of thy Royal hand.
Ascend his Throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth!
Bull. In Gods Name, I'll ascend the Regal Throne.
Carl. Marry, Heaven forbid!
Worst in this Royal Presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeming me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
Were enough Noble to be upright Judge
Of Noble Richard; then true Nobleness would
Learn him forbearance from so foul a Wrong.
What Subject can give Sentence on his King?
And who sits here that is not Richard's Subject?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them:
And shall the Figure of Gods Majesty,
His Captain, Steward, Deputy elect,
Anointed, Crown'd and planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferiour breath,
And he himself not present? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Christian Climate, Souls refin'd
Should shew so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to Subjects, and a Subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,

Is

Is a foul Traytor to proud Hereford's King.
And if you Crown him, let me propheſie,
The Blood of Engliſh ſhall manure the ground,
And future Ages groan for his foul Act.
Peace ſhall go ſleep with Turks and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Wars
Shall Kin with Kin, and Kind with Kind confound.
Diſorder, Horrour, Fear and Mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead mens Sculls.
Oh, if you rear this Houſe, againſt this Houſe,
It will the wofulleſt Diviſion prove,
That ever fell upon this curſed Earth.
Prevent it, reſiſt it, let it not be ſo,
Leſt Child, Childs Children cry againſt you, woe!
North. Well have you argu'd, Sir; and for your pains,
Of Capital Treaſon we arreſt you here.
My Lord of Weſtminſter, be it your charge,
To keep him ſafely, till his day of Tryal.
May it pleaſe you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may ſurrender: So we ſhall proceed
Without ſuſpicion.
Yor. I will be his Conduct. [Exit.
Bull. Lords, you that are here under our Arreſt,
Procure your Sureties for your Days of Anſwer:
Little are we beholding to your Love,
And little look'd for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and York.

Rich. Alack, why am I ſent for to a King,
Before I have ſhook off the Regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To inſinuate, flattter, bow, and bend my Knee:
Give Sorrow leave a while, to return me
To this Submiſſion. Yet I well remember
The favours of theſe men: Were they not mine?
Did they not ſometime cry, All hail to me?
So Judas did to Chriſt: But he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thouſand, none.
God ſave the King: Will no man ſay, Amen.
Am I both Prieſt and Clark? well then, Amen.
God ſave the King, although I be not he:
And yet Amen, if Heaven do think him me.
To do what ſervice, am I ſent for hither?
Yor. To do that Office of thine own good will,
Which tired Majeſty did make thee offer:
The Reſignation of thy State and Crown
To Henry Bullingbrook.
Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Couſin, ſeize the Crown;
Here Couſin, on this ſide my Hand, on that ſide thine.
Now is this Golden Crown like a deep Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the Air,
The other down, unſeen, and full of Water:
That Bucket down, and full of Tears am I,
Drinking my Griefs, whilſt you mount up on high.
Bull. I thought you had been willing to reſign.
Rich. My Crown I am, but ſtill my Griefs are mine:
You may my Glories, and my State depoſe,
But not my Griefs; ſtill am I King of thoſe.
Bul. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crown.
Rich. Your Cares ſet up, do not pluck my Cares down,
My Care, is loſs of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gain of Care, by new Care won.
The Cares I give, I have, though given away,
They tend the Crown, yet ſtill with me they ſtay,
Bull. Are you contented to reſign the Crown?
Rich. I no; no I, for I muſt nothing be:
Therefore no, no, for I reſign to thee.
Now, mark me how I will undo my ſelf;
I give this heavy Weight from off my Head,
And this unwieldy Scepter from my Hand,
The pride of Kingly ſway from out my Heart,
With mine own Tears I waſh away my blame,
With mine own Hands I give away my Crown,
With mine own Tongue deny my Sacred State,
With mine own Breath releaſe all dutious Oaths:
All Pomp and Majeſty I do forſwear:
My Manors, Rents, Revenues, I forgo;
My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I deny:
God pardon all Oaths that are broke to me,
God keep all Vows unbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that haſt all atchiev'd,
Long maiſt thou live in Richard's Seat to ſit,
And ſoon lie Richard in an Earthy pit.
God ſave King Henry, un-King'd Richard ſays,
And ſend him many years of Sun-ſhine days.
What more remains?
North. No more; But that you read
Theſe Accuſations, and theſe grievous Crimes,
Committed by your Perſon, and your Followers,
Againſt the State and Profit of this Land:
That by confeſſing them, the Souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.
Rich. Muſt I do ſo? and muſt I ravel out
My weav'd-up Follies? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy Offences were upon Record,
Would it not ſhame thee, in ſo fair a Troop,
To read a Lecture of them? if thou would'ſt,
There ſhould'ſt thou find one heinous Article,
Containing the depoſing of a King,
And cracking the ſtrong Warrant of an Oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the Book of Heaven.
Nay, all of you, that ſtand and look upon me,
Whil'ſt that my wretchedneſs doth bait my ſelf,
Though ſome of you, with Pilate waſh your Hands,
Shewing an outward Pity; Yet you Pilates
Have here delivered me to my ſower Croſs,
And water cannot waſh away your ſin.
North. My Lord, diſpatch, read o're theſe Articles.
Rich. Mine eyes are full of Tears, I cannot ſee:
And yet ſalt-water blinds them not ſo much,
But they can ſee a ſort of Traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine Eyes upon my ſelf,
I find my ſelf a Traytor with the reſt:
For I have given here my Souls conſent,
T'undeck the pompous Body of a King;
Made Glory baſe; a Sovereign, a Slave;
Proud Majeſty, a Subject; State, a Peaſant.
North. My Lord.
Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught inſulting man;
No, nor no mans Lord: I have no Name, no Title;
No, not that name was given me at the Font,
But 'tis uſurpt: alack the heavy day,
That I have worn ſo many Winters out,
And know not now, what name to call my ſelf.
Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow,
Standing before the Sun of Bullingbrook,
To melt my ſelf away in Water-Drops.
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be Sterling yet in England,
Let it command a Mirror hither ſtraight,
That it may ſhew me what a Face I have,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Majeſty.
Bull. Go ſome of you, and fetch a Looking Glaſs.
North. Read o're this Paper, while the Glaſs doth come.
Rich. Fiend, thou torments me, e're I come to Hell.
Bull. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.
North. The Commons will not then be ſatisfy'd.
Rich. They ſhall be ſatisfy'd: I'll read enough,
When I do ſee the very Book indeed,
Where all my Sins are writ, and that's my ſelf.

Enter one with a Glaſs.

Give me that Glaſs, and therein will I read,
No deeper wrinkles yet? hath ſorrow ſtruck
So many blows upon this Face of mine,
And made no deeper Wounds? Oh flatt'ring Glaſs,

Like

Like to my Followers in Prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me. Was this Face, the Face
That every day under his Household-roof,
Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the Face,
That like the Sun did make Beholders wink?
~~Is this the Face, which fac'd so many Follies,~~
~~That was at last out-fac'd by Bullingbrook?~~
~~A brittle Glory shineth in this Face,~~
~~As brittle as the Glory, is the Face,~~
~~For there it is, crackt in an hundred shivers.~~
~~Mark silent King, the Moral of this sport,~~
How soon my Sorrow hath destroy'd my Face.

Bull. The shadow of your Sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your Face.

Rich. Say that again.
The shadow of my Sorrow! ha, let's see;
'Tis very true, my Grief lies all within,
And these external Manners of Laments,
Are meerly shadows to the unseen Grief,
That swells with silence in the tortur'd Soul.
There lies the Substance: And I thank thee, King,
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
Me Cause to wail, but teachest me the way
How to lament the Cause. I'll beg one boon,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Bull. Name it, fair Cousin.

Rich. Fair Cousin! I am greater than a King:
For when I was a King, my Flatterers
Were then but Subjects; being now a Subject,
I have a King here to my Flatterer:
Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Bull. Yet ask.

Rich. And shall I have?

Bull. You shall.

Rich. Then give me leave to go.

Bull. Whither?

Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sight.

Bull. Go some of you, convey him to the Tower.

~~Rich. Oh good: convey: Conveyers are you all,~~
~~That rise thus nimbly by a true Kings fall.~~

Bull. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our Coronation: Lords, prepare your selves. [Exeunt.

Abbot. A woful Pageant have we here beheld. Scene V.

Carl. The woe's to come; the Children yet unborn,
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy Clergy-men, is there no Plot?
To rid the Realm of this pernicious Blot?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the Sacrament,
To bury mine intents, but ~~also~~ to effect
What ever I shall happen to devise.
I see your Brows are full of discontent,
Your Hearts of Sorrow, and your Eyes of Tears,
Come home with me to Supper, I'll lay a Plot
Shall shew us all a merry day. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

A Street in London.

Enter Queen, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come: This is the way
To Julius Cæsar's ill-erected Tower,
To whose flint Bosom, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke.
Here let us rest, if this Rebellious Earth
Have any resting for her true Kings Queen.

Enter Richard, and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair Rose wither; Yet look up; behold,
That you in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love Tears.
O thou, the Model, where old Troy did stand, (To K. Rich.
Thou Map of Honour, thou King Richard's Tomb,
And not King Richard; thou most beauteous Inn,
Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-house Guest?

Rich. Join not with Grief, fair Woman do not so,
To make my End too sudden: Learn, good Soul,
To think our former State a happy Dream,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are
Shews us but this. I am sworn Brother, (Sweet),
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a League till death. ~~High~~ thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious House;
Our holy lives must win a new World's Crown,
Which our Prophane Hours here have stricken down.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd and weak~~en'd~~? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine Intellect? hath he been in thy Heart?
The Lion dying thrusteth forth his Paw,
And wounds the Earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-powr'd: And wilt thou, Pupil-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kiss the Rod,
And fawn on Rage with base Humility,
Which art a Lion and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of Beasts indeed; If ought but Beasts,
I had been still a happy King of men.
Good, (sometime) Queen prepare thee hence for France;
Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my Death-bed, my last-living leave.
In Winters tedious Nights sit by the Fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee Tales
Of woful Ages, long ago betide:
And e're thou bid good-night, to quit their Grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their Beds.
~~For why? the senseless Brands will sympathize~~
~~The heavy accent of my moving Tongue,~~
~~And in compassion weep the Fire out:~~
~~And some will mourn in Ashes, some coal-black,~~
~~For the deposing of a rightful King.~~

Enter Northumberland. Scene II.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.
And Madam, there is order ta'ne for you:
With all swift speed, you must away to France.

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithal
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many Hours of age,
More than it is, e're foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into Corruption; thou shalt think,
Though he divide the Realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all:
He shall think, that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightful Kings, wilt know again,
Being ne're so little urg'd, another way,
To pluck him headlong from th' usurped Throne.
The Love of wicked Friends converts to Fear;
That Fear to Hate; and Hate turns one, or both,
To worthy Danger, and deserved Death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there's an end.
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Doubly divorc'd? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage; 'twixt my Crown and me:
And then betwixt me, and my married Wife,
Let me unkiss the Oath, 'twixt thee and me:
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.
Part us, Northumberland: I, towards the North,
Where shivering Cold and Sickness pines the Clime:
My Queen to France; from whence, set forth in Pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hollowmas, or short~~ened~~ day.

Qu. And must we be divided? must we part?
~~Rich. Banish us both, and send the King with me.~~

North.

North. That were some Love, but little Policy.
~~Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.~~
~~Rich. So two together weeping, make one woe,~~
~~Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here:~~
~~Better far off than near, be ne're the near~~
~~Go, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.~~
~~Qu. So longest way, shall have the longest moans.~~
~~Rich. Twice for one step I'le groan, the way being short,~~
~~And piece the way out with a heavy heart.~~
~~Come, come in wooing Sorrow let's be brief,~~
~~Since wedding it, there is such length in Grief:~~
~~One Kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part;~~
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy Heart. (May kiss.
Qu. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy Heart. (Kiss again
So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.
Rich. We make Woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more, adieu! the rest let Sorrow say. [Exeunt.

Scæna ~~Secunda~~. III. The Duke of York's Palace

Enter York and his Dutchess.

Dut. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the Story off,
Of our two Cousins coming into London.
Yor. Where did I leave?
Dut. At that sad stop, my Lord,
Where rude mis-govern'd hands, from Windows tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richard's Head.
Yor. Then, as I said, the Duke, (great Bullingbroke)
Mounted upon a hot and fiery Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cry'd, God save thee, Bullingbroke!
You would have thought the very Windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old,
Through Casements darted their desiring Eyes
Upon his Visage; and that all the Walls
With painted Imagery had said at once,
Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bullingbroke!
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud Steeds neck,
Bespake them thus; I thank you Country men;
And thus still doing, thus he past along.
Dutch. Alas! poor Richard, where rides he the while?
Yor. As in a Theater, the Eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idely bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even so, or with much more contempt, mens Eyes,
Did scowle on Richard; no man cry'd, God save him!
No joyful Tongue gave him his welcome home;
But dust was thrown upon his Sacred Head;
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His Face still combating with Tears and Smiles,
(The Badges of his Grief and Patience);
That had not God, (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
And Barbarism it self have pitied him.
But Heaven hath a hand in these Events,
To whose high Will we bound our calm Contents.
To Bullingbroke are we sworn Subjects now,
Whose State, and Honour, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle. Scene IV.

Dut. Here comes my Son Aumerle.
Yor. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost, for being Richard's Friend.
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now:
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting Fealty to the new-made King.
Dut. Welcome, my Son; who are the Violets now,
That strew the green Lap of the new-come Spring?
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knows I had as lief be none, as one.
Yor. Well, bear you well in this new-spring of time,
Least you be cropt before you come to prime.
What News from Oxford? Hold those Justs and Triumphs?
Aum. For ought I know, ~~my Lord,~~ they do.
Yor. You will be there ~~I know~~.
Aum. If God prevent me not, I purpose so.
Yor. What Seal is that that hangs without thy Bosom?
Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the Writing.
Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.
Yor. No matter then who sees it,
I will be satisfied, let me see the Writing.
Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small Consequence,
Which for some Reasons I would not have seen.
Yor. Which for some Reasons, Sir, I mean to see:
I fear, I fear.——
Dut. What should you fear? my Lord?
'Tis nothing but some Bond, ~~that~~ he is enter'd into
For gay Apparel, now against the Triumph.
Yor. Bound to himself? What doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a Fool.
Boy, let me see the Writing.
Aum. I do beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it.
Yor. I will be satisfied, let me see it, I say [Snatches it.
Treason, foul Treason, Villain, Traitor, Slave!
Dut. What's the matter, my Lord?
Yor. Hoa, who's within there? saddle my Horse.
Heaven for his mercy! what treachery is here?
Dut. Why, what is't, my Lord?
Yor. Give me my Boots, I say; saddle my Horse.
Now by my Honour, my life, my Troth,
I will appeach the Villain.
Dut. What is the matter?
Yor. Peace foolish Woman.
Dut. I will not peace; What is the matter, Son?
Aum. Good Mother be content; it is no more
Then my poor life must answer.
Dut. Thy life answer! Scene V.

Enter Servant with Boots.

Yor. Bring my Boots, I will unto the King.
Dut. Strike him, Aumerle. (Poor Boy, thou art amaz'd, Hence, Villain, never more come in my sight. (To the Ser
Yor. Give me my Boots, ~~I say~~.
Dut. Why, York, what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?
Have we more Sons? or are we like to have?
Is not my teeming date drunk up with Time?
And wilt thou pluck my fair Son, from mine Age,
And rob me of a happy Mother's name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?
Yor. Thou fond mad Woman,
Wilt thou conceal this dark Conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have ta'ne the Sacrament,
And interchangeably set their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.
Dut. He shall be none:
We'll keep him here; then what is that to him?
Yor. Away fond Woman! were he twenty times my Son, I would appeach him.
Dut. Hadst thou groan'd for him as I have done,
Thou wouldst be more pittiful:
But now I know thy mind; thou dost suspect
That I have been disloyal to thy Bed,
And that he is a Bastard, not thy Son:
Sweet York, sweet Husband, be not of that mind:
He is as like thee, as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my Kin,
And yet I love him.
Yor. Make way, unruly Woman! [Exit.
Dut. After, Aumerle, Mount thee upon his Horse,

Spur poſt, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy Pardon, e're he do accuſe thee,
I'll not be long behind; though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as faſt as York:
And never will I riſe up from the ground,
Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee: Away, ~~be gon.~~ [Exit.

Scæna ~~Tertia.~~ VI.
Windſor Caſtle.

Enter Bullingbroke, Percy, and other Lords.

Bull. Can no man tell of my unthrifty Son?
'Tis full three Months ſince I did ſee him laſt.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he:
I would to Heaven, my Lords, he might be found,
Enquire at London, 'mongſt the Taverns there:
For there, they ſay, he daily doth frequent,
With unreſtrained looſe Companions;
Even ſuch, they ſay, as ſtand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beat our Paſſengers;
While he, young wanton, and effeminate Boy,
Takes on the point of Honour, to ſupport
So diſſolute a Crew.

Per. My Lord, ſome two days ſince I ſaw the Prince,
And told him of theſe Triumphs held at Oxford.

Bull. And what ſaid the Gallant?

Per. His anſwer was, he would unto the Stews,
And from the common'ſt Creature pluck a Glove
And wear it as a Favour, and with that
He would unhorſe the luſtieſt Challenger.

Bull. As diſſolute as deſp'rate; yet through both,
I ſee ſome ſparks of ~~better~~ hope, which elder days
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bull. What means our Couſin, that he ſtares
And looks ſo wildly?

Aum. God ſave your Grace! I do beſeech your Majeſty
To have ſome conference with your Grace alone.

Bull. Withdraw your ſelves, and leave us here alone:
What is the matter with our Couſin now?

Aum. For ever may my Knees grow to the Earth,
My Tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unleſs a Pardon, e're I riſe or ſpeak!

Bull. Intended or committed was this Fault?
If on the firſt, how heinous e're it be,
To win thy after-love, I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the Key,
That no man enter till the Tale be done.

Bull. Have thy deſire. [York within.

York. My Liege, beware, look to thy ſelf,
Thou haſt a Traitor in thy Preſence there.

Bull. Villain, I'll make thee ſafe.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand, thou haſt no cauſe to fear.

York. Open the door, ſecure, fool-hardy King:
Shall I for love ſpeak Treaſon to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open. Scene VII.

Enter York.

Bull. What is the matter, Uncle? ſpeak, ~~recover~~ take breath;
Tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruſe this Writing here, and thou ſhalt know
The Treaſon that my haſte forbids me ſhow.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'ſt, thy promiſe paſt:
I do repent me, read not my Name there,
My Heart is not confederate with my Hand.

York. It was, Villain, e're thy hand did ſet it down.
I tore it from the Traitors boſom, King.
Fear, and not Love, begets his Penitence;
Forget to pity him, leſt thy pity prove
A Serpent, that will ſting thee to the heart.

Bull. Oh heinous, ſtrong, and bold Conſpiracy!
O loyal Father of a treacherous Son!
Thou ~~ſheer~~ clear, immaculate, and ſilver Fountain,
From whence this ſtream, through muddy paſſages,
Hath had his current, and defil'd himſelf,
Thy overflow of good, converts to bad,
And thine abundant goodneſs ſhall excuſe
This deadly blot, in thy digreſſing Son.

York. So ſhall my Vertue be his Vices Bawd,
And he ſhall ſpend mine Honour with his ſhame;
As thriftleſs Sons their ſcraping Fathers Gold.
Mine Honour lives, when his Diſhonour dies;
Or my ſham'd life in his Diſhonour lies:
Thou kill'ſt me in his life; giving him breath,
The Traitor lives, the True man's put to death.

[Dutcheſs within.

Dut. What hoa, my Liege! for Heavens ſake let me in.

Bull. What ſhrill-voic'd Suppliant makes this eager cry?

Dut. A Woman, and thine Aunt, great King, 'tis I.
Speak with me, pity me, open the door;
A Beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

~~Bull. Our Scene is alter'd from a ſerious thing,
And now chang'd to the Beggar, and the King.~~

My dangerous Couſin, let your Mother in,
I know ſhe's come to pray for your foul ſin.

York. If thou do pardon, whoſoever pray,
More ſins for this forgiveneſs, proſper may;
This feſter'd joynt cut off, the reſt, ~~reſts~~ reſts ſound;
This let alone, will all the reſt confound.

Enter Dutcheſs. Scene VIII.

Dut. O King, believe not this hard hearted man;
Love, loving not it ſelf, none other can.

York. Thou frantick Woman, what doſt thou make here,
Shall thy old Dugs once more a Traitor rear?

Dut. Sweet York, be patient, hear me gentle Liege.

Bull. Riſe up, good Aunt. [Kneels

Dut. Not yet, I thee beſeech;
For ever will I kneel upon my Knees,
And never ſee day that the happy ſees,
Till thou give joy, until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my tranſgreſſing Boy.

Aum. Unto my Mother's Prayers, I bend my Knee.

York. Againſt them both, my true Joynts bended be.

Dut. Pleads he in earneſt? Look upon his face;
His Eyes ~~do~~ drop no Tears: his Prayers are in jeſt;
His words come from his Mouth, ours from our Breaſt.
He prays but faintly, and would be deny'd;
We pray with heart and ſoul, and all beſide.
His weary Joynts would gladly riſe, I know;
Our Knees ſhall kneel, till to the ground they grow.
His prayers are full of falſe Hyrocriſie,
Ours of true zeal, and deep integrity;
Our Prayers do out-pray his; then let them ~~have~~ or
That Mercy, which true Prayers ought to have.

Bull. Good Aunt, ſtand up.

Dut. Nay, do not ſay ſtand up,
But pardon firſt, and afterwards ſtand up.
And if I were thy Nurſe, thy Tongue to teach,
Pardon ſhould be the firſt word of thy ſpeech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now:
Say Pardon (King) let pity teach thee how.
~~The word is ſhort, but not ſo ſhort as ſweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings Mouths ſo meet.~~

York. ~~Speak it in French (King) ſay Pardonnez moy.~~

Dut. ~~Doſt thou teach Pardon, Pardon to deſtroy?
Ah my ſowre Husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That ſet'ſt the word it ſelf, againſt the word.
Speak Pardon as 'tis currant in our Land,
The chopping French we do not underſtand.
Thine Eye begins to ſpeak, ſet thy Tongue there;
Or in thy piteous Heart, plant thou thine Ear,
That hearing how our Plaints and Prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee, pardon to rehearſe.~~

Bull. Good Aunt, ſtand up.

Dut. I do not ſue to ſtand,

Pardon

Pardon is all the ſuit I have in hand.
Bull. I pardon him, as Heaven ſhall pardon me.
Dut. O happy vantage of a kneeling Knee!
Yet am I ſick for fear; ſpeak it again;
Twice ſaying Pardon, doth not pardon twain,
But makes one Pardon ſtrong.
Bull. I Pardon him with all my heart.
Dut. A God on Earth thou art.
Bull. But for our truſty Brother-in-Law, the Abbot,
With all the reſt of that conſorted Crew,
Deſtruction ſtreight ſhall dog them at the heels.
Good Uncle help to order ſeveral Powers
To Oxford, or where-e're theſe Traitors are.
~~They ſhall not live within this world, I ſwear,~~
~~But I will have them once know where.~~
~~Uncle farewel, and Couſin adieu:~~
~~Your Mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.~~
~~Dut. Come my old Son, I pray Heaven make thee new.~~

Scene IX. [Exit.

Enter Exton and Servant.

Ext. Didſt thou not mark the King, what words he ſpake?
Have I no Friend will rid me of this living fear?
Was it not ſo?
Ser. Thoſe were his very words.
Ex. Have I no Friend? (quoth he;) he ſpake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together, did he not?
Ser. He did.
Ex. And ſpeaking it, he wiſtly look'd on me,
As who ſhall ſay, I would thou wer't the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart;
Meaning the King at Pomfret. Come, let's go;
I am the Kings Friend, and will rid his Foe. [Exit.

Scæna Quarta. X.

A Priſon at Pomfret. Caſtle.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I have been ſtudying, how to compare
This Priſon where I live, unto the World;
And, for becauſe the World is populous,
And here is not a Creature but my ſelf,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer't out. on't.
My Brain, I'll prove the Female to my Soul, ſhall.
My Soul, the Father; and theſe two beget
A Generation of ſtill breeding Thoughts;
And theſe ſame Thoughts, People this little World;
In humours, like the People of this World,
For no Thought is contented. The better ſort,
(As Thoughts of things Divine,) are intermixt
With Scruples, and do ſet the Faith it ſelf word
Againſt the Faith, word
As thus; Come, little ones; and then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camel
To thread the Poſtern of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot
Unlikely Wonders; how theſe vain weak Nails
May tear a paſſage though the Flinty ribs
Of this hard World, my ragged Priſon Walls:
And for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to Content, flatter themſelves,
That they are not the firſt of Fortunes Slaves,
Nor ſhall not be the laſt. Like ſilly Beggars,
Who ſitting in the Stocks, refuge their ſhame
That many have, and others muſt ſit there;
And in this Thought, they find a kind of eaſe,
Bearing their own Misfortune on the back
Of ſuch as have before endur'd the like.
Thus play I, in one Priſon, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King;
Then Treaſon makes me wiſh my ſelf a Beggar,
And ſo I am. Then cruſhing Penury,
Perſuades me, I was better when a King;
Then am I King'd again; and by and by,
Think that I am un-king'd by Bullingbroke,
And ſtraight am nothing. But what e're I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is, [Muſick.
With nothing ſhall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. Muſick do I hear?
Ha, ha? keep time: How ſowr ſweet Muſick is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept?
So is it in the Muſick of mens lives.
And here have I the daintineſs of ear,
To check time broke in a diſorder'd ſtring;
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an Ear to hear my true Time broke:
I waſted Time, and now doth Time waſte me.
For now hath Time made me his numbring Clock:
My Thoughts are Minutes; and with Sighs they jar,
Their Watches to mine Eyes, the outward Watch;
Whereto my Finger, like a Dials point,
Is pointing ſtill, in cleanſing them from tears.
Now, Sir, the ſound that tells what Hour it is,
Are clamorous Groans, that ſtrike upon my Heart,
Which is the Bell; ſo Sighs, and Tears, and Groans,
Shew Minutes, Hours, and Times. O, but my Time
Runs poſting on, in Bullingbroke, proud joy,
While I ſtand fooling here, his Jack o'th'Clock.
This Muſick mads me, let it ſound no more;
For though it have help'd mad men to their wits,
In me it ſeems, it will make wiſe men mad.
Yet bleſſing on his heart, that gives it me!
For 'tis a ſign of love; and love to Richard,
Is a ſtrange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groom. Scene XI.

Groo. Hail, Royal Prince.
Rich. ~~Thanks, Noble Peer.~~
~~The cheapeſt of us, is ten groats too dear.~~
What art thou? ~~and~~ how com'ſt thou hither?
Where no man ever comes, but that ſad Dog nudge.
That brings me Food, to make Misfortune live?
Groo. I was a poor Groom of thy Stable (King),
When thou wer't King; who travelling towards York,
With much ado, at length have gotten leave,
To look upon my (ſometimes ~~Royal~~) Maſter's Face.
O how it yearn'd my heart, when I beheld,
In London-Streets, that Coronation day;
When Bullingbroke alias rode on Roan Barbary,
That Horſe, that thou ſo often haſt beſtrid;
That Horſe, that I ſo carefully have dreſſ'd!
Rich. Rode he on Barbary? tell me, gentle Friend,
How went he under him?
Groo. So proudly, as if he had diſdain'd the ground.
Rich. So proud, that Bullingbroke was on his back!
That Jade hath eat Bread from my Royal Hand.
This Hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not ſtumble? would he not fall down,
(Since pride muſt have a fall) and break the neck
Of that proud man, that did uſurp his back?
Forgiveneſs, Horſe! why do I rail on thee,
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Was't born to bear? I was not made a Horſe,
And yet I bear a burthen like an Aſs,
Spur-gall'd, and tir'd by jaunting Bullingbroke. alias broke.

Enter Keeper with a meſs. Scene XII.

Keep. Fellow, give place; here is no longer ſtay. (To the Groo
Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wer't away.
Groo. What my Tongue dares not, that my Heart ſhall ſay
[Exit.
Keep. My Lord, wil't pleaſe you to fall to?
Rich. Taſte of it firſt, as thou wer't wont to do.
Keep. My Lord, I dare not; for Sir Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from th'King, commands the contrary.
Rich. The Devil take Henry of Lancaſter, and thee!
Patience is ſtale, and I am weary of it. [Beats the Keepe
Keep. Help, help, help!

Enter Exton and Servants.

Ri. How now? what means death in this rude aſſault?

Villain, thine own hand yields thy deaths Inſtrument,
Go thou and fill another Room in Hell. [Exton ſtrikes him down.
That Hand ſhall burn in never-quenching Fire,
That ſtaggers thus my Perſon. Exton, thy fierce Hand,
Hath with the Kings Blood, ſtain'd the Kings own Land.
Mount, mount my Soul! thy Seat is up on high,
Whilſt my groſs fleſh ſinks downward here to die. Dies
Exton. As full of Valour, as of Royal Blood;
Both have I ſpilt: Oh, would the deed were good!
For now the Devil that told me I did well,
Says, that this Deed is chronicled in Hell.
This dead King to the living King I'll bear;
Take hence the reſt, and give them burial here. [Exit.

Scæna Quinta. XIII.

Flouriſh. Enter Bullingbrook, York, with other Lords and Attendants.

Bull. Uncle York, the lateſt News we hear,
Is that the Rebels have conſum'd with Fire
Our Town of Cicester in Glouceſterſhire;
But whether they be tane or ſlain, we hear not.
Enter Northumberland.
Welcome, my Lord: what is the News?
Nor. Firſt to thy Sacred State wiſh I all happineſs;
The next News is, I have to London ſent
The Heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appear
At large diſcourſed in this Paper here. (Preſenting a paper.)
Bull. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy Worth will add right worthy Gains.
Enter Fitz-waters.
Fitz. My Lord, I have from Oxford ſent to London,
The Heads of Broccas, and Sir Bennet Seely;
Two of the dangerous conſorted Traitors,
That ſought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.
Bull. Thy pains, Fitz-waters, ſhall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy Merit, well I wot.
Enter Percy and Carliſle.
Per. The grand Conſpirator, Abbot of Weſtminſter,
With clog of Conſcience, and ſower Melancholy,
Hath yielded up his Body to the Grave:
But here is Carliſle, living to abide
Thy Kingly doom, and ſentence of his pride.
Bull. Carliſle, this is your doom:
Chuſe out ſome ſecret place, ſome reverend Room
More than thou haſt, and with it joy thy ſelf:
So as thou liv'ſt in peace, dye free from ſtrife:
For though mine Enemy thou haſt ever been,
High ſparks of Honour in thee have I ſeen.
Enter Exton with a Coffin.
Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I preſent
Thy buried fear. Herein all breathleſs lies
The mightieſt of thy greateſt Enemies,
Richard of Bourdeaux by me hither brought.
Bull. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou haſt wrought
A Deed of Slaughter with thy fatal Hand,
Upon my Head, and all this famous Land.
Ex. From your own Mouth, my Lord, did I this Deed.
Bull. They love not Poiſon, that do Poiſon need;
Nor do I thee, though I did wiſh him dead;
I hate the Murtherer, love him murthered.
The Guilt of Conſcience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my Good Word, nor Princely Favour.
With Cain go wander through the ſhade of night,
And never ſhew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I proteſt my Soul is full of Woe,
That Blood ſhould ſprinkle me, and make me grow.
Come mourn with me, for that I do lament,
And put on ſullen black incontinent:
I'll make a Voyage to the Holy-land,
To waſh this Blood off from my Guilty Hand.
March ſadly after, grace my Mourning here,
In weeping over this untimely Beer. [Exeunt.

THE

The First Part of
HENRY IV,
with the Life and Death of
HENRY
Sirnamed HOT-SPUR.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima. The Court at Lond

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaster, Earl of Westmerland, with others.

King.

So shaken as we are, so wan with Care,
Find we a time for frighted Peace to pant,
And breathe short winded accents of new Broils
To be commenc'd in ~~Strands~~ afar remote?
No more the thirsty ~~Entrails~~ of this Soil,
Shall daub her lips with her own Childrens blood:
No more shall trenching War channel her Fields,
Nor bruise her Flowrets with the armed Hoofs
Of Hostile Paces. Those opposed ~~Eyes~~, Arms
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heaven,
All of one Nature, of one Substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock,
And furious close of civil Butchery,
Shall now in mutual well-beseeming Ranks
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies:
The edge of War, like an ill-sheathed Knife,
No more shall cut his Master. Therefore, Friends,
As far as to the Sepulchre of Christ,
(Whose Souldier now, under whose blessed Cross
We are impressed, and engag'd to fight,)
Forthwith a Power of English shall we levy;
Whose Arms were moulded in their Mother's Womb,
To chase these Pagans, in those holy Fields,
Over whose Acres walk'd those blessed feet
Which, fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter Cross.
But this our purpose is a Twelvemonth old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meet not now. Then let me hear
Of you, my gentle Cousin Westmorland,
What yesternight our Council did decree,
In forwarding this dear Expedience.

West. My Liege, This haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the Charge set down
But yesternight: When all athwart there came
A Post from Wales, loaden with heavy News;
Whose worst was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken;
~~And~~ a thousand of his People butchered:
Upon whose dead Corps there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or spoken of.

King. It seems then, that the tidings of this Broil,
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This matcht, with other like, my gracious Lord;
Far ~~more~~ uneven and unwelcome News
Came from the North, and thus it did report:
On Holy-Rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and appproved Scot,
At Holmedon ~~met, where they did~~ spent
A sad and bloody hour:
As by discharge of their Artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the News was told:
For he that brought them, in the very Heat
And pride of their Contention, did take Horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

King. Here is a dear and true industrious Friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each Soil,
Betwixt that Holmedon, and this Seat of ours:
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome News.
The Earl of Dowglas is discomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights,
Balk'd in their own blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's Plains. Of Prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake Earl of Fife, and eldest Son
To beaten Dowglas, and the Earl of Athol,
Of Marry, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an Honourable Spoil?
A gallant Prize? Ha, Cousin, is it not? In faith it is.

West. A Conquest for a Prince to boast of.

King. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin,
In envy, that my lord Northumberland
Should be the Father of so blest a Son;

A Son

A Son, who is the Theam of Honour's Tongue;
Amongſt a Grove, the very ſtreighteſt Plant,
Who is ſweet Fortune's Minion, and her pride:
Whil'ſt I by looking on the Praiſe of him,
See Riot and Diſhonour ſtain the Brow
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd,
That ſome Night-tripping Fairy had exchang'd,
In Cradle cloaths, our Children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet;
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts. What think you Coze,
Of this young Percy's Pride? The Priſoners,
Which he in this Adventure hath ſurpriz'd,
To his own uſe he keeps, and ſends me word
I ſhall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife.

Weſt. This is his Uncles teaching, This is Worceſter,
Malevolent to you in all Aſpects;
Which makes him prune himſelf, and briſtle up
The creſt of Youth againſt your Dignity.

King. But I have ſent for him to anſwer this;
And for this cauſe a while we muſt neglect
Our holy purpoſe to Jeruſalem.
Couſin, on Wedneſday next, our Council we will hold
At Windſor, ſo inform the Lords;
But come your ſelf with ſpeed to us again;
For more is to be ſaid, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.

Weſt. I will, my Liege. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

An Apartment of the Prince's.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir John Falſtaff, ~~and Poins.~~

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, Lad?

Prince. Thou art ſo fat-witted with drinking ~~of~~ old Sack, and unbuttoning thee after Supper, and ſleeping upon Benches in the afternoon, that thou haſt forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldſt truly know. What a devil haſt thou to do with the time of the day? unleſs Hour's were Cups of Sack, and Minutes Capons, and Clocks the Tongues of Bawds, and Dials the Signs of Leaping-houſes, and the bleſſed Sun himſelf a fair hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffata; I ſee no reaſon why thou ſhouldſt be ſo ſuperfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you came near me now, Hal. For we that take Purſes, go by the Moon and ſeven Stars, and not by Phœbus, he, that wandring Knight ſo fair. And I pray thee, ſweet Wag, when thou art King, as God ſave thy Grace, (Majeſty I ſhould ſay, for Grace thou wilt have none) — — —

Prince. What! none?

Fal. No, not ſo much as will ſerve to be Prologue to an Egg and Butter.

Prince. Well, how then? Come, roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry then, ſweet Wag, when thou art King, let not us that are Squires of the Nights-body, be call'd Thieves of the days Beauty. Let us be Diana's Foreſters, Gentlemen of the Shade, Minions of the Moon; and let men ſay, we be men of good Government, being governed as the Sea is, by our noble and chaſt Miſtreſs the Moon, under whoſe countenance we ſteal.

Prince. Thou ſay'ſt well, and it holds well too; for the Fortune of us that are the Moons men, doth ebb and flow like the Sea, being governed as the Sea is, by the Moon: as for proof, Now a Purſe of Gold moſt reſolutely ſnatch'd on Monday night, and moſt diſſolutely ſpent on Tueſday morning; got with ſwearing, ~~Lay by~~; and ſpent with crying, Bring in: Now in as low an ebb, as the foot of the Ladder; and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the Gallows.

Fal. Thou ſay'ſt true, Lad: And is not my Hoſteſs of the Tavern a moſt ſweet Wench?

Prince. As the Honey, of Hybla, my old Lad of the Caſtle: and is not a Buff Jerkin a moſt ſweet Robe of durance?

Fal. How, now; how now, mad Wag? What, in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a Plague have I to do with a Buff Jerkin?

Prince. Why, what a Pox have I to do with my Hoſteſs of the Tavern?

Fal. Well, thou haſt call'd her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prince. Did I ever call thee for to pay thy part?

Fal. No, I'll give thee thy due, thou haſt paid all there.

Prince. Yea, and elſewhere, ſo far as my Coyn would ſtretch, and where it would not, I have us'd my Credit.

Fal. Yea, and ſo us'd it, that were it here apparent, that thou art Heir apparent. But I prythee, ſweet Wag, ſhall there be Gallows ſtanding in England when thou art King? and Reſolution thus fobb'd as it is, with the ruſty curb of old Father Antick the Law? Do not thou, when thou art a King, hang a Thief.

Prince. No; thou ſhalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! I'll be a brave Judge.

Prince. Thou judgeſt falſe already; I mean, thou ſhalt have the hanging of the Thieves, and ſo become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in ſome ſort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell you.

Prince. For obtaining of Suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of Suits, whereof the Hangman hath no lean Wardrobe. I am as Melancholy as a Gib-Cat, or a lugg'd Bear.

Prin. Or an old Lion, or a Lovers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnſhire Bagpipe.

Prin. What ſay'ſt thou to a Hare, or the Melancholy of Moor-Ditch?

Fal. Thou haſt the moſt unſavoury ſimiles, and art indeed the moſt comparative raſcalleſt, ſweet young Prince. But, Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity; I would thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good Names were to be bought: an old Lord of the Council rated me the other day in the ſtreet about you, Sir; but I mark'd him not, and yet he talk'd very wiſely, ~~but I regarded him not, and yet he talkt wiſely~~, and in the ſtreet too.

Prince. Thou didſt well; for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou haſt damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint. Thou haſt done much harm unto me, Hal, God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now I am, if a man ſhould ſpeak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I muſt give over this life, and I will give it over; and I do not, I am a Villain. I'll be damn'd for never a Kings Son in Chriſtendom.

Prin. Where ſhall we take a Purſe to morrow, Jack?

Fal. Where thou wilt, Lad, I'll make one; and I do not, call me Villain, and baffle me.

Prin. I ſee a good amendment of life in thee, From Praying, to Purſe-taking.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my Vocation, Hal. 'Tis no ſin for a man to labour in his Vocation. — Poins! — Scene III. Enter Poins.

Poin. Now ſhall we know if Gads-hill have ſet a Match. O, if men were to be ſaved by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the moſt omnipotent Villain, that ever cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow, Ned.

Poin. Good morrow, ſweet Hal. What ſays Monſieur Remorſe? What ſays Sir John Sack and Sugar, Jack? How agree the Devil and thee about thy Soul, that thou ſoldeſt him on Good-Friday laſt, for a Cup of Madera, and a cold Capons leg?

Prin. Sir John ſtands to his word, the Devil ſhall have his Bargain, for he was never yet a Breaker of Proverbs; He will give the Devil his due.

Poin. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the Devil.

Prin. Elſe he had been damn'd for cozening the Devil.

Poin. But, my Lads, my Lads, to morrow morning, by four

* This is a proof that the name of Sr John Old Caſtle ſtood firſt under this character of Falſtaff

four a Clock early at Gads-hill, there are Pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders riding to London with fat Purses. I have Vizards for you all; you have Horses for your selves: Gads-hill lies to night in Rochester, I have bespoke Supper to morrow in Eastcheap; we may do it as secure as sleep: if you will go, I will stuff your Purses full of Crowns; if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Hear ye, Yedward, if I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poin. You will, Chops?

Fal. Hal, Wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a Thief? not I. by my faith.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee; ~~nor~~ thou cam'st not of the Blood Royal, if thou dar'st not stand, for ten Shillings.

Prin. Well then, once in my days I'll be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

Prin. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. I'll be a Traitor then, when thou art King.

Prin. I care not.

Poin. Sir John, I prythee, leave the Prince and me alone; I will lay him down such Reasons for this Adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, may'st thou have the spirit of Persuasion; and he the Ears of profiting, that what thou speak'st, may move; and what he hears may be believed; that the true Prince may, (for recreation sake), prove a false Thief; for the poor abuses of the time, want countenance. Farewell, you shall find me in East-cheap.

Prin. Farewel, thou latter Spring! Farewel All-hallown Summer! [Exit Fal.

Poin. Now, my good sweet honey Lord, ride with us to morrow. I have a jeast to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, ~~Bardolph, Peto~~ Harvey, Rossil, and Gads-hill, shall rob those men that we have already way-laid; your self and I will not be there; and when they have the Booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this Head from my Shoulders.

Prin. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poin. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they venture upon the Exploit themselves, which they have no sooner atchieved, but we'll set upon them.

Prin. Ay, but 'tis like that they will know us by our Horses, by our Habits, and by every other Appointment to be our selves.

Poy. Tut, our Horses they shall not see, I'll tye them in the wood; our Vizards we will change after we leave them; and, Sirrah, I have Cases of Buckram for the nonce, to immask our noted outward Garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poin. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true bred Cowards as ever turn'd back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees Reason, I'll forswear Arms. The vertue of this Jeast will be, the incomprehensible lies that this fat Rogue will tell us, when we meet at Supper; how thirty at least he fought with, what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof of this, lies the Jeast.

Prin. Well, I'll go with thee; provide us all things necessary, and meet me to morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewel!

Poin. Farewel, my Lord! [Exit Poins.

Prin. I know you all, and will a while uphold
The unyok'd Humour of your Idleness;
Yet herein will I imitate the Sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious Clouds
To smother up his Beauty from the World;
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wondred at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly Mists
Of Vapours, that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing Holidays,
To sport, would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wisht-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare Accidents.
So when this loose Behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised;
By how much better than my Word I am,
By so much shall I falsifie mens Hopes;
And, like bright Metal on a sullen ground,
My Reformation glittering o're my Fault
Shall shew more goodly, and attract more Eyes,
Than that which hath no foyl to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make Offence a skill,
Redeeming time, when men think least I will. (Exit

Scæna Tertia.
The Palace.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these Indignities;
And you have found me; for accordingly,
You tread upon my Patience: But be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be my self,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, ~~than~~ my condition,
Which hath been smooth as Oyl, soft as young Down,
And therefore lost that Title of Respect,
Which the proud soul ne're pays, but to the proud.

Wor. Our House, (my Sovereign Liege), little deserves
The scourge of Greatness to be used on it,
And that same Greatness too, which our own hands
Have help to make so portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester, get thee gone; for I do see
Danger and Disobedience in thine Eye.
O Sir, your Presence is too bold and peremptory,
And Majesty might never yet endure
The moody Frontier of a Servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us. When we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you. (Exit Wor.
You were about to speak. (To North.)

North. Yea, my good Lord.
Those Prisoners in your Highness Name demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, (as he says), not with such strength deny'd
As was delivered to your Majesty.
~~Who either through~~ envy, ~~or~~ misprision,
~~Was~~ guilty of this fault; and not my Son.

Hot. My Liege, I did deny no Prisoners.
But, I remember when the fight was done,
When I was dry with Rage, and extream Toyl,
Breathless, and faint, leaning upon my Sword;
Came there a certain Lord, neat ~~and~~ trimly dress't;
Fresh as a Bride-groom, and his Chin new reap'd,
Shew'd like a stubble Land at Harvest home.
He was perfumed like a Milliner,
And 'twixt his Finger and his Thumb, he held
A Pouncet Box: which ever and anon
He gave his Nose, ~~and took't away again~~:
~~Who therewith angry, when it next came there,~~
~~Took it in Snuff.~~ And still he smil'd and talk'd;
And as the Soldiers bare dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught Knaves, Unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly, unhandsome Coarse
Betwixt the wind, and his Nobility.
With many Holiday and Lady terms
He question'd me: Among the rest, demanded
My Prisoners, in your Majesties behalf.
I, then, all-smarting with my wounds being cold,
(To be so pestered with a Popingay),
Out of my grief, and my impatience,
Answer'd, (neglectingly), I know not what;
He should or should not; For he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,

And

And talk so like a Waiting-Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, and Drums, and Wounds (God save the mark!)
And telling me, the Sovereign'st thing on Earth
Was Parmacity, for an inward Bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
That Villanous Salt-peter should be digg'd
Out of the Bowels of the harmless Earth,
Which many a good, tall Fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly: And but for these vile Guns,
He would himself have been a Souldier.
This bald, unjointed Chat of his, (my Lord),
~~Made me to~~ answer indirectly, (as I said.);
And I beseech you, let not this Report
Come currant for an Accusation,
Betwixt my Love and your high Majesty.
Blunt. The Circumstance considered, good my Lord,
What ever Harry Percy then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.
King. Why, yet he doth deny his Prisoners,
But with Proviso and Exception,
That we at our own Charge, shall ransom straight
His Brother-in-Law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who, (on my Soul), hath wilfully betra'yd
The lives of those, that he did lead to Fight,
Against the great Magician, damn'd Glendower,
Whose Daughter, (as we hear), the Earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall our Coffers then
Be emptied, to redeem a Traitor home?
Shall we buy Treason? and indent with Fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No; on the barren Mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my Friend,
Whose Tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.
Hot. Revolted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Sovereign Liege,
But by the Chance of War; to prove that true,
Needs no more but one Tongue—For all those Wounds,
Those mouthed Wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severn's Sedgie Bank,
In single opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink,
Upon agreement of swift Severn's Flood;
Who then affrighted with their Bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his crisped-head in a hollow Bank,
Blood-stained with these valiant Combatants.
Never did base, and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly:
Then let him not be slander'd with Revolt.
King. Thou do'st belye him, Percy, thou ~~do'st~~ belyest him;
He never did encounter with Glendower;
~~I tell thee~~, he durst as well have met the Devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an Enemy.
Art ~~thou~~ not asham'd? But, ~~Sirrah, henceforth~~
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your Prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease ~~you~~. ~~My~~ Lord Northumberland
We license your departure with your Son,
Send us your Prisoners, or you'll hear of it. [Exit King.
Hot. And if the Devil come and roar for them,
I will not send them. I will after straight
And tell him so; for I will ease my Heart,
Although it be with hazard of my Head.
Nor. What? drunk with Choler? stay and pause a while,
Here comes your Uncle. [Enter Worcester.
Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
Yes, I will speak of him, and let my Soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him.
In his behalf, I'll empty all these Veins,
And shed my dear Blood drop by drop i'th' dust,
But I will lift the down-fall'n Mortimer
As high i'th' air as this unthankful King,
As this ingrate and cankred Bolingbroke.
Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad.
Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?
Hot. He will, (forsooth), have all my Prisoners:
And when I urg'd the Ransom once again
Of my Wives Brother, then his cheek look'd pale,
And on my Face he turn'd an Eye of death,
Trembling even at the Name of Mortimer.
Wor. I cannot blame him; was he not proclaim'd,
By Richard that dead is, the next of Blood?
Nor. He was: I heard the Proclamation;
And then it was, when the unhappy King
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon) did set forth
Upon his Irish Expedition;
From whence, he intercepted, did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murthered.
Wor. And for whose death, we in the worlds wide mouth
Live (to) scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.
Hot. But soft, I pray you; did King Richard then Proclaim my Brother Mortimer, as lawful
Heir to the Crown?
Nor. He did, my self did hear it.
Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his Cousin King,
That wish'd him on the barren Mountains starv'd.
But shall it be, that you that set the Crown
Upon the Head of this forgetful Man,
And for his sake wear the detested Blot
Of murtherous Subornations? shall it be,
That you a world of Curses undergo,
Being the Agents, or base second Means,
The Cords, the Ladder, or the Hangman rather?
(O pardon, if that I descend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range under this subtle King.)
Shall it for shame, be spoken in these days,
Or fill up Chronicles in time to come,
That men of your Nobility and Power,
~~Did~~ gage them both in an unjust behalf;
(As both of you, God pardon it, have done)
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely Rose,
And plant this Thorn, this Canker Bolingbroke?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded and shook off
By him, for whom these Shames ye underwent?
No; yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd Honours, and restore your selves
Into the good thoughts of the world again.
Revenge the jeering and disdain'd Contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the Debt he owes unto you,
Even with the bloody Payments of your deaths:
Therefore I say———
Wor. Peace, Cousin, say no more.
And now I will unclasp a secret Book,
And to your quick conveying Discontents,
I'll read you Matter, deep and dangerous;
As full of peril and adventurous Spirit,
As to o're-walk a Current, roaring loud,
On the unstedfast footing of a Spear.
Hot. If we fall in, good night, or sink or swim:
Send danger from the East unto the West,
So Honour cross it from the North to South;
And let them grapple: The Blood more stirs
To rouze a Lyon, than to start a Hare.
Nor. Imagination of some great Exploit,
Drives him beyond the bounds of Patience.

Hot.

Hot. By Heaven, methinks it were an easie leap,
To pluck bright Honour from the pale-fac'd Moon;
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where Fadom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned Honour by the Locks:
So he that doth redeem her thence, might wear
Without Co-rival, all her Dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd Fellowship!
Wor. He apprehends a world of Figures here,
But not the Form of what he should attend.
Good Cousin give me audience for a while,
~~And list to me.~~
Hot. I cry you mercy.
Wor. Those same Noble Scots
That are your Prisoners——
Hot. I'll keep them all.
By Heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his Soul, he shall not;
I'll keep them, by this Hand.
Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my Purposes.
Those Prisoners you shall keep.
Hot. ~~Nay,~~ I will; that's flat:
He said he would not Ransom Mortimer:
Forbad my Tongue to speak of Mortimer:
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his Ear I'll holla, Mortimer!
Nay, I'll have a Starling ~~shall be~~ taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.
Wor. Hear you, Cousin: A word.——
Hot. All Studies here I solemnly defie,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bullingbroke:
And that same Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales,
But that I think his Father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some Mischance,
I would have ~~him~~ poyson'd ~~him~~ with a pot of Ale.
Wor. Farewell, Kinsman: I'll talk to you
When you are better temper'd to attend.
Nor. Why what a wasp-tongu'd and impatient Fool
Art thou, to break into this Womans mood,
Tying thine Ear to no Tongue but thine own?
Hot. Why look you, I am whipt and scourg'd with rods,
Nettled, and stung with Pismires, when I hear
Of this vile Politician Bullingbroke:
In Richard's time——What de'ye call the place?——
A plague upon't——it is in Glocester-shire:——
'Twas where the madcap Duke his Uncle kept,——
His Uncle York——where I first bow'd my Knee
Unto the King of Smiles, this Bullingbroke:
When you and he came back from Ravenspurg.
Nor. At Barkley Castle.
Hot. You say true:
Why what a gaudy deal of Courtesie
This fawning Gray-hound then did proffer me!
Look, when his infant Fortune came to age,——
And gentle Harry Percy, and kind Cousin:——
O, the Devil take such Cozeners——God forgive me:——
Good Uncle tell your tale, for I have done.
Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again,
We'll stay your leisure.
Hot. I have done, insooth.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners.
Deliver them up without their Ransom straight,
And make the Douglas Son your onely mean
For Powers in Scotland; Which for divers Reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd
Will easily be granted you, my Lord,
Your Son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble Prelate, well belov'd,
The Arch-Bishop.
Hot. ~~Of~~ York, is't not?
Wor. True, who bears hard
His Brothers death at Bristow, the Lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down,
And onely stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
Hot. I smell it:
Upon my life, it will do ~~wondrous~~ well.
Nor. Before the game's a foot, thou still lett'st slip.
Hot. ~~Why,~~ it cannot choose but be a noble Plot;
And then the Power of Scotland, and of York,
To join with Mortimer; Ha!
Wor. ~~And~~ so they shall.
Hot. In faith, it is exceeding well aim'd.
Wor. And 'tis no little Reason bids us speed,
To save our Heads, by raising of a Head:
For, bear our selves as even as we can,
The King will always think him in our debt,
And think we ~~think~~ seem our selves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.
Hot. He does, he does; we'll be reveng'd on him.
Wor. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Than I by Letters shall direct your course;
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly,
I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our Powers at once,
(As I will fashion it) shall happily meet,
To bear our Fortunes in our own strong Arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.
Nor. Farewell, good Brother; we shall thrive, I trust.
Hot. Uncle, adieu! O let Hours be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport. [Exeunt

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

An Inn at Rochester.

Enter a Carrier, with a Lanthorn in his hand.

1. Car. Heigh ho, an't be not four by the day I'll be hang'd. Charles wain is over the new Chimney, and yet our Horse not packt. What, Ostler?
Ost. Anon, anon!
1. Car. I prythee Tom, beat Cut's Saddle, put a few Flocks in the point; The poor Jade is wrung in the Withers, out of all ~~cess~~. case.

Enter another Carrier.

2. Car. Pease and Beans are as dank here as a Dog, and this is the next way to give poor Jades the Bots: This House is turned upside down, since Robin ~~the~~ Ostler died.
1. Car. Poor fellow never joy'd since the price of Oats rose, it was the death of him.
2. Car. I think this the most Villanous House in all London road for Fleas: I am stung like a Tench.
1. Car. Like a Tench? There's ne're a King in Christendom, could be better bit, than I have been since the first Cock.
2. Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a Jourden, and then we leak in your Chimney: And your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Loach.
1. Car. What, Ostler, come away, and be hang'd come away!
2. Car. I have a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.
1. Car. The Turkies in my Panniers are quite starved. What Ostler? a plague on thee, hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? and 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very Villain. Come and be hang'd, hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Good morrow, Carriers. What's a Clock?
Car. I think it be two a Clock.

Gad.

Gad. I prythee, lend me thy Lanthorn, to see my Gelding in the Stable.

1. Car. Nay, soft I pray ye; I know a trick worth two of that. i'faith.

Gad. I prythee lend me thine.

2. Car Ay, when, canst tell? lend me thy Lanthorn (quoth-a) marry, I'll see thee hang'd first.

Gad. Sirrah, Carrier: what time do you mean to come to London?

2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come Neighbour Mugges, we'll call up the Gentlemen; they will along with company, for they have great charge. Scene II. [Exeunt.

Enter Chamberlain.

Gad. What, ho, Chamberlain?

Cham. At hand, quoth Pick-purse.

Gad. That's even as fair, as at hand, quoth the Chamberlain; For thou variest no more from picking of Purses, than giving direction doth from labouring. Thou lay'st the plot, how.

Cham. Good morrow, Master Gads-hill, it holds currant that I told you yesternight. There's a Franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brought three hundred Marks with him in Gold; I heard him tell it to one of his Company last night at Supper; a kind of Auditor, one that hath abundance of Charge too, (God knows what:) they are up already, and call for Eggs and Butter. They will away presently.

Gad. Sirrah, if they meet not with S. Nicholas Clarks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I prythee keep that for the Hangman; for I know thou worship'st S. Nicholas as truly as a man of falshood may.

Gad. What talkest thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, I'll make a fat pair of Gallows. For if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou know'st he's no Straveling. Tut, there are other Trojans that thou dream'st not of, the which, (for sport sake,) are content to do the Profession some grace; that would, (if matters should be look'd into) for their own Credit sake, make all whole. I am joyned with no Foot-Land-Rakers, no Long-staff six penny strikers, none of those mad Mustachio-purple-hu'd-Malt-worms; but with Nobility, and Tranquility; Burgomasters, and great Oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner than speak; and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray; and yet I lye, for they pray continually unto their Saint the Common-wealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on her; for they ride up and down on her, and make her their Boots.

Cham. What, the Common-wealth their Boots? Will she hold out water in foul way?

Gad. She will, she will; Justice hath liquor'd her. We steal, as in a Castle, Cock-sure; we have the receipt of Fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, I think rather, you are more beholding to the Night, than the Fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gad. Give me thy hand:
Thou shalt have a share in our purpose,
As I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false Thief.

Gad. Go to; Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the Ostler bring the Gelding out of the Stable. Farewell, ye muddy knave. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda. III.
The Highway.

Enter Prince, Poins, and Peto.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter; I have removed Falstaff's Horse, and he frets like a gumm'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poins, Poins, and be hang'd Poins!

Prin. Peace, ye fat-kidney'd Rascal, what a bawling dost thou keep?

Fal. What Poins, Hal!

Prin. He is walk'd up to the top of the Hill, I'll go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Thiefs Company: that Rascal hath removed my Horse, and tyed him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the square further a foot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that Rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two and twenty year, and yet I am bewitcht with the Rogues company. If the Rascal have not given me Medicines to make me love him, I'll be hang'd; it could not be else; I have drunk Medicines. Poins, Hall, a Plague upon you both. Bardolph! Peto! I'll starve e're I'll rob a foot further. And 'twere not as good a deed as to drink, to turn True-man, and to leave these Rogues, I am the veriest Varlet that ever chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground, is threescore and ten miles a foot with me; and the stony-hearted Villains know it well enough. A plague upon't, when Thieves cannot be true one to another. [They whistle. Whew. A plague light upon you all. Give me my Horse, you Rogues; give me my Horse, and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat-guts, lie down, lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou can hear the tread of Travellers.

Fal. Have you any Leavers to lift me up again, being down? I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the Coyn in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague mean ye, to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou liest, thou are not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prythee, good Prince Hal, help me to my Horse, good Kings Son.

Prin. Out, you Rogue, shall I be your Ostler?

Fal. Go hang thy self in thy own heir-apparent-Garters; If I be ta'ne, I'll peach for this; and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sack be my Poyson; when a jest is so forward, and a foot too, I hate it.

Enter Gads-hill. & Bardolph.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I do against my will.

Poyn. O, 'tis our Setter, I know his voice:
Bardolf, what News?

Bar. Case ye, case ye; on with your Vizards; there's Money of the Kings coming down the Hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you Rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tavern.

Gad. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prin. You four shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I will walk lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

Prin. What, a Coward, Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed I am not John of Gaunt your Grandfather; but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'll leave that to the proof.

Poyn. Sirrah, Jack, thy Horse stands behind the Hedge; when thou need'st him, there shalt thou find him; farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now I cannot strike him if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our Disguises?

Poyn. Here hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now, my Masters, happy man be his dole say I; every man to his business. Scene IV.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come, Neighbour: the Boy shall lead our Horse down the hill: We'll walk a foot a while, and ease our Legs.

Thieves

Thieves. Stand!

Tra. Jesu bless us.

Fal. Strike; down with them, cut the Villains throats; ah whoreson Caterpillars; Bacon-fed Knaves, they hate us youth; down with them, fleece them.

Tra. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied Knaves, are you undone? No ye Fat Chuffs, I would your store were here. On, Bacons, on, what ye Knaves? young men must live; you are Grand Jurors? Nay, we'll jure ye i'faith.

[Here they rob them and bind them. Exeunt. Enter the Prince and Poins.

Prin. The Thieves have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the Thieves and go merrily to London, it would be Argument for a Week, Laughter for a Month, and a good Jeast for ever.

Poyns. Stand close, I hear them coming.

Enter Thieves again.

Fal. Come my Masters, let us share, and then to Horse before day; and the Prince and Poyns be not two arrant Cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more Valour in that Poyns, than in a wild Duck.

Prin. Your Money!

Poyn. Villains!

[As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. They all run away, leaving the Booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to Horse: The Thieves are scattered, and possest with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other; each takes his Fellow for an Officer. Away, good Ned, Falstaff sweats to death, and Lards the lean earth as he walks along: wer't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poyn. How the Rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia. V.

Enter Hotspur solus, reading a Letter.

But for mine own part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your House. He could be contented? Why is he not then? in respect of the love he bears our House. He shews in this, he loves his own Barn better than he loves our House. Let me see some more. The purpose you undertake is dangerous. Why, that's certain: 'Tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my Lord Fool, out of this Nettle, Danger, we pluck this Flower, Safety. The purpose you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you have named uncertain, the Time it self unsorted, and your whole Plot too light, for the counterpoize of so great an Opposition. Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow cowardly Hinde, and you lie. What a lack-brain is this! I protest, our Plot is as good a Plot as ever was laid; our Friends true and constant: A good Plot, good Friends, and full of Expectation; An excellent Plot, very good Friends. What a Frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my Lord of York commends the Plot, and the general course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rascal, I could brain him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Uncle, and my self, Lord Edmond Mortimer, my Lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their Letters, to meet me in Arms by the ninth of the next Month? and are there not some of them set forward already? What a Pagan Rascal is this? An Infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and Cold heart, will he to the King, and lay open all our Proceedings. O, I could divide my self, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skim'd Milk with so Honourable an Action. Hang him, let him tell the King. we are prepared. I will set forwards to night.

Enter his Lady. Scene VI.

How now, Kate! I must leave you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone?
For what Offence have I this fortnight been
A Banish'd Woman from my Harry's Bed?
Tell me, (sweet Lord), what is't that takes from thee
Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
Why dost thou bend thy Eyes upon the Earth?
And start so often when thou sitt'st alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh Blood in thy Cheeks?
And given my Treasures and my Rights of thee,
To thick-ey'd musing, and curst Melancholly?
In my faint slumbers, I by thee have watcht,
And heard thee murmur tales of Iron Wars:
Speak terms of manage to thy bounding Steed;
Cry courage to the Field! And thou hast talk'd
Of Sallies, and Retires; Trenches, Tents,
Of Palizadoes, Frontiers, Parapets.
Of Basilisks, of Cannon, Culverin.
Of Prisoners ransom, and of Soldiers slain,
And all the current of a heady fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at War,
And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep,
That Beds of sweat hath stood upon thy Brow,
Like bubbles in a late disturbed Stream:
And in thy Face strange motion have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath,
On some great sudden haste. O, what Portents are these?
Some heavy business hath my Lord in hand,
And I must know it; else he loves me not.

Hot. What ho! Is Gilliams with the Packet gone? Enter Servt.

Ser. He is, my Lord, an hour agone.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those Horses from the Sheriff?

Ser. One Horse, my Lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What Horse? a Roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Ser. It is, my Lord.

Hot. That Roan shall be my Throne. Well, I will back him straight. Esperance! bid Butler lead him forth into the Park.

La. But hear you, my Lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my Lady?

La. What is it that carries you away?

Hot. Why, my Horse, (my Love), my Horse.

La. Out, you mad-headed Ape! a Weazel hath not such a deal of Spleen, as you are tost with. In sooth I'll know your business, Harry, that I will. I fear my Brother Mortimer doth stir about his Title, and hath sent for you to line his Enterprise. But if you go——

Hot. So far a foot, I shall be weary, Love.

La. Come, come, you Paraquito, answer me directly unto this Question, that I shall ask. Indeed I'll break thy little finger, Harry, if thou wilt not tell me true.

Hot. Away, away, you trifler: Love, I love thee not, I care not for thee, Kate; this is no world
To play with Mammets, and to tilt with Lips.
We must have bloody Noses, and crack'd Crowns,
And pass them current too. Gods me, my Horse!
What say'st thou, Kate? what would'st thou have with me?

La. Do ye not love me? do you not indeed?
Well, do not then. For since you love me not,
I will not love my self. Do you not love me?
Nay, tell me if thou speakest in Jest, or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am a Horse-back, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate,
I must not have you henceforth question me,
Whither I go; nor reason whereabout.
Whither I must, I must; and to conclude,
This Evening must I leave thee, gentle Kate.
I know you wise, but yet no further wise
Than Harry Percy's Wife. Constant you are,
But yet a Woman; and for Secrecie,
No Lady closer. For I will believe,

Thou

Thou wilt not utter what thou doſt not know,
And ſo far will I truſt thee, gentle Kate.

La. How! ſo far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate, me
Whether I go, thither ſhall you go too:
To day will I ſet forth, to morrow you.
Will this content you, Kate?

La. It muſt of force. [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. VII.

The Tavern in East-cheap.

Enter Prince and Poynes.

Prin. Ned, prythee come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poynes. Where haſt been, Hall?

Prin. With three or four Loggerheads, amongſt three or fourſcore Hogſheads. I have ſounded the very baſe ſtring of humility. Sirrah, I am ſworn Brother to a leſh of Drawers, and can call them by their Names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their Confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Curteſie; telling me flatly, I am not proud like Jack Falſtaff, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good Boy; and when I am King of England, I ſhall command all the good Lads in Eaſtcheap. They call drinking deep, dying Scarlet; and when you breath in your watring, then they cry hem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am ſo good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any Tinker in his own Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou haſt loſt much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action; but ſweet Ned, to ſweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this penniworth of Sugar, clapt even now into my hand by an under Skinker, one that never ſpeaks other Engliſh in his life, then Eight ſhillings and ſix pence, and, You are welcome: with this ſhrill addition, Anon, Sir, Anon, Sir, Score a pint of Baſtard in the Half Moon, or ſo. But Ned, to drive away time till Falſtaff come, I prythee doe thou ſtand in ſome by-roome, while I queſtion my puny Drawer, to what end he gave me the Sugar; and do never leave calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: ſtep aſide, and I'll ſhew thee a Preſident.

Poynes. Francis!

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Poyn. Francis!

Enter Drawer.

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir; look down into the Pomgarnet Ralph.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. How long haſt thou to ſerve, Francis?

Fran. Forſooth, five years, and as much as to——

Poyn. Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir.

Prin. Five years; Berlady a long Leaſe for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, dareſt thou be ſo valiant, as to play the Coward with thy Indenture, and ſhew it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord, Sir, I'll be ſworn upon all the Books in England, I could find in my heart.——

Poyn. Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me ſee, about Michaelmas next I ſhall be——

Poyn. Francis!

Fran. Anon, Sir, pray you ſtay a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay, but hark you Francis, for the Sugar thou gaveſt me, 'twas a penniworth, was't not?

Fran. O Lord Sir, I would it had been two.

Prin. I will give thee for it a thouſand pound: ask me when thou wilt, and thou ſhalt have it.

Poyn. Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon, Francis? No, Francis, but to morrow Francis; or Francis, on Thurſday; or indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But Francis!

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou Rob this Leathern Jerkin, Chriſtal button, Not-pated, Agatring, Puke ſtocking, Caddice garter, Spaniſh pouch. ſmooth tongue,

Fran. O Lord, Sir, who do you mean?

Prin. Why then your brown Baſtard is your only drink; for look you, Francis, your white Canvas doublet will ſully. In Barbary, Sir, it cannot come to ſo much.

Fran. What, Sir?

Poyn. Francis!

Prin. A way, you Rogue, doſt thou hear them call?

[Here they both call, the Drawer ſtands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What ſtand'ſt thou ſtill, and hear'ſt ſuch a calling? Look to the Gueſts within. My Lord, old Sir John with half a dozen more, are at the door; ſhall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone a while, and then open the door. [Poynes.

Enter Poynes.

Poyn. Anon, anon, Sir.

Prin. Sirrah, Falſtaff and the reſt of the Thives are at the door, ſhall we be merry?

Poyn. As merry as Crickets my Lad. But hark ye, what cunning match have you made with this jeaſt of the Drawer? Come, what's the iſſue?

Prin. I am now of all humors, that have ſhewed themſelves humors, ſince the old days of goodman Adam, to the pupil age of this preſent twelve a Clock at midnight. What's a clock, Francis.

Fran. Anon. anon, Sir.

Prin. That ever this Fellow ſhould have fewer words then a Parrot, and yet the Son of a Woman! His induſtry is up ſtairs and down-ſtairs; his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percys mind, the Hotſpur of the North; he that kills me ſome ſix or ſeven dozen of Scots at a Breakfaſt, waſhes his hands and ſays to his Wife: Fie upon this quiet life! I want work. O my ſweet Harry, ſayes ſhe, how many haſt thou kill'd to day? Give my Roan Horſe a drench, (ſays he) and anſwers, ſome fourteen, an hour after; a trifle, a trifle. I prythee call in Falſtaff, I'll play Percy, and that damn'd Brawn ſhall play Dame Mortimer his Wife. Rivo, ſays the Drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow

Scene IX

Enter Falſtaff. &c.

Poyn. Welcome Jack, where haſt thou been?

Fal. A plague of all Cowards, I ſay, and a vengeance too, marry and Amen! Give me a cup of Sack Boy. E're I lead this life long, I'll ſow nether ſtocks, and mend them too. A plague of all Cowards! Give me a Cup of Sack, Rogue. Is there no virtue extant? (Drinks.

Prin. Didſt thou never ſee Titan kiſs a diſh of Butter, pitiful hearted Titan that melted at the ſweet Tale of the Sun? If thou didſt, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, here's Lime in this Sack too; there is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man; yet a Coward is worſe then a Cup of Sack with Lime. A villanous Coward, go thy ways old Jack, die when thou wilt, if Manhood, good Manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the Earth, then am I a ſhotten Herring: there lives not three good men unhang'd in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old, God help the while, a bad world I ſay. I would I were a Weaver, I could ſing all manner of Songs. A plague of all Cowards, I ſay ſtill.

Prin. How now Woolſack, what mutter you?

Fal.

Ribi. Drink away! Italian

Fal. A Kings Son? If I do not beat thee out of thy Kingdom with a Dagger of Lath, and drive all thy Subjects afore thee like a flock of Wild-geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horſon round man! what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a Coward? anſwer me to that, and Poines there?

Prin. Ye fat Paunch, and ye call me Coward, I'll ſtab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? I'll ſee thee damn'd e're I call thee Coward; but I would give a thouſand Pound I could run as faſt as thou canſt. You are ſtreight enough in the ſhoulders, you care not who ſees your back: Call you that backing of your Friends? a Plague upon ſuch backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunk to day.

Prin. O Villain, thy Lips are ſcarce wip'd, ſince thou drunk'ſt laſt.

Falſt. All's one for that. [He drinks.
A plague of all Cowards, ſtill, ſay I.

Prin. What's the matter?

Falſt. What's the matter? here be four of us, have ta'ne a thouſand pound this Morning.

Prin. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Falſt. Where is it? taken from us, it is; a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prin. What, a hundred, man?

Falſt. I am a Rogue, if I were not at half Sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have eſcaped by miracle. I am eight times thruſt through the Doublet, four through the Hoſe, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hack'd like a Hand-ſaw, ecce ſignum. I never dealt better ſince I was a man: all would not do. A Plague of all Cowards—let them ſpeak; if they ſpeak more or leſs than truth, they are Villains and the Sons of darkneſs.

Prin. Speak Sirs, how was it?

Gad. We four ſet upon ſome dozen.

Falſt. Sixteen, at leaſt, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Falſt. You Rogue, they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Jew elſe, an Ebrew Jew.

Gad. As we were ſharing, ſome ſix or ſeven freſh men ſet upon us.

Falſt. And unbound the reſt, and then came in the other.

Prin. What, fought ye with them all?

Falſt. All? I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a Bunch of Radiſh; if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legg'd Creature.

Poin. Pray Heaven, you have not murthered ſome of them.

Falſt. Nay, that's paſt praying for. I have pepper'd two of them; Two I am ſure I have payed, two Rogues in Buckram Suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye, ſpit in my face, call me Horſe; thou knoweſt my old word; here I lay, and thus I bore my point; four Rogues in Buckram let drive at me.

Prince. What, four? thou ſaid'ſt but two, even now.

Falſt. Four, Hal, I told thee four.

Poin. Ay, ay, he ſaid four.

Falſt. Theſe four came all a-front, and mainly thruſt at me; I made no more ado, but took all their ſeven points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seven? why there were but four, even now.

Falſt. In Buckram.

Poin. Ay, four, in Buckram Suits.

Falſt. Seven, by theſe Hilts, or I am a Villain elſe.

Prin. Prithee let him alone, we ſhall have more anon.

Falſt. Doeſt thou hear me, Hal?

Prin. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Falſt. Do ſo, for it is worth the liſtning too: theſe nine in Buckram, that I told thee of.

Prin. So, two more already.

Falſt. Their Points being broken.

Poin. Down fell his Hoſe.

Falſt. Began to give me ground; but I followed me cloſe, came in foot and hand; and with a thought, ſeven of the eleven I pay'd.

Prin. O monſtrous! eleven Buckram men grown out of two?

Falſt. But as the Devil would have it, three miſ-begotten Knaves, in Kendal Green, came at my Back, and let drive at me; (for it was ſo dark, Hal, that thou could'ſt not ſee thy Hand.)

Prin. Theſe Lyes are like the Father that begets them, groſs as a Mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou Clay-brain'd Guts, thou Knotty-pated Fool, thou Horſon obſcene greaſie Tallow Catch. Ketch

Falſt. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prin. Why, how could'ſt thou know theſe men in Kendal Green, when it was ſo dark, thou could'ſt not ſee thy hand? Come, tell us your Reaſon: what ſay'ſt thou to this?

Poin. Come, your Reaſon, Jack, your Reaſon.

Falſt. What, upon compulſion? No; were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulſion. Give you a Reaſon on compulſion? If Reaſons were as plenty as Black-berries, I would give no man a Reaſon upon compulſion, I.

Prin. I'll be no longer guilty of this ſin. This ſanguine Coward, this Bed-preſſer, this Horſe-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Fleſh.

Falſt. Away, you Starveling, you Eel-skin, you dried Neats tongue, Bulls-pizel, you ſtock-fiſh: O for breath to utter. What is like thee? You Tailors yard, you ſheath, you Bow-caſe, you vile ſtanding tuck.

Prin. Well, breathe a-while, and then to't again; and when thou haſt tir'd thy ſelf in baſe Compariſons, hear me ſpeak but thus.

Poin. Mark, Jack.

Prin. We two ſaw you four ſet on four, and bound them, and were Maſters of their Wealth: mark now, how a plain Tale ſhall put you down. Then did we two ſet on you four, and with a word, out-fac'd you from your Prize, and have it; yea, and can ſhew it you in the Houſe. And, Falſtaff, you carried your Guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and ſtill ran and roar'd, as ever I heard Bull-Calf. What a Slave art thou, to hack thy Sword as thou haſt done, and then ſay it was in fight! What trick? what device? what ſtarting hole canſt thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent ſhame?

Poin. Come, let's hear Jack: What trick haſt thou now?

Falſt. I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why hear ye my Maſters; was it for me to kill the Heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true Prince? Why, thou knoweſt I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware inſtinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Inſtinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Inſtinct: I ſhall think the better of my ſelf, and thee, during my life; I, for a valiant Lion, and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you have the Money. Hoſteſs, clap to the doors; watch to Night, pray to Morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boys, Hearts of Gold, all the good titles of Fellowſhip come to you! What, ſhall we be merry? ſhall we have a Play extempore?

Prin. Content; and the argument ſhall be, thy running away.

Falſt. Ah, no more of that, Hal, if thou loveſt me.

Scene X. Enter Hoſteſs. O Jesu!

Hoſt. My Lord the Prince?

Prin. How now, my Lady the Hoſteſs, what ſay'ſt thou to me?

Hoſt. Marry, my Lord, there is a Noble-man of the Court at door would ſpeak with you; he ſays he comes from your Father.

Prin. Give him as much as will make him a Royal man, and ſend him back again to my Mother.

Falſt. What manner of man is he?

Hoſteſs. An old man.

Falſt. What doth Gravity out of his Bed at Midnight? Shall I give him his anſwer?

Prin. Prythee do, Jack.

Falſt. Faith and I'll ſend him packing. [Exit.

Prince. Now, Sirs: (by'r Lady) you fought fair; ſo did you Peto, ſo did you Bardolph: you are Lions too, you ran away upon inſtinct: you will not touch the true Prince; no, fie.

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I ſaw others run.

Prin. Tell me now in earneſt; how came Falſtaff's Sword ſo hackt?

Peto. Why, he hackt it with his Dagger, and ſaid, he would ſwear truth out of all England; but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and perſwaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and tickle our Noſes with Spear-graſs, to make them bleed, and then beſlubber our Garments with it, and ſwear it was the Bloud of true men. I did that I did not theſe ſeven years before, I bluſht to hear his monſtrous devices.

Prin. O Villain, thou ſtoleſt a Cup of Sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever ſince thou haſt bluſht extempore; thou hadſt Fire and Sword on thy ſide, and yet thou ranneſt away; what inſtinct hadſt thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, do you ſee theſe Meteors? do you behold theſe Exhalations?

Prin. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

Prin. Hot Livers, and cold Purſes.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightly taken.

Prin. No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falſtaff. Scene XI.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my ſweet Creature of Bombaſt, how long is't ago, Jack, ſince thou ſaw'ſt thine own Knee?

Falſt. My own Knee? When I was about thy years, (Hal,) I was not an Eagles Talon in the Waſte; I could have crept into any Aldermans Thumb-Ring: a plague of ſighing and grief, it blowes a man up like a Bladder. There's villanous Newes abroad: here was Sir John Braby from your Father; you muſt go to the Court in the Morning. The ſame mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amamon the Baſtinado, and made Lucifer Cuckold, and ſwore the Devil his true Liege-man upon the Croſs of a Welſh-hook; what a Plague call you him?

Poin. O, Glendower.

Falſt. Owen, Owen; the ſame, and his Son in Law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and the ſprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs a Horſe-back up a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. He that rides at high ſpeed, and with a Piſtol kills a Sparrow flying.

Falſt. You have hit it.

Prin. So did he never the Sparrow.

Falſt. Well, that Raſcal hath good metal in him, he will not run.

Prin. Why, what a Raſcal art thou then, to praiſe him ſo for running?

Falſt. A Horſe-back, (ye Cuckow), but a foot he will not budge a foot.

Prin. Yes, Jack, upon inſtinct.

Falſt. I grant ye, upon inſtinct: Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thouſand blew Caps more, Worceſter is ſtoln away by Night: thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the News: you may buy Land now as cheap as ſtinking Mackerel.

Prin. Then 'tis like, if there come a hot Sun, and this civill buffetting hold, we ſhall buy Maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Falſt. By the Maſs, Lad, thou ſay'ſt true; it is like we ſhall have good trading that way. But tell me Hal, art not thou horribly afear'd? thou being Heir apparent, could the World pick thee out three ſuch Enemies again as that Fiend Douglas, that Spirit Percy, and that Devil Glendower? Art thou not horrible afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it?

Prin. Not a whit, (i'faith;) I lack ſome of thy inſtinct.

Falſt. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to morrow, when thou comeſt to thy Father: if thou do love me, practiſe an anſwer.

Prin. Do thou ſtand for my Father, and examine me upon the particulars of my Life.

Falſt. Shall I? content: This Chair ſhall be my State, this Dagger my Scepter, and this Cuſhion my Crown.

Prin. Thy State is taken for a Joyn'd-Stool, thy Golden Scepter for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious rich Crown for a pitiful bald Crown.

Falſt. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee, now ſhalt thou be moved. Give me a Cup of Sack to make mine Eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I muſt ſpeak in paſſion, and I will do it in Kings Cambyſes vein.

Prin. Well, here is my Leg.

Falſt. And here is my ſpeech. ſtand aſide Nobility.

Hoſteſs. This is excellent ſport, i'faith.

Fal. Weep not, ſweet Queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Hoſteſs. O the Father! how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For Gods ſake, Lords, convey my trieſtful Queen, for Tears do ſtop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Hoſteſs. O rare, he doth it as like one of theſe harlotry Players, as ever I ſee.

Fal. Peace, good Pint-pot, peace, good Tickle-brain. Harry, I do not only marvel, where thou ſpendeſt thy time; but alſo, how thou are accompanied: For though the Camomil, the more it is trodden, the faſter it grows; yet Youth, the more it is waſted, the ſooner it wears. Thou art my Son; I have partly thy Mother's Word, partly my Opinion; but chiefly, a Villanous trick of thine Eye, and a fooliſh hanging of thy nether Lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Son to me, here lyeth the point; why, being ſon to me, art thou ſo Pointed at? Shall the bleſſed Sun of Heaven prove a Micher, and eat Black-berries? a queſtion not to be ask'd. Shall the Son of England prove a Thief, and take Purſes? a queſtion to be ask'd. There is a thing, Harry, which thou haſt often heard of, and it is known to many in our Land, by the name of Pitch: this Pitch, (as ancient Writers do report), doth defile; ſo doth the company thou keepeſt; for, Harry, now I do not ſpeak to thee in Drink, but in Tears; not in Pleaſure, but in Paſſion; not in Words only, but in Woes alſo; and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, an't it like your Majeſty?

Falſt. A goodly portly man i'faith, and corpulent; of a chearful Look, a pleaſing Eye, and a moſt noble Carriage; and as I think, his age ſome fifty, or (by'rlady) inclining to threeſcore; and now I remember me, his Name is Falſtaff: if that man ſhould be lewdly given, he deceives me; for, Harry, I ſee Vertue in his Looks. If then the Tree may be known by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I ſpeak it, there is Vertue in that Falſtaff; him keep with, the reſt baniſh. And tell me now, thou naughty Varlet, tell me, where haſt thou been this Month?

Prin. Do'ſt thou ſpeak like a King? do thou ſtand for me, and I'll play my Father.

Fal. Depoſe me? if thou do'ſt it half ſo gravely, ſo majeſtically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a Rabbet-ſucker, or a Poulter's Hare.

Prin. Well, here I am ſet.

Falſt. And here I ſtand; judge, my Maſters.

Prin. Now, Harry, whence come you?

Falſt.

A. An old Play intitled. A lamentable Tragedie mixed full of pleaſant mirth containing the of Cambises King of Percia. By Thomas Preston.

Falſt. My Noble Lord, from Eaſt-cheap.

Prin. The Complaints I hear of thee, are grievous.

Falſt. ~~Faith~~, my Lord, they are falſe: Nay, I'le tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Swear'ſt thou, ungracious Boy? henceforth ne're look on me; thou art violently carried away from Grace; there's a Devil haunts thee, in the likeneſs of a fat old man; a Tun of Man is thy Companion. Why do'ſt thou converſe with that Trunk of Humors, that Boulting-Hutch of Beaſtlineſs, that ſwoln Parcel of Dropſies, that huge Bombard of Sack, that ſtuft Cloak-bag of Guts, that roſted Manning-Tree Ox with the Pudding in his Belly, that Reverend Vice, that grey Iniquity, that Father Ruffian, that Vanity in years? wherein is he good, but to taſte Sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a Capon and eat it? wherein Cunning, but in Craft? wherein Crafty, but in Villany? wherein Villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falſt. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom means your Grace?

Prin. That villanous abominable miſ-leader of Youth, Falſtaff, that old white-bearded Sathan.

Falſt. My Lord, the man I know.

Prin. I know thou do'ſt.

Falſt. But to ſay, I know more harm in him than in my ſelf, were to ſay more than I know. That he is old, (the more's the pity), his white hairs do witneſs it; But that he is, (ſaving your Reverence) a Whore-maſter, that I utterly deny. If Sack and Sugar be a fault, Heaven help the wicked! if to be old and merry, be a ſin, then many a Hoſt that I know is damn'd: if to be fat, to be hated, then Pharaohs lean kine are to be loved. No, my good Lord, baniſh Peto, baniſh Bardolph, baniſh Poins; but for ſweet Jack Falſtaff, kind Jack Falſtaff, true Jack Falſtaff, valiant Jack Falſtaff, and therefore more valiant, being as he is old Jack Falſtaff; baniſh not him thy Harry's company; ~~baniſh not him thy Harry's company;~~ baniſh plump Jack, and baniſh all the World.

Prin. I do, I will. (Knocking hard goes Out.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sheriff with a moſt monſtrous Watch, is at the door

Falſt. Out you Rogue! play out the Play: I have much to ſay in the behalf of that Falſtaff.

Enter the Hoſteſs.

Hoſt. O, my Lord, my Lord!

Falſt. Heigh, heigh, the Devil rides upon a Fiddle-ſtick: what's the matter?

Hoſt. The Sheriff and all the Watch are at the door: they are come to ſearch the Houſe; ſhall I let them in?

Falſt. Do'ſt thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art eſſentially mad, without ſeeming ſo.

Prin. And thou a natural Coward, without inſtinct.

Falſt. I deny your Major; if you will deny the Sheriff, ſo; if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I ſhall as ſoon be ſtrangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Go hide thee behind the Arras, the reſt walk ~~up~~ above. Now my Maſters, for a true Face and good Conſcience.

Falſt Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'le hide me. [Exit.

Scene XII.

Enter Sheriff and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Maſter Sheriff, what is your will with me?

She. Firſt, pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certain men unto this Houſe.

Prin. What men?

She. One of them is well known, my gracious Lord, a groſs fat man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prin. The man, I do aſſure you is not here,
For I my ſelf at this time have imploy'd him;
And Sheriff, I ~~will~~ engage my word to thee,
That I will, by to morrow Dinner time,
Send him to anſwer thee, or any man,
For any thing he ſhall be charg'd withall:
And ſo let me intreat you, leave the Houſe.

She. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen
Have in this Robbery loſt three hundred Marks.

Prin. It may be ſo; if he have robb'd theſe men,
He ſhall be anſwerable; and ſo farewell.

She. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prin. I think it is Good Morrow, is it not?

She. Indeed, my Lord, I think it be two a clock. [Exit.

Prin. This oily Raſcal is known as well as Pauls; go call him forth.

Peto. Falſtaff faſt aſleep behind the Arras, and ſnorting like a Horſe.

Prin. Hark, how hard he fetches his breath: ſearch his Pockets.

He ſearcheth his Pockets, and findeth certain Papers.

Prin. What haſt thou found?

Peto. Nothing but Papers, my Lord.

Prin. Let's ſee, what be they? read them.

Peto. Item, a Capon. ii s ii d
Item, Sawce.. iiii d
Item, Sack, two Gallons. v s viii d
Item, Anchoves and Sack after Supper. ii s vi d
Item, Bread. ob

Prince. O monſtrous! but one half penny-worth of Bread to this intolerable deal of Sack? What there is elſe, keep cloſe, we'll read it at more advantage; there let him ſleep till day. I'le to the Court in the Morning: We muſt all to the Wars, and thy place ſhall be honorable. I'le procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a March of Twelve-ſcore. The Money ſhall be pay'd back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning; and ſo good morrow, Peto.

Peto. Good morrow, good my Lord. [Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Arch Deacon of Bangor's House in Wales.

Enter Hotſpur, Worceſter, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. Theſe Promiſes are fair, the Parties ſure,
And our Induction full of proſperous hope.

Hotſp. Lord Mortimer, and Couſin Glendower,
Will you ſit down?
And Uncle Worceſter: ~~;~~ a plague upon it! ——
I have forgot the Map.

Glend. No, here it is;
Sit Couſin Percy, ſit good Couſin Hotſpur:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaſter doth ſpeak of you,
His Cheeks look pale, and with a riſing ſigh,
He wiſheth you in Heaven.

Hotſp. And you in Hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower ſpoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: At my Nativity,
The front of Heaven was full of fiery ſhapes,
Of burning Creſſets: ~~and~~ at my Birth,
The frame and foundation of the Earth
Shak'd like a Coward.

Hotſp. Why ſo it would have done at the ſame Seaſon, if your Mothers Cat had ~~but~~ kitten'd, though your ſelf had never been born.

Glend. I say the Earth did shake when I was born.
Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my mind;
If you suppose, as fearing you, it shook.
Glen. The Heavens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.
Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shook
To see the Heavens on fire,
And not in fear of your Nativity.
Diseased Nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange Eruptions; and the teeming Earth
Is with a kind of Cholick pinch'd and vext,
By the imprisoning of unruly wind
Within her Womb; which for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old Beldam Earth, and tumbles down
Steeples, and moss-grown Towers. At your Birth,
Our Grandam Earth, having this Distemperature,
In passion shook.
Glen. Cousin, of many men
I do not bear these Crossings: Give me leave
To tell you once again, that at my Birth
The front of Heaven was full of fiery shapes,
The Goats ran from the Mountains, and the Heards
Were strangly clamorous to the frighted fields:
These Signs have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the Courses of my life do shew,
I am not in the Roll of common men.
Where is the Living, clipt in with the Sea,
That chides the Banks of England, Scotland and Wales,
Which calls me Pupil, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but Woman's Son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of Art,
And hold me pace in deep Experiments.
Hotsp. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh.
I'll to dinner.
Mort. Peace, Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.
Glend. I can call Spirits from the vastie Deep.
Hotsp. Why, so can I, or so can any man:
But will they come, when you do call for them?
Glend. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Devil.
Hotsp. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Devil,
By telling Truth. Tell Truth, and shame the Devil.
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
Oh, while you live, tell Truth, and shame the Devil.
Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable Chat.
Glen. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my power: thrice from the Banks of Wye,
And Sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him,
Bootless home, and Weather-beaten back.
Hot. Home, without Boots,
And in foul Weather too!
How scapes he Agues in the Devil's name?
Glend. Come, here's the Map:
Shall we divide our Right,
According to our threefold order ta'ne?
Mor. The Arch-Deacon hath divided it already.
Into three Limits, very equally:
England, from Trent, and Severn hitherto,
By South and East, is to my part assign'd:
All West ward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile Land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower: and dear Coz, to you
The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent.
And our Indentures Tripartite are drawn:
Which being sealed enterchangeably,
(A business that this Night may execute)
To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I,
And my good Lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meet your Father, and the Scottish Power,
As is appointed us at Shrewsbury.
My Father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days:
Within that space, you may have drawn together
Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.

Glend. A short time shall send me to you, Lords:
And in my Conduct shall your Ladies come,
From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;
For there will be a world of Water shed,
Upon the parting of your Wives and you.
Hotsp. Methinks my moiety, North from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours:
See, how this River comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my Land,
A huge half Moon, a monstrous Cantle out.
I'll have the Current in this place damm'd up,
And here the smug, and Silver Trent shall run,
In a new Channel, fair and evenly:
It shall not winde with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.
Glend. Not winde? it shall, it must, you see it doth.
Mort. Yea, but mark, how he bends his course,
And runs me up, with like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the opposing Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.
Wore. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side win this Cape of Land,
And then he runs straight and even.
Hotsp. I'll have it so, a little Charge will do it.
Glend. I'le not have it alter'd.
Hotsp. Will not you?
Glend. No, nor you shall not.
Hotsp. Who shall say me nay?
Glend. Why, that will I.
Hotsp. Let me not understand you then, speak it in Welsh.
Glend. I can speak English, Lord, as well as you,
For I was train'd up in the English Court:
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harp,
Many an English Ditty, lovely well,
And gave the Tongue a helpful Ornament;
A Vertue that was never seen in you.
Hotsp. Marry, and I am glad of it with all my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Than one of these same meeter-Ballad-mongers;
I had rather hear a Brazen Candlestick turn'd,
Or a dry Wheel grate on the Axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth on Edge,
Nothing so much as mincing Poetry;
'Tis like the forc'd gate of a shuffling Nag.
Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.
Hotsp. I do not care, I'll give thrice so much Land
To any well-deserving Friend; As that will go
But in the way of Bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a Hair.
Are the Indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
Glend. The Moon shines fair,
You may away by Night:
I'll haste the Writer; and withall,
Break with your Wives, of your departure hence:
I am afraid my Daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. Scene II. [Exit.
Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you cross my Father!
Hotsp. I cannot chuse: sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarp and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies;
And of a Dragon, and a fin-less Fish,
A clip-wing'd Griffin, and a moulten Raven,
A couching Lyon, and a ramping Cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble Stuff,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night, at least nine hours,
In reckning up the several Devils Names,
That were his Lackeys:
I cry'd hum, and well, go to,
But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tired Horse, a railing Wife,
Worse than a smoaky House. I had rather live
With Cheese and Garlick in a Windmill far,
Than feed on Cates, and have him talk to me,

In

† This alludes to an old Prophecy which is said to have induced Owen Glendower to take arms against K. Henry. See Halls Chron. fol. 20.

In any Summer-house in Christendom.
Mort. In faith, he was an honest Gentleman;
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealments;
Valiant as a Lion, and wondrous affable,
And as bountiful, as Mines of India:
Shall I tell you, Cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself, even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humour; 'faith, he does.
I warrant you, that a man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him, as you have done,
Without the taste of danger, and reproof.
But do not use it oft, let me intreat you.
Worc. In faith, my Lord, you are too wilful blame,
And since your coming hither, have done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience:
You must needs learn, Lord, to amend this fault;
Though sometimes it shew greatness, Courage, Blood,
(And that's the dearest grace it renders you;)
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh Rage,
Defect of Manners, want of Government,
Pride, Haughtiness, Opinion, and Disdain:
The least of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Loseth mens Hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the Beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of Commendation.
Hot. Well, I am school'd:
Good-manners be your speed!
Here come our Wives, and let us take our leave.

Scene III.

Enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spight that angers me,
My Wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.
Glend. My Daughter weeps, she'll not part with you,
She'll be a Souldier too, she'll to the Wars.
Mort. Good-Father, tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy
Shall follow in your Conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to her Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate here:
A peevish self-will'd Harlotry,
One that Perswasion can do no good upon.

The Lady speaks in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Looks; that pretty Welsh,
Which thou pour'st down from these swelling Heavens,
I am too perfect in: And but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

The Lady again in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeble disputation:
But I will never be a Truant, Love,
Till I have learn'd thy Language: For thy Tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair Queen in a Summers Bower,
With ravishing Division to her Lute.
Glend. Nay, if thou melt, then will she run mad.

The Lady speaks again in Welsh.

Mort. O, I am ignorance it self in this.
Glend. She bids you,
On the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her Lap,
And she will sing the Song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eye-Lids Crown the God of Sleep,
Charming your Blood with pleasing heaviness;
Making such difference betwixt Wake and Sleep,
As is the difference betwixt Day and Night,
The hour before the Heavenly Harnes'd Team
Begins his golden Progress in the East.
Mort. Withal my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:
By what time will our Book, I think, be drawn.
Glend. Do so:
And those Musicians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Air a thousand Leagues from hence;
And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.
Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my Head in thy Lap.
Lady. Go, ye giddy-Goose.

The Musick plays.

Hot. Now I perceive the Devil understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvel he is so humorous:
By'rlady he's a good Musician.
Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musical,
For you are all together governed by humors:
Lie still ye Thief, and hear the Lady sing in Welsh.
Hot. I had rather hear (Lady) my Brach howle in Irish.
Lady. Would'st have thy Head broken?
Hot. No.
Lady. Then be still.
Hot. Neither, 'tis a Womans Fault.
Lady. Now God help thee!
Hot. To the Welsh Ladies Bed.
Lady. What's that?
Hot. Peace, she sings.

Here the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hot. Come, I'll have your Song too.
Lady. Not mine, in good sooth.
Hot. Not yours, in good sooth!
You swear like a Comfit-makers Wife;
Not you, in good sooth; and, as true as I live;
And, as God shall mend me; and as sure as day:
And giv'st such Sarcenet surety for thy Oaths,
As if thou never walk'st further than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a Lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling Oath, and leave in sooth,
And such protest of Pepper-Ginger-bread,
To Velvet-Guards, and Sunday-Citizens.
Come, sing.
Lady. I will not sing. Robin
Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn Tailor, or be Red-breast Teacher: And the Indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours: And so come in, when ye will. [Exit.
Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go,
By this our Book is drawn: we'll but seal,
And then to Horse immediately.
Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda. IV.

Windsor.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give us leave;
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must have some private Conference;
But be near at hand,
For we shall presently have need of you. [Exeunt Lords.
I know not whether Heaven will have it so,
For some displeasing Service I have done;
That, in his secret Doom, out of my Blood,
He'll breed Revengment, and a Scourge for me:
But thou dost in thy passages of Life,
Make me believe, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot Vengeance, and the Rod of Heaven,

To punish my Mis-readings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such base, such lew'd, such mean Attempts,
Such barren Pleasures, rude Society,
As thou art match'd withall, and grafted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy Princely heart?
Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could
Quit all Offences with as clear excuse,
As well, as I am doubtless I can purge
My self of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many Tales devis'd,
Which oft the Ear of Greatness needs must hear,
By smiling Pick-thanks, and base News-mongers;
I may for some things true, (wherein my youth
Hath faulty wandred, and irregular)
Find pardon on my true submission.
King. Heaven pardon thee!
Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy Affections, which do hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy Ancestors,
Thy place in Council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger Brother is supply'd;
And art almost an alien to the Hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The Hope and Expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and the Soul of every man
Prophetically do fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my Presence been,
So common hackney'd in the ways of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did help me to the Crown,
Had still kept loyal to Possession,
And left me in reputeless Banishment,
A Fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at;
That Men would tell their Children, This is he:
Others would say, where? which is Bullingbroke?
And then I stole all Courtesie from Heaven,
And dress't my self in such Humility,
That I did pluck Allegiance from Mens Hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their Mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned King.
Thus I did keep my Person fresh and new,
My Presence like a Robe Pontifical,
Ne're seen, but wondred at: and so my state,
Seldom but sumptuous, shewed like a Feast,
And won, by rareness, such Solemnity.
The skipping King, he ambled up and down,
With shallow Jesters, and rash Bavin Wits,
Soon kindled, and soon burnt; carded his State,
Mingled his Royalty with carping Fools,
Had his great Name prophaned with their scorns,
And gave his Countenance, against his Name,
To laugh at gybing Boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative:
Grew a Companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff'd himself to Popularity:
That being daily swallowed by mens Eyes,
They surfeited with Honey, and began to loathe
The taste of sweetness, whereof a little
More than a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the Cuckow is in June,
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such Eyes,
As sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze;
Such as is bent on Sun-like Majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring Eyes:
But rather drowz'd, and hung their Eye-lids down,
Slept in his Face, and rendred such aspect
As cloudy men use to their Adversaries,
Being with his Presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry, standest thou;
For thou hast lost thy Princely privilege,
With vile participation. Not an Eye,
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
Which now doth, that I would not have it do,
Make blind it self with foolish tenderness.
Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious Lord,
Be more my self.
King. For all the World,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Ravenspurg;
And even as I was then, is Percy now:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soul to boot,
He hath more worthy Interest to the state,
Than thou, the Shadow of Succession;
For of no Right, nor Colour like to Right,
He doth fill Fields with Harness in the Realm,
Turns Head against the Lion's armed Jaws;
And being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient Lords, and reverend Bishops on,
To bloody Battels, and to bruising Arms.
What never-dying Honour hath he got,
Against renowned Dowglas, whose high Deeds,
Whose hot Incursions, and great Name in Arms,
Holds from all Soldiers chief Majority,
And Military Title Capital,
Through all the Kingdoms that acknowledge Christ?
Thrice hath this Hotspur Mars, in swathing Cloaths,
This infant-Warriour, in his Enterprises,
Discomfited great Dowglas, ta'ne him once,
Enlarged him, and made a Friend of him,
To fill the Mouth of deep Defiance up,
And shake the Peace and Safety of our Throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-Bishops Grace of York, Dowglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate against us, and are up.
But wherefore do I tell this News to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my near'st and dearest Enemy?
Thou art like enough, through Vassal Fear,
Base Inclination, and the start of Spleen,
To fight against me under Percy's Pay,
To dog his Heels, and courtsie at his Frowns,
To shew how much thou art degenerate.
Prince. Do not think so, you shall not find it so:
And Heaven forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your Majesties good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's Head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Son;
When I will wear a Garment all of Blood,
And stain my Favours in a bloody Mask;
Which wash't away, shall scowre my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, when e're it lights,
That this same Child of Honour and Renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised Knight,
And your unthought of Harry, chance to meet:
For every Honour sitting on his Helm,
Would they were multitudes, and on my Head
My Shames redoubled! For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northern Youth exchange
His Glorious Deeds for my Indignities.
Percy is but my Factor, good, my Lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf:
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every Glory up,
Yea, even the slightest Worship of his Time,
Or I will tear the Reckoning from his heart.
This, in the Name of Heaven, I promise here:
The which, if I perform, and do survive,
I do beseech your Majesty, may salve
The long-grown Wounds of my intemperature:

If

If not, the end of Life cancels all Bands,
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
E're break the smalleſt parcel of this Vow.
King. A hundred thouſand Rebels die in this:
Thou ſhalt have Charge, and Soveraign truſt herein.
Enter Blunt.
How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of ſpeed.
Blunt. So hath the buſineſs that I come to ſpeak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath ſent word,
That Dowglas and the Engliſh Rebels met
The eleventh of this Month, at Shrewsbury:
A mighty and a fearful Head they are,
(If promiſes be kept on every hand)
As ever offer'd foul play in a State.
King. The Earl of Weſtmerland ſet forth to day;
With him my Son, Lord John of Lancaſter;
For this Advertiſement is five days old.
On Wedneſday next, Harry, thou ſhalt ſet forward:
On Thurſday, we our ſelves will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth: And Harry, you ſhall march
Through Gloceſter-ſhire: By which account,
Our Buſineſs valued, ſome twelve days hence,
Our general Forces at Bridgenorth ſhall meet.
Our hands are full of buſineſs: Let's away,
Advantage feeds them fat, while men delay. [Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia. V.
The Tavern in East-cheap.

Enter Falſtaff, and Bardolph.

Falſt. Bardolph, am I not faln away vilely, ſince this laſt action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why my skin hangs about me like an old Ladies looſe Gown: I am withered like an old Apple John. Well, I'll repent, and that ſuddenly, while I am in ſome liking: I ſhall be out of heart ſhortly, and then I ſhall have no ſtrength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the in-ſide of a Church is made of, I am a Pepper Corn, a Brewers Horſe; The in-ſide of a Church! Company, villanous Company hath been the ſpoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are ſo fretful, you cannot live long.

Falſt. Why, there is it; Come, ſing me a bawdy Song, make me merry: I was as virtuouſly given, as a Gentleman need to be; virtuous enough; ſwore little; Dic'd not above ſeven times a week; went to a Bawdy-houſe not above once in a quarter of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; liv'd well, and in good compaſs; And now I live out of all order, out of all compaſs.

Bard. Why, you are ſo fat, Sir John, that you muſt needs be out of all compaſs; out of all reaſonable compaſs, Sir John.

Falſt. Do thou amend thy Face, and I'll amend my Life. Thou art our Admiral, thou beareſt the Lanthorn in the Poop, but 'tis in the Noſe of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harm.

Falſt. No, I'll be ſworn; I make as good uſe of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memento Mori. I never ſee thy Face, but I think upon Hell fire, and Dives that liv'd in Purple; for there he is in his Robes burning. If thou wert any way given to Virtue, I would ſwear by thy Face; my Oath ſhould be, By this Fire; But thou art altogether given over; and wert indeed, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sun of utter Darkneſs. When thou rann'ſt up Gads-hill in the night to catch my Horſe, if I did not think thou hadſt been an Ignis fatuus, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no purchaſe in Money. O, thou art a perpetual Triumph, an everlaſting Bone-fire-light; thou haſt ſaved me a thouſand Marks in Links and Torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt Tavern and Tavern; But the Sack that thou haſt drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap, at the deareſt Chandlers in Europe. I have maintain'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirty years, Heaven reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your belly.

Falſt. So ſhould I be ſure to be heart-burn'd. God-a-mercy.

Enter Hoſteſs.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, have you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket?

Hoſteſs. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? do you think I keep Thieves in my Houſe? I have ſearch'd, I have enquir'd, ſo has my Husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Servant by Servant: The tight of a Hair was never loſt in my Houſe before.

Falſt. Ye lie, Hoſteſs; Bardolph was ſhav'd, and loſt many a hair; and I'll be ſworn my Pocket was pick'd; go to, you are a Woman, go.

Hoſteſs. Who I? I defie thee; I was never call'd ſo in mine own Houſe before.

Falſt. Go to, I know you well enough.

Hoſteſs. No, Sir John: You do not know me, Sir John; I know you, Sir John; You owe me Money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your back.

Falſt. Dowlas, filthy Dowlas: I have given them away to Bakers Wives, and they have made Boulters of them.

Hoſteſs. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight ſhillings an Ell: You owe Money here beſides, Sir John, for your Diet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, four and twenty pounds.

Falſt. He had his part of it, let him pay.

Hoſteſs. He? alas! he is poor, he hath nothing.

Falſt. How? poor? look upon his face: What call you rich? Let him coin his Noſe, let him coin his Cheeks, I'll not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Yonker of me? Shall I not take mine eaſe in mine Inn, but I ſhall have my Pocket pick'd? I have loſt a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers, worth forty Mark.

Hoſteſs. I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that Ring was Copper.

Falſt. How? the Prince is a Jack, a Sneak-Cup; and if he were here, I would cudgel him like a Dog, if he would ſay ſo.

Scene VI

Enter the Prince marching, and Falſtaff meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Falſt. How now, Lad? is the wind in that Door? Muſt we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate faſhion.

Hoſt. My Lord, I pray you, hear me.

Prince. What ſay'ſt thou, Miſtreſs Quickly? How does thy Husband? I love him well, he is an honeſt man.

Hoſteſs. Good, my Lord, hear me.

Falſt. Prythee let her alone, and liſt to me.

Prince. What ſay'ſt thou, Jack?

Falſt. The other night I fell aſleep here behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt: This Houſe is turn'd Bawdy-houſe, they pick Pockets.

Prince. What didſt thou loſe, Jack?

Falſt. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? Three or four Bonds of forty pound a piece, and a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers.

Prince. A trifle, ſome eight-penny matter.

Hoſt. So I told him, my Lord; and I ſaid, I heard your Grace ſay ſo: And (my Lord) he ſpeaks moſt vilely of you, like a foul-mouth'd man as he is, and ſaid he would cudgel you.

Prince. What, he did not?

Hoſt. There's neither Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me elſe.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a ſtew'd Prune; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn Fox; and for Woman-hood, Maid-Marian may be the Deputies Wife of the Ward to thee. Go you nothing, go,

Hoſt.

Hoſt. Say, what thing? what thing?
Falſt. What thing? why a thing to thank Heaven on.
Hoſt. I am nothing to thank Heaven on, I would thou ſhouldſt know it: I am an honeſt Man's Wife; and ſetting thy Knighthood aſide, thou art a Knave to call me ſo.
Falſt. Setting thy Womanhood aſide, thou art a Beaſt to ſay otherwiſe.
Hoſt. Say, what Beaſt, thou Knave thou?
Fal. What Beaſt? Why an Otter.
Prin. An Otter, Sir John, why an Otter?
Fal. Why? ſhe's neither fiſh nor fleſh; a man knows not where to have her.
Hoſt. Thou art an unjuſt man in ſaying ſo; thou, or any man knows where to have me; thou Knave thou.
Prin. Thou ſay'ſt true, Hoſteſs, and he ſlanders thee moſt groſly.
Hoſt. So he doth you, my Lord, and ſaid this other day, you ow'd him a thouſand pound.
Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thouſand pound?
Fal. A thouſand pound, Hal? a million; thy love is worth a million: thou ow'ſt me thy love.
Hoſt. Nay, my Lord, he call'd you Jack, and ſaid he would cudgel you.
Fal. Did I, Bardolph?
Bar. Indeed, Sir John, you ſaid ſo.
Fal. Yea, if he ſaid my Ring was Copper.
Prin. I ſay 'tis Copper. Dar'ſt thou be as good as thy word now?
Fal. Why, Hal? thou know'ſt, as thou art but a man, I dare, but as thou art a Prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the Lyons Whelp.
Prin. And why not as the Lyon?
Fal. The King himſelf is to be fear'd as the Lyon: Do'ſt thou think I'll fear thee, as I fear thy Father? nay if I do, let my Girdle break.
Prin. O, if it ſhould, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, ſirrah, there's no room for Faith, Truth, nor Honeſty, in this boſom of thine; it is all fill'd up with Guts and Midriff. Charge an honeſt Woman with picking thy Pocket? Why thou horſon impudent, imboſt Raſcal, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tavern Reckhings, Memorandums of Bawdy-Houſes, and one poor penny-worth of Sugar-candy to make thee long-winded: if thy Pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries but theſe, I am a Villain; And yet you will ſtand to it, you will not Pocket up Wrongs. Art thou not aſham'd?
Fal. Doſt thou hear, Hal? Thou know'ſt in the ſtate of Innocency, Adam fell; and what ſhould poor Jack Falſtaff do, in the days of Villany? Thou ſeeſt, I have more fleſh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confeſs then you pickt my Pocket?
Prin. It appears ſo by the Story.
Fal. Hoſteſs, I forgive thee:
Go make ready Breakfaſt; love thy Husband,
Look to thy Servants, and cheriſh thy Gueſts:
Thou ſhalt find me tractable to any honeſt Reaſon:
Thou ſeeſt, I am pacified, ſtill.—
Nay, I prythee be gone. [Exit Hoſteſs.
Now, Hal, to the news at Court for the Robbery, Lad?
How is that anſwered?
Prin. O my ſweet Beef,
I muſt ſtill be good Angel to thee.
The Money is paid back again.
Fal. O, I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double Labour.
Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may do any thing.
Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the firſt thing thou do'ſt, and do it with un-waſh'd hands too.
Bard. Do, my Lord.
Prin. I have procured thee, Jack, a Charge of Foot.
Fal. I would it had been of Horſe. Where ſhall I find one that can ſteal well? O, for a fine Thief, of two and twenty, or thereabout; I am horribly unprovided. Well, God be thanked for theſe Rebels, they offend none but the Virtuous. I laud them, I praiſe them.
Prin. Bardolph.
Bar. My Lord.
Prin. Go bear this Letter to Lord John of Lancaſter, to my Brother John. This to my Lord of Weſtmorland.
Go Peto, to Horſe; for thou, and I,
Have thirty Miles to ride yet e're dinner time.
Jack, meet me to Morrow in the Temple-Hall
At two a Clock in the Afternoon,
There ſhalt thou know thy Charge, and there receive
Money, and Order for their Furniture.
The Land is burning, Percy ſtands on high,
And either they, or we, muſt lower lie.
Fal. Rare words: brave world.
Hoſteſs, my Breakfaſt, come:
Oh, I could wiſh this Tavern were my Drum!
[Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

At Shrewsbury.

Enter Harry Hotſpur, Worceſter, and Dowglas.

Hot. Well ſaid, my Noble Scot; if ſpeaking truth
In this fine Age, were not thought Flattery,
Such attribution ſhould the Dowglas have,
As not a Soldier of this Seaſons ſtamp,
Should go ſo general currant through the world.
By Heaven, I cannot flatter: I defie
The Tongues of Scothers. But a braver place
In my Heart's love, hath no man than your Self.
Nay, task me to my word; approve me, Lord.
Dow. Thou art the King of Honour:
No man ſo potent breathes upon the ground,
But I will Beard him.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Hot. Do ſo, and 'tis well.—What Letters haſt thou there?—I can but thank you.
Meſ. Theſe Letters come from your Father.
Hot. Letters from him?
Why comes he not himſelf?
Meſſ. He cannot come, my Lord,
He is grievous ſick.
Hot. Heavens! How? has he the leiſure to be ſick now,
In ſuch a juſtling time? who leads his Power?
Under whoſe Government come they along?
Meſſ. His Letters bears his mind, not I his mind.
Wor. I prythee tell me, doth he keep his Bed?
Meſſ. He did, my Lord, four days e're I ſet forth:
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his Phyſician.
Wor. I would the ſtate of time had firſt been whole,
E're he by Sickneſs had been viſited;
His Health was never better worth than now.
Hotſp. Sick now? droop now? this ſickneſs doth infect
The very Life-blood of our Enterpriſe;
'Tis catching hither, even to our Camp.
He writes me here, that inward Sickneſs,——
And that his Friends by deputation could not ſo ſoon be drawn: nor did he think it meet
To lay ſo dangerous and dear a truſt
On a Soul remov'd, but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold Advertiſement,
That with our ſmall Conjunction we ſhould on,
To ſee how Fortune is diſpos'd to us;
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Becauſe the King is certainly poſſeſt
Of all our Purpoſes. What ſay you to it?
Wor. Your Father's ſickneſs is a maim to us.
Hotſp. A perilous Gaſh, a very Limb lopt off:

And

And yet, in faith, 'tis not, his present want
Seems more than we shall find it,
Were it good, to set the exact Wealth of all our States
All at one Cast? to set so rich a Main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful Hour,
It were not good; for therein should we read
The very bottom, and the Soul of hope,
The very List, the very utmost bound
Of all our Fortunes.
Dowg. Faith, and so we should,
Where now remains a sweet Reversion.
We may boldly spend, upon the hope
Of what is to come in:
A comfort of Retirement lives in this.
Hotsp. A Rendezvous, a Home to flie unto,
If that the Devil and Mischance look big
Upon the Maidenhead of our Affairs.
Wor. But yet I would your Father had been here:
The Quality and Hair of our Attempt
Brooks no Division: It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That Wisdom, Loyalty, and meer Dislike
Of our Proceedings, kept the Earl from hence.
And think, how such an Apprehension
May turn the Tide of fearful Faction,
And breed a kind of Question in our Cause:
For well you know, we of the offering side,
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence
The Eye of Reason may pry in upon us:
This absence of your Father draws a Curtain,
That shews the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.
Hotsp. You strain too far.
I rather of his Absence make this use:
It lends a lustre, and more great Opinion,
A larger Dare to our great Enterprize,
Than if the Earl were here: for men must think,
If we without his help, can make a Head,
To push against the Kingdom; with his help,
We shall o'return it topsie-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.
Dowg. As heart can think;
There is not such a word spoke of in Scotland,
As this Dream of Fear.

Scene II.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hotsp. My Cousin Vernon, welcome by my Soul.
Vern. Pray God my News be worth a welcome, Lord.
The Earl of Westmorland, seven thousand strong,
Is marching hither-wards with Prince John.
Hotsp. No harm; what more?
Vern. And further, I have learn'd,
The King himself in Person hath set forth,
Or hither-wards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty Preparation.
Hotsp. He shall be welcome too;
Where is his Son,
The nimble-footed Mad-cap, Prince of Wales,
And his Comrades, that daft the World aside,
And bid it pass?
Vern. All furnisht, all in Arms,
All plum'd like Estridges, that with the Wind
Baited like Eagles, having lately bath'd,
Glittering in Golden Coats, like Images;
As full of Spirit as the Month of May,
And gorgeous as the Sun at Mid-summer,
Wanton as youthful Goats, wild as young Bulls.
I saw young Harry, with his Beaver on,
His Cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury;
And vaulted with such ease into his Seat,
As if an Angel dropt down from the Clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble Horsemanship.
Hotsp. No more, no more;
Worse than the Sun in March,
This Praise doth nourish Agues; let them come.
They come like Sacrifices in their trim,
And to the fire-ey'd Maid of smoaky War,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:
The mailed Mars shall on his Altar sit
Up to the ears in Blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich Reprizal is so nigh,
And yet not ours. Come, let me take my Horse,
Who is to bear me like a Thunder-bolt,
Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry, shall not Horse to Horse
Meet, and ne're part, till one drop down a Coarse?
Oh, that Glendower were come!
Ver. There is more News:
I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his Power this fourteen days.
Dowg. That's the worst Tidings that I hear of, yet.
Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
Hotsp. What may the Kings whole Battel reach unto?
Ver. To thirty thousand.
Hot. Forty let it be,
My Father and Glendower being both away,
The Power of us may serve so great a day.
Come, let us take a Muster speedily:
Dooms-day is near; die all, die merrily.
Dowg. Talk not of dying, I am out of fear
Of death, or deaths hand, for this one half year.

[Exeunt omnes.

Scena Secunda. III.

The Road to Coventry.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Falst. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a Bottle of Sack; our Souldiers shall march through: we'll to Sutton-Cop-hill to Night.
Bard. Will you give me Money, Captain?
Falst. Lay out, lay out.
Bard. This Bottle makes an Angel.
Falst. And if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the Coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meet me at the Towns end.
Bard. I will Captain; farewell. [Exit.
Falst. If I be not ashamm'd of my Souldiers, I am a sowc'd Gurnet: I have mis-us'd the Kings Press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty Souldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good house-holders, Yeomens Sons; enquire me out contracted Batchelors, such as had been ask'd twice on the Banes: such a Commodity of warm Slaves, as had as lieve hear the Devil, as a Drum; such as fear the report of a Caliver, worse than a struck-Fowl, or a hurt Wild-Duck. I press me none but such Toasts and Butter, with hearts in their Bellies no bigger than Pins heads, and they have bought out their Services: And now my whole Charge consists of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentlemen of Companies, Slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted Cloth, where the Gluttons Dogs licked his Sores; and such as indeed were never Souldiers, but dis-carded unjust Servingmen, younger Sons to younger Brothers: Revolted Tapsters, and Ostlers, Trade-faln, the Cankers of a calm World, and long Peace, ten times more dishonourably, ragged, than an old-fac'd Ancient; and such have I to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their Services; that you would think, that I had a hundred and fifty tatter'd Prodigals, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draff and Husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unloaded all the Gibbets, and prest the dead Bodies. No eye hath seen such scare-Crows: I'll not march though Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and and the Villains march wide betwixt the Legs, as if they had Gyves on; for indeed, I had the moſt of them out of Priſon. There's not a Shirt and a half in all my Company; and the half Shirt is two Napkins tackt together, and thrown over the Shoulders like a Heralds Coat, without ſleeves; and the Shirt, to ſay the truth, ſtoln from my Hoſt of S. Albans; or the Red-Noſe Inn-keeper of Daintry. But that's all one, they'll find Linnen enough on every Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Weſtmorland.

Prince. How now, blown Jack? how now, Quilt?

Falſt. What, Hal? How now, mad Wag, what a Devil do'ſt thou in Warwick-ſhire? My good Lord of Weſtmorland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

Weſt. 'Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my Powers are there already. The King, I can tell yon, looks for us all; we muſt away all to Night.

Falſt. Tut, never fear me, I am as vigilant, as a Cat, to ſteal Cream.

Prince. I think to ſteal Cream indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee Butter; but tell me, Jack, whoſe Fellows are theſe that come after?

Falſt. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never ſee ſuch pitiful Raſcals.

Falſt. Tut, tut, good enough to toſs: food for Powder, food for Powder; they'll fill a Pit, as well as better; tuſh, man, mortal men, mortal men.

Weſtm. Ay, but Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare, too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareneſs, I am ſure they never learn'd that of me.

Prin. No, I'le be ſworn, unleſs you call three fingers on the Ribs, bare. But, ſirrah, make haſte. Percy is already in the Field.

Falſt. What, is the King encamp'd?

Weſt. He is, Sir John, I fear we ſhall ſtay too long.

Falſt. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the beginning of a Feaſt, fits a dull Fighter, and a keen Gueſt. [Exeunt.

Scena Tertia. IV.

At Shrewsbury.

Enter Hotſpur, Worceſter, Dowglas, and Vernon.

Hotſp. We'll fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Dowg. You give him then advantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hotſp. Why ſay you ſo? looks he not for Supply?

Vern. So do we.

Hotſp. His is certain, Ours is doubtful.

Worc. Good Couſin, be adviſ'd; ſtir not to Night.

Vern. Do not, my Lord.

Dowg. You do not counſel well;
You ſpeak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Vern. Do me no ſlander, Dowglas: by my Life,
And I dare well maintain it with my Life,
If well-reſpected Honour bid me on,
I hold as little counſel with weak fear,
As you, my Lord, or any Scot that this day lives.
Let it be ſeen to morrow in the Battle,
Which of us fears

Dowg. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hotſp. To night, ſay I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be:
I wonder much, being men of ſuch great Leading as you are,
That you foreſee not what Impediments
Drag back our Expedition; certain Horſe
Of my Couſin Vernon's are not yet come up,
Your Uncle Worceſter's Horſe came but to day,
And now their pride and mettle is aſleep,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a Horſe is half, the half of himſelf.

Hotſp. So are the Horſes of the Enemy
In general, journey-bated, and brought low:
The better part of Ours are full of reſt.

Worc. The number of the Kings exceedeth ours:
For Gods ſake, Couſin, ſtay till all come in.

Scene V.

The Trumpet ſounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchſafe me hearing, and reſpect.

Hotſp. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt:
And would to God you were of our determination;
Some of us love you well; and even thoſe ſome
Envy your great Deſervings, and good Name,
Becauſe you are not of our Quality,
But ſtand againſt us like an Enemy.

Blunt. And Heaven defend, but ſtill I ſhould ſtand ſo,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You ſtand againſt Anointed Majeſty.
But to my Charge.
The King hath ſent to know
The Nature of your Griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breaſt of Civil peace,
Such bold Hoſtility, teaching his dutious Land
Audacious Cruelty. If that the King
Have any way your good Deſerts forgot,
Which he confeſſeth to be manifold,
He bids you name your Griefs; and with all ſpeed
You ſhall have your deſires, with intereſt:
And Pardon abſolute for your ſelf, and theſe,
Herein mis-led by your ſuggeſtion.

Hotſp. The King is kind:
And well we know, the King,
Knows at what time to Promiſe, when to Pay.
My Father, my Uncle, and my ſelf,
Did give him that ſame Royalty he wears:
And when he was not ſix and twenty ſtrong,
Sick in the worlds regard, wretched and low,
A poor unminded Out-law, ſneaking home,
My Father gave him welcome to the ſhore:
And when he heard him ſwear, and vow to God,
He came to be but Duke of Lancaſter,
To ſue out his Livery, and beg his Peace,
With tears of Innocence, and terms of zeal;
My Father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Swore him aſſiſtance, and Perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
They more and leſs came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, ſtood in Lanes,
Laid Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oaths,
Gave him their Heirs, as Pages, follow'd him,
Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.
He preſently, as greatneſs knows it ſelf,
Steps me a little higher than his Vow
Made to my Father, while his Blood was poor,
Upon the naked ſhore at Ravenſpurg:
And now (forſooth) takes on him to reform
Some certain Edicts, and ſome ſtrait Decrees,
That lay too heavy on the Common-wealth;
Cries out upon Abuſes, ſeems to weep
Over his Countreys Wrongs; and by his Face,
This ſeeming Brow of Juſtice, did he win
The Hearts of all that he did angle for:
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favourites, that the abſent King

In

In deputation left behind him here,
When he was perſonal in the Iriſh War.
Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.
Hot. Then to the point.
In ſhort time after, he depos'd the King,
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his Life:
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worſe, ſuffer'd his Kinſman March,
(Who is, if every Owner were right plac'd,
Indeed his King,) to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without Ranſom, to lie forfeited:
Diſgrac'd me in my happy Victories,
Sought to entrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Uncle from the Council Board,
In rage diſmiſs'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath on Parle, committing Wrong on Wrong,
And in concluſion, drove us to ſeek out
This Head of ſafety; and withall, to pry
Into his Title: the which we find
Too indirect, for long continuance.
Blunt. Shall I return this anſwer to the King?
Hotſp. Not ſo, Sir Walter;
We'll withdraw a while:
Go to the King, and let there be impawn'd
Some ſurety for a ſafe return again,
And in the morning early ſhall my Uncle
Bring him our purpoſes: and ſo farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Love!
Hotſp. ~~And~~ may be, ſo we ſhall.
Blunt. Pray Heaven you do! [Exeunt.

Scena Quarta. V.

The Arch-Biſhop of York's Palace.

Enter the Arch-Biſhop of York, and Sir Michell.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michell, bear this ſealed Brief
With winged haſte to the Lord Marſhal,
This to my Couſin Scroop, and all the reſt
To whom they are directed:
If you knew how much they do import,
You would make haſte.
Sir Michel. My good Lord, I gueſs their tenour.
Arch. Like enough ~~you do~~.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the Fortune of ten thouſand men
Muſt bide the touch. For, Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to underſtand,
The King, with mighty and quick-raiſed Power,
Meets with Lord Harry; and I fear, Sir Michell,
What with the ſickneſs of Northumberland,
Whoſe Power was in the firſt proportion;
And what with Owen Glendowers abſence thence,
Who with them was rated ~~firmly~~ too, ſtrew
And comes not in, over-rul'd by Prophecies,
I fear the Power of Percy is too weak,
To wage an inſtant tryal with the King.
Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, ~~you need not fear~~,
There is Dowglas, and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir Mich. But there is Mordake, Vernon, ~~Lord~~ Harry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worceſter,
And a Head of gallant Warriours,
Noble Gentlemen.
Arch. And ſo there is; but yet the King hath drawn
The ſpecial head of all the Land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaſter,
The Noble Weſtmorland, and warlike Blunt;
And many more Corrivals, and dear men
Of Eſtimation, and Command in Arms.
Sir M. Doubt not, my Lord, he ſhall be well oppos'd.
Arch. I hope no leſs: Yet needful 'tis to fear,
And to prevent the worſt, Sir Michell ſpeed;
For if Lord Percy thrive not, e're the King
Diſmiſs his Power, he means to viſit us;
For he hath heard of our Confederacy,
And, 'tis but Wiſdom to make ſtrong againſt him:
Therefore make haſte, I muſt go write again
To other Friends; and ſo farewell, Sir Michell. [Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

The Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaſter, Earl of Weſtmerland, Sir Walter Blunt, and Falſtaff.

King. How bloudily the Sun begins to peer
Above yon buſky hill! the day looks pale
At his Diſtemperature.
Prin. The Southern wind
Doth play the Trumpet to his purpoſes,
And by his hollow whiſtling in the Leaves,
Foretels a Tempeſt, and a bluſt'ring day.
King. Then with the loſers let it ſympathize,
For nothing can ſeem ſowre to them that win.
[The Trumpet ſounds.
Enter Worceſter. & Sr Rich? Vernon
King. How now, my Lord of Worſter? 'Tis not well,
That you and I ſhould meet upon ſuch terms,
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our Truſts,
And made us doff our eaſie Robe of Peace,
To cruſh our old Limbs in ungentle Steel:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What ſay you to't? Will you again unknit
This churliſh Knot of all-abhorred War?
And move in that Obedient Orb again,
Where you did give a fair and natural light;
And be no more an exhal'd Meteor,
A Prodigie of Fear, and a Portent
Of broached Miſchief, to the unborn Times?
Wor. Hear me, my Liege:
For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the Lag-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do proteſt,
I have not ſought the day of this diſlike.
King. You have not ſought it; how comes it then?
Falſt. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prin. Peace, Chewet, peace.
Wor. It pleas'd your Majeſty, to turn your looks
Of Favour from my Self, and all our Houſe;
And yet I muſt remember you, my Lord,
We were the firſt, and deareſt of your Friends:
For you, my Staff of Office did I break
In Richard's time, and poſted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiſs your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing ſo ſtrong and fortunate, as I;
It was my ſelf, my Brother, and his Son,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The dangers of the time. You ſwore to us,
And you did ſwear that Oath at Doncaſter,
That you did nothing ~~of~~ purpoſe 'gainſt the State,
Nor claim no further, than your new-faln right,
The ſeat of Gaunt, Dukedom of Lancaſter.
To this, we ſware our aid: But in ſhort ſpace,
It rain'd down Fortune ſhowring on your head,
And ſuch a floud of Greatneſs fell on you,
What with our help, what with the abſent King,
What with the Injuries of wanton Time,
The ſeeming Sufferances that you had born,
And the contrarious Winds that held the King
So long in the unlucky Iriſh Wars,
That all in England did repute him dead;
And from this ſwarm of fair Advantages,
You took occaſion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the general ſway into your Hand;
Forgot your Oath to us at Doncaſter;

And

And being fed by us, you us'd us ſo,
As that ungentle gull, the Cuckows Bird,
Uſeth the Sparrow; did oppreſs our Neſt,
Grew by our Feeding, to ſo great a Bulk,
That even our Love durſt not come near your ſight
For fear of ſwallowing; But with nimble wing
We were inforc'd for ſafety's ſake, to fly
Out of your ſight, and raiſe this preſent Head;
Whereby we ſtand oppoſed by ſuch means
As you your ſelf have forg'd againſt your ſelf,
By unkind Uſage, dangerous Countenance,
And violation of all Faith and Troth,
Sworn to us in your younger Enterprize.

King. Theſe things indeed you have articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Croſſes, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion
With ſome fine Colour, that may pleaſe the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poor Diſcontents;
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the News
Of hurly burly Innovation:
And never yet did Inſurrection want
Such Water-colours, to impaint his Cauſe;
Nor moody Beggars, ſtarving for a time
Of pell-mell Havock, and Confuſion.

Prin. In both our Armies, there is many a Soul
Shall pay full dearly for this Encounter,
If once they joyn in trial. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth joyn with all the World
In praiſe of Henry Percy: By my Hopes,
This preſent Enterprize ſet off his head,
I do not think a braver Gentleman,
More Active, Valiant, or more valiant young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter Age with Noble Deeds.
For my part, I may ſpeak it to my ſhame,
I have a Truant been to Chivalry,
And ſo, I hear, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my Fathers Majeſty,
I am content that he ſhall take the odds
Of his great Name and Eſtimation,
And will, to ſave the Blood on either ſide,
Try Fortune with him, in a Single Fight.

King. And, Prince of Wales, ſo dare we venture thee,
Albeit, Conſiderations infinite
Do make againſt it: No, good Worſter, no,
We love our People well; even thoſe we love
That are miſled upon your Couſins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace,
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my Friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your Couſin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread Correction wait on us,
And they ſhall do their Office. So be gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply;
We offer fair, take it adviſedly. [Exit Worceſter.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my Life,
The Dowglas and the Hotſpur both together,
Are confident againſt the world in Arms.

King. Hence therefore, every Leader to his Charge,
For on their Anſwer will we ſet on them;
And God befriend us, as our Cauſe is juſt. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Manet Prince and Falſtaff.

Fal. Hal, if thou ſee me down in the Battel,
And beſtride me, ſo; 'tis a point of Friendſhip.

Prin. Nothing but a Coloſſus can do thee that Friendſhip:
Say thy Prayers, and farewell.

Falſt. I would it were Bed time, Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why, thou oweſt Heaven a death. [Exit Prince.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loth to pay him before his day. What need I be ſo forward with him that call's not on me? Well, 'tis no matter, Honour pricks me on. But how if Honour prick me off when I come on? How then? Can Honour ſet to a leg? No: or an arm? No: Or take away the grief of a Wound? No:
Honour hath no skill in Surgery then? No. What is Honour? a word. What is that word Honour? Air: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy'd a Wedneſday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it inſenſible then? yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not ſuffer it, therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a meer Scutcheon, and ſo ends my Catechiſm. [Exit.

Scena Secunda. III
Percy's Camp.

Enter Worceſter, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my Nephew muſt not know, Sir Richard,
The liberal kind Offer of the King.

Ver. Twere beſt he did.

Wor. Then we are all undone.
It is not poſſible, it cannot be,
The King would keep his Word in loving us;
He will ſuſpect us ſtill, and find a time
To Puniſh this Offence in other Faults:
Suſpicion, all our lives, ſhall be ſtuck full of Eyes;
For Treaſon is but truſted like the Fox,
Who ne're ſo tame, ſo cheriſh'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wilde trick of his Anceſtors:
Look how we can, or ſad, or merrily,
Interpretation will miſquote our looks;
And we ſhall feed like Oxen at a Stall,
The better cheriſh'd, ſtill the nearer death.
My Nephews treſpaſs may be well forgot,
It hath the excuſe of Youth, and heat of Blood,
And an adopted Name of Privilege,
A hare-brain'd Hotſpur, govern'd by a Spleen:
All his Offences live upon my Head,
And on his Fathers. We did train him on,
And his Corruption being tane from us,
We as the Spring of all, ſhall pay for all:
Therefore, good Couſin, let not Harry know,
In any caſe, the Offer of the King.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll ſay 'tis ſo.
Here comes your Couſin.

Scene IV. Dowglas.

Enter Hotſpur.

Hot. My Uncle is return'd:
Deliver up my Lord of Weſtmorland.
Uncle, what News?

Wor. The King will bid you Battel preſently.

Dow. Defie him by the Lord of Weſtmorland,

Hot. Lord Dowglas: go you and tell him ſo.

Dow. Marry and ſhall, and very willingly. [Exit Dowglas.

Wor. There is no ſeeming mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gently of our Grievances,
Of his Oath-breaking; which he mended thus,
By now forſwearing that he is forſworn,
He calls us Rebels, Traitors, and will ſcourge
With haughty Arms, this hateful Name in us.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Arm, Gentlemen, to Arms, for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth:
And Weſtmorland that was ingag'd did bear it,
Which cannot chooſe but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales ſtept forth before the King,
And, Nephew, challeng'd you to ſingle fight.

Hot. O, would the Quarrel lay upon our Heads,
And that no man might draw ſhort breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me,
How ſhew'd his Talking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my Soul: I never in my life
Did hear a Challenge urg'd more modeſtly,
Unleſs a Brother ſhould a Brother dare

To

To gentle Exerciſe and proof of Arms.
He gave you all the Duties of a Man,
Trim'd up your Praiſes with a Princely Tongue,
Spoke your Deſervings like a Chronicle,
Making you ever better than his Praiſe;
By ſtill diſpraiſing ~~Praiſe, valu'd with you~~:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a bluſhing cital of himſelf,
And chid his Truant youth ~~ſo~~ with ſuch a Grace,
As if he maſtered there a double Spirit,
Of teaching, and of learning inſtantly.
There did he pauſe; But let me tell the World,
If he out-live the Envy of this day,
England did never owe ſo ſweet a hope,
So much miſconſtrued in his Wantonneſs.
Hot. Couſin, I think thou art enamoured
On his follies; never did I hear
Of any Prince ſo wild ~~at~~ Liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once e're night,
I will embrace him with a Souldiers Arm,
That he ſhall ſhrink under my courteſie.
Arm, arm with ſpeed! And Fellows, Souldiers, Friends,
Better conſider what you have to do,
Than I, that have not well the gift of Tongue,
Can lift your Blood up with Perſuaſion.

Enter a Meſſenger. Scene V.

Meſ. My Lord, here are Letters for you.
Hot. I cannot read them now.
O Gentlemen, the time of life is ſhort;
To ſpend that ſhortneſs baſely, were too long.
If life did ride upon a Dials point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour,
And if we live, we live to tread on Kings:
If die; brave death, when Princes die with us.
Now for our Conſciences, the Arms ~~is~~ are fair,
When the intent for bearing them is juſt.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſ. My Lord, prepare, the King comes on apace.
Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profeſs not talking: Only this,
Let each man do his beſt. And here I draw ~~my~~ a Sword,
Whoſe ~~worthy~~ temper I intend to ſtain
With the beſt blood that I can meet withall,
In the Adventure of this perilous day.
Now Eſperance! Percy, and ſet on:
Sound all the lofty Inſtruments of War;
And by that Muſick, let us all embrace:
For (Heaven to Earth) ſome of us never ſhall,
A ſecond time do ſuch a courteſie.

Exe Scene VI.

They embrace, the Trumpets ſound, the King entreth with his Power, alarm unto the Battell. Then enter Dowglas and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy Name, that in Battel thus thou croſſeſt me?
What Honour doſt thou ſeek upon my Head?
Dow. Know then my name is Dowglas,
And do haunt thee in the Battel thus,
Becauſe ſome tell me, that thou art a King.
Blunt. They tell thee true.
Dow. The Lord of Stafford here to day hath bought
Thy likeneſs; for inſtead of thee, King Harry,
This Sword hath ended him, ſo ſhall it thee,
Unleſs thou yield thee as my Priſoner.
Blu. I was not born to yield, thou haughty Scot,
And thou ſhalt find a King that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death.

Fight, Blunt is ſlain, then enters Hotſpur.

Hot. O Dowglas, hadſt thou fought at Holmedon thus,
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.
Dow. All's done, all's won, here breathleſs lies the King.
Hot. Where?
Dow. Here.
Hot. This, Dowglas? No; I know this face full well:
A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furniſh'd like the King himſelf.
Dow. Ah! fool: go with thy Soul whither it goes,
A borrowed Title haſt thou bought too dear.
Why didſt thou tell me, that thou wert a King?
Hot. The King hath many marching in his Coats.
Dow. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coats,
I'le murther all his Wardrobe piece by piece,
Untill I meet the King.
Hot. Up and away,
Our Souldiers ſtand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Scene VII.

Alarm, and enter Falſtaff ſolus.

Fal. Though I could ſcape ſhot-free at London, I fear the ſhot here: here's no ſcoring, but upon the pate. Soft, who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you; here's no Vanity; I am as hot as moulten Lead, and as heavy too: Heaven keep Lead out of me, I need no more weight than mine own Bowels. I have led my rag of Muffians where they are pepper'd; there's not three of my 150 left alive; and they for the Towns end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince.

Prin. What, ſtand'ſt thou idle here? lend me thy Sword;
Many a Noble man lies ſtark and ſtiff
Under the hooves of vaunting Enemies,
Whoſe deaths are unreveng'd. Prythee lend me thy Sword.
Fal. O Hal, I prythee give me leave to breathe a while.
Turk Gregory never did ſuch deeds in Arms, as I have don this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him ſure.
Prin. He is indeed, and living to kill thee;
I prythee lend me thy Sword.
Falſt. Nay, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'ſt not my Sword; but take my Piſtol if thou wilt.
Prin. Give it me: What, is it in the Caſe?
Fal. Ay Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sack a City.

The Prince draws out a Bottle of Sack.

Prin. What, is it a time to jeſt and dally now? [Exit.

Throws it at him.

Falſt. If Percy be alive. He'll pierce him; if he do come in my way, ſo; if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a Carbonado of me, I like not ſuch grinning Honour as Sir Walter hath: Give me life, which if I can ſave, ſo; if not, Honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit.

Scena ~~Tertia.~~ VIII.

Alarm, Excurſions, enter the King, the Prince, Lord John of Lancaſter, and the Earle of Weſtmerland.

King. I prythee, Harry, withdraw thy ſelf, thou bleedeſt too much: Lord John of Lancaſter, go you with him.
P. John. Not I, my Lord, unleſs I did bleed too.
Prin. I beſeech your Majeſty make up,
Leaſt your retirement do amaze your Friends.
King. I will do ſo:
My Lord of Weſtmerland, lead him to his Tent.
Weſt. Come, my Lord, I'le lead you to your Tent.
Prin. Lead me, my Lord? I do not need your help,
And Heaven forbid a ſhallow ſcratch ſhould drive
The Prince of Wales from ſuch a Field as this,
Where ſtain'd Nobility lyes trodden on,
And Rebels Arms triumph in Maſſacres!
John. We breathe too long; come Couſin Weſtmerland,
Our duty this way lies, for Heavens ſake come.
Prin. By Heaven, thou haſt deceived me, Lancaſter,

I did not think thee Lord of such a Spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a Brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my Soul.
King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown Warrior.
Prin. O, this Boy, lends mettle to us all. [Exit.
Enter Dowglas.
Dow. Another King? They grow like Hydra's Heads:
I am the Dowglas fatal to all those
That wear those Colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit'st the Person of a King?
King. The King himself; who, Dowglas, grieves at heart
So many of his Shadows thou hast met,
And not the very King. I have two Boys
Seek Percy and thy self about the Field;
But seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily
I will assay thee: so defend thy self.
Dow. I fear thou art another Counterfeit;
And yet, in faith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, who e're thou be,
And thus I win thee. [They fight, the K. being in danger.
Enter Prince.
Prin. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it up again: the Spirits
Of ~~valiant~~ Sherly, Stafford, Blunt, are in my Arms;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but means to pay.
They fight, Dowglas flyeth.
Chearly, My Lord; how fares your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.
King. Stay, and breathe a while.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And shew'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,
In this fair Rescue thou hast brought to me.
Prin. O Heaven! they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearkned for your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting Hand of Dowglas over you,
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poysonous Potions in the World,
And sav'd the Treacherous labour of your Son.
K. Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nichol. Gawsey. [Exit.
Enter Hotspur. Scene IX.
Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.
Prin. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my Name.
Hot. My Name is Harry Percy.
Prin. ~~Why~~ then I see a very valiant Rebel of that Name.
I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two Stars keep not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brook a double Reign,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.
Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the Hour is come
To end the one of us; and would to Heaven,
Thy Name in Arms, were now as great as mine!
Prin. I'll make it greater, e're I part from thee;
And all the budding Honours on thy Crest,
I'll crop, to make a Garland for my Head.
Hot. I can no longer brook thy Vanities. [Fight.
Enter Falstaff.
Fal. Well said, Hal, to it Hal. Nay, you shall find no
Boys play here, I can tell you.

Enter Dowglas, he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as as if he were dead. The Prince killeth Percy.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brook the loss of bitter life,
Than those proud Titles thou hast won of me;
They wound my thoughts worse, than thy Sword my flesh:
But thought's the slave of Life, and Life Time's Fool;
And Time, that takes survey of all the World,
Must have a stop. O, I could Prophesie,
But that the Earthy and cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No, Percy, thou art dust,
And food for——
Prin. ~~For~~ Worms, brave Percy. Farewell ~~great Heart~~:
Ill-weav'd Ambition, how much art thou shrunk!
When that this Body did contain a Spirit,
A Kingdom for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vilest Earth
Is room enough. This Earth that bears thee dead,
Bears not alive so stout a Gentleman.
If thou wer't sensible of Courtesie,
I should not make so great a show of Zeal.
